This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. TITLE XXXIII

DUTIES UPON IMPORTS

This Title, as enacted in the Revised Statutes, included sections 2491–2516 thereof, of which sections 2503, 2504, contained the schedules of articles subject to duty and the rates of duty thereon, then in force, with a proviso annexed to section 2503, for special rates of duty on certain specified classes of goods; section 2504 contained the free list, of articles exempt from duty; and the other sections contained various particular provisions relating to imports and duties thereon. Said rates of duty on certain articles were altered and additional articles were included in the free list, by Act Feb. 8, 1875, c. 36, §§ 1–10, 18 Stat. 307; and further alterations were made, and said proviso to R. S. § 2503, was repealed, by Act March 3, 1875, c. 127, §§ 3–6, 18 Stat. 340. R. S. § 2501, was also repealed by Act May 4, 1882, c. 120, 22 Stat. 58, and Act Dec. 23, 1882, c. 6, 22 Stat. 398; and R. S. § 2506, was repealed, on the termination of articles 18–25, 30, of the treaty with Great Britain of May 8, 1871, pursuant to the Joint Resolution of March 3, 1883, No. 22, 22 Stat. 641.

A substitute for this entire Title was enacted by section 6 of Act March 3, 1883, c. 121, 22 Stat. 488, 489, entitled "An act to reduce internal-revenue taxation, and for other purposes." Said substitute was in the form of new sections of the Revised Statutes, numbered 2491–2513, arranged in different order, but covering the subjects of most of the original sections then in force. New tariff schedules and free list, substitutes for the original R. S. §§ 2503, 2504, were contained in the new sections 2502, 2503. Further sections of said act, Act March 3, 1883, c. 121, §§ 7–13, 22 Stat. 523, made other amendments and provisions relating to rates of duties and collection thereof.

All such previous provisions relating to the subject of this Title were superseded by the provisions prescribing the articles subject to duty, and the rates of duty thereon, of the McKinley Tariff Act of Oct. 1, 1890, c. 1244, §§ 1–25, 26 Stat. 567. These, in like manner, were superseded by the Wilson Tariff Act of Aug. 27, 1894, c. 349, 28 Stat. 509, which was superseded by the Dingley Tariff Act of July 24, 1897, c. 11, which, again, was superseded by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, 36 Stat. 11, and that was superseded by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, §§ 1, 4, 38 Stat. 114.

This Title, as enacted in the Revised Statutes, was not divided into chapters. For convenience of arrangement it is here divided into two chapters: Chapter A, "Tariff Schedules," containing the provisions of sections 1 and 4 of said Underwood Tariff Act of 1913, as amended, with the provisions of other acts remaining in force relating thereto; and Chapter B, "The Tariff Commission," containing the provisions of Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, creating and relating to the Tariff Commission.

5306. Importation only in vessels of United States or of country of origin of goods.

5307. Restriction of preceding subsection to vessels, or goods, etc., imported in vessels, of foreign nations maintaining similar regulation.

5308. Admission, without payment of duty, under bond for exportation, of certain articles for purposes or uses specified, not for sale.

5309. Importation in bond of materials for construction of naval vessels or certain other vessels, and of materials for building their machinery, and articles for their outfit and equipment; use thereof free of duty.

5310. Withdrawal from bond, free of duty, of articles for repair of naval vessels or certain other vessels.

Sec.

5311. Discount on duties on goods, etc., imported in vessels registered under laws of United States.

5312. Admission free of duty of merchandise from vessels sunk and abandoned.

5313. Duty on articles reimported after exportation free of internal revenue tax.

5314. Duties imposed by act applicable to goods, etc., previously imported but not entered, or entered without payment of duty and under bond.

5315. President to ascertain amount of imports and exports of articles enumerated in section I of act, and cause estimate to be made of amount of domestic production and consumption thereof, and advise Congress when imports amount to less than five per centum of domestic consumption.

5316. Repeal of Act Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, §§ 1–42, and of all inconsistent acts and parts of acts; limitations on operation of act and on effect of repeals of other acts thereby.

5317. Effect of invalidity of part of act on remainder thereof.

5318. Time of taking effect of act.

5319. Suspension of importation of products from countries making unjust discriminations.

5320. Grain brought from Canada by farmers to be ground not subject to duty.

5321. Return free of duty of articles or live-stock exported for exhibition.

5322. Return free of duty of animals taken abroad for exhibition.

5323. Laws affecting imports of articles, etc., and entry of persons into United States from foreign countries to apply to articles, etc., and persons coming from Canal Zone, Isthmus of Panama.

5324. Reduction of duties on products of Cuba authorized; limitation of reduction of duties on sugar; construction of act as to origin of acts changing customs duties.

5325. No additional fees or charges on products of Cuba; equal treatment of imports by both countries.

5326. Duties on specified imports from Canada, when reciprocal rates are imposed by Canada on specified imports from United States, and exemption from duty of specified articles imported from Canada, when specified articles from United States are admitted into Canada free of duty.

§ 5291. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § 1, as amended, Act April 27, 1916, c. 93, and Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, §§ 500–502, 600.) Articles dutiable, and rates of duty; schedules and free list.

On and after the day following the passage of this Act, except as otherwise specially provided for in this Act, there shall be levied, collected, and paid upon all articles when imported from any foreign country into the United States or into any of its possessions (except the Philippine Islands and the islands of Guam and Tutuila) the rates of duty which are by the schedules and paragraphs of the dutiable list of this section prescribed, namely:

1. Constitutionality of act.—The tariff act of 1890 was held constitutional. In re Sternbach (C. C. 1891) 45 Fed. 175, judgment affirmed Field v. Clark (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 495, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. Ed. 294.

2. Postal convention.—The postal convention with Canada and section 15 of the act of March 3, 1879 (section 7307, post), were not intended to affect existing tariff laws. (1881) 17 Op. Atty. Gen. 159.

3. Foreign country.—A long-continued uniform departmental practice of both state and treasury departments, now reviewed, shows the word "country" to have been interpreted to mean the locality and not the political domain itself. U. S. v. Marquardt & Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 168.

The right to exact duty upon merchandise imported from Porto Rico prior to April 11, 1899, the date of the ratification of the treaty between the United States and Spain, was within the meaning of the tariff law. A. S. Lascelles & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 49 Ct. Cl. 382.

A port in a foreign country with which the United States is at war, although in the exclusive possession and government of the military authorities of the United States, acting under the orders of the president, is a foreign port, within the meaning of the revenue laws. Fleming v. Page (1850) 50 U. S. (9 How.) 603, 13 L. Ed. 276.

The Mexican port of Tampico was a foreign port when held by the army of the United States, in 1847, and goods imported thence were liable to duty, under chapter 74 of Act 1846. Id.

By the conquest and military occupation of a portion of the United States by a public enemy, such portion is to be deemed a foreign country so far as respects the revenue laws. U. S. v. Rice (1819) 4 Wheat. 246, 253, 4 L. Ed. 562.

4. —— Canada.—The revenue acts of 1799 and 1863 applied to commercial intercourse between Canada and the United States as well as to other foreign countries. U. S. v. Seventy-Eight Cases of Books (D. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 16,258.

5. —— Luzon.—Articles brought into the United States from the island of Luzon, in the Philippine Islands, subsequent to the proclamation of the ratification of the treaty of peace between the United States and Spain, are not imported from a foreign country within the meaning of the tariff act of 1897. The Diamond Rings (1901) 22 Sup. Ct. 59, 183 U. S. 176, 46 L. Ed. 138.

6. —— Isle of Pines.—The Isle of Pines must be regarded as at least de facto under the jurisdiction of the Republic of Cuba, and hence, as a "foreign country" within the meaning of Dingley Tariff Act 1897. Pearcy v. Stranahan (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 545, 205 U. S. 257, 51 L. Ed. 793.

7. —— Canal Zone.—The first clause of the tariff act of 1909 held not to apply to the Canal Zone. (1909) 27 Op. Atty. Gen. 594.

8. —— Tutuila.—In view of the convention concluded by the United States,

Great Britain, and Germany on December 2, 1899 (31 Stat. 1878), the island of Tutuila is not a foreign country within the meaning of our tariff laws. (1902) 23 Op. Atty. Gen. 629.

9. —— Porto Rico.—See, also, § 3748 et seq., ante.

Porto Rico, after its cession to the United States by the treaty with Spain, April 11, 1899, though it had not been formally embraced by Congress within the customs union of the states, was no longer "foreign country," within the Dingley tariff act of 1897. De Lima v. Bidwell (1901) 21 Sup. Ct. 743, 746, 182 U. S. 1, 45 L. Ed. 1041.

The treaty with Spain by which Porto Rico was ceded to the United States became effective for tariff purposes at the beginning of April 11, 1899, on which day the ratifications were exchanged and the president's proclamation was issued, and merchandise arriving from Porto Rico at a port of entry of the United States at any time during that day was not subject to duty. Howell v. Bidwell (C. C. 1903) 124 Fed. 688.

The treaty with Spain by which Porto Rico was ceded to the United States, although signed December 10, 1898, and ratified by Spain which was the last to ratify) on March 19, 1899, did not become effective for the purposes of the tariff laws until the exchange of ratifications, April 11, 1899, and all importations of merchandise arriving from Porto Rico at a port of entry of the United States prior to that date were subject to duty. The doctrine of relation has no application to the taking effect of a treaty so far as relates to its effect on individual rights. Armstrong v. Bidwell (C. C. 1903) 124 Fed. 690.

10. Articles.—What constitutes merchandise, see § 5462, post.

Ships or vessels are not dutiable, eo nomine, under the tariff laws, and are not dutiable "articles," in the meaning thereof. Therefore a large pleasure yacht purchased abroad and brought to this country by an American citizen cannot be subjected to duty. The Conqueror (1897) 17 Sup. Ct. 510, 511, 166 U. S. 110, 41 L. Ed. 937, reversing decree (D. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 99.

A crank shaft and steamer's shafts brought to this country from a foreign country to repair a vessel of that country lying disabled in our ports are articles imported into the country within the meaning of section 2503 of the Revised Statutes and section 2502 of the Revised Statutes as amended by the tariff act of 1883 (22 Stat. 491, 499). (1891) 20 Op. Atty. Gen. 194, affirmed (1891) 20 Op. Atty. Gen. 257.

A steel shaft cannot be landed and kept on the dock of the Cunard Steamship Company in the United States, for possible use on the steamships Etruria and Umbria in case of emergency, without payment of duty thereon. (1902) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 533.

The Secretary of the Treasury has the power to permit the transfer and delivery to the steamship Kaiser Wilhelm II of a piece of machinery known as a "screw boss," brought into the harbor of New York by a sister ship for the purpose of replacing a defective piece in the former, without exacting the payment of duty. (1899) 22 Op. Atty. Gen. 360.

Articles purchased for the ship's equipment to replace articles lost or deteriorated by use are not subject to duty. U. S. v. One Hempen Cable and One Hempen Hawser (D. C. 1831) Fed Cas. No. 15,931a.

An anchor and chain cable purchased abroad to be bona fide a part of the equipment of a vessel must not have been purchased under a necessity occasioned by any fault of her masters or owners in not properly equipping her originally for the voyage. Weld v. Maxwell (C. C. 1858) Fed. Cas. No. 17,374.

11. Imported.—The word "importation," as used in the customs laws, is the bringing of goods into the ports of the United States for the purpose of introducing them into the commerce of the country. (1910) 28 Op. Atty. Gen. 173. It must be an article brought or carried into this country from abroad. The Conqueror (D. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 99. The word is never used with reference to shipments from domestic territory. (1912) 29 Op. Atty. Gen. 422.

An article is not imported until it actually arrives at a port of entry of the United States. American Sugar Refining Co. v. Bidwell (C. C. 1903) 124 Fed. 677, 683; Arnold v. U. S. (1815) 9 Cranch, 104, 119, 3 L. Ed. 671. And it has been held that there is no importation unless the goods are landed. Kohne v. Insurance Co. of North America (C. C. 1804) Fed. Cas. No. 7,922. But a voluntary arrival at port of destination, though without breaking bulk, held to constitute an importation. The Boston (C. C. 1812) Fed. Cas. No. 1,670.

The importation of merchandise is not complete while the goods remain in the custody of the officers of the customs. American Cigar Co. v. U. S. (1906) 146 Fed. 484, 77 C. C. A. 40, reversing judgment Falk v. Same (C. C. 1904) 145 Fed. 574, judgment reversed U. S. v. G. Falk & Bro. (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 191, 204 U. S. 143, 51 L. Ed. 411.

As soon as imported merchandise subject to duty has been entered into the country, duties become due on same, whether the entry is surreptitious or honest. U. S. v. Ehrgott (C. C. 1910) 182 Fed. 267.

Goods brought by superior force into the country are not deemed to be so imported, in the sense of the law, as necessarily to attach the right to duties. If, however, such goods are afterwards sold in the country, or incorporated into the general mass of its property, they become liable to the payment of duties. The Concord (1815) 9 Cranch, 387, 388, 3 L. Ed. 768.

An involuntary coming into port by stress of weather held not an "importation" of cargo contrary to the embargo laws. The Mary (C. C. 1812) Fed. Cas. No. 9,183.

12. Prize goods.—See notes under § 5760, post.

13. Merchandise defined.—See § 5462, post, and notes.

14. Accrual of duties on prohibited goods.—No duties can accrue on an importation of prohibited goods. They are forfeited by the act of importation. McLane v. U. S. (1832) 31 U. S. (6 Pet.) 404, 8 L. Ed. 443.

The Treasury Department is not required by the statutes to levy and collect duty or its equivalent on goods the importation of which is specifically and absolutely prohibited. (1903) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 556.

15. Rules for construction of tariff laws—In general.—In the presence of clear and explicit enactment, canons of construction have no application. Godellot & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 408.

All statutes are to be construed so as to sustain rather than to ignore or defeat their purpose; to give them a field of operation, if the language will permit, rather than to treat them as meaningless. M. H. Pulaski Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 291.

It will be presumed that the Congress will not do a vain thing; that it intends its acts and every part of them to be held valid and as capable of being given effect. Id.

An importer is entitled to the benefit of the rule that revenue laws imposing taxes and like burdens should receive a reasonably strict construction. U. S. v. Matagrin (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 309.

Any provision of a law must be read in the light of all the other provisions of that law, and in a tariff law the language used must be interpreted in view of the conditions of commerce existing when the statute was enacted. U. S. v. Marsching (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 216.

The exception of a particular thing from the operation of the general words of a statute shows that in the opinion of the lawmaker the thing excepted would be within the general words had not the exception been made. But a proviso is not to be so construed as to make it plainly repugnant to the body of the section it limits. M. H. Pulaski Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 291.

The principle is recognized that, when it clearly appears from the language and context of a proviso it is intended to apply to other subjects than those stated in the paragraph of which it is a part or that it is intended to apply generally to other parts of an act, the proviso must, so far as possible, be given full effect; but this principle will not be applied ex industria to bring an article within the operation of the proviso. U. S. v. Harper (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 101.

The general doctrine regarding the assessment of duties is that they can be levied upon such articles only as are made dutiable by Congress and are actually imported into the United States. Stone v. Shallus (1906) 143 Fed. 486, 74 C. C. A. 506, affirming judgment (C. C. 1905) 137 Fed. 674.

The provisions in a tariff act are designed for the future as well as for the present, and cover all importations which the definitions fit. Klots v. U. S. (1905) 139 Fed. 606, 71 C. C. A. 590, affirming judgment (C. C. 1904) U. S. v. Klotz (C. C. 1904) 133 Fed. 808.

In custom laws, as in all others, the intent of the lawmakers is the law. (1887) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 533.

The court in construing tariff laws will seek to conform to the intent of Congress, though such construction may involve a change or modification of the exact language of the statute. In re Chase (C. C. 1892) 48 Fed. 630, 631, reversed U. S. v. Hopewell (1892) 51 Fed. 798, 2 C. C. A. 510.

Statutes levying duties are not to be extended by implication beyond the clear import of the language used. Adams v. Bancroft (C. C. 1838) Fed. Cas. No. 44; U. S. v. Wigglesworth (C. C. 1842) Fed. Cas. No. 16,690.

An article is provided for in a revenue law when it is aptly described as well as when it is named. Faxon v. Russell (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 4,707.

Where two terms of description are differentiated in a statute and in another paragraph one of these terms is employed, its use here must be taken to be confined to the single subject matter expressed, exclusive of the other. Goat & Sheepskin Import Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 178.

An article coming within two or more of the descriptions contained in a schedule must be assigned to the earlier one. Bogle v. Magone (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 718, 152 U. S. 623, 38 L. Ed. 574.

The fact that articles in separate parts are invoiced as entireties is not controlling, and will not prevent a separate classification, when such classification is otherwise proper. In re Crowley (1893) 55 Fed. 283, 5 C. C. A. 109, affirming (C. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 465.

Where a clause of the tariff act clearly covers an article in question, statements contained in the report of a senate committee on the act cannot be considered to show an inferential intent to place it under another clause. In re Downing (1893) 56 Fed. 470, 5 C. C. A. 575.

The fact that inconsistency in duties may result is not adequate ground for holding that Congress meant the opposite from what it said. Horrax v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 526, 93 C. C. A. 22.

Where a general tariff provision prescribes an additional duty capable of application to all of several articles enumerated in another provision, it should be applied to all, even though it may operate unequally. U. S. v. George Nash & Co. (1907) 158 Fed. 401, 85 C. C. A. 511, reversing judgment George Nash & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 152 Fed. 573.

A declaration that certain duties and rates of duty should be imposed upon certain imports in lieu of the duties heretofore imposed, held tantamount to a repeal of the prior rates of duty. Gossler v. Goodrich (C. C. 1867) Fed. Cas. No. 5,631.

A law imposing a duty on articles used for a particular purpose should not be construed to cover articles not so used at the date of the act, unless expressly so provided. Martin v. Curtis (C. C. 1842) Fed. Cas. No. 9,160.

Where an enumeration has been continued from one tariff act to another, it must be assumed that the legislative body had in contemplation some article of commerce intended to be covered by that enumeration. Kwong Yuen Shing v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 317.

One of the surest methods of interpreting a provision in a tariff law is by its past history. (1897) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 541.

The fact that at the date of the passage of the act (R. S. § 2504, Schedule A) goods of the kind in question had not been manufactured will not withdraw them from the class to which they belong as described in the statute, where the language used fairly and clearly includes them. Newman v. Arthur (1883) 3 Sup. Ct. 88, 109 U. S. 132, 27 L. Ed. 883.

16. —— Commercial or technical sense.—The commercial designation of an article when clearly established, and shown to have been definite, uniform, and general, will control, in the construction of a tariff statute. Elliott v. Swartwout (1836) 10 Pet. 137, 151, 9 L. Ed. 373; Curtis v. Martin (1845) 3 How. 106, 108, 11 L. Ed. 516; Arthur v. Morrison (1877) 96 U. S. 108, 110, 24 L. Ed. 764; Same v. Lahey (1877) 96 U. S. 112, 113, 118, 24 L. Ed. 766; Robertson v. Salomon (1889) 9 Sup. Ct. 559, 560, 130 U. S. 412, 32 L. Ed. 995; Hedden v. Richard (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 891, 149 U. S. 346, 37 L. Ed. 763 (reversing judgment Richard v. Hedden [C. C. 1890] 42 Fed. 672); Maddock v. Magone (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 588, 589, 152 U. S. 368, 38 L. Ed. 482 (affirming judgment [C. C. 1890] 41 Fed. 882); Lutz v. Same (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 777, 778, 153 U. S. 105, 38 L. Ed. 651; Sonn v. Same (1895) 159 U. S. 417, 16 Sup. Ct. 67, 40 L. Ed. 203; U. S. v. Buffalo Natural Gas Fuel Co. (1899) 19 Sup. Ct. 200, 172 U. S. 339, 43 L. Ed. 469; Same v. Wotton (1892) 53 Fed. 344, 346, 3 C. C. A. 553; Same v. Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. (1897) 79 Fed. 313, 24 C. C. A. 604 (affirming judgment Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. v. U. S. [C. C. 1896] 71 Fed. 957); Same v. Wo On & Co. (1909) 167 Fed. 314, 92 C. C. A. 626; Same v. Buffalo Natural Gas Fuel Co. (1897) 78 Fed. 110, 24 C. C. A. 4 (affirming judgment In re Buffalo Natural Gas Fuel Co. [C. C. 1896] 73 Fed. 191, judgment affirmed U. S. v. Buffalo Natural Gas Fuel Co. [1899] 19 Sup. Ct. 200, 172 U. S. 339, 43 L. Ed. 469). Same v. Breed (C. C. 1832) Fed. Cas. No. 14,638; May v. Simmons (C. C. 1880) 4 Fed. 499; Kennedy v. Hartranft (C. C. 1881) 9 Fed. 18; Dodge v. Hedden (C. C. 1889) 42 Fed. 446; May v. Simmons (C. C. 1880) 4 Fed. 499; Ross v. Fuller (C. C. 1883) 17 Fed. 224; McCoy v. Hedden (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 89; Fox v. Cadwalader (C. C. 1889) 42 Fed. 209; "Zante Currants" (C. C. 1896) 73 Fed. 183; In re Wieland (C. C. 1899) 98 Fed. 99; In re John Hope & Sons Engraving & Manufacturing Co. (C. C. 1900) 100 Fed. 286; Nordlinger v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 828 (judgment reversed U. S. v. Nordlinger [1903] 121 Fed. 690, 58 C. C. A. 438, writ of certiorari denied Nordlinger v. U. S. [1903] 24 Sup. Ct. 848, 191 U. S. 575, 48 L. Ed. 308); U. S. v. Burlington Venetian Blind Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 378; Goat & Sheepskin Import Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 178; (1887) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 533.

The commercial signification will always be understood to have the same meaning in commerce as it has in the community at large unless the contrary is shown. Schmeider v. Barney (1885) 5 Sup. Ct. 624, 113 U. S. 645, 28 L. Ed. 1130. And terms which had no commercial meaning at the time they were used in a tariff statute must be construed in accordance with their plain, natural meaning. Tiffany v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 103 Fed. 619. The commercial meaning is to be determined at the time the act was passed. U. S. v. One Hundred and Twelve Casks Sugar (1834) 33 U. S. (8 Pet.) 277, 8 L. Ed. 944; Curtis v. Martin (1845) 44 U. S. (3 How.) 106, 11 L. Ed. 516; Arthur v. Morrison (1877) 96 U. S. 108, 24 L. Ed. 764; Same v. Lahey (1877) 96 U. S. 112, 24 L. Ed. 766; Same v. Davies (1877) 96 U. S. 135, 24 L. Ed. 810; Sonn v. Magone (1895) 16 Sup. Ct. 67, 69, 159 U. S. 417, 40 L. Ed. 203; Lawrence Johnson & Co. v. U. S. (1908) 166 Fed. 728, 92 C. C. A. 418 (affirming judgment [C. C.

1907] 159 Fed. 189, and writ of certiorari denied [1909] 29 Sup. Ct. 694, 214 U. S. 511, 53 L. Ed. 1062); Bacon v. Bancroft (C. C. 1840) Fed. Cas. No. 714; Hadden v. Hoyt (C. C. 1840) Fed. Cas. No. 5,891; Hall v. Same (C. C. 1840) Fed. Cas. No. 5,934; Lee v. Lincoln (C. C. 1841) Fed. Cas. No. 8,195; Roosevelt v. Maxwell (C. C. 1856) Fed. Cas. No. 12,034; Jaffray v. Murphy (C. C. 1874) Fed. Cas. No. 7,172; Hutton v. Schell (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 6,962; May v. Simmons (C. C. 1880) 4 Fed. 499; Ross v. Fuller (C. C. 1883) 17 Fed. 224; McCoy v. Hedden (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 89; Fox v. Cadwalder (C. C. 1889) 42 Fed. 209; "Zante Currants" (C. C. 1896) 73 Fed. 183; U. S. v. Sarchet (D. C. 1832) Fed. Cas. No. 16,224; Beatty's Ex'r v. U. S. (1856) Dev. Ct. Cl. § 244.

But a term having a commercial signification is not controlling in the classification of the article where a different intent is inferable from the context. Roosevelt v. Maxwell (C. C. 1856) Fed. Cas. No. 12,034; In re Salomon (C. C. 1891) 48 Fed. 287; Hahn v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 131 Fed. 1000, judgment affirmed U. S. v. Hahn (1904) 135 Fed. 349, 68 C. C. A. 130.

The commercial designation is of first importance, and, if that fails to give the article its proper classification, resort must be had to the common designation. Robertson v. Salomon (1888) 130 U. S. 412, 9 Sup. Ct. 559, 32 L. Ed. 995.

In tariff laws, words of classification are, in general, to be construed either in their common or their commercial meaning, as opposed to their scientific or technical sense. U. S. v. Buffalo Natural Gas Fuel Co. (1897) 78 Fed. 110, 24 C. C. A. 4, affirming judgment In re Buffalo Natural Gas Fuel Co. (C. C. 1896) 73 Fed. 191, judgment affirmed U. S. v. Buffalo Natural Gas Fuel Co. (1899) 19 Sup. Ct. 200, 172 U. S. 339, 43 L. Ed. 469.

The commercial signification of a name is that which those engaged in foreign and domestic sale, purchase, and exchange generally adopt to describe the article. (1887) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 533.

To fix and limit a phrase to a simple commercial meaning, it is necessary to show not alone that this phrase is improperly employed in describing a given commodity, but at the same time to show it is employed definitely and uniformly in the United States to describe another and different commodity. Acker v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 328.

In the construction of tariff acts there is no rule whereby words used therein are to be interpreted according to the technical understanding of manufacturers. In re Herrman (C. C. 1892) 52 Fed. 941, judgment affirmed (C. C. 1893) 56 Fed. 477, 5 C. C. A. 582.

A word used in a tariff act may be susceptible of a trade meaning as designating a special group of articles, although each article in the group is always bought and sold by its specific name, and no articles are bought and sold by the group designation. In re Herrman (C. C. 1892) 52 Fed. 941, judgment affirmed (C. C. 1893) 56 Fed. 477, 5 C. C. A. 582.

Where Congress provides that the rate of duty on any commodity shall be regulated by an ascertainment of the percentage of a particular grade of that commodity, present in some aggregation of its different grades, which aggregation is not defined, such aggregation is the one recognized in the commercial world as the standard. In re Blumlein (1893) 55 Fed. 383, 386, 5 C. C. A. 142.

Usage sufficient to establish a commercial designation which will control the meaning of words in a tariff act cannot be made out by the evidence of one dealer, whose testimony is practically limited to his own usage, especially when he admits that the articles are sometimes bought and sold under other names. Berbecker v. Robertson (1894) 152 U. S. 373, 14 Sup. Ct. 590, 38 L. Ed. 484.

In order to determine the commercial meaning of a term in tariff acts, it is not the meaning used in transactions between the retail dealer on the one side and the individual purchaser at retail on the other that is to be considered; but the meaning used between parties who are, on both sides of the transaction, engaged in that particular occupation as the business of their lives. Morrison v. Miller (C. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 82.

Where terms employed in the tariff laws have a special restricted meaning, according to the general usage of the trade to which the articles appertain, it is to be presumed that congress used them in such restricted sense; but the fact that they have such restricted meaning must be clearly established, otherwise they are to be interpreted according to their common popular signification. Hedden v. Richard (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 891, 149 U. S. 346, 37 L. Ed. 763 (reversing judgment Richard v. Hedden [C. C. 1890] 42 Fed. 672); Kennedy v. Hartranft (C. C. 1881) 9 Fed. 18.

The commercial designation of an article among traders and importers when clearly established fixes its character for the purpose of tariff laws, but the commercial meaning cannot be ascertained by a resort solely to the understanding of importers, but resort must be had to the manufacturer, jobber, retail merchant, and trader of every description as well as the importer. Erhardt v. Ballin (1893) 55 Fed. 968, 969, 5 C. C. A. 363.

Where an article has been so advanced by separate processes as to be adapted for a special purpose different from the original purpose, and to be sold to a different class of persons, and to be known under special commercial designations, it is no longer included under the original commercial designation. McLeod v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 75 Fed. 927.

In an action to recover duties paid on importations, on the ground that they were improperly classified as aniline dyes, it is proper to instruct that if the articles in question, according to the understanding of commercial men, dealers in and importers of them, would, when imported, be included in the class of articles known as "aniline dyes," by whatever name they had come to be known, they are subject to duty as aniline dyes, though such articles were unknown when the statute imposing duties on aniline dyes was enacted. Pickhardt v. Merritt (1889) 132 U. S. 252, 10 Sup. Ct. 80, 33 L. Ed. 353.

A law imposing a duty on articles used for a particular purpose should not be construed to cover articles not so used at the date of the act, unless expressly so provided. Rossman v. Hedden (1892) 145 U. S. 561, 12 Sup. Ct. 925, 36 L. Ed. 817, affirming (C. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 99; Martin v. Curtis (C. C. 1842) Fed. Cas. No. 9,160, affirmed in (1845) 44 U. S. (3 How.) 106, 11 L. Ed. 516.

In an action for the recovery of duties alleged to have been illegally exacted by the collector of customs, and paid under protest, the fact that, at the date of the passage of the act (R. S. § 2504, Schedule A), goods of the kind in question had not been manufactured, will not withdraw them from the class to which they belong, as described in the statute, where the language used fairly and clearly includes them. Newman v. Arthur (1883) 109 U. S. 132, 3 Sup. Ct. 88, 27 L. Ed. 883.

An article not commercially known in this country at the time of the passage of a tariff law, but subsequently imported, and which in fact comes within the proper definition of a similar article then known and provided for in the act, and which is so designated commercially, is entitled to be classified as such. Wm. J. Matheson & Co. v. U. S. (1898) 90 Fed. 276.

Where commodities are not kept in stock nor dealt in as articles of general merchandise, but are made only to the order of those requiring them, conditions are not such as to allow the establishment of a trade designation. Thomas v. F. B. Vandegrift & Co. (1908) 162 Fed. 645, 89 C. C. A. 437, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 591.

In order to give a general term used in a tariff law a special or trade meaning, to include only a particular class of articles, it must be shown that prior to the passage of the law such term was, in commerce and trade at all ports and trade centers of the country, a well-known, uniform, and universally accepted designation of such particular class. Carson v. Nixon (1898) 90 Fed. 409, 33 C. C. A. 135.

Usage sufficient to establish a commercial designation which will control the meaning of words in a tariff act cannot be made out by the evidence of one dealer, whose testimony is practically limited to his own usage, especially when he admits that the articles are sometimes bought and sold under other names. Berbecker v. Robertson (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 590, 591, 152 U. S. 373, 38 L. Ed. 484.

Where the evidence as to the commercial designation of an article is conflicting, the ordinary name given it in common speech, when proper under the definition given by the dictionaries will govern in making classification. Bour v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 91 Fed. 533.

17. —— Long-continued practice.—Wherever in the history of customs laws it is found that a certain expression has received, in effect, a statutory construction, or a long and uniform use by Congress or by the departments, that construction is controlling, unless some other is necessary. This rule is of the highest authority, and masters all others. U. S. v. Townsend (1902) 113 Fed. 442, 51 C. C. A. 276; Brennan v. U. S. (1905) 136 Fed. 743, 69 C. C. A. 395 (reversing judgment [C. C. 1904] 129 Fed. 837); U. S. v. W. N. Proctor & Co. (1906) 145 Fed. 126, 76 C. C. A. 96 (affirming judgment W. N. Proctor & Co. v. U. S. [C. C. 1905] 139 Fed. 586); Burditt & Williams Co. v. U. S. (1907) 153 Fed. 67, 82 C. C. A. 201; Kuttroff, Pickhardt & Co. v. U. S. (1907) 154 Fed. 1004, 83 C. C. A. 679 (affirming judgment U. S. v. Kuttroff, Pickhardt & Co. [C. C. 1906] 147 Fed. 758); Benkard v. Schell (C. C.) Fed. Cas. No. 1,307; U. S. v. The Recorder (C. C. 1847) Fed. Cas. No. 16,129; Same v. Wotten (C. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 693 (judgment affirmed [1892] 53 Fed. 344, 3 C. C. A. 553); Same v. Kaub (D. C. 1877) Fed. Cas. No. 15,-507; Goat & Sheepskin Import Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 178. While such rule is based on sound reason, practice cannot establish an arbitrary or wholly conclusive classification. Pierce v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 171. And should not control in what is not a doubtful case. U. S. v. P. E. Anderson & Co. (1909) 175 Fed. 961, 99 C. C. A. 451. Nor do years of illegal practice in classifying goods and assessing the duties thereon bar the United States from changing to the legal method. Gulbenkian v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 860, judgment affirmed (1911) 186 Fed. 133, 108 C. C. A. 245.

18. —— General and specific enumeration.—The relative specificity of competing provisions of the tariff law is not always controlling of decision. Downing & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 447.

Imports in the tariff acts may be "nonenumerated," "generally enumerated," or "specially enumerated;" each phrase marks a different degree of precision in the description of the imports. (1889) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 272.

Articles described as a species are "specially enumerated, and such enumeration when made determines the classification. Id.

Under some circumstances language describing a class may be more specific than that containing a designation eo nomine, and an article literally included within such a designation in one paragraph of the customs laws may, on account of its relations to a peculiar class, be referred to some other paragraph. Brennan v. U. S. (1905) 136 Fed. 743, 69 C. C. A. 395, reversing judgment (C. C. 1904) 129 Fed. 837.

When the name is general and the tariff specific, it embraces the whole class, and questions of price, value, or accidental chemical components are immaterial. (1887) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 523.

General terms in a customs act, although sufficiently broad to comprehend a certain article, are not applicable if it is specifically designated therein. Movius v. Arthur (1877) 95 U. S. 144, 24 L. Ed. 420; Arthur v. Lahey (1877) 96 U. S. 112, 113, 118, 24 L. Ed. 766; Same v. Stephani (1877) 96 U. S. 125, 24 L. Ed. 771; Same v. Rheims (1877) 96 U. S. 143, 144, 24 L. Ed. 813; U. S. v. Davis (1893) 54 Fed. 147, 4 C. C. A. 251; Same v. Field (1896) 71 Fed. 513, 514, 18 C. C. A. 225; Bailey v. Schell (C. C. 1863) Fed. Cas. No. 745; Dodge v. Arthur (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 3,950; Hutton v. Schell (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 6,962; Tong Duck Chung v. Kelly (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 14,093; Stodder v. Spalding (C. C. 1885) 24 Fed. 89; "Zante Currants" (C. C. 1896) 73 Fed. 183; U. S. v. Boden (C. C. 1904) 133 Fed. 839. CONTRA, see Jaffray v. Murphy (C. C. 1874) Fed. Cas. No. 7,172.

When described as a genus, or in general terms, they are merely enumerated, and, in the absence of a specific enumeration, such general enumeration determines the classification. One such general enumeration may also be more specific than another. (1889) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 272.

While it is true a more specific designation controls as against a general designation, that a designation eo nomine controls as against a description by class, where there has been an administrative construction and this has been adopted into law, this construction must control. Goussios & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 317. See, also, Brennan v. Same (1905) 136 Fed. 743, 69 C. C. A. 395.

19. —— Ambiguity.—In cases of serious ambiguity in the language of a law imposing duties, or vague or doubtful interpretation, the construction of the law should be in favor of the importer. Hartranft v. Wiegmann (1887) 7 Sup. Ct. 1240, 121 U. S. 609, 30 L. Ed. 1012; American Net & Twine Co. v. Worthington (1891) 12 Sup. Ct. 55, 141 U. S. 468, 35 L. Ed. 821; Matheson & Co. v. U. S. (1896) 71 Fed. 394, 18 C. C. A. 143; U. S. v. Wigglesworth (C. C. 1842) Fed. Cas. No. 16,690; Powers v. Barney (C. C. 1863) Fed. Cas. No. 11,361; McCoy v. Hedden (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 89; U. S. v. Ullman (D. C. 1871) Fed. Cas. No. 16,593. And the interpretation of doubtful and ambiguous words is to be explained in subservience to the common policy of the country. U. S. v. Whidden (D. C. 1861) Fed. Cas. No. 16,670.

In determining the intention with which language has been employed in a paragraph of a tariff act some ambiguity therein must be apparent to warrant a resort to the "side lights" obtainable from tariff hearings. Consolidated Kansas City Smelting & Refining Co. v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 472.

20. —— Repugnant provisions.—Where two provisions in a customs law are repugnant, the last one will prevail. Powers v. Barney (C. C. 1863) Fed. Cas. No. 11,361.

21. —— Intent.—Intent is not an element in determining the proper classification of imported articles, and merchants are at liberty so to manufacture and so to import their goods as to subject them to the least possible duties under the tariff laws. Johnson v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 123 Fed. 997; Stone & Downer Co. v. Same (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 603.

22. —— Construction in favor of importer.—In cases of doubt in the construction of tariff laws, the courts resolve the doubt in favor of the importer. U. S. v. Davis (1893) 54 Fed. 147, 4 C. C. A. 251; Matheson & Co. v. U. S. (1896) 71 Fed. 394, 18 C. C. A. 143 (following Hartranft v. Wiegmann [1887] 7 Sup. Ct. 1240, 121 U. S. 609, 30 L. Ed. 1012, and American Net & Twine Co. v. Worthington [1891] 12 Sup. Ct. 55, 141 U. S. 468, 35 L. Ed. 821); U. S. v. Hatters' Fur Exchange (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 198; Same v. Wolff & Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 418; Wright & Graham Co. v. U. S. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 528; (1897) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 541. But revenue laws are not penal in the sense that requires them to be construed with great strictness in favor of the importer. U. S. v. Twenty-Five Cases of Cloths (D. C. 1840) Fed. Cas. No. 16,563; In re Twenty-Eight Cases of Wine (D. C. 1867) Fed. Cas. No. 14,281.

Revenue statutes, including those fixing duties on imports, are neither remedial laws nor laws founded upon any permanent public policy, and should be construed most strongly against the government; for burdens should not be imposed on the taxpayer beyond what such statutes expressly and clearly import. Rice v. United States (1893) 53 Fed. 910, 4 C. C. A. 104.

In case of doubt as to whether a higher or a lower duty is imposed by a statute, the doubt should be resolved in favor of the importer, "since the intention of Congress to impose the higher duty should be expressed in clear and unambiguous language." (1907) 26 Op. Atty. Gen. 119. See, also, American Net & Twine Co. v. Worthington (1891) 12 Sup. Ct. 55, 141 U. S. 468, 35 L. Ed. 821.

Where, by amendment in the senate, an article, which was placed on the free list in the bill passed by the house, was also placed in the dutiable list, and remained in both places as the act was finally passed, held, that the case was one of patent ambiguity arising on the face of the act, which ambiguity must be resolved in favor of the importer, and the goods admitted free. U. S. v. Merck (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 639.

Where the classification of an import is open to a construction which would as well place it on the free list, the course most favorable to the importer must be adopted. O. G. Hempstead & Son v. Thomas (1903) 122 Fed. 538, 59 C. C. A. 342.

23. —— Use of article.—The use of an article does not necessarily control its classification for tariff purposes. U. S. v. Nichols (C. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 359. CONTRA, Hagedon v. Seeberger (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 401.

The chief or predominant use to which an article is applied determines its classification, although it may be commonly, generally, and practically, and not merely exceptionally, used for other purposes. The chief or predominant use meant is that which, in ordinary language, is so called. Meyer v. Cadwalader (1898) 89 Fed. 963, 32 C. C. A. 456. The name of an imported article is not the sole guide by which to classify it for duty. Its uses, especially when it is new, and a substitute for other articles, should be considered. Koch v. Seeberger (C. C. 1887) 30 Fed. 424. A law imposing a duty on articles used for a particular purpose should not be construed to cover articles not so used at the date of the act, unless expressly so provided. Rossman v. Hedden (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 925, 928, 145 U. S. 561, 36 L. Ed. 817. It is the duty of the jury to give more attention to the course of trade in the original distribution of the goods among those who import them than to the guesses of individuals as to the various uses to which the articles may be put by individual consumers. Meyer v. Cadwalader (C. C. 1891) 49 Fed. 26. The test of the "suitableness" of an article for a certain purpose is not whether it is commonly used therefor, but whether it possesses actual, practical, commercial fitness for that purpose. White v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 69 Fed. 93. The test of predominant use is only resorted to where necessary to properly classify an article falling within two or more classifications, either of which, standing alone, would adequately describe it, and where the article is enumerated by reference to its use. Smith v. U. S. (1899) 93 Fed. 194, 35 C. C. A. 265.

24. —— Protection basis as determining classification.—In construing the tariff act of 1890, the court will, in a proper case, as an aid to interpretation, consider the fact that the general idea of the statute is that of protection to American manufactures, and this idea suggests that an article which has been subjected to an additional process of manufacture is subject to a higher, rather than an equal or lower, rate of duty. Arnold v. U. S. (1893) 147 U. S. 494, 13 Sup. Ct. 406, 37 L. Ed. 253.

The general purpose of the so-called "McKinley Tariff Law" of Oct. 1, 1890, to protect and foster American industries, is not to override a plain provision contained therein, which, in a particular instance, fails to carry out such purpose, or operates in contravention of it. In re Schallenberger (C. C. 1895) 72 Fed. 491.

The schedules of the tariff acts of 1890 and 1897 are based on the principle of protection to American industry, and in the construction of their provisions no inference can be drawn against a particular construction, because it will result in imposing double or treble duties on an article by adding duties for each stage it is advanced in manufacture. Burditt & Williams Co. v. U. S. (1907) 153 Fed. 67, 82 C. C. A. 201, reversing judgment (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 892.

Since the tariff is enacted on protective lines, it is proper to take into consideration, in construing the law, the fact that certain grades of an imported commodity are the only ones that come into competition with domestic products. Heide v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 316.

In construing tariff acts based on the fundamental idea of protection to domestic manufactures, and in which the duties are uniformly increased to correspond with the advanced state of manufacture of the article, where a material used in making manufactured articles has been subjected to further treatment than that of a class specifically enumerated, it should be classified with a higher, rather than a lower, class. U. S. v. Eschwege (1899) 98 Fed. 600, 39 C. C. A. 169.

A construction of the tariff law which produces unjust and unconscionable duties should be avoided, if possible. It is to be assumed that Congress did not intend to make duties prohibitive. Its purpose in enacting the tariff act of 1897 was to protect and not to prohibit, to raise, and not cut off revenue, to promote and not to destroy, legitimate competition, and such construction should be adopted as will give effect to that purpose. Shallus v. U. S. (1908) 162 Fed. 653, 89 C. C. A. 445, reversing decree (C. C. 1907) 155 Fed. 213.

In construing the tariff act of October 1, 1890, the court will, in a proper case, as an aid to interpretation, consider the fact that the general idea of the statute is that of protection to American manufactures, and this idea suggests that an article which has been subjected to an additional process of manufacture is subject to a higher, rather than an equal or lower, rate of duty. Arnold v. U. S. (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 406, 408, 147 U. S. 494, 37 L. Ed. 253, affirming judgment In re Arnold (C. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 510.

25. —— Manufactured article.—Ordinarily a manufactured article takes a different form, or at least subserves a purpose different from that of the original materials out of which it is made and usually takes a different name. That does not mean, however, that its usefulness as a material has necessarily ended and that as a manufacture it cannot serve the purpose of material for some other manufacture. U. S. v. Richter (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 167.

Where an article has been advanced through one or more processes into a completed article, known and recognized in trade by a specific and distinctive name, other than the name of the material, and is put into a completed shape designed and adapted for a particular use, it is deemed to be a manufacture within tariff acts. Erhardt v. Hahn (1893) 55 Fed. 273, 275, 5 C. C. A. 99.

The mere fact of the application of labor to an article, either by hand or by mechanism, does not make it necessarily a "manufactured article," within the meaning of the tariff laws, unless the labor has been carried to such an extent that the article suffers a species of transformation, and is changed into a new and different article, having a distinctive name, character, or use. Baumgarten v. Magone (1890) 50 Fed. 69 (following U. S. v. Semmer [C. C. 1890] 41 Fed. 324); In re Herter Bros. (1892) 50 Fed. 72 (judgment reversed [1892] 53 Fed. 913, 4 C. C. A. 107).

26. —— Crude article.—An article may be crude for the purposes of classification under the tariff laws, by reason of the use to which it is applied, where it is crude in the sense that it is unrefined. Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 822.

27. —— "Fit only for such use."—The term "fit only" implies that the article to which it applies has no practical commercial fitness for uses other than those designated. Stone & Downer Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 47.

The phrase "fit only for such use" means fit in a commercial sense; but whether an article must be held fit for a certain use, if when blended with other articles it becomes so fit, is a question now reserved. Stone & Downer Co. v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 513.

28. —— "Colored."—The word "colored" is a participial adjective used generally with the meaning of "having a color." The color's origin does not enter into the essential meaning of the word. Davison v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 78.

29. —— "Composed of."—A tariff provision for a manufactured article "composed of" a certain material applies, in the absence of other controlling rules of construction, to the appropriate article if composed in chief value of the given material. Hensel, Bruckmann & Lorbacher v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 162.

30. —— "Derived from."—The term "derived from," used in a tariff act to describe a product, has its ordinary meaning of "produced from," and relates to the physical substance from which such product is obtained, and not to its chemical relationship. Farbenfabriken of Elberfeld & Co. v. U. S. (1900) 102 Fed. 603, 42 C. C. A. 525, affirming judgment (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 553, 554, 719.

31. —— "Not otherwise provided for."—In enacting tariff laws it has evidently been the intention of Congress that the enumeration of dutiable articles should be as nearly exhaustive as possible; and imported articles should therefore not be classified under clauses for articles "not otherwise provided for," if by fair construction they can be embraced within a specific enumeration of dutiable articles. O. G. Hempstead & Son v. U. S. (1907) 158 Fed. 584, 86 C. C. A. 42.

The expression "not otherwise provided for," or "not specially provided for," in a tariff provision, does not deprive the general rule as to classification by specific designation of its ordinary application, so that a provision which specifically designates goods, but which is so qualified, shall not prevail over words of a general description in another provision containing no such qualification. U. S. v. Schwarz (C. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 302, decree affirmed Thomas v. Same (1906) 140 Fed. 989, 71 C. C. A. 401.

32. —— "Such."—The word "such" ordinarily refers to the next immediate antecedent, but not necessarily; never when the purpose of the section in which it is used would thereby be impaired. (1897) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 551.

33. —— Change of article.—A change which renders an article substantially different as an article of commerce, and adapts it to all the uses of another article, on which a higher rate of duty is levied, destroys its legal identity, and is a material change, under the revenue law. Wilkinson v. Greely (C. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 17,672.

34. —— Titles prefixed to schedules.—The titles of the various schedules in tariff acts are not intended to be perfectly accurate, but furnish general information only of the articles enumerated in the paragraphs therein. Hollender v. Magone (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 932, 933, 149 U. S. 586, 37 L. Ed. 860, reversing judgment (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 912; U. S. v. Brown & Eadie (1905) 136 Fed. 550, 69 C. C. A. 260; (1894) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 66.

Act Jan. 29, 1795, § 2, providing that where any article is made subject to duty, the parts thereof when imported separately shall be subject to duty at the same rate was limited to duties imposed by laws then existing, and does not apply to subsequent tariff acts. U. S. v. Schoverling (1892) 13 Sup. Ct. 24, 26, 146 U. S. 76, 36 L. Ed. 893.

36. —— Presumptions.—Language will be presumed to be used in commerce as in ordinary life and to establish that a term is used in commerce with a signification differing from that of the same term when ordinarily employed, its use in commerce must be shown to be general, uniform, and definite. U. S. v. Salomon (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 246.

The presumption that, if a special meaning is attached to certain words in a prior tariff act, it would be presumed that Congress intended that they should have the same signification when used in a subsequent act in relation to the same subject matter, is not conclusive. Maddock v. Magone (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 588, 589, 152 U. S. 368, 38 L. Ed. 482.

It is to be presumed that every provision of a customs act classifying merchandise has relation to some existing course of business. Loggie v. U. S. (1905) 137 Fed. 813, 70 C. C. A. 433.

All doubts arising under paragraph 297 of the tariff act of 1894 (28 Stat. 66) are presumptively to be resolved in favor of the lower rate of duty, save where the act mentions or describes the same article in two different places, when the higher rate governs. (1894) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 66.

37. —— Evidence.—In tariff statutes words describing merchandise are to be taken as used in their commercial sense, but the common and the commercial meanings are presumed to be the same. If a difference in meaning is attempted to be shown, the party seeking to show a difference has the burden of proof. U. S. v. Walter (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 95.

Where a clear preponderance of evidence cannot be adduced as to the meaning of an expression in a tariff act departmental construction tacitly approved by congressional recognition should turn the scale and be accepted as sufficient evidence of the legislative intent. (1887) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 533.

The ordinary rules of evidence are to be applied with reference to interest, character, and weight of testimony, to be received from those engaged in or familiar with commerce, trade, and traffic in the article. Id.

Evidence as to the trade meaning of a term used in the tariff act is inadmissible unless such meaning differs from the ordinary dictionary meaning of the term, or its meaning in common speech. U. S. v. Nordlinger (1903) 121 Fed. 690, 58 C. C. A. 438, writ of certiorari denied Nordlinger v. U. S. (1903) 24 Sup. Ct. 848, 191 U. S. 575, 48 L. Ed. 308.

The burden of showing that an import is dutiable is on the government. O. G. Hempstead & Son v. Thomas (1903) 122 Fed. 538, 59 C. C. A. 342.

The evidence in this case fails to show that, by definite, universal, and general commercial designation, the interior decorations of an apartment are divided into different classes, of which upholstery is one. U. S. v. Snow's U. S. Sample Express Co. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 477.

The testimony of a single witness that "we"—evidently meaning the firm which he represented—"consider it among the fruit sirups" is not sufficient to show commercial designation. U. S. v. Wakem & McLaughlin (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 385.

38. —— Questions for jury.—Whether an imported article is or is not known in commerce by the word or terms used in the act imposing the duty is a question of fact. Tyng v. Grinnell (1875) 92 U. S. 467, 23 L. Ed. 733; Bacon v. Bancroft (C. C. 1840) Fed. Cas. No. 714; Hutton v. Schell (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 6,962; Zante Currants (C. C. 1896) 73 Fed. 183; Beatty's Ex'r v. U. S. (1856) Dev. Ct. Cl. § 244.

In the construction of tariff laws the ordinary meaning of a phrase in common speech is a question of law for the court; the commercial meaning is a question of fact for the jury. Vom Cleff v. Magone (C. C. 1893) 57 Fed. 198, judgment affirmed Magone v. Vom Cleff (1895) 70 Fed. 980, 17 C. C. A. 549. The question whether a particular importation, on which a duty has been imposed, is properly included in a particular name of a substance as employed in the tariff laws, is for the jury, and not the court. Weilbacher v. Merritt (C. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 85. Where the words in a statute imposing duties on imported merchandise are not technical, their interpretation is a matter of law for the court. Nix v. Hedden (C. C. 1889) 39 Fed. 109, judgment affirmed (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 881, 149 U. S. 304, 37 L. Ed. 745, following Marvel v. Merritt (1885) 116 U. S. 11, 6 Sup. Ct. 207, 29 L. Ed. 550.

DUTIABLE LIST

SCHEDULE A.—CHEMICALS, OILS, AND PAINTS

1. Acids: Boracic acid, ¾ cents per pound; citric acid, 5 cents per pound; formic acid, 1½ cents per pound; gallic acid, 6 cents per pound; lactic acid, 1½ cents per pound; oxalic acid, 1½ cents per pound; pyrogallic acid, 12 cents per pound; [salicylic acid, 2½ cents per pound;] tannic acid and tannin, 5 cents per pound; tartaric acid, 3½ cents per pound; all other acids and acid anhydrides not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem.

The words in this paragraph "salicylic acid, 2½ cents per pound," inclosed in brackets, were repealed by Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, § 502, post, § 5291c, and a different rate of duty imposed thereon by §§ 500, 501, of said Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, post, §§ 5291a, 5291b.

Notes of Decisions

Acids commercially so known.—Two coal tar preparations, consisting of phtalic anhydride and tetrachlorphtalic anhydride, which, though not acids chemically, are commercially known as, and perform the functions of, acids, held "acids used for * * * manufacturing purposes," and not a coal tar preparation. Heller & Merz Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 124 Fed. 299.

Boracic acid.—An antiseptic preservative, consisting of an intimate mechanical mixture of boracic acid and borax, the former being the more valuable component, held an article not enumerated in Act 1897, either as "boracic acid," as "chemical compounds," or as "borax" or "borate material," and is therefore subject to assessment at the same rate of duty as boracic acid, under the similitude clause. Berth Levi & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 420.

Red oil or oleic acid.—So-called red oil or oleic acid, which is used otherwise than as soap stock, held not under Act 1897, an oil commonly used in soap making, fit only for such uses, but dutiable as an acid not specially provided for. Edwards Hill's Sons & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 143 Fed. 361, judgment affirmed (1906) 151 Fed. 475, 81 C. C. A. 13.

Sulphotoluic acid.—Sulphotoluic acid, which is both an acid and a preparation of coal tar, but not a color or dye, held, under Act 1890, an acid not specially provided for, and not a color or dye. Matheson & Co. v. U. S. (1896) 71 Fed. 394, 18 C. C. A. 143.

Tannic acid.—Extract of nutgalls held dutiable as tannic acid. See paragraph 30.

2. Acetic anhydrid, 2½ cents per pound.

Acetic acid anhydrid.—The term "acetic acid," under Act 1897, held to include "acetic acid anhydrid." George Lueders & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 970.

3. Acetone, 1 cent per pound.

4. Dried egg albumen, 3 cents per pound.

Notes of Decisions

Albumen. — Albumen commonly so called held not dutiable as albumen. See paragraph 392.

5. Alkalies, alkaloids, and all chemical and medicinal compounds, preparations, mixtures and salts, and combinations thereof not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Alkaloids.—Crude cocaine held dutiable as an alkaloid. Hirzel v. U. S. (1893) 58 Fed. 772, 7 C. C. A. 491; In re Hirzel (C. C. 1893) 53 Fed. 1006.

Alkaloid salt.—Hydrochlorate or muriate of cocaine held dutiable as an "alkaloid salt," under Act 1890, rather than as a "medicinal preparation in the preparation of which alcohol is used." In re Mallinckrodt Chemical Works (C. C. 1894) 66 Fed. 746.

Chemical compound or salt.—Alizarin assistant held dutiable as a chemical compound. See paragraph 45.

An antiseptic preservative held not a chemical compound. See paragraph 1.

Bichromate of soda held dutiable as a chemical compound or salt. See paragraph 67.

Cadmium sulphite held not dutiable as a chemical compound or salt. See paragraph 63.

Carbolineum or carbolineum avenarius held not dutiable as a chemical compound. See paragraph 21.

Chloral hydrate held dutiable as a chemical compound. See paragraph 18.

Chrysarobin held not dutiable as a medicinal preparation. See paragraph 27.

Combination of asphalt and bitumen held not dutiable as a chemical compound or mixture. See paragraph 534.

Commercial carbonate of baryta held not dutiable as a chemical compound or salt. See paragraph 51.

Extract of logwood held not dutiable as a chemical compound. See paragraph 30.

Extract of nutgalls held not dutiable as a chemical compound. See paragraph 30.

Hyoscin hydrobromate held not dutiable as a chemical compound or salt. See paragraph 16.

Lanoline held dutiable as a medicinal proprietary preparation. See paragraph 44.

Lysol held not dutiable as a chemical compound. See paragraph 21.

Oil of mirbane or nitrobenzole held not dutiable as a chemical compound. See paragraph 23.

Preparations of coal tar held not dutiable as a chemical compound. See paragraph 21.

Refined carbonate of potash held not dutiable as a chemical compound or salt. See paragraph 580.

Saccharin held dutiable as a chemical compound. See paragraph 179.

Salol held dutiable as a chemical salt. See paragraph 18.

Tetrachloride of tin held not dutiable as a chemical compound. See paragraph 526.

Tolidine base and binitrotolule held not dutiable as a chemical compound. See paragraph 23.

Verdigris held not dutiable as a chemical compound. See paragraph 421.

Glycerophosphate of lime, though occasionally dispensed medicinally, held, not a "medicinal preparation," but a "chemical compound," within Act 1897. A. Klipstein & Co. v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 535, 93 C. C. A. 67.

Borate of manganese or bormangan, which is a manufactured article made from manganese and borates of lime or soda, held dutiable as a chemical compound or salt. Hempstead v. Thomas (1904) 129 Fed. 907, 64 C. C. A. 339, reversing decree O. G. Hempstead & Son v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 123 Fed. 346.

Acetate of copper, though a variety of verdigris, and known commercially as "pure or distilled verdigris," was dutiable under paragraph 76, Act 1890, as a chemical compound, and was not entitled to free entry under paragraph 749 as verdigris or subacetate of copper. U. S. v. Ducas (1897) 78 Fed. 339, 24 C. C. A. 121, reversing Ducas v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 71 Fed. 954.

Crude cocaine, being an alkaloid derived from the leaves of the coca plant, in the extraction or purification whereof alcohol is used, but which contains, as imported, from 10 to 20 per cent. of impurities, and is used chiefly in the manufacture of oleates, cocaine salts, hydrochlorate of cocaine, cocaine wines, etc., though occasionally used for external applications as a cheap substitute for the pure article, held dutiable as a chemical compound, and not as a medicinal preparation in which alcohol is used. Hirzel v. U. S. (1893) 58 Fed. 772, 7 C. C. A. 491; In re Hirzel (C. C. 1893) 53 Fed. 1006.

Bone size substitute, consisting of chemical starch, dextrin, magnesium chloride, and silica, which is used for stiffening the backs of fabrics, held under Act 1897 not a preparation fit for use as starch, but a chemical compound. U. S. v. B. P. Ducas & Co. (C. C. 1903) 149 Fed. 253.

Dulcin, being a chemical compound, is dutiable as such under Act 1897, and not as saccharine, under paragraph 211 of that act. U. S. v. Lehn (C. C. 1902) 113 Fed. 1005.

Perfumed smelling salts were dutiable as chemical salts, under Act 1894, and not as articles of perfumery. U. S. v. Utard (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 522.

The phrase "chemical compound or salt," in section 2502 of the act of March 3, 1883, held too general to take an article out of the similitude clause of section 2499 of said act. Lloyd v. McWilliams (C. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 261, judgment affirmed (1890) 11 Sup. Ct. 173, 137 U. S. 576, 34 L. Ed. 788.

There must be some artificial mixture of chemicals or artificial compounding of substances to produce a chemical compound or chemical mixture. A natural ore which has received no treatment except to be mechanically ground is not a chemical compound or mixture. U. S. v. Davies, Turner & Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 196.

A chemical compound is not simply a mingling of components, but a combination of them, resulting in their destruction as distinct entities and in the development by chemical reaction of a new substance possessing properties radically different from those of its constituent elements. Strohmeyer & Arpe Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 285.

Mixture implies that the corporeal integrity, the separate chemical nature, and individual properties of the mixed ingredients have been preserved. Id.

A combination of lime, carbonate of lime, and manganese oxide, for use in drying and hardening varnish, held under Act 1897, dutiable as a chemical compound. Id.

Perborate of sodium held under Acts of 1897 and of 1909 not dutiable as borate material, but as a chemical compound. Morgenstern & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 213.

Binoxide of barium does not occur in a state of nature; it is not a clay or earth, wrought or unwrought; nor is it a mere mechanical mixture, but is an artificially produced chemical compound, and dutiable as such under act of 1897. McKesson v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 213.

Tri-nitro-iso-butyl-xylol, or artificial musk, held, under Act 1897, not dutiable as a coal tar preparation, but as a chemical compound. Magnus v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 166.

Medicinal preparations.—Acetanilid held not a medicinal preparation. See paragraph 18.

Anthrax vaccine or blackleg held not dutiable as a medicinal preparation. See paragraph 400.

Diphtheria antitoxine held dutiable as a medicinal preparation. See paragraph 400.

Elaterium in cakes held not dutiable as a medicinal preparation. See paragraph 477.

Guaiacol carbonate held dutiable as a medicinal preparation. See paragraph 18.

Guarana held not dutiable as a medicinal preparation. See paragraph 477.

Loretin held not dutiable as a medicinal preparation. See paragraph 387.

Orange flower water and rose water held dutiable under act of 1897 as medicinal preparation, but not dutiable as such under Act 1883. See paragraph 48.

Powder made from juice of papaw melon held not dutiable as a medicinal preparation. See paragraph 477.

Salol held dutiable as a medicinal preparation. See paragraph 18.

Soluble creosote held not dutiable as a chemical compound. See paragraph 452.

The expression "medicinal preparations" means such articles as are of use or believed by the prescriber or user fairly and honestly to be of use in curing or alleviating or palliating or preventing some disease or affection of the human frame. Dodge & Olcott v. U. S. (C. C. 1891) 130 Fed. 624.

Chloral hydrate, now specifically mentioned in paragraph 18, held, under Act 1897, not dutiable as an alcoholic medicinal preparation, but as a medicinal preparation not containing alcohol, or in the preparation of which alcohol is not used. U. S. v. Schering (C. C. 1902) 119 Fed. 473 (judgment reversed [1903] 123 Fed. 65, 59 C. C. A. 283); Battle & Co. Chemists' Corp. v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 108 Fed. 216.

Muriate of cocaine, which is made and used solely as a medicine, was dutiable as a medicinal preparation, under paragraph 74, Act 1890, and not as a chemical salt, under paragraph 76, though it in fact belongs to this class of substances. The former description, being more narrow and specific, must prevail over the latter. Fink v. U. S. (1898) 18 S. Ct. 770, 170 U. S. 584, 42 L. Ed. 1153, affirming Lehn v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 748.

The term "medicinal preparations," in Act 1897, includes adeps lanæ anhydrous and adeps lanæ cum aqua, which are highly finished products of wool grease, are used principally in therapeutics, are sold generally to the drug trade, and are used to some extent in salves and medicinal soaps, and wool grease does not include them. Zinkeisen & Co. v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 312, 92 C. C. A. 624.

Gaduol, an extract of cod liver oil, which in the form in which imported is not prepared for the use of the apothecary or physician, and which is not dispensed in that form, held under Act 1897, not a medicinal preparation, but a chemical compound. U. S. v. Merck & Co. (1905) 136 Fed. 817, 69 C. C. A. 472, affirming judgment Merck & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 438.

The articles designated by the phrase "medicinal preparations" will be such as from time to time come within its meaning, and not solely those meant by it at the time of the passage of the act. U. S. v. Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. (1897) 79 Fed. 313, 24 C. C. A. 604, affirming judgment Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 71 Fed. 957.

Gelatin capsules containing balsam are dutiable as "medicinal preparations," under Act 1897. U. S. v. Lehn & Fink (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 171.

Hexamethylentetramin held a medicinal preparation in the preparation of which alcohol is not used, within act of 1897. Lehn & Fink v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 640.

Paraldehyde, though produced from aldehyde, which is a by-product in the distillation of alcohol, but contains no alcohol, is a medicinal preparation in the preparation of which alcohol is not used, within Act 1897. Merck & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 147 Fed. 895.

Creolin-Pearson is not a medicinal preparation within Act 1897. Merck & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 147 Fed. 896.

Fruit juice which has been concentrated and medicated but is not used by itself as a medicine, but as an ingredient in the preparation of a medicine, held not dutiable as a medicinal preparation under Act 1890. C. B. Richard & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1892) 147 Fed. 891.

6. Alumina, hydrate of, or refined bauxite; alum, alum cake, patent alum, sulphate of alumina, and aluminous cake, and all other manufactured compounds of alumina, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Refined bauxite.—The white powder known to the trade as "refined bauxite," which is manufactured from bauxite by removing from the crude ore the impurities of iron, silica, and titanic acid, held not bauxite, within paragraph 501 of the free list of Act 1890. In re Irwin (C. C. 1894) 62 Fed. 150, judgment affirmed Irwin v. U. S. (1895) 67 Fed. 232, 14 C. C. A. 381.

7. Ammonia, carbonate of, and muriate of, ¾ of 1 cent per pound; phosphate of, 1 cent per pound; liquid anhydrous, 2½ cents per pound; ammoniacal gas liquor, 10 per centum ad valorem.

8. Argols or crude tartar or wine lees crude or partly refined, containing not more than 90 per centum of potassium bitartrate, 5 per centum ad valorem; containing more than 90 per centum of potassium bitartrate, cream of tartar, and Rochelle salts or tartrate of soda and potassa, 2½ cents per pound; calcium tartrate crude, 5 per centum ad valorem.

9. Balsams: Copaiba, fir or Canada, Peru, tolu, and all other balsams, which are natural and uncompounded and not suitable for the manufacture of perfumery and cosmetics, if in a crude state, not advanced in value or condition by any process or treatment whatever beyond that essential to the proper packing of the balsams and the prevention of decay or deterioration pending manufacture, all the foregoing not specially provided for in this section, 10 per centum ad valorem; if advanced in value or condition by any process or treatment whatever beyond that essential to the proper packing of the balsams and the prevention of decay or deterioration pending manufacture, all the foregoing not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem: Provided. That no article containing alcohol shall be classified for duty under this paragraph.

Balsams advanced in value.—Balsam in gelatin capsules cannot be considered simply as balsam and classified as "balsams * * * advanced in value or condition," under Act 1897, because nothing whatever has been done to the balsam itself. U. S. v. Lehn & Fink (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 171.

10. Barium, chloride of, ¼ cent per pound; dioxide of, 1½ cents per pound; carbonate of, precipitated, 15 per centum ad valorem.

11. Blacking of all kinds, polishing powders, and all creams and preparations for cleaning or polishing, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That no preparations containing alcohol shall be classified for duty under this paragraph.

Polishing powders.—Oxides of iron, which are in general use both as "colors" and as "polishing powders," held dutiable under Act 1883, as "polishing powders of every description, by whatever name known;" and not as "colors and paints, including lakes, whether dry or mixed, or ground with water or oil, and not specially enumerated or provided for in this act." Zucker & Levett Chemical Co. v. Magone (C. C. 1889) 37 Fed. 776.

When an imported article is a "painters' color," and also a "polishing powder," it is not necessary to show that its predominant use is as a polishing powder, in order to make it dutiable as such, but it is sufficient if its use for that purpose is a substantial use. Id.

12. Bleaching powder, or chloride of lime, 1/10 cent per pound.

13. Caffein, $1 per pound; compounds of caffein, 25 per centum ad valorem; impure tea, tea waste, tea siftings or sweepings, for manufacturing purposes in bond, pursuant to the provisions of the Act of May sixteenth, nineteen hundred and eight, 1 cent per pound.

14. Calomel, corrosive sublimate, and other mercurial preparations, 15 per centum ad valorem.

15. Chalk, precipitated, suitable for medicinal or toilet purposes; chalk put up in the form of cubes, blocks, sticks, or disks, or otherwise, including tailors', billiard, red, and other manufactures of chalk not specially provided for in this section, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Chalk prepared for toilet purposes.—While the provision of Act 1897 for chalk "prepared for toilet purposes," the preparation referred to is not, perhaps, such as is necessary to make a completed toilet article, there must be advancement toward use for toilet purposes, by the admixture of flavoring or other ingredients, or otherwise; and chalk that has been merely precipitated artificially, bolted, and packed in bags is not within that provision. U. S. v. P. E. Anderson & Co. (1909) 175 Fed. 961, 99 C. C. A. 451.

Precipitated chalk.—The article produced by the artificial precipitation of chalk, and bolting and packing it in bags, held not "manufactures" of chalk, within Act 1897, but chalk itself. U. S. v. P. E. Anderson & Co. (1909) 175 Fed. 961, 99 C. C. A. 451.

Precipitated chalk, dried and bolted, and imported to be used for making tooth powder, held not taxable under Act 1897, "as chalk (not medicine nor prepared for toilet purposes), when ground, precipitated naturally or artificially, or otherwise, prepared," but taxable as manufacturers of chalk not specially provided for. I. W. Lyon & Son v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 121 Fed. 204.

16. Chemical and medicinal compounds and preparations, including mixtures and salts, distilled oils, essential oils, expressed oils, rendered oils, greases, ethers, flavoring and other extracts and fruit essences, all the foregoing and their combinations when containing alcohol, and all articles consisting of vegetable or mineral objects immersed or placed in, or saturated with, alcohol, except perfumery and spirit varnishes, and all alcoholic compounds not specially provided for in this section, if containing 20 per centum of alcohol or less, 10 cents per pound and 20 per centum ad valorem; containing more than 20 per centum and not more than 50 per centum of alcohol, 20 cents per pound and 20 per centum ad valorem; containing more than 50 per centum of alcohol, 40 cents per pound and 20 per centum ad valorem.

Alcoholic compounds.—Concentrated cherry juice held dutiable as an alcoholic compound. See paragraph 247.

Herbs immersed in alcohol held not dutiable as an alcoholic compound. See paragraph 385.

Pinaud's eau de quinine tonique held not dutiable as an alcoholic compound. See paragraph 48.

Under Act 1897 the word "compound" as used in section 1 is not limited by any trade usage or technical adaptation, but is used in its common broad sense of being any union or mixture of elements, ingredients, or parts. U. S. v. Stone & Downer Co. (1909) 175 Fed. 33, 99 C. C. A. 49.

"Thompson's patent prune wine," containing between 14.6 and 16.28 per cent. of alcohol at the time of importation, held dutiable under Act 1883, as an "alcoholic compound," and not as a nonenumerated manufactured article. Mackie v. Erhardt (1896) 77 Fed. 610, 23 C. C. A. 351, affirming (C. C. 1893) 59 Fed. 771.

Medicinal preparations.—Chloral Hydrate held not dutiable as a medicinal preparation in which alcohol is used. See paragraph 18.

Crude cocaine held not dutiable as a medicinal preparation in which alcohol is used. See paragraph 5.

Hydrochlorate or muriate of cocaine held not dutiable as medicinal preparation in which alcohol is used. See paragraph 5.

Medicinal soap held subject to classification as a medicinal preparation. See paragraph 66.

Salol held not dutiable as a medicinal preparation in which alcohol is used. See paragraph 18.

Scammony resin held not dutiable as a medicinal preparation containing alcohol. See paragraph 27.

"Medicinal preparations containing alcohol, or in the preparation of which alcohol is used," under Act 1897, applies to an import which is a medicinal preparation, in the preparation of which alcohol is used, though alcohol need not be, and sometimes is not, used in the preparation of the article. U. S. v. Schering (1903) 123 Fed. 65, 59 C. C. A. 283, reversing judgment (C. C. 1902) 119 Fed. 473.

"Medicinal preparations * * * of which alcohol is a component part or in the preparation of which alcohol is used, not specially provided for," includes all such preparations in the manufacture of which alcohol is used in any way, though it may be broken up to form other ingredients. Koechl v. U. S. (1898) 91 Fed. 110, 33 C. C. A. 363.

Antipyrine, now specifically mentioned in paragraph 18, held, under Act 1890, dutiable as a medicinal preparation in which alcohol is used, and not as a coal tar product not a color or dye. Id.

Hyoscin hydrobromate, shown to be a chemical salt of solely medicinal use, in the preparation of which alcohol is necessarily used, held dutiable under Act 1890, as a medicinal preparation in which alcohol is used, and not as a chemical compound or salt. Schering v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 119 Fed. 472.

The expression "medicinal preparations," means such articles as are of use, or believed by the prescriber or user fairly and honestly to be of use, in curing or alleviating, or palliating or preventing, some disease or affection of the human frame. Dodge & Olcott v. U. S. (C. C. 1891) 130 Fed. 624.

Sirup of rhamnus, extract of gentian, and extract of taraxacum held not natural drugs under Act 1909, but medicines artificially produced and ready for use. Lehn & Fink v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 325.

Menthol as imported is sometimes used without the addition of any carrying material for medicinal purposes, while its more common use is in solution or as a salve mixed with inert matter or the like. It was properly classified as a medicinal preparation under Act 1909. McKesson & Robbins v. U. S. (1913) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 515. See, also, Fink v. Same (1898) 18 Sup. Ct. 770, 170 U. S. 584, 42 L. Ed. 1153; Battle & Co. Chemists' Corporation v. Same (C. C. 1901) 108 Fed. 216; U. S. v. Sheldon (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 485.

Ducro's alimentary elixir held under Act 1897 dutiable as a medicinal preparation containing alcohol. Fougera v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 146.

Proprietary preparations.—A fluid sold as malt extract held not dutiable as a proprietary preparation. See paragraph 246.

Agnostura bitters held not dutiable as a medicinal preparation. See paragraph 243.

Amer picon held not dutiable as a proprietary preparation. See paragraph 240.

Benedictine held not dutiable as a proprietary preparation. See paragraph 240.

Medicinal soap held not dutiable as a proprietary preparation. See paragraph 66.

"Boonekamp bitters," held, under Act 1883, not to be similar to cordials, liqueurs, absinthe, and like beverages, but to be dutiable as a "proprietary preparation." Erhardt v. Steinhardt (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 775, 777, 153 U. S. 177, 38 L. Ed. 678.

Under Act 1883, the similitude clause does not require a proprietary preparation which also contains spirits to be assessed under spirit schedule instead of as a proprietary preparation, since the latter paragraph is so specific that such an article cannot be considered as falling within two separate classes. Id.

Henry's calcined magnesia held a proprietary preparation. Ferguson v. Arthur (1886) 6 Sup. Ct. 861, 117 U. S. 482, 29 L. Ed. 979.

Wolfe's aromatic schiedam schnapps held dutiable under Act 1883 as a proprietary preparation. Wolfe v. U. S. (1901) 105 Fed. 940, 45 C. C. A. 144.

The medicinal use for which a proprietary preparation is designed dominates its chemical composition for the purpose of classification. U. S. v. E. Fougera & Co. (C. C. 1898) 90 Fed. 801.

A preparation called "Bovrill Wine," labeled "Nutritious Tonic," composed of port wine, extract of beef, and extract of malt, and containing 17.90 of alcohol, held dutiable under Act 1890 as a proprietary preparation containing alcohol, and not as a still wine. U. S. v. Shoemaker (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 146.

Arp's pepsin bitters held dutiable as "proprietary preparations" under Act 1883, and not as "bitters containing spirits." Grommes v. Seeberger (C. C. 1889) 41 Fed. 32, writ of error dismissed Seeberger v. Grommes (1891) 11 S. Ct. 1027, 140 U. S. 696, 35 L. Ed. 596.

17. Chemical and medicinal compounds, combinations and all similar articles dutiable under this section, except soap, whether specially provided for or not, put up in individual packages of two and one-half pounds or less gross weight (except samples without commercial value) shall be dutiable at a rate not less than 20 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That chemicals, drugs, medicinal and similar substances, whether dutiable or free, imported in capsules, pills, tablets, lozenges, troches, ampoules, jubes, or similar forms, shall be dutiable at not less than 25 per centum ad valorem.

18. Chloral hydrate, salol, phenolphthalein, urea, terpin hydrate, acetanilid, acetphenetidin, antipyrine, glycerophosphoric acid and salts and compounds thereof, acetylsalicylic acid, aspirin, guiacol carbonate, and thymol, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Antipyrine.—Antipyrine held not dutiable under Act 1890 as a medicinal preparation in which alcohol is used. Koechl v. U. S. (1898) 91 Fed. 110, 33 C. C. A. 363; Schulze-Berge v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 748, certified to and determined Fink v. U. S. (1898) 18 Sup. Ct. 770, 170 U. S. 584, 42 L. Ed. 1153.

Acetanilid.—Acetanilid, held dutiable under Act 1890 as a coal tar preparation, not a color or dye. Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 71 Fed. 957, judgment affirmed U. S. v. Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. (1897) 79 Fed. 313, 24 C. C. A. 604.

Chloral hydrate.—Chloral hydrate was held dutiable under Act 1897 as a medicinal preparation. U. S. v. Schering (1903) 123 Fed. 65, 59 C. C. A. 283; Battle & Co. Chemists' Corp. v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 108 Fed. 216.

Chloral hydrate held dutiable under Act 1890 as a "chemical compound * * * not specially provided for," and not as a "medicinal preparation, * * * of which alcohol is a component part, or in the preparation of which alcohol is used." U. S. v. Battle & Co. (1893) 54 Fed. 141, 4 C. C. A. 249, affirming judgment Appeal of Battle & Co. (C. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 402.

Chloral hydrate held dutiable under Act 1897, as medicinal preparations in the preparation of which alcohol is not used, and not as medicinal preparations in the preparation of which alcohol is used. Phair v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 105 Fed. 508.

Guaiacol carbonate.—Guaiacol carbonate held dutiable under Act 1897 as a medicinal preparation that contained no alcohol. U. S. v. Lehn (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 59.

Salol.—Salol, in the preparation of which alcohol may or may not be used held dutiable under Act 1890, as a chemical compound or salt, and not as a medicinal preparation in the making of which alcohol is used. Schering v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 119 Fed. 472.

Salol held dutiable under Act 1897 as a medicinal preparation in the preparation of which alcohol is not used rather than a preparation in which alcohol is used. Phair v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 105 Fed. 508.

19. Chloroform, 2 cents per pound; carbon tetrachloride, 1 cent per pound.

20–23. (Repealed.)

Paragraphs 20–23 of this schedule were repealed by Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, § 502, post, § 5291c, and other duties imposed on the articles included therein by §§ 500, 501, of said Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, post, §§ 5291a, 5291b. These paragraphs read as follows:

"20. Coal-tar dyes or colors, not specially provided for in this section, 30 per centum ad valorem."

Notes of Decisions

1. In general.
2. Alizarin color.
3. Alizarin black.
4. Alizarin violet.
5. Aniline dyes.
6. Bleachers' blue.
7. Bromofluorescic acid.
8. Gallein and coeruline.
9. Hansa yellow.
10. Primuline buff.
11. Sulphotoluic acid.

1. In general.—An article which contains all the essential elements and determining characteristics of a color or dye, needing only to have its coloring properties rendered accessible by dropping it into water containing an alkali, held a color or dye within Act 1897. Kuttroff, Pickhardt & Co. v. U. S. (1907) 154 Fed. 1004, 83 C. C. A. 679, affirming judgment U. S. v. Kuttroff, Pickhardt & Co. (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 758.

To hold all insoluble coloring matters, lakes, or pigments which may be derived from coal tar unclassifiable under paragraph 20, Act 1913, woud practically limit the scope of the paragraph to coal-tar dyes, leaving nothing dutiable as coal tar colors. Farbwerke-Hoechst Co. v. U. S. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 483.

A pigment is a special kind of coloring matter, and a lake is a special kind of pigment. "Coal tar colors," then, enumerates coal tar pigments and coal-tar lakes (if any such there be), and this enumeration in paragraph 20, Act 1913, is a narrower one than that of pigments and lakes generally in paragraph 63. Id.

2. Alizarin color.—Coal tar colors or dyes which are not derived from anthracin held not "artificial alizarin," within the meaning of the free list of the tariff act of 1894. Farbenfabriken of Elberfeld & Co. v. U. S. (1900) 102 Fed. 603, 42 C. C. A. 525; Farbenfabriken of Elberfeld Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 554.

Where the weight of the evidence is that the product in question is a coal tar color or dye, a finding by the board of general appraisers that it is dutiable as such, and not as an alizarin color, will be sustained, though the fact that it is used with a mordant may raise a doubt whether it is not properly an alizarin. Klipstein v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 520.

3. Alizarin black.—Alizarin black held not dutiable as a coal tar preparation. See paragraph 394.

4. Alizarin violet.—Alizarin violet held not dutiable as a coal tar preparation. See paragraph 394.

5. Aniline dyes.—In an action to recover duties paid on importations, on the ground that they were improperly classified as aniline dyes, it is proper to instruct that if the articles in question, according to the understanding of commercial men, dealers in and importers of them, would, when imported, be included in the class of articles known as "aniline dyes," by whatever name they had come to be known, they are subject to duty as aniline dyes, though such articles were unknown when the statute imposing duties on aniline dyes was enacted. Pickhardt v. Merritt (1889) 10 Sup. Ct. 80, 132 U. S. 252, 33 L. Ed. 353.

Under the similitude clause it is proper to instruct that if any one of the articles in question did not fall within the class of aniline dyes, but bore a similitude in material or quality, or in the use to which it might be applied, to what were known as "aniline dyes" when the statute imposing the duty thereon was enacted, it was dutiable at the same rate as an aniline dye, and that the mere application to the dyeing of fabrics would not create a similitude in use; but if there were a similitude in the same kind of dyeing, producing the same colors in substantially the same way, so as to take the place of aniline dyes in use, then there would be a similitude in use. Id.

6. Bleachers' blue.—Bleachers' blue held not dutiable as a coal tar color or dye. See paragraph 21.

7. Bromofluorescic acid.—Bromofluorescic acid held dutiable as a coal tar color or dye under Act 1897. Kuttroff, Pickhardt & Co. v. U. S. (1907) 154 Fed. 1004, 83 C. C. A. 679.

8. Gallein and coeruline.—"Gallein" and "coeruline" being dyestuffs of which phthalic acid (a coal tar product) is one of the constituents, held to be dutiable as coal tar colors or dyes, under Act 1890. Pickhardt v. U. S. (1895) 67 Fed. 111, 14 C. C. A. 341.

9. Hansa yellow.—Hansa yellow, an insoluble dry coloring matter derived from coal tar, is dutiable under paragraph 20, Act 1913, "coal tar dyes or colors, not specially provided for in this section." Farbwerke-Hoechst Co. v. U. S. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 483.

10. Primuline buff.—Primuline buff held not a coal tar dye. See paragraph 30.

11. Sulphotoluic acid.—Sulphotoluic acid held not dutiable as a color or dye. See paragraph 1.

"21. All other products or preparations of coal tar, not colors or dyes, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem."

Notes of Decisions

In general.—Where the determining characteristic of a product is something which it has derived from coal tar, the same is dutiable ad valorem as a "preparation of coal tar," under Act 1883, instead of as a "chemical compound," notwithstanding that some of the constituents of coal tar have been eliminated and other materials added. In re Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. (1892) 56 Fed. 481, 4 C. C. A. 1; In re W. J. Matheson & Co. (1892) 56 Fed. 482, 4 C. C. A. 3; In re Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. (C. C. 1891) 49 Fed. 272.

Coal tar products, not shown to be oils in fact or to be chemically, commercially, or commonly known as distilled oils, held classifiable under Act 1894, as products of coal tar not specifically provided for, and not as distilled oils. Warren Chemical Manuf'g Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 78 Fed. 810.

The merchandise consists of preparations of coal tar known as bases. These bases, after acid treatment, are used in dyeing fabrics. The proof does not show there is a commercial designation of these goods as coal tar colors and dyes, and as brought in they are not coal tar colors and dyes, but a product or preparation of coal tar, not medicinal, and were dutiable as such under paragraph 15, Act 1909. U. S. v. Badische Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 226.

Acetanilid.—Acetanilid held a coal tar preparation not a color or dye. See paragraph 18.

Acids commercially so known.—Acids commercially so known held not du-tiable as coal tar products. See paragraph 1.

Antipyrine.—Antipyrine held dutiable as a coal tar preparation not a color or dye. See paragraph 18.

Bleachers' blue.—Bleachers' blue, which is not used as a color or dye, but solely as a bleaching mixture, held, under Act 1897, not a coal tar color or dye, but a coal tar product or preparation not a color or dye. Abram De Ronde & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 148 Fed. 653.

Carbolineum avenarius.—"Carbolineum," or "carbolineum avenarius," which consists of dead oil modified by the action of chlorine gas, held dutiable under Act 1897 as a "preparation of coal tar, not color or dye and not medicinal, not specially provided for," and not as a "chemical compound," or free of duty as "dead or creosote oil." Downing v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 123 Fed. 1000.

Crystal carbolic acid.—Crystal carbolic acid held not dutiable as a preparation of coal tar. See paragraph 387.

Crude carbolic acid.—Crude carbolic acid held not dutiable as a preparation of coal tar. See paragraph 387.

Lysol.—Lysol held dutiable under Act 1897 as a "preparation of coal tar, * * * not medicinal," and not as "chemical compounds." U. S. v. Lehn (C. C. 1901) 124 Fed. 87.

"22. Coal-tar distillates, not specially provided for in this section; benzol, naphtol, resorcin, toluol, xylol; all the foregoing not medicinal and not colors or dyes, 5 per centum ad valorem."

Tri-nitro-iso-butyl-xylol.—Tri-nitro-iso-butyl-xylol, or artificial musk, held not dutiable as a coal tar preparation. See paragraph 5.

"23. Coal-tar products known as anilin oil and salts, toluidine, xylidin, cumidin, binitrotoluol, binitrobenzol, benzidin, tolidin, dianisidin, naphtylamin, diphenylamin, benzaldehyde, benzyl chloride, nitro-benzol and nitrotoluol, naphtylaminsulfoacids and their sodium or potassium salts, naphtolsulfoacids and their sodium or potassium salts, amidonaphtolsulfoacids and their sodium or potassium salts, amidosalicylic acid, binitrochlorbenzol, diamidostilbendisulfoacid, metanilic acid, paranitranilin, dimethylanilin; all the foregoing not medicinal and not colors or dyes, 10 per centum ad valorem."

Binitrotoluol.—Binitrotoluol held dutiable under Act 1890 as a coal tar preparation, and not as a chemical compound. In re W. J. Matheson & Co. (1892) 56 Fed. 482, 4 C. C. A. 3, affirming (C. C. 1891) 49 Fed. 272.

Naphthionate of soda.—Naphthionate of soda held dutiable under Act 1890 as a preparation of coal tar. In re Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. (1892) 56 Fed. 481, 4 C. C. A. 1.

Nitrobenzole.—Nitrobenzole, being an unenumerated article, falls under section 20 of the act of Aug. 30, 1842 called the "similitude clause." Murphy v. Arnson (1877) 96 U. S. 131, 24 L. Ed. 773.

Oil of mirbane or nitro-benzole.—"Nitro-benzole" held dutiable under the act of 1864, as an article manufactured from two or more materials, and not as an essential oil not otherwise provided for. Murphy v. Arnson (1877) 96 U. S. 131, 132, 24 L. Ed. 773.

Oil of mirbane, or nitrobenzole, which is in fact a preparation of coal tar, and is not known commercially as an essential oil, held, under Act 1890, dutiable as a coal tar preparation, and not as an essential oil or chemical compound. Wm. J. Matheson & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 90 Fed. 275.

Tolidine.—Tolidine base held, under Act 1890, dutiable as a preparation of coal tar, and not as chemical compound. In re W. J. Matheson & Co. (1892) 56 Fed. 482, 4 C. C. A. 3 (affirming [C. C. 1891] 49 Fed. 272); In re Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. (1892) 56 Fed. 481, 4 C. C. A. 1; In re Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. (C. C. 1891) 49 Fed. 272; (1886) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 383.

24. Cobalt, oxide of, 10 cents per pound.

25. Collodion and all other liquid solutions of pyroxylin, or of other cellulose esters, or of cellulose, 15 per centum ad valorem; compounds of pyroxylin or of other cellulose esters, whether known as celluloid or by any other name, if in blocks, sheets, rods, tubes, or other forms not polished, wholly or partly, and not made into finished or partly finished articles, 25 per centum ad valorem; if polished, wholly or partly, or if finished or partly finished articles, of which collodion or any compound of pyroxylin or other cellulose esters, by whatever name known, is the component material of chief value, 40 per centum ad valorem.

Celluloid.—Sheets of celluloid, polished on both sides, held dutiable under the third clause of paragraph 17 of the act of 1897, as "finished or partly finished articles," and not under the second clause, which covers celluloid "rolled or in sheets, unpolished." U. S. v. Eschwege (1899) 98 Fed. 600, 39 C. C. A. 169.

Celluloid sheets, tubes, and rods, which have not been subjected to any process designed to polish them, but which may have been polished to some extent as an incident to their undergoing a process for smoothing and straightening them, are dutiable at 25 per cent. ad valorem as "not polished, wholly or partly," under the second clause of paragraph 25, Act 1913. U. S. v. Cohn Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 426.

Collodion.—Collodion in sheets 55x24 inches, and polished, for use by being cut up and made into combs and other things, held dutiable at 60 cents per pound, under the second clause of paragraph 17 of the act of 1897 (30 Stat. 152), and not under the third clause, which provides for collodion in finished or partly finished articles, etc. Eschwege v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 754.

Ping-pong balls.—Ping-pong balls held not "toys," as provided for in paragraph 418, Act 1897, but dutiable under paragraph 17 of said act as articles of collodion. U. S. v. Strauss Bros. & Co. (1905) 136 Fed. 185, 69 C. C. A. 201 (reversing judgment [C. C. 1904] 128 Fed. 473); U. S. v. Wanamaker (C. C. 1905) 136 Fed. 266.

Pyroxylin.—Hand-decorated booklets with pyroxylin covers held not dutiable as manufactures of pyroxylin. See paragraph 325.

Imitation horsehair braids held not dutiable as articles of pyroxylin. See paragraph 358.

Pyroxylin smokers' articles held not dutiable as compounds of pyroxylin. See paragraph 381.

Toys made of celluloid held not dutiable as manufactures of pyroxylin. See paragraph 342.

Umbrella sticks with celluloid handles held not dutiable as articles of pyroxylin. See paragraph 383.

Pyroxylin rods partly finished held dutiable as partly finished "articles" of pyroxylin, under Act 1897. Rice & Hochster v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 176 Fed. 581.

Combs, boxes, and handles made wholly of pyroxylin or celluloid are dutiable under paragraph 17, Act 1909. Cauvigny Brush Co. v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 118.

26. Coloring for brandy, wine, beer, or other liquors, 40 per centum ad valorem.

27. Drugs, such as barks, beans, berries, buds, bulbs, bulbous roots, excrescences, fruits, flowers, dried fibers, dried insects, grains, gums, herbs, leaves, lichens, mosses, roots, stems, vegetables, seeds (aromatic, not garden seeds), seeds of morbid growth, and weeds; any of the foregoing which are natural and uncompounded drugs and not edible, and not specially provided for in this section, but which are advanced in value or condition by shredding, grinding, chipping, crushing, or any other process or treatment whatever beyond that essential to the proper packing of the drugs and the prevention of decay or deterioration pending manufacture, 10 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That no article containing alcohol shall be classified for duty under this paragraph.

Notes of Decisions

1. Articles used in dyeing or tanning.
2. Caffeine.
3. Chrysarobin.
4. Elaterium in cakes.
5. Extract of nutgalls.
6. Herbs immersed in alcohol.
7. Moss.
8. Oil of cypress.
9. Olive pits ground.
10. Orchil and Persian berry extracts.
11. Papaw melon juice powder.
12. Powdered opium.
13. Sago flour.
14. Scammony resin.
15. Sirup of rhamnus.
16. Wai san.
17. Young fustic dyewood.

1. Articles used in dyeing or tanning.—Articles used in dyeing or tanning held not "drugs," within Act 1897; that term being limited in its common acceptance to medicinal preparations, though broadly it may include besides all preparations used in the arts. Leber & Meyer v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 135 Fed. 243.

2. Caffeine.—A compound to make caffeine held not dutiable as a drug advanced in value. See paragraph 477.

3. Chrysarobin.—Chrysarobin held dutiable as a drug advanced in value, under Act 1897, and not as a medicinal preparation. Levi v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 126.

4. Elaterium in cakes.—Elaterium in cakes held not dutiable as a drug advanced in value. See paragraph 477.

5. Extract of nutgalls.—Extract of nutgalls held dutiable as drugs, etc. See paragraph 30.

6. Herbs immersed in alcohol.—Herbs immersed in alcohol held not dutiable as drugs advanced in value. See paragraph 385.

7. Moss.—Dyed moss, used by florists, held dutiable under Act 1890 as "mosses * * * not edible, but which have been advanced in value or condition," and not as a nonenumerated manufactured article. In re Kraft (C. C. 1893) 53 Fed. 1016.

8. Oil of cypress.—Oil of cypress, oil of cloves, oil of cardamom, and oil of pennyroyal held not dutiable as drugs. See paragraph 46.

9. Olive pits ground.—Ground olive nuts held improperly classified for duty as drugs, such as nuts not edible, advanced in value by grinding, "one-fourth of one cent per pound and ten per centum ad valorem," under Act 1897. Kessler v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 107 Fed. 264.

Olive pits ground held not dutiable under Act 1890 as an unenumerated manufactured article, but as nuts, seeds, etc., which are not edible, but which have been advanced in value or condition by refining, grinding, etc. Haulenbeck v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 148.

10. Orchil and Persian berry extracts.—Orchil and Persian berry extracts held not dutiable as drugs. See paragraph 30.

11. Papaw melon juice powder.—Powder from the juice of the papaw melon, which in use is made into various forms of medicinal vegetable pepsin, held not dutiable, under Act 1897, as a manufactured article not otherwise provided for, nor entitled to free entry as a crude drug, but dutiable as a drug not edible, which has been advanced in value or condition by grinding. U. S. v. American Ferment Co. (C. C. 1901) 108 Fed. 802.

12. Powdered opium.—Powdered opium held a "drug advanced in value or condition," within Act 1897, rather than opium crude or unmanufactured. Merck v. U. S. (1906) 151 Fed. 14, 80 C. C. A. 510 (reversing decision Merck & Co. v. U. S. [C. C. 1906] 143 Fed. 694); U. S. v. McKesson, Robbins & Co. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 168.

13. Sago flour.—Sago flour held not dutiable as a drug. See paragraph 590.

14. Scammony resin.—Scammony resin, prepared from gum scammony, or scammony root, and used principally in compounding medicines, held dutiable as a drug advanced in value or condition, under Act 1897, rather than as a medicinal preparation. U. S. v. Martin (C. C. 1907) 155 Fed. 264.

15. Sirup of rhamnus.—Sirup of rhamnus, extract of gentian, and extract of taraxacum held not dutiable as drugs. See paragraph 16.

16. Wai san.—Wai san held not dutiable as a drug. See paragraph 215.

17. Young fustic dyewood.—Young fustic dyewood, cut or shredded into pieces, suitable to be packed in burlaps for shipment, has been thereby advanced in condition. The statutory provision of the act of 1897 relating to an advance in condition is unqualified and the importation of corresponding date was dutiable under paragraph 20 of that act. Perry, Ryer & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 374.

But paragraph 559, Act 1909, expressly provides for the free entry of such an importation, if not advanced in value or condition by any process or treatment whatever beyond that essential to the proper packing of it. This is the case here, and the rule of stare decisis does not apply. The importation of corresponding date was free of duty under Act 1909. Id.

28. Ergot, 10 cents per pound.

29. Ethers: Sulphuric, 4 cents per pound; amyl nitrite, 20 per centum ad valorem; amyl acetate and ethyl acetate or acetic ether, 5 cents per pound; ethyl chloride, 20 per centum ad valorem; ethers and esters of all kinds not specially provided for in this section, 20 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That no article containing more than 10 per centum of alcohol shall be classified for duty under this paragraph.

30. Extracts and decoctions of nutgalls, Persian berries, sumac, logwood, and other dyewoods, and all extracts of vegetable origin suitable for dyeing, coloring, or staining, not specially provided for in this section; all the foregoing not containing alcohol and not medicinal, ⅜ of 1 cent per pound.

Extract of logwood.—Extract of logwood, mordanted with a salt of chromium for printing colors on cotton fabrics—the mixture being mechanical, and not chemical—held, under Act 1890, dutiable under the description "extracts and decoctions of logwood," "such as are commonly used for dyeing," and not as a chemical compound. John J. Keller & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 90 Fed. 274.

Extract of nutgalls.—Extract of nutgalls held, under act 1897, not dutiable as tannin or tannic acid, nor as a chemical compound, but either directly or by similitude as "drugs, such as * * * nutgalls, * * * advanced in value or condition." W. N. Proctor & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 139 Fed. 586, judgment affirmed U. S. v. W. N. Proctor & Co. (1906) 145 Fed. 126, 76 C. C. A. 96.

Orchil and Persian berry extracts.—Orchil and Persian berry extracts held not dutiable as "drugs," but as unenumerated manufactured articles under section 6, 30 Stat. 205. G. Siegle & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 166 Fed. 1015.

Persian berry extract, which is used in staining food products, and also as a dyestuff for coloring fabrics, held not dutiable under Act 1897 as a color, not belonging to the "paints, colors, pigments," etc., therein enumerated, nor, by similitude, under paragraph 20 or 22, relating respectively to berries advanced in value and to extracts of barks, etc., used for dyeing but is dutiable as an unenumerated manufactured article. U. S. v. Berlin Aniline Works (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 925.

Primuline buff.—Primuline buff, a compound of a preparation from quercitron or black oak bark, 80 per cent., and alizarin, a preparation from coal tar, 20 per cent., held dutiable under Act 1890 as a dyewood extract, and not a coal tar dye. In re Matheson (C. C. 1893) 54 Fed. 492.

31. Extract of chlorophyll, 15 per centum ad valorem; saffron and safflower, and extract of, and saffron cake, 10 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That no article containing alcohol shall be classified for duty under this paragraph.

32. Formaldehyde solution containing not more than 40 per centum of formaldehyde, or formaline, 1 cent per pound.

33. Fusel oil, or amylic alcohol, ¼ cent per pound.

34. Gelatin, glue, and glue size, valued not above 10 cents per pound, 1 cent per pound; valued above 10 cents per pound and not above 25 cents per pound, 15 per centum ad valorem; valued above 25 cents per pound, 25 per centum ad valorem; manufactures of gelatin or manufactures of which gelatin is the component material of chief value, 25 per centum ad valorem; isinglass and prepared fish sounds, 25 per centum ad valorem; agar-agar, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Bone size.—Bone size held not dutiable as glue. See paragraph 385.

Finings.—So-called "finings," an article consisting of gelatin containing a considerable proportion of sulphurous acid or sulphite as a preservative, held, under Act 1897, dutiable as "gelatin," and not as a manufacture of gelatin, or as an unenumerated manufactured article. Sonoma Wine & Brandy Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 123 Fed. 999.

Gelatin spangles.—Gelatin spangles held not dutiable as manufactures of gelatin. See paragraph 333.

Sheets of gelatin.—To determine what is a "sheet" in a given case, the particular facts of that case are to be considered; and the facts here showing the merchandise to be edible gelatin with irregular edges and uneven surfaces do not make it clear that the article is properly classifiable as sheets of gelatin. The doubt must be resolved in favor of the importer and the goods are dutiable as gelatin under paragraph 23, Act 1909. American Express Co. v. U. S. (1913) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 475.

35. Glycerin, crude, not purified, 1 cent per pound; refined, 2 cents per pound.

36. Gums: Amber, and amberoid unmanufactured, or crude gum, not specially provided for in this section, $1 per pound; arabic, or senegal, ½ cent per pound; camphor, crude, natural, 1 cent per pound; camphor, refined and synthetic, 5 cents per pound; chicle, crude, 15 cents per pound; refined or advanced in value by drying, straining, or any other process or treatment whatever beyond that essential to the proper packing, 20 cents per pound; dextrine, made from potato starch or potato flour, 1¼ cents per pound;

dextrine, not otherwise provided for, burnt starch or British gum, dextrine substitutes, and soluble or chemically treated starch, ¾ of 1 cent per pound.

Notes of Decisions

Burnt starch.—The term "burnt starch" is to receive the meaning given it in ordinary commercial operations unless a trade meaning different from that in ordinary use is established by a preponderance of evidence. Weilbacher v. Merritt (C. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 85.

Camphor oil.—Camphor oil obtained from the same tree as gum camphor held not dutiable as essential oil. See paragraph 385.

Dextrine.—White dextrine, produced by the chemical treatment of starch, while not a dextrine, technically speaking, held, under Act 1897, classible as "dextrine." Charles Morningstar & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 159 Fed. 287.

Gum substitute.—The term "gum substitute" is to receive the meaning given it in ordinary commercial operations, unless a trade meaning different from that in ordinary use is established by a preponderance of evidence. Weilbacher v. Merritt (C. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 85.

Liquid camphor refuse.—Liquid camphor refuse held not dutiable as camphor crude. See paragraph 46.

Synthetic camphor.—Synthetic camphor held, under Act 1897, if it still retains impurities that bring it far below the standard of refined camphor, and closely resembles the crude natural product, dutiable as "camphor, crude," rather than as "camphor, refined." U. S. v. Schering & Glatz (1908) 163 Fed. 246, 90 C. C. A. 192.

37. Ink and ink powders, 15 per centum ad valorem.

38. Iodoform, and potassium iodide, 15 cents per pound.

39. Leaves and roots: Buchu leaves, 10 cents per pound; coca leaves, 10 cents per pound; gentian, ¼ cent per pound; licorice root, ¼ cent per pound; sarsaparilla root, 1 cent per pound.

40. Licorice, extracts of, in pastes, rolls, or other forms, 1 cent per pound.

41. Lime, citrate of, 1 cent per pound.

42. Magnesia: Calcined, 3½ cents per pound; carbonate of, precipitated, 1½ cents per pound; sulphate of, or Epsom salts, 1/10 cent per pound.

Notes of Decisions

Epsom salts.—Sulphate of magnesia, or Epsom salts, which, by the act of 1894, were placed both upon the dutiable and the free list, held to be admitted free, as the ambiguity must be resolved in favor of the importer. U. S. v. Merck (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 639.

43. Menthol, 50 cents per pound.

44. Oils, rendered: Sod, seal, herring, and other fish oil, not specially provided for in this section, 3 cents per gallon; whale oil, 5 cents per gallon; sperm oil, 8 cents per gallon; wool grease, including that known commercially as degras or brown wool grease, crude and not refined or improved in value or condition, ¼ cent per pound; refined or improved in value or condition, and not specially provided for in this section, ½ cent per pound; lanolin, 1 cent per pound; all other animal oils, rendered oils and greases, and all combinations of the same, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Adeps lanæ anhydrons.—Adeps lanæ anhydrons and adeps lanæ cum aqua, which are highly finished products of wool grease, held dutiable as medicinal preparations. See paragraph 5.

Brown grease.—The fatty matter known as "de gras," or brown grease, held, under Act 1883, not dutiable as an "expressed" or "rendered" oil. Miller v. Seeberger (C. C. 1890) 44 Fed. 261.

Cod oil.—"Cod oil," made from putrid fish livers, which, while used principally for dressing leather, is fit for some other purposes not enumerated, and, while not technically known in the trade as a "fish oil," held, under Act 1897, dutiable as fish oil. Swan & Finch Co. v. U. S. (1902) 113 Fed. 243, 51 C. C. A. 200 (affirming judgment [C. C. 1901] 109 Fed. 949); Wells v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 99 Fed. 258.

The term "fish oil" in Act 1897, covers all oil made from any fish or any part thereof, including oil made from the livers of cod and other fish of the cod species. Swan & Finch Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 109 Fed. 949, judgment affirmed (1902) 113 Fed. 243, 51 C. C. A. 200.

Hard yellow grease.—Substances obtained by washing the solid residuum left after the distillation of wool grease, known as "hard yellow grease" and "white grease" held under Act 1897, dutiable as "wool grease," and not entitled to free entry. U. S. v. Leonard (1901) 108 Fed. 42, 47 C. C. A. 181, reversing judgment (C. C. 1900) 100 Fed. 288.

Japanese fish oil.—Japanese fish oil held not dutiable as whale and other fish oil. See paragraph 498.

Lanolin.—"Lanolin" held, under Act 1890, dutiable as a "medicinal proprietary preparation," and not as "wool grease." Movius v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 734.

Adeps lanæ, or lanolin, is used as a basis for ointments and as a carrier for soluble medicinal salts, and the evidence shows that without the addition of medicinal agents it has no therapeutic value. The more specific provision levying duty upon it is to be found in paragraph 290, Act 1909. It is dutiable under that paragraph as wool grease refined or improved in value or condition. Koechl & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 316.

Refined wool grease.—The provision for "wool grease" in Act 1897 includes a refined wool grease, from which the natural odor and mineral matter have been removed by a superior process, and which is commercially known as "wool grease." Swan & Finch Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 149 Fed. 304.

45. Oils, expressed: Alizarin assistant, sulphoricinoleic acid, and ricinoleic acid, and soaps containing castor oil, any of the foregoing in whatever form, and all other alizarin assistants and all soluble greases used in the processes of softening, dyeing, or finishing, not specially provided for in this section, 25 per centum ad valorem; castor oil, 12 cents per gallon; flaxseed and linseed oil, raw, boiled, or oxidized, 10 cents per gallon of 7½ pounds; poppy-seed oil, raw, boiled, or oxidized, rapeseed oil, and peanut oil, 6 cents per gallon; hempseed oil, 3 cents per gallon; almond oil, sweet, 5 cents per pound; sesame or sesamum seed or bean oil, 1 cent per pound; olive oil, not specially provided for in this section, 20 cents per gallon; olive oil, in bottles, jars, kegs, tins, or other packages having a capacity of less than five standard gallons each, 30 cents per gallon; all other expressed oils and all combinations of the same, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Alizarin assistant.—Soluble grease used in dyeing cotton held not dutiable as an alizarin assistant. See paragraph 385.

Alizarin assistant, used as a mordant by calico printers, the principal ingredient in which is castor oil, held under Act 1883 chargeable with a duty of 80 cents per gallon, under the "similitude clause" that being the duty on castor oil. Lloyd v. McWilliams (C. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 261, judgment affirmed (1890) 11 Sup. Ct. 173, 137 U. S. 576, 34 L. Ed. 788.

From the testimony the analysis made by the chemist employed by the appellees must be assumed correct; and there is no proof to the effect that castor oil may have been used in the manufacture of the alizarin assistant which would not be revealed by the analysis. As the oil contained less than 50 per cent. of castor oil, it was dutiable under paragraph 32, Act 1909. U. S. v. Koons, Wilson & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 452.

"Alizarin assistant" held dutiable as a chemical compound, under the Revised Statutes. (1885) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 106.

Olive oil.—Duty on bottles filled with olive oil. See paragraph 83.

It is clear in view of the decisions and of the change in language appearing in paragraph 38, Act 1909, that it was intended by that paragraph to levy the duty there fixed upon the contents rather than upon the capacity of tins containing olive oil. U. S. v. Palma (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 140. See, also, U. S. v. La Manna (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 927; Gandolfi & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 152 Fed. 656.

Construing Act 1897, par. 40, providing (1) for olive oil "in bottles, jars, tins, or similar packages," and (2) for "olive oil, not specially provided for," held, that oil in 5-gallon tins, in which form it is not sold to the consumer but to hotels and retail dealers, is not subject to the first provision, but to the latter. U. S. v. La Manna, Azema &

Farnan (1908) 158 Fed. 1022, 86 C. C. A. 673, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 927.

All the tins in this case hold less than the quantity of oil which would entitle the goods to assessment at 40 per cent. ad valorem. They were dutiable according to contents at 50 per cent. under paragraph 38, Act 1909. U. S. v. Sprague, Warner (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 358. See, also, Same v. Palma, Id. 140.

The merchandise was olive oil contained in tins, the oil in each container being slightly less than 5 gallons in quantity. Held, under paragraph 38, Act 1909, the oil was dutiable at 50 cents per gallon as olive oil in tins containing less than 5 gallons each, and this notwithstanding the treasury regulation of June 20, 1911. U. S. v. Younglove Grocery Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 377.

All olive oils are not of the same specific gravity. The method adopted here by the collector for determining the quantity of the importation in gallons was correct. The English wine gallon of 231 cubic inches capacity, and not a lesser quantity, though accepted by the trade, is the "gallon" of paragraph 38, Act 1909. U. S. v. Moos & Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 322.

Rapeseed oil.—It was not shown that the sample used by the government was a part of the importation. The evidence here makes out a prima facie case for the importer and is sufficient to overcome the presumption of correctness attaching to the collector's decision. The merchandise was dutiable as rapeseed oil. U. S. v. Lang (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 494.

The contention was made that the importation is not rapeseed oil as assessed, but is a sulphur colza oil, commonly used for soap making. The testimony falls short of maintaining this. Larkin Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 483.

46. Oils, distilled and essential: Orange and lemon, 10 per centum ad valorem; peppermint, 25 cents per pound; mace oil, 6 cents per pound; almond, bitter; amber; ambergris; anise or anise seed; bergamot; camomile; caraway; cassia; cinnamon; cedrat; citronella and lemon-grass; civet; fennel; jasmine or jasimine; juniper; lavender, and aspic or spike lavender; limes; neroli or orange flower; origanum, red or white; rosemary or anthoss; attar of roses; thyme; and valerian; all the foregoing oils, and all fruit ethers, oils, and essences, and essential and distilled oils and all combinations of the same, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That no article containing alcohol shall be classified for duty under this paragraph.

Camphor oil. — Camphor oil obtained from the same tree as gum camphor held not dutiable as an essential oil. See paragraph 385.

Citral.—Citral held free of duty as lemon oil, or oil of lemon, under Act 1890, and not dutiable as an essential oil. In re Fritzsche (C. C. 1893) 56 Fed. 819.

Coal tar products.—Coal tar products not shown to be oil in fact held not dutiable as distilled oils. See paragraph 21.

Essential oils. — A concentrated essence produced by the enfleurage process held not dutiable as an essential oil. See paragraph 49.

Oil of mirbane or nitrobenzole held not dutiable as an essential oil. See paragraph 23.

Oil of cypress, oil of cloves, oil of cardamom, and oil of pennyroyal held under Act 1909, dutiable as essential oils, and not as drugs. National Aniline & Chemical Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 109.

A dressing oil distilled from grease or degras being found by the board of general appraisers to be fit for the other purposes than for dressing or stuffing leather, the evidence being conflicting, this finding will not be disturbed, and the importation was dutiable under paragraph 8, Act 1897. Stone & Downer Co. v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 513.

Dead oil.—Dead oil held not dutiable as distilled oil. See paragraph 452.

Liquid camphor refuse.—Liquid camphor refuse, the substance obtained, by drainage, from crude camphor, and used for the manufacture of camphor oil, held dutiable, under act 1894, as an oil, and not entitled to free entry, as "camphor, crude." Dodge v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 77 Fed. 602, judgment affirmed (1898) 84 Fed. 449, 28 C. C. A. 152.

Lubricating oil.—Lubricating oil held not dutiable as a combination of oils. See paragraph 385.

Olein. — So-called olein, a distillate from wool grease, in the form of an oil, held, under Act 1897, not "wool grease," but dutiable as a "distilled oil." Swan & Finch Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 173.

Oil of petit grain.—Oil of petit grain, distilled from the leaves, twigs, and immature fruit of the orange tree, was found by the jury to have been generally known and recognized in trade and commerce in 1883 as one of the subdivisions of oil neroli (mentioned in the free list). Dodge v. Hedden (C. C. 1889) 42 Fed. 446.

47. Opium, crude or unmanufactured, and not adulterated, containing 9 per centum and over of morphia, $3 per pound; opium of the same composition, dried to contain 15 per centum or less of moisture, powdered, or otherwise advanced beyond the condition of crude or unmanufactured, $4 per pound; morphia or morphine, sulphate of, and all alkaloids of opium, and salts and esters thereof, $3 per ounce; cocaine, ecgonine, and all salts and derivatives of the same, $2 per ounce; aqueous extract of opium, for medicinal uses, and tincture of, as laudanum, and other liquid preparations of opium, not specially provided for in this section, 60 per centum ad valorem; opium containing less than 9 per centum of morphia, $6 per pound; but preparations of opium deposited in bonded warehouses shall not be removed therefrom without payment of duties, and such duties shall not be refunded: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to repeal or in any manner impair or affect the provisions of an Act entitled "An Act to prohibit the importation and use of opium for other than medicinal purposes," approved February ninth, nineteen hundred and nine.

Act Feb. 9, 1909, c. 100, mentioned in this paragraph, is set forth post, §§ 8800, 8801.

Cocaine. — Muriate or hydrochlorate of cocaine, which was covered both by paragraph 76 and paragraph 74 of act of October 1, 1890, held dutiable under the former, relating to chemical salts. Lehn v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 748, following Mallinckrodt Chemical Works Case (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 746, and certified to and determined Fink v. U. S. (1898) 18 Sup. Ct. 770, 170 U. S. 584, 42 L. Ed. 1153.

"Crude."—Whether an article is crude is to be determined not by the processes which brought it into being, but by the additional processes to which it is submitted after its creation in order to fit it for its chief or only use. Merck & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 347.

Opium.—Powdered opium held not dutiable as opium crude or unmanufactured. See paragraph 27.

An indictment for smuggling "smoking opium" and "prepared opium" sufficiently describes dutiable merchandise under Schedule A, prescribing a duty on "opium prepared for smoking, and all other preparations of opium not specially enumerated or provided for in this act." U. S. v. Gardner (C. C. 1890) 42 Fed. 832, 833.

Opium shipped on board a steamship at Honolulu, for Panama, by way of San Francisco, intended to be transferred, without landing, to another steamer at San Francisco, running to Panama, in connection with the steamship from Honolulu, and entered on the manifest and bills of lading, and reported to the collector, as being in transit for Panama, the owner having applied to the collector for a permit to make the transshipment, and offered to give the security prescribed by the statute, and a permit having been refused, was held not to be liable to duties, and a seizure for nonpayment of duties adjudged to be illegal. R. S. §§ 2502, 2931, and section 2979 (section 5665, post), construed. McLean v. Hager (C. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 602.

The opium of the importation was not "dried," as that term is used in paragraph 41, nor powdered nor otherwise advanced in condition, and it was properly dutiable as opium, crude or unmanufactured, and not adulterated, containing 9 per cent. and over of morphia. Merck & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 347.

Salts of opium.—The alkaloids here are produced from morphine, but morphine is derived from opium, and in paragraph 43, Act 1897, "alkaloids" is employed to embrace generically all known or possible alkaloids of opium, and it embraces codeine. Merck & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 41.

While there are no salts of opium proper, that expression in paragraph 43, Act 1897, should be interpreted to mean such salts as are produced by the chemical action of an acid radical on organic bases that are component parts of opium. The merchandise was dutiable under that paragraph. Id. See, also, U. S. v. Merck & Co. (1909) 168 Fed. 244, 94 C. C. A. 74.

48. Perfumery, including cologne and other toilet waters, articles of perfumery, whether in sachets or otherwise, and all preparations used as applications to the hair, mouth, teeth, or skin, such as cosmetics, dentifrices, including tooth soaps, pastes, including theatrical grease paints, and pastes, pomades, powders, and other toilet preparations, all the foregoing, if containing alcohol, 40 cents per pound and 60 per centum ad valorem; if not containing alcohol, 60 per centum ad valorem; floral or flower waters containing no alcohol, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Articles of perfumery.—Victoria cachous (being small pellets, made in part of licorice, with a peppermint or wintergreen flavor, used by smokers and others, to sweeten the breath) were dutiable as "articles of perfumery," under paragraph 61 of the act of 1894, and not as "licorice and extracts of," under paragraph 23, or as "confectionery," under paragraph 183. Volkman, Stollwerck & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 442.

Floral extracts.—Floral extracts, which are articles composed of about 95 per cent. of alcohol and 5 per cent. of sediment, and used in the manufacture of perfumery, held not dutiable at the rate of $2 per gallon and 50 per centum ad valorem as "alcoholic perfumery," but dutiable at the rate of $2 per gallon for the alcohol contained, and 25 per centum ad valorem, as "alcoholic compounds not otherwise specially enumerated or provided for." Fritzsche v. Magone (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 228.

Floral waters.—Floral waters held dutiable as unenumerated manufactured articles, under Act 1897, § 6, rather than as "waste," under paragraph 463. Burr v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 801, 93 C. C. A. 191.

Flower water.—Orange flower water and rose water held, under Act 1897, not dutiable as medicinal preparations but as unenumerated manufactured articles. Euler & Robeson v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 765.

Orange flower water and rose water, which are articles used to some extent medicinally, but chiefly for other purposes not mentioned in any enumerations of the tariff, held, under Act 1883, dutiable as "medicinal preparations," and not as articles not "enumerated." Dodge & Olcott v. U. S. (C. C. 1891) 130 Fed. 624.

Marasque water.—The article known as "marasque water" or "eau de marasque," which is produced by distilling the juice of crushed cherries, diluted somewhat with water used in the distilling process, held not dutiable as cherry juice, under Act 1897, par. 299, but as an unenumerated manufactured article under section 6. Leerberger Bros. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 141 Fed. 1023.

Perfumed smelling salts.—Perfumed smelling salts held not dutiable as articles of perfumery. See paragraph 5.

Toilet preparations.—A dentifrice held properly assessed for duty under Act 1897, as a toilet preparation in which alcohol is used. Russman v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 107 Fed. 266.

Pinaud's eau de quinine tonique, a toilet preparation used as an application to the hair held dutiable under Act 1894, as a preparation for the hair, etc., and not as "alcoholic perfumery, including cologne water, and other toilet waters, and alcoholic compounds not specially provided for," nor as "all compounds or preparations * * * of which distilled spirits are a component part, not specially provided for." In re Merchandise Imported by Hoit (C. C. 1896) 75 Fed. 998.

The phrase "and other toilet preparations" in paragraph 48, Act 1913, must be taken to include the merchandise here—a preparation for polishing finger nails. These preparations are not to be limited to such as are for use or application to the hair, mouth, teeth, or skin. Graf Bros. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 190.

Tooth soap.—Tooth soap held not dutiable as preparation used as application to the teeth. See paragraph 66.

49. Ambergris, enfleurage greases and floral essences by whatever method obtained; flavoring extracts, musk, grained or in pods, civet, and all natural or synthetic odoriferous or aromatic substances, preparations, and mixtures used in the manufacture of, but not marketable as, perfumes or cosmetics; all the foregoing not containing alcohol and not specially provided for in this section, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Enfleurage grease.—So-called muguet pomade, produced by the combination of several kinds of enfleurage grease, to which is added about one-half of 1 per cent. of various essential oils to fortify and combine the article, thus producing an odor like that of the lily of the valley, held free of duty, under Act 1897, as enfleurage grease. Lueders v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 143 Fed. 918.

A concentrated essence produced by the enfleurage process, in which a variety of petroleum was used as the original solvent, is free of duty as "enfleurage grease," within Act 1894, and not dutiable as "essential oil." U. S. v. Dodge & Olcott (C. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 481.

Muguet de mai, shown by a preponderance of testimony to contain no essential oil, is not fluorescence valley lily, but enfleurage grease, and free of duty under Act 1897. Burr v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 126.

50. Plasters, healing or curative, of all kinds, and court-plaster, 15 per centum ad valorem.

51. Baryta, sulphate of, or barytes, including barytes earth, unmanufactured, 15 per centum ad valorem; manufactured, 20 per centum ad valorem; blanc-fixe, or artificial sulphate of barytes, and satin white, or artificial sulphate of lime, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Carbonate of baryta.—Commercial carbonate of baryta held exempt from duty under Act 1897, and not dutiable as a chemical compound or salt not provided for. Gabriel & Schall v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 121 Fed. 208.

52. Blues, such as Berlin, Prussian, Chinese, and all others, containing ferrocyanide of iron, in pulp, dry or ground in or mixed with oil or water, 20 per centum ad valorem; ultramarine blue, whether dry, in pulp, or ground in or mixed with oil or water, and wash blue containing ultramarine, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Ultramarine blue.—Ultramarine blue in pulp, which consists of the ultramarine ground in water so as to form a thick paste, held dutiable, under Act 1890, at 4½ cents a pound on the full weight of the paste, and not on the weight of the ultramarine contained therein when dry. U. S. v. Zentgraf (1894) 60 Fed. 1014, 9 C. C. A. 335.

Where there were two importations of material resembling ultramarine blue, and assessed as ultramarine blue by the collector of customs, under paragraph 52, Act 1897, the board of general appraisers, after testimony taken, finding one item properly assessed and the other improperly assessed, because this rightfully fell under paragraph 58 of said act, the facts being reviewed, the board is affirmed. U. S. v. Riebe (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 19.

53. Black pigments, made from bone, ivory, or vegetable substance, by whatever name known; gas black and lampblack, dry or ground in or mixed with oil or water, 15 per centum ad valorem.

54. Chrome yellow, chrome green, and all other chromium colors in the manufacture of which lead and bichromate of potash or soda are used, in pulp, dry, or ground in or mixed with oil or water, 20 per centum ad valorem.

55. Ocher and ochery earths, sienna and sienna earths, and umber and umber earths, 5 per centum ad valorem; Spanish brown, venetian red, Indian red, and colcothar or oxide of iron, not specially provided for in this section, 10 per centum ad valorem.

Ochery earth.—A red pigment to be used as a color held not dutiable as an ochery earth. See paragraph 63.

Oxide of iron.—Oxides of iron in use as a polishing powder held not dutiable as colors and paints, etc. See paragraph 11.

56. Lead pigments: Litharge, orange mineral, red lead, white lead, and all pigments containing lead, dry or in pulp, and ground or mixed with oil or water, not specially provided for in this section, 25 per centum ad valorem.

57. Lead, acetate of, white, and nitrate of, 1¼ cents per pound; acetate of, brown, gray, or yellow, 1 cent per pound; all other lead compounds not specially provided for in this section, 20 per centum ad valorem.

58. Varnishes, including so-called gold size or japan, 10 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That spirit varnishes containing less than 10 per centum of methyl alcohol of the total alcohol contained therein, shall be dutiable at $1.32 per gallon and 15 per centum ad valorem.

Varnish.—Enamel paint in which varnish was used held not dutiable as varnish. See paragraph 63.

Shellac varnish held dutiable under section 2504, R. S., which declares that "on all compounds or preparations of which distilled spirits is a component part of chief value there shall be levied a duty not less than that imposed upon distilled spirits," namely, $2 per proof gallon. (1881) 17 Op. Atty. Gen. 105.

59. Vermilion reds, containing quicksilver, dry or ground in oil or water, 15 per centum ad valorem; when not containing quicksilver but made of lead or containing lead, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Vermillion red.—Imitation vermillion red containing no quicksilver held, under Act 1890, subject to the same duty as the genuine. In re Downing (1893) 56 Fed. 470, 5 C. C. A. 575.

Vermillion held dutiable as such, and not as a "mercurial preparation." Boving v. Lawrence (C. C. 1850) Fed. Cas. No. 1,711.

60. Whiting and Paris white, dry, and chalk, ground or bolted, 1/10 cent per pound; whiting and Paris white, ground in oil, or putty, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Whiting.—Chemical substances and mineral substances are distinguished for dutiable purposes in the statute. The main constituent of the powder here is a mineral rather than a chemical, 94.89 per cent. of it being mineral. It was properly held dutiable under paragraph 54, Act 1909. U. S. v. Kraemer & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 433. See, also, Same v. Holland-American Trading Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 336; Strohmeyer & Arpe Co. v. Same (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 285.

Goddard's plate powder held, under Act 1909, not to be classed as "articles and wares composed of mineral substances," but according to an established legislative construction dutiable, by similitude, to whiting. Bartley Bros. & Hall v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 363.

A powder put up in small packages for use by jewelers in polishing metals, and composed of over 93 per cent. carbonate of lime, held whiting, and dutiable as such, under Act 1894, and not as an article composed of earthen or mineral substances not specially provided for. U. S. v. Tiffany (C. C. 1902) 117 Fed. 367.

61. Zinc, oxide of, and pigments containing zinc but not containing more than 5 per centum of lead, ground dry, 10 per centum ad valorem; when ground in or mixed with oil or water, lithopone and white sulphide of zinc, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Lithofone.—Where it was proved that lithofone, composed of 70 per cent. sulphate of barytes and 30 per cent. sulphide of zinc, was known as "lithofone," whether dry or ground in oil, and by commercial designation was known as "sulphide of zinc white," it was classifiable for duty as such under Act 1897, and not as a white paint or pigment containing zinc, but not containing lead. Gabriel & Schall v. U. S. (1903) 123 Fed. 296, 59 C. C. A. 352, affirming judgment (C. C. 1902) 114 Fed. 401.

So-called "lithophone," a dry, white material, held to be dutiable as "white paint containing zinc, but not containing lead," under Act 1890, and not as "all other paints and colors, whether dry or mixed," under paragraph 61. Gabriel v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 65 Fed. 422.

Lithofone, which is a compound composed of 70 per cent. sulphate of barytes, and 30 per cent. sulphide of zinc, held dutiable, under Act 1897, as a "white paint or pigment containing zinc, but not containing lead, dry," and not as sulphide of zinc. U. S. v. Gabriel (D. C. 1899) 97 Fed. 934.

62. Zinc, chloride of and sulphate of, ½ cent per pound.

63. Enamel paints, and all paints, colors, pigments, stains, crayons, including charcoal crayons or fusains, smalts, and frostings, and all ceramic and glass fluxes, glazes, enamels, and colors, whether crude, dry, mixed, or ground with water or oil or with solutions other than oil, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem; all paints, colors, and pigments commonly known as artists' paints or colors, whether in tubes, pans, cakes, or other forms, 20 per centum ad valorem; all color lakes, whether dry or in pulp, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Artists' colors.
2. Bleach.
3. Cadmium sulphite.
4. Ceramic colors.
5. Chlorophyll.
6. Collins' oxide.
7. Colors in general.
8. Crayons.
9. Crocus.
10. Enamel paint.
11. Flitters.
12. Hematite iron ore.
13. Lakes.

1. Artists' colors.—All artists' colors are dutiable under paragraph 61, Act 1890, in the paint and color schedule. Rich v. U. S. (1894) 61 Fed. 501, 9 C. C. A., 596.

An importation of "artists' colors," in tubes, composed of ochre and umber, but elaborately prepared for that use, held not dutiable as "colors and paints, including lakes, whether dry or mixed, or ground with water or oil, and not specially enumerated, but should be assessed under the clause which provides that "ochre and ochre earth, umber and umber earths, and sienna and sienna earths, when dry, one-half of one cent per pound; when ground in oil, one and one-half cents per pound." Thayer v. Seeberger (C. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 883.

2. Bleach.—Bleach containing ferrocyanide of iron held not dutiable as a color. See paragraph 385.

3. Cadmium sulphite.—Cadmium sulphite held dutiable under Act 1897 as a pigment or color, and not as a chemical compound or salt. Drakenfeld & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 512. See, also, Fink v. Same (1898) 18 Sup. Ct. 770, 170 U. S. 584, 42 L. Ed. 1153.

4. Ceramic colors.—Powders composed in different proportions of silica alumina, alkalies, tin, copper, zinc, magnesia, etc., held, under Act 1909, dutiable as ceramic colors. Reusche & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 387.

Enamel or ceramic colors containing no quicksilver were dutiable at 5 cents the pound, under paragraph 54, Act 1897. U. S. v. Marsching (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 216.

5. Chlorophyll.—Chlorophyll held not dutiable as a color. See paragraph 385.

6. Collins' oxide.—Collins' oxide, which cannot be profitably smelted and which has been made unfit for smelting by the pulverizing treatment to which it has been subjected, held not dutiable under act 1897 as iron ore, but dutiable as "colors or pigments." Collins & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 83. See, also, Drakenfeld & Co. v. Same (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 512.

7. Colors in general.—The provision for "colors * * * not containing quicksilver, but * * * containing lead," in Act 1897, held a more specific enumeration of colors containing lead than the provision for "colors * * * not otherwise specially provided for." U. S. v. Marsching & Co. (C. C. 1909) 177 Fed. 593.

A red pigment imported to be used as a color and filler, found by the appraisers not to be an ochery earth, and not commercially known as an ocher, held dutiable as a color, under Act 1894. Vandegrift v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 107 Fed. 265.

A pigment is a special kind of coloring matter, and a lake is a special kind of pigment. "Coal tar colors" then enumerates coal tar pigments and coal tar lakes (if any there be) and this enumeration in paragraph 20, Act 1913, is a narrower one than that of pigments and lakes generally in paragraph 63. Farbwerke-Hoechst Co. v. U. S. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 483.

8. Crayons.—School crayons held not dutiable as crayons. See paragraph 378.

9. Crocus.—Crocus, which is a color, but in most largely used as a polishing powder, held dutiable as a color, under Act 1890, under the words, "all other paints and colors, whether dry or mixed," and not as dross residuum from burnt pyrites, or as a nonenumerated article. Smith v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 158, judgment affirmed (1899) 93 Fed. 194, 35 C. C. A. 265.

10. Enamel paint.—Enamel white paint, which contains zinc, but not lead, and is ground in oil, and to which, after grinding, ingredients are added to increase the gloss, held dutiable as "white paint * * * containing zinc, but not containing lead, * * * ground in oil," rather than "paints * * * ground * * * with solutions other than oil," under Act 1897. U. S. v. J. A. & W. Bird & Co. (1909) 167 Fed. 319, 92 C. C. A. 631.

Enamel paint, consisting of a white paint containing zinc, but not containing lead, ground in linseed oil, varnish being added to give a gloss, but without affecting the character of the mixture as a paint, held more specifically enumerated under Act 1897 for "white paint or pigment containing zinc, but not containing lead," than under the provision for "varnishes," or for "all paints, * * * whether crude or dry or mixed, or ground with water or oil or with solutions other than oil, not otherwise specially provided for." Pomeroy & Fischer v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 583.

11. Flitters.—Flitters held not dutiable as a color or pigment. See paragraph 146.

12. Hematite iron ore.—Hematite iron ore held not dutiable as a pigment. See paragraph 518.

13. Lakes.—Lake pigment classed as an Alizarin color held not dutiable as lakes, etc. See paragraph 394.

Lakes containing lead are more specifically provided for as "colors * * * containing lead," under Act 1897, than as "lakes * * * not specially provided for." U. S. v. G. Siegle Co. (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 885; U. S. v. Siegle (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 32.

64. Potash: Bicarbonate of, refined, and chlorate of, ½ cent per pound; chromate and bichromate of, 1 cent per pound; nitrate of, or saltpeter, refined, $7 per ton; permanganate of, 1 cent per pound; prussiate of, red, 2 cents per pound; yellow, 1¼ cents per pound.

65. Salts and all other compounds and mixtures of which bismuth, gold, platinum, rhodium, silver, or tin constitute the element of chief value, 10 per centum ad valorem.

66. Soaps: Perfumed toilet soaps, 30 per centum ad valorem; medicinal soaps, 20 per centum ad valorem; castile soap, and unperfumed toilet soap, 10 per centum ad valorem; all other soaps and soap powder not specially provided for in this section, 5 per centum ad valorem.

Soap in general.—The question is not one of commercial designation; it is, simply, whether the presence of 17 per cent in volume of alcohol in the mixture serves to make the classification of the merchandise as a soap improper. "Soap" is not limited in common understanding to solid combinations, but has been broadened in meaning to include substances liquid in form. The merchandise was properly held dutiable not as a chemical mixture, but as "other soaps not specially provided for" under paragraph 69, Act 1909. U. S. v. Farbenfabriken of Elberfeld Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 358.

Fancy soap.—Where there are irreconcilable differences in the testimony as to the use of the term "fancy soap" in commerce, it cannot be said to have a commercial meaning that is definite, uniform, and general; but since the importation in question consists of cakes of soap, oval in form, translucent, attractive in appearance, agreeable in odor, and appealing to a fastidious taste, it is properly to be regarded as a fancy toilet soap, and was dutiable as such under paragraph 69, Act 1909, and this regardless of whether or not it was perfumed. Downing v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 500.

Medicinal soap.—Calvert's medical soap, containing 20 per cent. of carbolic acid, and used for curative purposes, held not to be dutiable as a "toilet soap," under Act 1890, but under the last clause of said paragraph, "all other soaps not provided for in this act." Park v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 731.

"Medicinal soap" held not dutiable as "proprietary medicines," but as soaps not otherwise provided for or as a medicinal preparation or compound. (1886) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 344.

Tooth soap.—The provision in Act 1897, for "all descriptions of toilet soap" constitutes a more specific enumeration of tooth soap, used as an application to the teeth, than does the provision for "preparations used as applications to the * * * teeth, * * * such as * * * dentifrices, * * * not specially provided for." U. S. v. Park & Tilford (C. C. 1907) 155 Fed. 143.

67. Soda: Benzoate of, 5 cents per pound; chlorate of, and nitrite of, ½ cent per pound; bicarbonate of, or supercarbonate of, or saleratus, and other alkalies containing 50 per centum or more of bicarbonate of soda; hydrate of, or caustic; phosphate of; hyposulphite of; sulphid of, and sulphite of, ¼ cent per pound; chromate and bichromate of, and yellow prussiate of, ¾ cent per pound; borate of, or borax refined; crystal carbonate of, monohydrate, and sesquicarbonate of; sal soda, and soda crystals, ⅛ cent per pound; and sulphate of soda crystallized, or Glauber salts, $1 per ton.

Bichromate of soda.—Bichromate of soda held a "chemical compound or salt," under R. S. § 2502, and not a nonenumerated article. Mason v. Robertson (1891) 11 Sup. Ct. 668, 669, 139 U. S. 624, 35 L. Ed. 293 (reversing [C. C. 1887] 29 Fed. 684); Mason v. Robertson (1890) 139 U. S. 624, 11 Sup. Ct. 668, 35 L. Ed. 293 (reversing [C. C. 1887] 29 Fed. 684). CONTRA, Biddle v. Hartranft (C. C. 1886) 29 Fed. 90.

The jury found that bichromate of soda, a nonenumerated article under the act of March 3, 1883, bears a similitude, in the use to which it may be applied, to bichromate of potash, an enumerated article in said act. Held, that bichromate of soda was subject to the same rate of duty that that act imposes upon bichromate of potash. Biddle v. Hartranft (C. C. 1886) 29 Fed. 90.

68. Sponges: Trimmed or untrimmed but not advanced in value by chemical processes, 10 per centum ad valorem; bleached sponges and sponges advanced in value by processes involving chemical operations, manufactures of sponges, or of which sponge is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Rubber sponges.—Rubber sponges held not dutiable as sponges. See paragraph 368.

69. Talcum, ground talc, steatite, and French chalk, cut, powdered, washed, or pulverized, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

French chalk.—Talc in the form of cubes, which is used in making gas burners and insulators, held dutiable as French chalk by similitude, under Act 1897. Kraemer & Foster v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 180 Fed. 638.

Ground or powdered talc.—Ground talc held dutiable under section 6, Act 1897, as a nonenumerated article partly manufactured, and not under paragraph 97. U. S. v. Gabriel (1901) 122 Fed. 1021, 57 C. C. A. 681, affirming judgment (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 716.

Ground talc held dutiable under Act 1897 as a nonenumerated article partly manufactured. U. S. v. Gabriel (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 716.

Talc and French chalk are not treated in the decisions as being the same substance. Under these decisions the classification of talc is a question of fact rather than of law, the classification to be determined by the evidence in the particular case. The evidence here on review would make it appear there are two varieties of talc, one crystalline and the other massive—that is, French chalk—and that these commercially are different articles with different uses. The talc of the importation at the port of New York had been sawed to a form and size convenient for the economical manufacture of gas burners and electric insulators, and being a mineral advanced in value and condition was dutiable at 20 per cent. ad valorem as articles partly manufactured and not provided for under section 6, Act 1897, and paragraph 480, Act 1909. There was no evidence to support tne protest of the American Lava Company, and the collector's finding is sustained. American Lava Co. v. U. S. (1913) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 522.

Powdered talc is a substance in itself, not a material made up of a mineral substance; and having a proper regard for the rule that language employed in an act is presumed to have been used in accordance with the construction which has been given it by a long-continued practice of an administrative department or by a court, powdered talc may not be deemed French chalk and dutiable as such, but it is dutiable as a manufactured article under paragraph 480, Act 1909. Salomon v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 92.

70. Vanillin, 10 cents per ounce; vanilla beans, 30 cents per pound; tonka beans, 25 cents per pound.

SCHEDULE B.—EARTHS, EARTHENWARE, AND GLASSWARE

71. Fire brick, magnesite brick, chrome brick, and brick not specially provided for in this section, not glazed, enameled, painted, vitrified, ornamented, or decorated in any manner, 10 per centum ad valorem; if glazed, enameled, painted, vitrified, ornamented, or decorated in any manner, and bath brick, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Brick other than fire brick.—Certain magnesic brick, glazed, not known in commerce as fire brick, held not within the provision in Act 1894 for "magnesic fire brick," but dutiable as "brick * * * glazed," under paragraph 76 of said act. Fleming v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 124 Fed. 1014.

The word "brick," other than fire brick, relates to brick used for structural or kindred purposes, and does not apply to all articles in which the word occurs as a designation. Waddell & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 63.

Fire brick.—Retort settings (fire brick) weighing more than 10 pounds held dutiable by similitude as "fire-brick weighing not more than ten pounds each," under Act 1897. U. S. v. Behrend (1909) 167 Fed. 317, 92 C. C. A. 629.

The rule that the provision in act 1897, for decorated and undecorated articles composed of mineral substances does not cover articles not susceptible of decoration excludes from that paragraph fire brick, which can be, but never are, decorated. Id.

The phrase "fire brick," in Act 1897, is a well-known commercial designation, which means brick made from fire clay, and therefore does not include magnesite brick. U. S. v. O. G. Hempstead & Son (C. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 483.

Fire brick, not capable of decoration, over 10 pounds in weight, designed for linings to retort ovens, held dutiable, under the similitude clause of Act 1897 as "fire brick, weighing not more than ten pounds each, not glazed, enameled, ornamented, or decorated," and not as decorated or undecorated articles and wares of earthy or mineral substances not specially provided for. Wing v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 119 Fed. 479.

Magnesic brick.—Magnesic brick, which are not fire brick, held dutiable as brick under Act 1894, and not as "magnesic fire brick." Fleming Cement & Brick Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 158.

Certain magnesic brick glazed, not known in commerce as fire brick, is dutiable as brick glazed, not as magnesic fire brick. Fleming v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 124 Fed. 1014.

Welsh quarries.—So-called "Welsh quarries" held not dutiable as "tiles" under Act 1897, but as "brick, other than fire brick." Traitel Bros. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 994.

72. Tiles, plain unglazed, one color, exceeding two square inches in size, 1½ cents per square foot; glazed, ornamented, hand-painted, enameled, vitrified, semivitrified, decorated, encaustic, ceramic mosaic, flint, spar, embossed, gold decorated, grooved and corrugated, and all other earthenware tiles and tiling, except pill tiles and so-called quarries or quarry tiles, but including tiles wholly or in part of cement, 5 cents per square foot; so-called quarries or quarry tiles, 20 per centum ad valorem; mantels, friezes, and articles of every description or parts thereof, composed wholly or in chief value of earthenware tiles or tiling, except pill tiles, 30 per centum ad valorem.

Construction in general.—Of the provisions in Act 1897 (1) for "tiles, plain unglazed one color, exceeding two square inches in size," and (2) for "tiles * * * semivitrified, flint," etc., the latter is more specific; and tiles embraced in both descriptions are dutiable under the latter. Schroeder v. U. S. (1907) 156 Fed. 957, 84 C. C. A. 457.

Glazed tile.—Glazed tile as dutiable under Act 1883, making provision for paving tile. See Rossman v. Hedden (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 925, 927, 145 U. S. 561, 36 L. Ed. 817 (affirming [C. C. 1888] 37 Fed. 99); Davis v. Seeberger (1890) 44 Fed. 260 (writ of error dismissed Seeberger v. Best [1894] 14 Sup. Ct. 1152, 154 U. S. 516, 38 L. Ed. 1083); Morris v. Seeberger (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 58; Rossman v. Hedden (C. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 99.

Articles composed of tiles, which are put together in rows before being fired, their faces forming a plane surface, on which a picture is painted with brown mineral paint, mixed with oil or water, the tiles being then separated and fired, by which process the color of the painting is changed from brown to blue, and the surface of the tile is glazed, after which the tiles are reassembled and framed, in which condition they are imported, being used in the frames for wall decoration, or removed and set in mantles or wainscoting, are dutiable, under Act 1890, as "tiles glazed, painted or vitrified," and not as "paintings in oil or water colors." U. S. v. Richard (1900) 99 Fed. 268, 39 C. C. A. 504.

Painted tiles.—Tiles placed together and painted held not dutiable as tiles. See paragraph 652.

Welsh quarries.—Welsh quarries held not dutiable as tile. See paragraph 71.

73. Lime, 5 per centum ad valorem.

74. Plaster rock or gypsum, crude, ground or calcined, pearl hardening for paper makers' use; white, non-staining Portland cement, Keene's cement, or other cement of which gypsum is the component material of chief value, and all other cements not specially provided for in this section, 10 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Cement.—"Chalk slags," consisting of raw chalk and a small proportion of mud, mixed, dried, and kiln-burned, and afterwards crushed into lumps and used in the manufacture of Portland cement by grinding to a fine powder, which in itself makes a fair low order of cement, held assessable for duty under Act 1883 "as cement, Roman, Portland, and all others." Anglo-American Portland Cement Co. v. Seeberger (C. C. 1889) 39 Fed. 763.

Pearl hardening.—Pearl hardening, an artificial sulphate of lime, obtained by precipitated carbonate of lime with dilute sulphuric acid, held dutiable, under Act 1890, as a nonenumerated manufactured article, and not under paragraph 97 as "plaster of Paris, or gypsum ground." U. S. v. Watson (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 160.

75. Pumice stone, unmanufactured, 5 per centum ad valorem; wholly or partially manufactured, ¼ cent per pound; manufactures of pumice stone, or of which pumice stone is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Pumice stone.—Paragraph 89, Act 1909, provides not only for manufactured and unmanufactured pumice stone, but also for partially manufactured pumice stone, and the filed or rolled pumice stone of the importation was dutiable thereunder. Gallagher & Ascher v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 59.

The article known as "composition pumice stone," consisting of ground pumice stone mixed with clay, in the form of bricks or cakes, held not dutiable under the provision in Act 1897 for "articles or wares composed wholly or in chief value of earthy or mineral substances * * * not decorated," but by virtue of the similitude clause dutiable as being substantially similar in texture, material, and use to the "pumice stone, wholly or partially manufactured," therein enumerated. R. J. Waddell & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 124 Fed. 301.

76. Clays or earths, unwrought or unmanufactured, not specially provided for in this section, 50 cents per ton; wrought or manufactured, not specially provided for in this section, $1 per ton; china clay or kaolin, $1.25 per ton; fuller's earth, unwrought and unmanufactured, 75 cents per ton; wrought or manufactured, $1.50 per ton; fluorspar, $1.50 per ton: Provided, That the weight of the casks or other containers shall be included in the dutiable weight.

China clay.—Under Act 1897, making china clay dutiable by the ton, duty may properly be laid upon the actual weight of the clay and the moisture therein, if the moisture is not more than is ordinarily found; but duty should not be exacted on an abnormal amount of moisture. The duty on china clay in casks may properly be based on the actual weight of the importation, regardless of the custom of the trade to consider a cask as half a ton and to pay for it on that basis. Perkins, Goodwin & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 160 Fed. 272.

Plastillina or modeling clay.—Plastillina or modeling clay held not dutiable as clay. See paragraph 385.

Volcanic earth.—Volcanic earth dried and ground in a mill and used for external application to the human body held not a medicinal preparation for the use of the apothecary or physician as a remedy for disease. U. S. v. Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. (1897) 79 Fed. 313, 24 C. C. A. 604. Dry pulverized earth used as a mud bath can not be deemed a plaster, healing or curative, but dutiable as an earth, wrought or manufactured, under Act 1909. U. S. v. Van Oefele (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 15.

77. Mica, unmanufactured, valued at not above 15 cents per pound, 4 cents per pound; valued above 15 cents per pound, 25 per centum ad valorem; cut mica, mica splittings, built-up mica, and all manufactures of mica, or of which mica is the component material of chief value, 30 per centum ad valorem; ground mica, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Cut mica.—Where mica had been subjected to a treatment which converted the clear sheets into such figures and patterns as are useful in industry and merchantable, the resulting pieces held dutiable as "cut mica," even though some of these are not exactly true in geometric form, and though the sizes are not the standard sizes commonly quoted in trade catalogues. Watson Bros. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 416.

Mica in small pieces.—Mica in small sheets or pieces, which fall off in the process of thumb-trimming, varying in width from one to two inches and in length from two to three and a half inches, held dutiable under Act 1897, as "mica unmanufactured," and not as "waste, not specially provided for." Myers v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 110 Fed. 940.

Rough trimmed mica.—Splittings of mica are not manufactures, but are rough-trimmed mica. U. S. v. Myers (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 257.

78. Common yellow, brown, or gray earthenware made of natural unwashed and unmixed clay; plain or embossed, common salt-glazed stoneware; stoneware and earthenware crucibles; all the foregoing, not ornamented, incised, or decorated in any manner, 15 per centum ad valorem; if ornamented, incised, or decorated in any manner and manufactures wholly or in chief value of such ware, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per centum ad valorem; Rockingham earthenware, 30 per centum ad valorem.

Carmelite ware.—So-called "carmelite ware," consisting of earthen cooking ware of a dark brown color, some of the articles having a white lining, and some no lining, are not within the provision for "common * * * brown * * * earthenware," in Act 1897. G. M. Thurnauer & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 165 Fed. 62.

Ice tanks.—The provision in paragraph 92, Act 1909, is for yellow earthenware "coated with white or transparent vitreous glaze." This covers all yellow earthenware coated with white or transparent vitreous glaze that has no other ornamentation or decoration than white or vitreous glaze, and this specifically describes an importation of ice tanks made of china or earthenware. Langley v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 76.

Rockingham earthenware.—Decorated teapots held not dutiable as Rockingham earthenware. See paragraph 80.

Sarreguemines.—In Act 1897, providing for "common yellow * * * earthenware," "common" is not a commercial, but a descriptive, term; and Sarreguemines ware, which is of a superior quality, is not within said provision. U. S. v. Reugger (C. C. 1908) 167 Fed. 142.

Seger cones.—Seger cones used to test the temperature of ovens held not dutiable as earthenware made of clay. See paragraph 81.

79. Earthenware and crockery ware composed of a nonvitrified absorbent body, including white granite and semiporcelain earthenware, and cream-colored ware, and stoneware, including clock cases with or without movements, pill tiles, plaques, ornaments, toys, charms, vases, statues, statuettes, mugs, cups, steins, lamps, and all other articles composed wholly or in chief value of such ware; if plain white, plain yellow, plain brown, plain red, or plain black, not painted, colored, tinted, stained, enameled, gilded, printed, ornamented or decorated in any manner, and manufactures in chief value of such ware not specially provided for in this section, 35 per centum ad valorem; if painted, colored, tinted, stained, enameled, gilded, printed, or ornamented or decorated in any manner, and manufactures in chief value of such ware not specially provided for in this section, 40 per centum ad valorem.

Decorated earthenware.—Plates and mugs, decorated with pictures and with the letters of the alphabet, and intended for children, known in trade as

"A B C" plates and mugs, held not toys, but dutiable as "decorated earthenware." Maddock v. Magone (C. C. 1890) 41 Fed. 882, judgment affirmed (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 588, 152 U. S. 368, 38 L. Ed. 482.

Decorated teapots held, under Act 1909, not dutiable as Rockingham earthenware, but as decorated earthenware. Masson v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 420.

80. China and porcelain wares composed of a vitrified nonabsorbent body which when broken shows a vitrified or vitreous, or semivitrified or semivitreous fracture, and all bisque and parian wares, including clock cases with or without movements, plaques, ornaments, toys, charms, vases, statues, statuettes, mugs, cups, steins, lamps, and all other articles composed wholly or in chief value of such ware, if plain white, or plain brown, not painted, colored, tinted, stained, enameled, gilded, printed, or ornamented or decorated in any manner; and manufactures in chief value of such ware not specially provided for in this section, 50 per centum ad valorem; if painted, colored, tinted, stained, enameled, gilded, printed, or ornamented or decorated in any manner and manufactures in chief value of such ware not specially provided for in this section, 55 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Bisque rings.
2. Carmelite ware.
3. Decorated ware.
4. Enameled.
5. Marquardt-masse.
6. Plaques.
7. Porcelain.
8. Printed.
9. Stained ware.
10. Statuettes.
11. Toys.
12. Undecorated porcelain.

1. Bisque rings.—Bisque rings for incandescent burners held not dutiable as bisque. See paragraph 385.

2. Carmelite ware.—Earthenware cooking utensils known as carmelite ware and in the shape of bowls, which had imposed on them a thin white layer of vitreous glass, forming a smooth, hard coating that differs in color and character from the body on which it is laid, are enameled, and dutiable as such. Frank v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 85.

3. Decorated ware.—Merely adding a color to white china for utilitarian purposes does not make decorated china, and china and cooking serving dishes of which the sloping undersides are irregularly colored brown in order to conceal smoke and finger marks, and without decorative effect, are dutiable as undecorated china under Act 1897. G. W. Thurnauer & Bro. v. U. S. (1908) 159 Fed. 122, 86 C. C. A. 86, reversing judgment U. S. v. G. M. Thurnauer & Bro. (C. C. 1907) 152 Fed. 660.

Bottle stoppers of china or porcelain, on which there have been printed in various colors firm names, and trademarks indicated by various devices, such as a monogram, a star, a bird, a lion, etc., held not ornamented or decorated, within paragraphs 84, 85, when "not changed in condition by superadded ornamentation or decoration" (paragraph 84), but "printed or otherwise decorated in any manner" (paragraph 85), and are dutiable under the former, and not the latter, of these provisions. U. S. v. Borgfeldt (C. C. 1900) 123 Fed. 196.

Where "Cenco" is so placed on white china plates and so printed as to be attractive in color and design, it becomes, as well as a trade-mark, a matter of adornment or decoration. U. S. v. Bernard, Judae & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 403. See, also, Richard & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 359.

4. Enameled.—"Enameled" as employed in paragraph 94, Act 1909, has the limited meaning which it appears always to have borne in ceramics; that is to say, an opaque or colored semivitrified coating applied to the surface of pottery either as a decoration or for a utilitarian purpose. Richards & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 193.

5. Marquardt-masse.—The importer claims the merchandise is made of marquardt-masse. This term is not in common use and no authority is given that sheds any light on the question of what marquardt-masse is, of what it is composed, or how made. The record shows no chemical analysis of the tubes in controversy. Stegemann v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 393.

The importer's contention is that the tubes were not dutiable under paragraph 94, but paragraph 95, Act 1909. The burden is on him of establishing both these claims. Under the evidence if it were assumed the first contention is sound there is no proof of the other. Id.

6. Plaques.—Flat, rectangular porcelain panels decorated by means of paints known as mineral colors, as distinguished from oil and water colors, and completed by firing, held dutiable, under Act 1894, as plaques, and not free, as "paintings in oil or water colors, * * * not otherwise specifically provided for, * * * and not made wholly or in part by stenciling or other mechanical process." Bour v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 91 Fed. 533.

Free-hand paintings on plaques, painted with mineral colors, and subjected to a process of firing, held dutiable as "plaques * * * painted in any manner," under Act 1894, and not free as "paintings, in oil or water colors, * * * not otherwise provided for," and "not made wholly or in part by * * * mechanical process." Altman & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 71 Fed. 393.

7. Porcelain.—Porcelain paintings held not dutiable under this paragraph. See paragraph 652.

Proof that insulators for spark plugs is talc does not disprove the collector's return that the article is porcelain; and no satisfactory disproof of return in this case having been made, its correctness stands unimpeached. Herz & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 547.

Porcelain is a highly finished translucent pottery, usually glazed, while earthenware is a cruder and inferior product. They are both earthenware, but the statute distinguishes them, and under the statute crucibles of porcelain held not earthenware, but dutiable under paragraph 94, Act 1909. Sargent Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 462.

8. Printed.—Neither the tariff act nor the trade-mark statute contains any express provision according to which the employment of "Rajah" printed on a porcelain spark plug can be taken to fix an exemption in favor of such a ware as against similar ware printed with similar names in common use. The spark plugs held dutiable as printed ware. Richard & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 359.

9. Stained ware.—Earthenware, to which a single color glaze has been added, held under Act 1897, not only "decorated," but "stained." U. S. v. L. Straus & Co. (C. C. 1909) 168 Fed. 569.

10. Statuettes.—Statuettes composed of plaster of paris held not dutiable as chinaware, including statuettes, etc. See paragraph 369.

11. Toys.—If decorated china earthenware is bought, sold, and used under the name of "toys," it is to be classified for duty under paragraph 425, Act 1883, and it is unimportant whether the articles are used for playthings for children or for household purposes. Zeh v. Cadwalader (C. C. 1889) 42 Fed. 525, judgment affirmed Cadwalader v. Zeh (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 288, 151 U. S. 171, 38 L. Ed. 115.

12. Undecorated porcelain.—A substance made of waste melilite or lava that has been pulverized, and after an addition made of oxide of magnesia and alkalies has been molded in the fashion of porcelain and then fired, held dutiable within paragraph 96, Act 1897. U. S. v. Morris European & American Express Co. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 300.

81. Earthy or mineral substances wholly or partially manufactured and articles and wares composed wholly or in chief value of earthy or mineral substances, not specially provided for in this section, whether susceptible of decoration or not, if not decorated in any manner, 20 per centum ad valorem; if decorated, 25 per centum ad valorem; unmanufactured carbon, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem; electrodes for electric furnaces, electrolytic and battery purposes, brushes, plates, and disks, all the foregoing composed wholly or in chief value of carbon, 25 per centum ad valorem; manufactures of carbon not specially provided for in this section, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Construction of paragraph in general.
2. "Composed."
3. "Mineral substance."
4. Carbon.

1. Construction of paragraph in general.—The phrase, "all articles composed * * * of mineral substances," in Act 1894, must be construed, by reason of the collocation of the paragraph in a restricted sense, as applying only to articles composed of mineral substances similar to those enumerated in that schedule. Dingelstedt v. United States, 91 Fed. 112, 33 C. C. A. 395, affirming judgment (C. C. 1897) 87 Fed. 190.

The provision in Act 1897 for mineral substances being limited to articles susceptible of decoration, wares not susceptible of decoration are not to be brought within the paragraph through the operation of the similitude clause. M. Kirschberger & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 166 Fed. 1012.

This case was based upon the tariff law of 1897, in which the provision relating to articles composed of earthy or mineral substances was restricted by the phrase "whether decorated or not"; and this phrase had been held to exclude from the operation of the paragraph articles not susceptible of decoration. Jackson & Co. v. U. S. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 512.

Earthy and mineral substances are not dutiable under paragraph 95, Act 1909, but articles made out of earthy or mineral substances are—that is to say, articles that are something more than the material out of which they are made, being distinguishable from the mass out of which they were developed by a definite shape and form adapted to a final use. U. S. v. Embossing Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 220. See, also, Same v. Tamm & Co. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 425; Salomon v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 92.

2. "Composed."—"Composed," under Act 1909, does not imply that an article to be "composed" must be made of more than one substance; an article may be composed of a single substance. U. S. v. Tamm & Co. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 425.

3. "Mineral substance."—The phrase "mineral substances" does not mean substances in the plural, to the exclusion of substance in the singular. U. S. v. Tamm & Co. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 425.

4. Carbon.—Blood charcoal held not dutiable as an article of carbon. See paragraph 447.

Carbon points held not dutiable as articles composed of mineral substances. See paragraph 82.

Carbon sticks, which must undergo a slight process of manufacture to be fit for use in electric lamps, not being dutiable under Act 1897 as "carbons for electric lighting," because unfinished, nor, as articles composed of carbon, not specially provided for, decorated or undecorated, because not susceptible of decoration, held dutiable under the similitude clause, at the rate levied by paragraph 98 on the finished product. Judgment U. S. v. R. F. Downing & Co. (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 476, 477, 201 U. S. 354, 50 L. Ed. 786, reversing judgment U. S. v. Downing (1904) 129 Fed. 90, 63 C. C. A. 532.

Carbon sticks, intended for use in electric lighting, which must be cut into suitable lengths, and the ends pointed or ground, before they can be so used, held dutiable under Act 1897, as articles or wares composed wholly of carbon, not specially provided for, and not as carbons for electric lighting. U. S. v. Reisinger (1899) 94 Fed. 1002, 36 C. C. A. 626.

The rods of the importation, when fitted with brass caps, make poles of a galvanic battery of a kind, though not completed poles. Reviewing the legislative history of paragraph 95, Act 1909, and the construction it has received by the courts, the intention is manifest that articles like those described are not subject to the duties imposed by that paragraph upon articles and wares composed of earthy or mineral substances. The merchandise is a manufacture of carbon and is classifiable and dutiable as a nonenumerated manufacture under paragraph 480. Stegemann v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 5.

5. Ceylon sapphire.—Small pieces of Ceylon sapphires used as bearings for electrical meters, etc., held dutiable under Act 1909 as articles composed of earthy or mineral substances, and not as semiprecious stones or as precious stones cut, but not set. U. S. v. General Electric Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 287.

6. Fire brick.—Fire brick held not dutiable under the terms of this paragraph. See paragraph 71.

7. Flint glazing stones.—Solid flint glazing stones held dutiable as articles composed wholly or in chief value of earthy or mineral substances. U. S. v. Tamm & Co. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 425.

8. Granito.—Granito, a manufacture of marble waste, crushed and screened, is dutiable under paragraph 81, Act 1913, as an article composed of earthy or mineral substance, not specially provided for. Jackson & Co. v. U. S. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 512.

9. Ground talc.—Ground talc held not dutiable under the terms of this paragraph. See paragraph 69.

10. Hone stones.—Hone stones designed as polishers held properly assessed as marble polishers composed of a mineral substance under Act 1909. Waddell & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 406.

11. Jade.—Articles such as tableware, ornaments, etc., manufactured from jade, held, under Act 1897, not "precious stones," or unenumerated articles, but dutiable as "articles and wares composed wholly or in chief value of * * * mineral substances." C. L. Tiffany & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 255.

12. Lava stone.—Lava stone per se held not in all cases a monumental or building stone, and was not free as lava unmanufactured, but dutiable as articles composed wholly or in chief value of earthy or mineral substances not specially provided for. U. S. v. Manufacturers' Paper Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 110. See, also, Waddell & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 406; U. S. v. Stouffer (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 67; Same v. Tamm & Co. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 425.

13. Magnesia rings.—Magnesia rings used for holding in place the incandescent mantles of gas burners held dutiable under Act 1909, as articles composed wholly or in chief value of earthy or mineral substances, not specially provided for and not decorated, whether susceptible of decoration or not. U. S. v. Fensterer & Ruhe (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 368. See, also, Fensterer v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 93.

14. Metal polish.—Metal polish held not dutiable as earthy or mineral substance. See paragraph 385.

15. Modeling clay.—Modeling clay containing saponifiable matter held not dutiable as earthy or mineral substance. See paragraph 385.

16. Molybdenite.—Molybdenite held not dutiable as a mineral substance partly manufactured. See paragraph 549.

17. Nicol prisms.—The importations of nikols or Nicol prisms are manufactured from the mineral substance known as carbonate of calcium, and, as articles or wares of that class are not otherwise provided for, these are dutiable at 35 per cent. ad valorem under the provisions of paragraph 95, Act 1909. U. S. v. Bausch & Lomb Optical Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 416.

18. Polishing powder.—Polishing powder held not dutiable as articles composed of mineral substances. See paragraph 60.

19. Polishing stones.—Tam O'Shanter stones for polishing held dutiable under paragraph 95, Act 1909, as articles or wares in chief value of earthy or mineral substances, and not classifiable as waste or minerals crude. Waddell & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 188.

20. Pumice stone.—Composition pumice stone held not dutiable under the terms of this paragraph. See paragraph 75.

21. Rubbing or scouring bricks.—The importation is a stone, in brick shape it is true, but it is used in water in the process of rubbing, scouring, and cleaning marble, thus disintegrating in its use. It was properly assessed as an article or ware composed wholly or in chief value of earthy or mineral substances not specially provided for, not decorated, under paragraph 95, Act 1909. Waddell & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 63.

22. Sapphires.—Sapphires intended for bearings held not dutiable as articles composed of mineral substances. See paragraph 357.

23. Seger cones.—"Seger cones," used as a rough test of the temperature of ovens, held dutiable under Act 1909 as articles of earthy or mineral substances. U. S. v. Eimer & Amend (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 478.

24. Water of Ayr whetstone.—Water of Ayr whetstone, used to smooth the rough surfaces of engraved rollers held dutiable as an article of earthy or mineral substance under Act 1909. U. S. v. Johnson & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 104. See, also, Waddell & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 406; Manufacturers' Paper Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 72; U. S. v. Tamm & Co. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 425.

82. Gas retorts, 10 per centum ad valorem; lava tips for burners, 15 per centum ad valorem; carbons for electric lighting, wholly or partly finished, made entirely from petroleum coke, 15 cents per hundred feet; if composed chiefly of lampblack or retort carbon, 40 cents per hundred feet; carbons for flaming arc lamps, not specially provided for in this section, and filter tubes, 30 per centum ad valorem; porous carbon pots for electric batteries, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Carbon.—Carbon sticks held not dutiable as carbons for electric lighting. See paragraph 81.

Carbon points for arc lights, composed chiefly of lampblack, natural graphite, and carbon products resulting from the distillation of coal, coke, or petroleum and coal tar, in varying proportions, the lampblack being produced by the combustion of either mineral or vegetable substances, held dutiable, under Act 1894 as manufactured articles not provided for, and not as articles composed of mineral substances not specially provided for. Judgment (C. C. 1897) 87 Fed. 190, affirmed. Dingelstedt v. U. S. (1898) 91 Fed. 112, 33 C. C. A. 395.

Soapstone gas tips.—Soapstone gas tips held dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles. See paragraph 385.

83. Plain green or colored, molded or pressed, and flint, lime, or lead glass bottles, vials, jars, and covered and uncovered demijohns, and carboys, any of the foregoing, filled or unfilled, not otherwise specially provided for in this section, and whether their contents be dutiable or free (except such as contain merchandise subject to an ad valorem rate of duty, or to a rate of duty based in whole or in part upon the value thereof which shall be dutiable at the rate applicable to their contents), 30 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That the terms bottles, vials, jars, demijohns, and carboys, as used herein, shall be restricted to such articles when suitable for use as and of the character ordinarily employed as containers for the holding or transportation of merchandise, and not as appliances or implements in chemical or other operations.

Notes of Decisions

1. Blanks.
2. Bottles filled.
3. Bottles for scientific purposes.
4. Etched bar bottles.
5. Hock bottles or secondhand bottles.
6. Jars.
7. Molded and pressed glass bottles.
8. Molded flint glass bottles.
9. Plain glass bottles.
10. Reagent bottles.
11. Siphon bottles.
12. Thermo bottles.
13. Vials.

1. Blanks.—Oval glass blanks blown in molds held not dutiable as glassware. See paragraph 95.

2. Bottles filled.—Separate duty on bottles filled with ginger ale. See paragraph 248.

Separate duty on bottles filled with liquor. See paragraphs 243–245.

Separate duty on bottles filled with soda water. See paragraph 248.

Glass soda bottles holding less than one pint, and which constitute the usual and necessary coverings of the soda water imported therein, held not dutiable under Act 1894. In paragraph 88 of that act, fixing the duties on glass bottles, the clause "whether filled or unfilled and whether their contents are dutiable or free" applies only to the articles previously enumerated in the subdivision in which such clause is found, namely, bottles holding more than one pint, and demijohns and carboys. U. S. v. Ross (1898) 91 Fed. 108, 33 C. C. A. 361 (affirming judgment [C. C. 1897] 84 Fed. 153); Merck v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 99 Fed. 432.

The provisions for filled glass bottles prescribed in the act of 1883 held not repealed by force of the provision as to coverings, Act 1890, § 19, post, § 5599. U. S. v. Austin Nicholls & Co. (1902) 22 Sup. Ct. 918, 186 U. S. 298, 46 L. Ed. 1173.

In imposing the ad valorem duty provided by Act 1897 on bottles filled with olive oil, there should be taken as the dutiable value of the bottles only the value of the bottles by themselves, exclusive of corks, capsules, labels, reed envelopes, wooden cases, cost of filling, etc., all of which should be attributed to the contents rather than to the bottle. James A. Hayes & Co. v. U. S. (1906) 150 Fed. 63, 80 C. C. A. 17, writ of certiorari denied U. S. v. James A. Hayes & Co. (1907) 28 Sup. Ct. 261, 207 U. S. 595, 52 L. Ed. 356.

Paragraph 258, Act 1897, relating to "anchovies * * * in bottles," and paragraph 276, relating to extract of meat, and providing that "the dutiable weight of the fluid extract of meat shall not include the weight of the package in which the same is imported," held not to be construed as removing bottles containing the merchandise enumerated in said paragraphs from the provision in paragraph 99 for "bottles * * * filled or unfilled, not otherwise specially provided for, and whether their contents be dutiable or free." James P. Smith & Co. v. U. S. (1904) 130 Fed. 104, 64 C. C. A. 438, affirming judgment (C. C. 1903) 124 Fed. 291.

Act 1897, par. 99, provides that glass bottles "filled or unfilled, * * * and whether their contents be dutiable or free (except such as contain merchandise subject to an ad valorem rate of duty, * * * which shall be dutiable at the rate applicable to their contents) shall pay duty as follows: If holding more than one pint, one cent per pound; if holding not more than one pint, * * * one and one-half cents per pound: * * * provided, that none of the above articles shall pay a less rate of duty than 40 per centum ad valorem." Held, that the proviso applies as well to bottles containing merchandise subject to an ad valorem duty as to others. U. S. v. Hensel (1901) 106 Fed. 70, 45 C. C. A. 226.

Held, that the cost of the fittings for filled bottles, consisting of corks, caps, capsules, labels, and wiring, should be treated as part of the value of the bottles on which the ad valorem duty should be assessed which is provided on filled bottles by paragraph 99, Act 1897. Francis H. Leggett & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 138 Fed. 970.

Glass bottles, filled with a medicinal preparation dutiable at 25 per cent. ad valorem, are dutiable under the exception in paragraph 99 of the act of 1897, relating to glass bottles and vials, filled or unfilled, "such as contain merchandise subject to an ad valorem rate of duty, or to a duty based in whole or in part on the value thereof, which shall be dutiable at the rate applicable to their contents." Hensel v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 259.

Under paragraph 104, Act 1890, which provides that glass bottles filled with an article that pays an ad valorem duty shall pay the same duty as the contents, the dutiable value being ascertained by adding the value of the contents to the value of the bottles, "provided that no article manufactured from glass described in the preceding paragraph shall pay a less rate of duty than forty per centum ad valorem," glass bottles filled with blacking, dutiable at 25 per cent. ad valorem, under paragraph 11, are liable to duty at the rate of 40 per centum ad valorem. In re Salomon (C. C. 1893) 55 Fed. 285.

Act 1909, par. 97, excepting bottles the contents of which are subject to an ad valorem duty, and section 5599, post, making coverings part of the value of the article are in pari materia and are to be construed together. The parenthetical clause of paragraph 97 operates to except the bottles there described, leaving these for assessment at the same rate with their contents under the provisions and in the mode pointed out by section 5599. U. S. v. Conkey & Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 245.

3. Bottles for scientific purposes.—"Bottles," in Act 1897, par. 99, exclude blown glass flasks for chemical laboratories, dutiable under paragraph 100 as "blown glassware." Eimer & Amend v. U. S. (1909) 168 Fed. 240, 93 C. C. A. 454.

Held, that certain bottle-like containers, of glass, used in chemical operations, and known as Koch flasks, and certain so-called Woulf flasks, shaped like bottles, but having two or three necks apiece, are "bottles" or "jars," within the meaning of Act 1897, par. 99. Eimer & Amend v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 439.

An importation of bottles and bottle-shaped receptacles holding less than a pint, used by chemists for their operations, held dutiable under Act 1894, par. 88, as "bottle glassware, not specially provided for," at three-fourths of a cent a pound. Eimer v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 423.

4. Etched bar bottles.—Hollow, translucent vessels, molded from glass, and etched with fluoric acid, representing female figures, the head separable from the body, and fitting closely on a narrow neck, so as to form a stopper, of the capacity of 7½ and 18⅛ fluid ounces, respectively, and used as bar bottles, held dutiable as "bottles," under Act 1890, par. 103, and not as "pressed glassware," under paragraph 105; nor are they dutiable under paragraph 106, which does not include "etched" glassware in its enumeration of ornamental glassware. In re Smith (C. C. 1893) 55 Fed. 476, judgment affirmed Smith v. Mihalovitch (1894) 61 Fed. 399, 9 C. C. A. 552.

5. Hock bottles or secondhand bottles.—Empty pint wine bottles, commercially known as "hock bottles," held dutiable under the final clause of paragraph 88 of the tariff act of 1894, at 40 per cent. ad valorem, and not under the second clause, at 1¾ cents per pound, as vials holding not more than one pint, and not less than one-quarter of a pint. Grace v. Collector of Customs of Port and District of San Francisco (1897) 79 Fed. 315, 24 C. C. A. 606.

Secondhand bottles, capable of being used as bottles, held not junk, within Act 1897, but bottles, under paragraph 99. Carberry v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 773.

Hock bottles, holding not more than one pint, and not less than one-quarter of a pint, though commercially known as "bottles," and not as "vials," held dutiable at 1⅛ cents per pound, under the second clause of paragraph 88, Act 1894. In re Grace (C. C. 1896) 75 Fed. 2.

6. Jars.—A receptacle 2 by 6 by 10 inches, with open top, and no apparent provision for covering, used by photographers as a bath for sensitized photographers' plates, does not fall within the provision for jars in paragraph 97 of the act of 1909, as the term "jars," as there employed, is expressly restricted to such as are ordinarily employed as containers for the holding or transportation of merchandise. Gallagher & Ascher v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 387.

7. Molded and pressed glass bottles.—Molded and pressed glass bottles with cut glass stoppers held not dutiable as molded and pressed glass. See paragraph 84.

In Act 1897, par. 99, the term "molded," as applied to glassware, is synonymous with "pressed." U. S. v. Heil Chemical Co. (1910) 178 Fed. 537, 102 C. C. A. 47.

8. Molded flint glass bottles.—Flint-glass bottles, molded, and holding more than one pint, held dutiable under Act 1890, par. 103, and not under paragraph 105. Smith v. Mihalovitch (C. C. A. 1894) 61 Fed. 399, affirming judgment In re Smith (C. C. 1893) 55 Fed. 476.

9. Plain glass bottles.—Glass bottles having a name sand blasted thereon held not dutiable as plain glass bottles. See paragraph 84.

The provision in Act 1897, par. 99, for "plain" glass bottles, held not to include fancy bottles with metal mountings. Mark Cross Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 150 Fed. 610.

10. Reagent bottles.—Reagent bottles are admissible free of duty as plain glass bottles, or, at most, should only be charged with duty, under paragraph 99, Act 1897, and not as ornamental or lettered, under paragraph 100, the lettering on them being for utility, and not for ornament. O. G. Hempstead & Son v. U. S. (C. C. A. 1903) 122 Fed. 752.

11. Siphon bottles.—Glass siphon bottles, intended for holding gas-charged waters, having etched thereon merely a name and address, with the words, "This siphon not to be sold," all inclosed in rectangular lines, held not dutiable under paragraph 90, Act 1894, as ornamented or decorated bottles, but as plain glass bottles, under paragraph 88. Koscherak v. U. S. (1899) 98 Fed. 596, 39 C. C. A. 166.

12. Thermo bottles.—It is not shown that the goods (thermo bottles) consist of the ordinary articles recognized as containers for holding or transporting merchandise. They are a product which, while still known as bottles, and while blown, are in class by themselves, and, so far as the record discloses, fall without the provisions of paragraph 97, Act 1909, and within those of paragraph 98, there being an entire absence of proof to overcome the presumption arising in favor of the action of the collector. Stegemann v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 26.

13. Vials.—Glass bottles filled with merchandise at ad valorem rates, holding not more than a pint, held not subject to duty under Act 1894, par. 88, as vials holding not more than a pint, and not less than a quarter of a pint, or as "all other glassware." U. S. v. Austin, Nichols & Co. (1903) 121 Fed. 729, 58 C. C. A. 149.

Glass jars containing preserves, and holding one pint or less, held not "vials," within paragraph 88, Act 1894, but dutiable as part of the market value of the merchandise contained in them, as provided in section 19 of the customs administrative act of 1890 (section 5599, post). Smith v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 757.

84. Glass bottles, decanters, and all articles of every description composed wholly or in chief value of glass, ornamented or decorated in any manner, or cut, engraved, painted, decorated, ornamented, colored, stained, silvered, gilded, etched, sand blasted, frosted, or printed in any manner, or ground (except such grinding as is necessary for fitting stoppers or for purposes other than ornamentation), and all articles of every description, including bottles and bottle glassware, composed wholly or in chief value of glass blown either in a mold or otherwise; all of the foregoing, not specially provided for in this section, filled or unfilled, and whether their contents be dutiable or free, 45 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That for the purposes of this Act, bottles with cut-glass stoppers shall, with the stoppers, be deemed entireties.

Notes of Decisions

1. Construction of paragraph in general.
2. Blown glassware.
3. Bohemian glass.
4. Bottles with stoppers.
5. Colored glass.
6. Containers.
7. Cut glass.
8. Etched glass.
9. Glass articles ground.
10. Microscopic slides.
11. Mosaics.
12. Ornamented or decorated glassware.
13. Thermo bottles.

1. Construction of paragraph in general.—To bring glass bottles within paragraph 90, Act 1894, the cutting, engraving, etching, etc., thereon must be substantial and sufficient to amount to an ornament or decoration; otherwise, they are dutiable as plain glass bottles under paragraph 88. Koscherak v. U. S. (1899) 98 Fed. 596, 39 C. C. A. 166.

2. Blown glassware.—Blanks held not dutiable as blown glassware. See paragraph 95.

Glass blanks produced by blowing glass into a mold held not blown glassware. See paragraph 95.

Thermometer and lactoscopes composed chiefly of blown glass held not dutiable as blown glassware. See paragraph 95.

In Act 1897 the term "blown glassware" includes articles blown in a mold as well as free-handed. U. S. v. Heil Chemical Co. (1910) 178 Fed. 537, 102 C. C. A. 47.

The term "glassware" in the provision for "blown glassware" in Act 1897 is not a term of general commercial designation. U. S. v. Durand, 137 Fed. 382, 69 C. C. A. 566, affirming judgment (C. C. 1903) 127 Fed. 624.

Gauge glasses, consisting of sections of glass tubes ready for mounting, made by a workman inserting a hollow iron rod into a pot of molten glass, and blowing a bulb from the glass adhering to the rod, and again dipping the bulb into the pot to secure the adherence of enough more glass to draw out the tube to the required length, held "blown glassware," within Act 1897, and not manufactures of glass not specially provided for. Rogers v. U. S. (1903) 121 Fed. 546, 57 C. C. A. 608, affirming judgment (C. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 233.

Act 1897, imposing a 60 per cent. ad valorem duty on "vessels of glass, * * * decorated, * * * and any articles of which such glass is the component material of chief value, and porcelain, opal and other blown glassware, all of the foregoing filled or unfilled," covers decorated articles of glass not susceptible of being filled. Stern v. U. S. (1901) 105 Fed. 937, 45 C. C. A. 141.

Photographic glass baths held dutiable under Act 1909 as blown glass. Gallagher & Ascher v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 387.

This glassware is composed of blown bowls with molded stems and feet. There was no evidence by which a finding could be made of the value of the blown bowl or that of the molded stem and foot when these first took on the character of blown or molded glass; and the finding of the collector that blown glass was the component material of chief value was unimpeached. U. S. v. Gredelue (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 298.

The general rule is that an excepting clause relates to what immediately precedes it, and that it will be so construed unless the legislature has clearly manifected a contrary intent, and there is in paragraph 98, Act 1909, no indication of intent to apply the exemption to what follows as well as to what goes before it. The given articles of glass blown in a mold were dutiable under that paragraph. Scientific Supply Importing Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 56.

3. Bohemian glass.—The tariff act of 1890 held a substitute for all prior tariff legislation, so far, at least, as such legislation lays a duty upon imported articles of any kind; and Bohemian glass, imported after October 6, 1890, although specifically enumerated eo nomine in the tariff act of 1883, and only generally enumerated as an "article of glass, colored," etc., in Act 1890, held dutiable under the latter act, and not under the former act, which is no longer in force, as to the imposition of duties. In re Straus (C. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 522.

4. Bottles with stoppers.—Bottles, made of glass, plain, blown, or molded, designed to be subsequently fitted with cut-glass stoppers, held, under Act 1897, not dutiable as articles apart from the glass stoppers imported with them. Park & Tilford v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 174 Fed. 831; Park & Tilford v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 34.

Held, that certain bottles made of molded or pressed glass, with stoppers that have been cut or ground more than is necessary for fitting, held dutiable under Act 1897, relating to "glass bottles * * * cut, * * * ground (except such grinding as is necessary for fitting stoppers)," and not as "molded or pressed * * * glass bottles," under paragraph 99. Utard v. U. S. (1904) 128 Fed. 422, 63 C. C. A. 164, affirming judgment (C. C. 1903) 124 Fed. 997.

Glass bottles, fitted with cut glass stoppers that constitute the element of chief value in the whole article, held dutiable as articles in chief value of cut glass, under Act 1897. Park & Tilford v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 174 Fed. 831.

5. Colored glass.—The goods in controversy are small hemispherical glass insulators, to the glass of which in a melted state an amber color has been given by mixing appropriate coloring matter. From its terms and its legislative history, paragraph 98, Act 1909, must be taken to cover all articles of colored glass not otherwise specifically provided for, and the colored glass insulators here are dutiable as assessed under that paragraph. U. S. v. Wakem & McLaughlin (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 411.

6. Containers.—In paragraph 98, Act 1909, it was intended to declare that, if an article otherwise within the paragraph was susceptible of use as a container, no difference should be made in its assessment whether unfilled or filled, as imported, with contents dutiable or free. Scientific Supply Importing Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 56. See, also, Stern v. U. S. (1901) 105 Fed. 937, 45 C. C. A. 141; Dingelstedt v. U. S. (1898) 91 Fed. 112, 33 C. C. A. 395.

7. Cut glass.—Articles in chief value of paste cut held not dutiable as cut glass. See paragraph 95.

Glass tumblers the entire surface of the bottom of which has been smoothed previous to their importation into the United States held cut glass. Binns v. Lawrence (1851) 12 How. 9, 14, 13 L. Ed. 871.

Glass tumblers, on the sides of which ornamental figures have been engraved previous to their importation into the United States, held cut glass. Id.

Small squares, triangles, and circles of glass, the squares from 2½x2½ to 4x4, and the circles from 5 to 6 inches in diameter, with edges beveled and polished, held dutiable as "articles of glass cut," under Act 1883, rather than as "cast polished plate glass, unsilvered," not exceeding 10x15 inches square. In re Popper (C. C. 1891) 50 Fed. 66.

Disks of glass known as "spectacle lenses," which have been ground or polished for use in spectacles, and which only require to be cut and fitted to the frame, are not exempt from duty as "plates or disks of glass unwrought, for use in the manufacture of optical instruments," but are dutiable as "articles of glass cut, engraved," etc. Fox v. Cadwalader (C. C. 1889) 42 Fed. 209.

8. Etched glass.—The provision in Act 1897 for "articles of glass, * * * etched, * * * or otherwise ornamented, decorated," etc., held not to apply to articles that have been etched otherwise than for ornamentation or decoration. Eimer & Amend v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 439.

9. Glass articles ground.—In Act 1897, par. 100, the provision for "articles of glass * * * ornamented, decorated, or ground (except such grinding as is necessary for fitting stoppers)," is not limited to articles in which the grinding is done for ornamental or decorative purposes, but includes plain goods ground for utility purposes only. U. S. v. Heil Chemical Co. (1910) 178 Fed. 537, 102 C. C. A. 47; Thos. McMullen & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 123 Fed. 847.

Glass bottles having the words "Thos. McMullen & Co.'s White Label" ground thereon by means of the process of sand-blasting held dutiable under the provision in paragraph 100, Act 1897, for "glass bottles, * * * ground," and not under paragraph 99 of said act, relating to "plain * * * glass bottles." Thos. McMullen & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 123 Fed. 847.

Glass blanks ground on the edge and bottom are dutiable under Act 1897, as "articles of glass, ground," without regard to the purpose for which the grinding was done. U. S. v. Louis Hinsberger Cut Glass Co. (C. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 645.

10. Microscopic slides.—Microscopic slides held not dutiable as articles of glass cut. See paragraph 85.

In Act 1897, par. 100, providing for "vessels or articles of glass, * * * all the foregoing, filled or unfilled, and whether their contents be dutiable or free," the reference to the filling of such articles does not, in view of the history of the legislation, imply that only articles capable of being used as containers are covered by the paragraph; and microscope slides cannot for that reason be excluded. O. G. Hempstead & Son v. U. S. (1907) 158 Fed. 584, 86 C. C. A. 42.

11. Mosaics.—These goods have been so far advanced beyond the condition of a mere raw material that they have received not only a distinctive name, but a special definite form that commits them to a specific ultimate use and apparently renders them commercially unfit for anything else. The language of paragraph 98, Act 1909, is broad enough to cover articles of glass other than those denominatively provided for, and these glass mosaics were dutiable under that paragraph. U. S. v. Foscato (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 15.

12. Ornamented or decorated glassware.—Etched bottles held not dutiable as ornamented glassware. See paragraph 83.

Reagent bottles held not dutiable as ornamented bottles. See paragraph 83.

Siphon bottles held not ornamented or decorated. See paragraph 83.

Glass eyes for dolls, in which the iris and the pupil have been skillfully painted or traced held dutiable under Act 1897 as "articles of glass, * * * painted * * * or otherwise ornamented, decorated," etc. R. Hoehn Co. v. U. S. (1905) 142 Fed. 1038, 73 C. C. A. 595, affirming judgment (C. C. 1904) 139 Fed. 301.

Glass siphon bottles intended for holding gas-charged water, having etched thereon the outlines of the figure of a woman inclosed in an oval panel resting on a scrolled base, held ornamented or decorated. Koscherak v. U. S. (1899) 98 Fed. 596, 39 C. C. A. 166.

Glassware ornamented with metal filigree work held dutiable as "articles of glass, * * * ornamented, decorated," etc., under Act 1897, par. 100, regardless of whether glass or metal is the component of chief value. Gallenkamp v. Rachman (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 769.

As to certain cut glass thermometers, the cutting on which is not shown to ornament or decorate the articles, held, that they are not within the provision in Act 1897, for "articles of glass, cut, * * * or otherwise ornamented, decorated, or ground." U. S. v. D. S. Hesse & Bro. (C. C. 1905) 141 Fed. 492.

Glass ornamented or decorated lamp shades and chimneys held dutiable, under Act 1897, as articles of glass, ornamented or decorated, and not as all glass or manufactures of glass "not specially provided for." Stern Bros. v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 260.

Siphon bottles for mineral waters, having private names, trade-marks, and directions etched ornamentally upon them, not for the purpose of identifying the wares of the importers, but for sale to persons who may want them so decorated for their own use, held dutiable, under paragraph 90, Act 1894, as ornamented or decorated glassware. Koscherak v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 524.

13. Thermo bottles.—It is not shown that the goods (thermo bottles) consist of the ordinary articles recognized as containers for holding or transporting merchandise. They are a product which, while still known as bottles, and while blown, are in a class by themselves, and, so far as the record discloses, fall without the provisions of paragraph 97, Act 1909, and within those of paragraph 98, there being an entire absence of proof to overcome the presumption arising in favor of the action of the collector. Stegemann, Jr., v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 26.

85. Unpolished, cylinder, crown, and common window glass, not exceeding one hundred and fifty square inches, 7/8 of 1 cent per pound; above that, and not exceeding three hundred and eighty-four square inches, 1 cent per pound; above that, and not exceeding seven hundred and twenty square inches, 1⅛ cents per pound; above that, and not exceeding one thousand two hundred square inches, 1½ cents per pound; above that, and not exceeding two thousand four hundred square inches, 1⅞ cents per pound; above that, 2 cents per pound: Provided, That unpolished, cylinder, crown, and common window glass, imported in boxes, shall contain fifty square feet, as nearly as sizes will permit, and the duty shall be computed thereon according to the actual weight of glass.

Common window glass.—Disks of glass used in the manufacture of auto goggles held, under Act 1909, not so far advanced by processes of manufacture as to acquire a name, character, and use different from common window glass, and not dutiable as coquil glasses. U. S. v. American Thermo-Ware Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 21; U. S. v. American Thermo Ware Co. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 9.

Microscopic slides.—Small rectangular pieces of common window glass, used for microscope slides, are dutiable as "common window glass, not exceeding ten by fifteen inches square," and not as "articles of glass cut," since the term "cut" applies to work done on the surface of the glass to produce a form or property, and not to simple cutting to size. Fox v. Cadwalader (C. C. 1889) 42 Fed. 209.

86. Cylinder and crown glass, polished, not exceeding three hundred and eighty-four square inches, 3 cents per square foot; above that, and not exceeding seven hundred and twenty square inches, 4 cents per square foot; above that, and not exceeding one thousand four hundred and forty square inches, 7 cents per square foot; above that, 10 cents per square foot.

87. Fluted, rolled, ribbed, or rough plate glass, or the same containing a wire netting within itself, not including crown, cylinder, or common window glass, not exceeding three hundred and eighty-four square inches, ½ cent per square foot; all above that, 1 cent per square foot; and all fluted, rolled, ribbed, or rough plate glass, weighing over one hundred pounds per one hundred square feet, shall pay an additional duty on the excess at the same rates herein imposed: Provided, That all of the above plate glass, when ground, smoothed, or otherwise obscured, shall be subject to the same rate of duty as cast polished plate glass unsilvered.

Plate glass.—Small squares and circles of glass with edges beveled and polished held not dutiable as cast polished plate glass unsilvered.* See paragraph 84.

Plate glass, which has passed through the various processes of manufacture up to and including the process of grinding and smoothing on both sides, in which state it is an unfinished product in the manufacture of polished plate glass, held dutiable under Act 1883, which includes "porcelain and Bohemian glass, chemical glassware, painted glassware, stained glass, and all other manufactures of glass or of which glass shall be the component material of chief value, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act," and not under the same schedule as "cast polished plate glass, unsilvered." U. S. v. Semmer (C. C. 1890) 41 Fed. 324.

88. Cast polished plate glass, finished or unfinished and unsilvered, or the same containing a wire netting within itself, not exceeding three hundred and eighty-four square inches, 6 cents per square foot; above that, and not exceeding seven hundred and twenty square inches, 8 cents per square foot; all above that, 12 cents per square foot.

89. Cast polished plate glass, silvered, cylinder and crown glass, silvered, and looking-glass plates exceeding in size one hundred and forty-four square inches, shall be subject to a duty of 1 cent per square foot in addition to the rates otherwise chargeable on such glass unsilvered: Provided, That no looking-glass plates or glass silvered, when framed, shall pay a less rate of duty than that imposed upon similar glass of like description not framed, but shall pay in addition thereto upon such frames the rate of duty applicable thereto when imported separate.

90. Cast polished plate glass, silvered or unsilvered, and cylinder, crown, or common window glass, silvered or unsilvered, polished or unpolished, when bent, ground, obscured, frosted, sanded, enameled, beveled, etched, embossed, engraved, flashed, stained, colored, painted, ornamented, or decorated, shall be subject to a duty of 4 per centum ad valorem in addition to the rates otherwise chargeable thereon.

Bent glass.—The testimony in this case establishes without contradiction that the parabolic mirrors of the importation are cast, polished plate glass, silvered, and bent. They were dutiable with their frames, if any there were, as provided by paragraphs 103 and 104, Act 1909. General Electric Co. v. U. S. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 528.

Bent disks of glass used in the manufacture of auto goggles held not so far advanced by process of manufacture as to acquire a name, character, and use different from common window glass bent. U. S. v. American Thermo-Ware Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 21; U. S. v. American Thermo-Ware Co. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 9.

Cast polished plate glass.—Cast polished plate glass, silvered and beveled, from which looking glasses are made, held dutiable at 6 cents a square foot, and also to an additional duty of 10 per cent. ad valorem, under paragraphs 116, 118, Act 1890, and not dutiable under paragraph 116 only, as "looking glass plates." Herrman v. U. S. (C. C. 1894) 62 Fed. 149.

Colored glass.—Cylinder crown or common window glass which has been either colored throughout when melted or colored on the outside by flashing held, under Act 1890, subject to the additional duty on glass colored, and not dutiable as stained or painted glass windows. Bache v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 81 Fed. 162, 26 C. C. A. 325, affirming judgment (C. C. 1896) 77 Fed. 603.

Cut glass.—Glass tumblers, with bottoms smoothed by cutting or grinding, or with engraved sides, are subject, under July 30, 1846 (9 Stat. 42), to a duty of 40 per cent. as "glass cut," and not to a duty of 30 per cent. as "glass tumblers, plain, moulded, or pressed, not cut or punted." Binns v. Lawrence (1851) 53 U. S. (12 How.) 9, 13 L. Ed. 871.

Cylinder glass polished.—The provision in paragraph 107, Act 1897, for an additional duty of 5 per cent. ad valorem on "cylinder * * * glass, * * * when * * * beveled * * * or otherwise ornamented or decorated," is applicable to the "cylinder glass, * * * polished," that is enumerated in paragraph 102 of said act. Riegelman v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 127 Fed. 493.

91. Spectacles, eyeglasses, and goggles, and frames for the same, or parts thereof, finished or unfinished, 35 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

"Or parts thereof."—Avoiding what would be a conflict between paragraphs 108 and 109 in the tariff act of 1897, the words "or parts thereof" in the former paragraph must be taken to refer not to spectacles, eyeglasses or goggles, but to the frames for these. U. S. v. American Thermo-Ware Co. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 9.

Spectacles, eyeglasses, and goggles.—From the use of the words "spectacles, eyeglasses, and goggles" in paragraph 105, Act 1909, and "spectacles and eyeglasses" only, goggles being omitted, in paragraph 577, it may be reasonably inferred that Congress understood goggles to be different things from spectacles or eyeglasses and deliberately refrained from making material for them dutiable under paragraph 577. Bache & Co. v. U. S. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 507.

92. Lenses of glass or pebble, molded or pressed, or ground and polished to a spherical, cylindrical, or prismatic form, and ground and polished plano or coquill glasses, wholly or partly manufactured, strips of glass, not more than three inches wide, ground or polished on one or both sides to a cylindrical or prismatic form, including those used in the construction of gauges, and glass slides for magic lanterns, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Construction in general.—Construction of this paragraph with the preceding one, see paragraph 91.

Coquil glasses.—Disks of glass used in the manufacture of auto goggles held not dutiable as coquil glasses. See paragraph 85.

Lenses ground "and" polished.—It is necessary that lenses should be both ground and polished in order to be brought within the provision of Act 1897 for "lenses * * * ground and polished to a spherical, cylindrical or prismatic form"; and where they have been brought to such form by molding they are not within that provision. U. S. v. Robinson (C. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 968.

Lenses of glass.—Rough lenses, see paragraph 494.

A patent portrait lens, used as a part of a photographic camera, consisting of eight single lenses arranged in pairs and mounted in metal, which constitutes but a small part of the value of the whole, the complete articles being commercially known as lenses, held dutiable, under Act 1894 as "lenses of glass," and not as "optical instruments." E. & H. T. Anthony & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 90 Fed. 802.

Prismatic form.—In Act 1897 the provision for strips of glass ground or polished to "prismatic form" held not limited to strips so ground that a side in itself forms a prism, but includes also strips that fulfill the functions of a prism, as where there are ground in one side fine parallel longitudinal incisions forming prisms. U. S. v. Ashcroft Mfg. Co. (1910) 176 Fed. 736, 100 C. C. A. 281, affirming judgment (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 449.

Slides.—Glass slides held dutiable as toys. See paragraph 342.

93. Opera and field glasses, optical instruments and frames and mountings for the same; all the foregoing not specially provided for in this section, 35 per centum ad valorem.

Opera glasses.—Pearl opera glasses dutiable as manufacture of mother of pearl, see paragraph 369.

Opera glasses, composed of metal tubes covered with polished mother of pearl, and held together by a metal framework, were dutiable at 45 per cent. ad valorem, as "manufactured articles composed in part of metal," under Schedule C of the act of 1883, although the shell was of greater value than the other component materials; and they could not properly be classed as "shells, whole or parts of," under Schedule N, or as "articles composed of shell, metal, and glass in which shell is the component of chief value," under R. S. § 2499, as amended by the act of 1883. Seeberger v. Schlesinger (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 729, 731, 152 U. S. 581, 38 L. Ed. 560, modifying judgment Schlesinger v. Seeberger (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 872, and overruling U. S. v. Manassee (1893) 56 Fed. 828, 6 C. C. A. 155.

Opera glasses held dutiable under Act 1883 as "articles composed in part of metal," and not as nonenumerated articles. Aloe v. Churchill (C. C. 1890) 44 Fed. 50.

Opera glasses, composed of metal, glass, and pearl or shell, in which the pearl or shell is the component of chief value, held dutiable at 25 per cent. ad valorem (Heyl's Dig. pt. 2, p. 32); but, when the metal and pearl or shell are of equal value, they were dutiable at 45 per cent. ad valorem, as a manufacture of copper not otherwise provided for (Heyl's Dig. pt. 2, p. 13, cl. 216). Young v. Spalding (C. C. 1885) 24 Fed. 87.

Optical instruments.—Azimuth mirrors, sextants, and octants held not dutiable, as optical instruments. See paragraph 167.

Magic lanterns for children held not dutiable as optical instruments. See paragraph 342.

Portrait lens held not dutiable as optical instrument. See paragraph 92.

94. Surveying instruments, telescopes, microscopes, photographic and projection lenses, and frames and mountings for the same, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Surveyors' compasses. — Surveyors' compasses do not come within the meaning of "philosophical instruments," but are more properly "mathematical instruments." Manasse v. Spalding (C. C. 1885) 24 Fed. 86.

95. Stained or painted glass windows, or parts thereof, and all mirrors, not exceeding in size one hundred and forty-four square inches, with or without frames or cases; incandescent electric-light bulbs and lamps, with or without filaments; and all glass or manufactures of glass or paste or of which glass or paste is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 30 per centum ad valorem.

Manufactures of glass.—Buttons of glass and fish scales held not dutiable as manufactures of glass. See paragraph 339.

Cords, fringes, tassels, and braids in chief value of metal held not dutiable as manufactures of glass. See paragraph 167.

Paste pearls held not dutiable as manufactures of glass. See paragraph 357.

Pins with glass head held not dutiable as manufactures of glass. See paragraph 158.

Spectacle lenses held not dutiable as manufacture of glass. See paragraph 494.

Watch enamel held not dutiable as manufacture of glass. See paragraph 493.

Glass beads strung together and colored in imitation of precious stones held dutiable under Act 1890 as manufactures of glass, and as imitations of precious stones not set. U. S. v. E. A. Morrison & Son (1900) 21 Sup. Ct. 195, 179 U. S. 456, 45 L. Ed. 275.

Spectacles made of glass and steel are not subject to a duty of 45 per cent., under Act June 30, 1864, § 3 (13 Stat. 202), as a manufacture of steel, or of which steel shall be a component part not otherwise provided for, but under section 9, which fixes a duty of 40 per cent. on pebbles for spectacles and all manufactures of glass, or of which glass shall be a component material not otherwise provided for. Arthur v. Sussfield (1877) 96 U. S. 128, 24 L. Ed. 772.

Articles in chief value of blown glass, but in part of other glass or other material, held not "blown glassware" in Act 1897, but dutiable as manufactures of glass. U. S. v. Heil Chemical Co. (1910) 178 Fed. 537, 102 C. C. A. 47.

Crude, incomplete articles of glass, known as "blanks," produced by blowing glass into a mold, which are suitable only to be placed in the hands of glass cutters for further manufacture into finished articles, held not "blown glassware" in Act 1897, but dutiable under the provision for "all glass or manufactures of glass." U. S. v. Durand (1905) 137 Fed. 382, 69 C. C. A. 566, affirming judgment (C. C. 1903) 127 Fed. 624.

Merchandise, consisting of glass disks of various colors and sizes, colored and cut in imitation of precious stones, held dutiable under Act 1883 as "compositions of glass or paste, when not set," and not as "articles of glass, cut, engraved, painted, colored," etc. U. S. v. Popper (1895) 66 Fed. 51, 13 C. C. A. 325.

Hat trimmings composed of black glass and wire, the glass being the component of chief value, and made in imitation of jet, held dutiable, under Act 1890 as "manufactures of glass," instead of as "manufactures of jet," though they are commercially known as "jet goods." Goldberg v. U. S. (1894) 61 Fed. 91, 9 C. C. A. 380, affirming In re Goldberg (C. C. 1893) 56 Fed. 818.

Thermometers and lactoscopes, composed chiefly of blown glass, but in part of other materials, held not dutiable under Act 1897, as "blown glassware," but as "manufactures * * * of which glass * * * is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for." Eimer & Amend v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 439.

Molded glass articles, consisting of spatulas and solid rods, held dutiable under Act 1897, as "manufactures * * * of which glass * * * is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for." Id.

Black hat ornaments, composed of metal and black glass, made to resemble jet, held under Act 1897, not articles commonly known as jewelry, but millinery trimmings dutiable either as manufactures of glass or as articles made wholly or in part of metal, not specially provided for, depending upon whether or not the glass is the component material of chief value. A. Bader & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 541.

Trimming made of glass beads, silvered, and also of tinsel and cotton, commercially known as "steel trimmings" or "steel bead trimmings," held dutiable either as "articles or manufactures of glass," or as "manufactures of metal, metal chief value," and not as "bead ornaments," nor as "manufactures of metal not otherwise specifically provided for." Loewenthal v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 91 Fed. 644.

Narrow cotton trimming, covered with black glass beads, known in trade as "jet headings or trimmings" or "imitations of jet," held dutiable as "manufactures and imitations of jet," under Act 1883, and not as "bead ornaments." Id.

Atomizers, consisting of ornamented glass vessels, with metal and rubber tops which are essential parts of the articles, the glass being the most valuable component, held dutiable under Act 1894 as manufactures of glass, and not as articles of glass or glass bottles, under paragraphs 88–90. Borgfeldt v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 78 Fed. 809.

Oval glass blanks blown in molds, to be finished by cutting into dishes for table use, held dutiable as "manufactures of glass," under Act 1894, and not as "glassware," under paragraph 88. U. S. v. Fensterer (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 148; U. S. v. Louis Hinsberger Cut Glass Co. (C. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 645.

Glass beads, strung, and glass ornaments, similar to beads, but without holes for stringing, held dutiable as manufactures of glass, under Act 1890, and not as glass beads, loose, unthreaded, or unstrung. Morrison v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 77 Fed. 605.

Imitations of pearls, consisting of hollow glass beads with wax inserted, giving an appearance like pearls, strung, and not capable of being set, held dutiable as manufactures of glass, under Act 1890, and not as "imitations of precious stones, composed of paste or glass, not set." Id.

A finding of the general appraisers, supported by evidence, that glass beads, threaded on strings, were strung beads, dutiable as "manufactures of glass," under Act 1890, and not as "glass beads, loose, unthreaded, or unstrung," should be sustained. In re Steiner (C. C. 1894) 66 Fed. 726.

Pins of different sizes, having iron or steel shanks from 1½ to 6 inches in length, with more or less ornamental glass heads, some polished and some of a dull black, the articles being commercially known as "lace pins," "hat pins," and "bonnet pins," the glass heads of some of the bonnet pins being in the form of sprays or sprigs, held dutiable as manufactures of glass under Act 1890, and not as "pins, metallic." In re Goldberg (C. C. 1893) 53 Fed. 1015.

Certain so-called "jet trimmings," being ornamental articles manufactured from black glass and iron, glass being the material of chief value, held properly dutiable as "manufactures of glass," under Act 1890, and not as "manufactures of jet," or of which jet is the component material of chief value. In re Goldberg (C. C. 1893) 56 F. 818, judgment affirmed Goldberg v. U. S. (1894) 61 Fed. 91, 9 C. C. A. 380.

The term "aigrette" embraces not only the feather of the heron or egret, but also tufts of precious stones worn on the headdress of men and women. The glass aigrettes of the importation are not to be deemed artificial flowers, either because of their name or of the effect they are intended to produce. They are in chief value of glass and fall within the provisions of paragraph 109, Act 1909, as manufactures in chief value of glass. Judkins & McCormick Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 112.

The merchandise here is composed of window glass, but it is cut to form and shape and is adapted and designed for use alone as parts in the making of goggles, so removing it from the classification and assessment as made. Such of these glasses as are not colored are held as dutiable under paragraph 109, Act 1909; and while those colored would seem dutiable under paragraph 98, no claim having been made thereunder, the judgment as to these is affirmed. American Thermo-Ware Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 218.

This glass might probably be regarded as a manufacture from waste, but it is not itself waste in the proper sense of the term. It was dutiable as a manufacture of glass under paragraph 109, Act 1909. Chrystal v. U. S. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 489.

Small imitation diamonds, rubies, and other precious stones set in metal claws that hold the stones in position and that are used as the proof shows chiefly for dress trimming are dutiable as manufactures of glass under Act 1909. U. S. v. American Bead Co. (1913) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 509.

Technically "jet goods" are not, of course, imitation jet, but where the record discloses the importer, the collector, and the board of general appraisers all considered the importation an imitation jet it could not be properly assessed as jet, and was rightly held to be dutiable as imitation jet under paragraph 109, Act 1909. U. S. v. Sheldon & Co. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 283. See, also, Same v. Beierle (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 457.

Mirrors.—Mirror plates, not framed, but intended to be put in frames or cases, held dutiable as mirrors, under paragraph 102 of Act 1894. Wiederer v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 78 Fed. 809.

Table mirrors, known as "mirror plateaus" or "circles," made of plate glass, silvered, beveled, and framed, in circular form, held not dutiable under Act 1883, as a "manufacture of glass," but dutiable at a square-foot duty according to measurement. In re Maddock (C. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 219.

Pocket imitation leather goods holding small mirrors and combs, or pencils and memorandum tablets held dutiable as mirrors. U. S. v. Metropolitan Aluminum Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 224.

Paste.—Buttons of paste held not dutiable as manufactures of paste. See paragraph 339.

The provision in Act 1897 for manufactures of "paste" includes only the form of paste which is a variety of glass, and does not embrace articles made from rice paste. Morimura Bros. v. U. S. (1909) 169 Fed. 279, 94 C. C. A. 555.

Articles in the form of buttons having a metal shank and back, and set with a cluster of imitation diamonds, commercially known as paste, the paste being the component material of chief value, and the articles not being commercially known as buttons nor as jewelry held dutiable under Act 1894, as manufactures of paste, etc., and not as "buttons of glass." U. S. v. Marshall Field & Co. (1898) 85 Fed. 862, 29 C. C. A. 458.

Tariff legislation having distinguished between glass and form of it known as paste, articles in chief value of paste, cut, held not within Act 1897, for goods in chief value of cut "glass," but dutiable as manufactures of "paste." U. S. v. New York Merchandise Co. (C. C. 1909) 167 Fed. 684, judgment affirmed (1910) 174 Fed. 1022, 98 C. C. A. 638.

Rhinestones, composed of metal and paste, the latter being the more valuable component, which are merely used to decorate and ornament women's outer apparel, held dutiable as manufactures of paste, under Act 1897. B. Blumenthal & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 135 Fed. 254, judgment affirmed (1905) 144 Fed. 384, 75 C. C. A. 322.

Millinery or hat ornaments composed chiefly in value of paste, in the form of so-called "Rhinestones," their remaining material being metal backs and frames to hold the paste stones, held dutiable under Act 1890 as manufactures of paste, as articles of jewelry. Worthington v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 90 Fed. 797.

Barettes made of base metal and set with imitation jet are not dutiable as "jewelry," but are dutiable as manufactures of paste under Act 1909. U. S. v. Beierle (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 457.

Stained or painted window glass.—Cylinder, crown or common window glass which has been either colored throughout when melted or colored on the outside by flashing held not dutiable as stained or painted window glass. See paragraph 90.

Under Act 1890 stained glass windows containing representations of saints and biblical subjects and imported in fragments for the use of a convent held not exempt from duty as "paintings" specially imported in good faith for the use of any society or institution established for religious purposes, but dutiable as "stained or painted window glass and stained or painted glass windows." U. S. v. Perry (1892) 13 Sup. Ct. 26, 27, 146 U. S. 71, 36 L. Ed. 890.

96. Fusible and glass enamel, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per centum ad valorem; opal or cylinder glass tiles or tiling, 30 per centum ad valorem.

97. Marble, breccia, and onyx, in block, rough or squared only, 50 cents per cubic foot; marble, breccia, and onyx, sawed or dressed, over two inches in thickness, 75 cents per cubic foot; slabs or paving tiles of marble or onyx, containing not less than four superficial inches, if not more than one inch in thickness, 6 cents per superficial foot; if more than one inch and not more than one and one-half inches in thickness, 8 cents per superficial foot; if more than one and one-half inches and not more than two inches in thickness, 10 cents per superficial foot; if rubbed in whole or in part, 2 cents per superficial foot in addition; mosaic cubes of marble or onyx, not exceeding two cubic inches in size, if loose, 20 per centum ad valorem; if attached to paper or other material, 35 per centum ad valorem.

Marble in block.—Marble cut into blocks simply for convenience in transportation is not dutiable as manufactured marble. Act 1832. U. S. v. Wilson (D. C. 1838) Fed. Cas. No. 16,736.

Breccia.—The provisions of Act 1909, construed in pari materia show a purpose to classify breccia and marble alike for dutiable purposes; to make them, whenever in similar conditions, dutiable at the same rate. "Marble," too, and "breccia in blocks" are more specific terms than "minerals crude or not advanced in value or condition," and moreover, according to the rule, where there are two provisions applicable, the one carrying the higher rate must be applied, breccia is held to be dutiable by similitude as marble. Jackson v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 70.

Hauteville stone.—Hauteville stone held by the Circuit Court of Appeals in the Bockman Case dutiable as marble, and not limestone. See paragraph 99.

Hauteville and other like stones being a granular substance, capable of a high degree of polish and susceptible of use for decorative purposes, held, under Act 1897, not limestones, but marble. U. S. v. Jackson (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 25.

Istrian stone or marble.—Istrian stone or marble, quarried in Istria, some 10 miles from Trieste, held dutiable under Act 1894, as "marble of all kinds," and not as "limestone," etc. Fisher v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 759; U. S. v. Jackson (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 25.

Mexican onyx.—Mexican onyx held dutiable as "onyx," rather than as "marble," under Act 1897. Blochman Banking Co. v. Blake (C. C. 1909) 168 Fed. 572,

So-called "Mexican onyx," a mineral consisting chiefly of carbonate of lime and certain impurities, used in ornamental and interior decoration as marble, held dutiable as "marble in block," under Act 1890, and not free of duty as a "crude mineral." Mexican Onyx & Trading Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 732.

"Mexican onyx" not being a chalcedony or onyx proper, as defined in mineralogy, but being a carbonate of lime, containing a small proportion of carbonate of magnesia and ferrous oxides, and having the other characteristics of marble in respect of texture, hardness, and capacity for being worked and polished, held "marble," within Act 1883, Batterson v. Magone (C. C. 1891) 48 Fed. 289.

Mosaic cubes.—Pieces of marble less than an inch in length and breadth, and pasted on paper in the form of blocks, or loose in bags, and intended to be imbedded in cement, so as to form a mosaic pavement, are dutiable at $1.10 per cubic foot, as marble paving tiles, under Act 1890, and not as manufactures of marble not specially provided for. U. S. v. Davis (1893) 54 Fed. 147, 4 C. C. A. 251.

Small cubes or half cubes, some manufactured from veined marble and some of marble not veined, made from waste marble, partly by hand and partly by machinery, sawed on one face, and suitable to be laid in cement for certain ordinary kinds of mosaic floors or pavements, but not for fine work, held dutiable, those of veined marble, as "veined marble," under Act 1883, and those of marble not veined, by similitude to "marble paving tiles." In re Herter Bros. (C. C. 1891) 50 Fed. 72, judgment reversed (1892) 53 Fed. 913, 4 C. C. A. 107; Baumgarten v. Magone (C. C. 1891) 50 Fed. 69.

98. Marble, breccia, onyx, alabaster, and jet, wholly or partly manufactured into monuments, benches, vases, and other articles, or of which these substances or either of them is the component material of chief value, and all articles composed wholly or in chief value of agate, rock crystal, or other semiprecious stones, except such as are cut into shapes and forms fitting them expressly for use in the construction of jewelry, not specially provided for in this section, 45 per centum ad valorem.

Jet.—Hat trimmings of black glass and wire, glass being chief value, held not dutiable as jet goods. See paragraph 95.

Jet trimmings, glass being material of chief value, held not dutiable as manufactures of jet. See paragraph 95.

So-called jet goods held not dutiable as jet. See paragraph 95.

The tariff act defined the meaning of "jet" as covering only the mineral substance of that name; especially with reference to Schedule N, Tariff Ind. (paragraph 458, Act 1883), which provided for "jet, manufactures and imitations of," the provision for imitations of jet being omitted in the act of 1890; and congress used the word "jet" with the same meaning in the act of 1890 that it had in the act of 1883, referring only to the mineral jet and manufactures thereof. In re Goldberg (C. C. 1893) 56 Fed. 818, judgment affirmed Goldberg v. U. S. (1894) 61 Fed. 91, 9 C. C. A. 380.

Manufactures of agate.—Cut agate for use as settings for jewelry held not dutiable as manufacture of agate. See paragraph 357.

Pieces of agate to be used as scale bearings held dutiable as precious stones advanced in value. See paragraph 357.

Pieces of agate which have been cut, polished, and grooved to fit them for specific use as scale bearings held dutiable under Act 1897 as manufactures of agate, and not as precious stones advanced in condition or value and not set. U. S. v. Albert Lorsch & Co. (1907) 158 Fed. 398, 86 C. C. A. 34 (reversing judgment [C. C. 1907] 152 Fed. 591); Smith v. Computing Scale Co. (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 890.

Where Congress, having provided in general terms for a group of articles, which includes many different species, as "precious stones," selects by name one of those species and prescribes that manufactures of that particular species shall be dutiable at a different rate, as "manufactures of agate, not specially provided for," it has so clearly indicated its intention to withdraw the article from the general group as soon as it becomes a completed manufacture that the absence of the limiting clause, "not specially provided for," from the group provision, is not particularly significant. U. S. v. Albert Lorsch & Co. (1907) 158 Fed. 398, 86 C. C. A. 34, reversing judgment (C. C. 1907) 152 Fed. 591.

Manufactured articles made from agate or onyx, such as handles for penholders, knives, and shoe and glove hooks, paper weights, etc., are subject to the same rate of duty imposed by paragraph 480 of the tariff act of 1883 on precious stones, under the similitude clause of such act, being identical in "material" with well-known kinds of precious stones, although advanced, by their manufacture into specific commercial articles, beyond the condition of stones. Hahn v. U. S. (1900) 100 Fed. 635, 40 C. C. A. 622, reversing judgment U. S. v. Hahn (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 755.

Articles, such as paper cutters, paper weights, knife handles, and pen or pencil holders or handles, made wholly or chiefly of agate or onyx, held dutiable by similitude to "precious stones cut, but not set," under Act 1890, § 5 (R. S. § 2499), laying on "every nonenumerated article which bears a similitude * * * to any article enumerated" "the same rate of duty which is levied and charged on the enumerated article which it most resembles," etc. Hahn v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 121 Fed. 152.

Agate and tiger-eye stones, cut in parts, and ground into shapes of pen-holder handles and other articles, and known to the trade by the names of "agate penholder handles," "tiger-eye penholder handles," etc., held dutiable under Act 1883 as nonenumerated manufactured articles, and not admissible duty free, as "agate unmanufactured," nor assessable as "precious stones." Hahn v. Erhardt (C. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 519, reversed in Erhardt v. Hahn (1893) 55 Fed. 273, 5 C. C. A. 99.

Manufactures of marble.—Marble cut into block for convenience in transportation held not dutiable as manufactured marble. See paragraph 97.

Manufactures of onyx.—Merchandise invoiced as "onyx columns, vases, and candelabras," and known by dealers in marble and similar material as "onyx marble" or "onyx," and for which no specific duty is provided, held assessable as "manufactures of marble" under the similitude clause. Mandel v. Seeberger (C. C. 1889) 39 Fed. 760.

Marble parts of garden temple.—Marble parts of a temple designed as an ornament for a yard or garden, which are embellished or ornamented with more or less elaborately cut or carved representations of various kinds, there being no claim that they are the professional production of a sculptor, are dutiable, under paragraph 98, Act 1913, as manufactures of marble, and not under paragraph 376 as works of art or sculpture. U. S. v. Downing & Co. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 545.

Rock crystal.—Rock crystal articles held not dutiable as manufactures of rock crystal. See paragraph 357.

Rock crystal is a colorless or nearly colorless transparent quartz, and quartz is not a carbonate of calcium but a dioxide of silicon. U. S. v. Bausch & Lomb Optical Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 416.

Sculptures.—See notes under paragraph 376.

Semiprecious stones.—Small pieces of Ceylon sapphire used as bearings for electrical instruments, etc., held not dutiable as semiprecious stones. See paragraph 81.

99. Freestone, granite, sandstone, limestone, lava and all other stone suitable for use as monumental or building stone, except marble, breccia, and onyx, not specially provided for in this section, hewn, dressed, or polished, or otherwise manufactured, 25 per centum ad valorem; unmanufactured, or not dressed, hewn, or polished, 3 cents per cubic foot.

Notes of Decisions

Building stones.—Hewn lava stone of the importation employed in the construction of chimneys, being used as lining to carry the inner surface of the chimney from the bottom to within 2 feet of the shaft's top held to be a building stone and dutiable as such under Act 1909. U. S. v. Grasselli Chemical Co. (1913) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 486. See, also, Manufacturers' Paper Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 72.

Pieces of granite, ornamented and polished to size, scale, and design, and ready after being cemented or leaded together to be set up, are building or monumental stones and were dutiable as such under Act 1897. Austin v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 510. See, also, Austin, Baldwin & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 144 Fed. 702; Murphy & Co. v. U. S. (1908) 162 Fed. 871, 89 C. C. A. 561; Vantine & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 159 Fed. 289.

Hauteville stone.—Hauteville stone held not limestone. See paragraph 97.

In Act 1897, the term "marble" is used according to its more precise definition as a limestone having a granular and crystalline structure, rather than in its broader sense of being a limestone susceptible of a high polish. Therefore, Hauteville stone, which, though an ornamental, polishable high-grade limestone, is not crystalline, held not dutiable under said provision, but as "limestone." Bockmann v. U. S. (1908) 158 Fed. 807, 86 C. C. A. 67 (reversing judgment [C. C. 1907] 154 Fed. 1000); U. S. v. C. D. Jackson & Co. (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 884.

Istrian stone.—Istrian stone or marble held not dutiable as limestone. See paragraph 97.

Lava stone.—Dressed lava stone for use in wood pulp machine held not dutiable as lava stone. See paragraph 385.

Lava stone held not dutiable as monumental or building stone. See paragraph 81.

Monuments and monumental stone.—Japanese granite lanterns held not dutiable as monumental stone. See paragraph 385.

Act 1897, relating to granite, etc., "and other building or monumental stone," "hewn, dressed or polished," and "unmanufactured or undressed," was intended to cover the general subject of building and monumental stone; and granite monuments imported in sections dressed, ornamented, and polished abroad and ready to be set up and leaded or cemented together are dutiable under said paragraph 118 as "granite * * * dressed." Alexander Murphy & Co. v. U. S. (1908) 162 Fed. 871, 89 C. C. A. 561.

Monuments in sections, consisting of pieces of dressed granite intended to be assembled and erected as monuments without further manipulation, held du-tiable as dressed granite, under Act 1897, and not as articles composed of mineral substances. Austin Baldwin & Co. v. U. S. (1906) 149 Fed. 1022, 79 C. C. A. 531, affirming judgment (C. C. 1906) 144 Fed. 702.

100. Grindstones, finished or unfinished, $1.50 per ton.

101. Slates, slate chimney pieces, mantels, slabs for tables, roofing slates, and all other manufactures of slate, not specially provided for in this section 10 per centum ad valorem.

SCHEDULE C.—METALS AND MANUFACTURES OF

102. Chrome or chromium metal ferrochrome or ferrochromium, ferromolybdenum, ferrophosphorus, ferrotitanium, ferrotungsten, ferrovanadium, molybdenum, titanium, tantalum, tungsten or wolfram metal, and ferrosilicon, and other alloys used in the manufacture of steel, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Alloys experimentally wrought.—Proof that the alloys ferro-chrome, ferro-tungsten, and ferro-vanadium have been experimentally wrought held not to sufficiently show them to be capable of being wrought to enable them to be classified as "unwrought metals" under Act 1897, but dutiable by similitude as ferro-manganese under paragraph 122. E. J. Lavino & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 171 Fed. 245, decree affirmed U. S. v. E. J. Lavino & Co. (1909) 175 Fed. 964, 99 C. C. A. 637, writ of certiorari denied (1910) 30 Sup. Ct. 573, 216 U. S. 618, 54 L. Ed. 640.

Alloys for hardening bronze.—An alloy for hardening bronze held dutiable as mineral substance in a crude state. See paragraph 154.

Ferrochrome and other ferroalloys.—The provision in Act 1897, par. 183, for "unwrought metals," does not include ferroalloys which though capable of being wrought into different forms and shapes, are not to any extent shown to be imported to be themselves wrought into useful articles, but are generally used for imparting certain qualities to steel in the process of its manufacture. U. S. v. E. J. Lavino & Co. (1909) 175 Fed. 964, 99 C. C. A. 637, affirming decree E. J. Lavino & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 171 Fed. 245, and writ of certiorari denied (1910) 30 Sup. Ct. 573, 216 U. S. 618, 54 L. Ed. 640.

Under Act 1897 ferro-chrome ferromolybdenum, ferro-tungsten, and ferrovanadium held not dutiable as metals unwrought. U. S. v. Roesseler v. Hasslacher Chemical Co. (1905) 137 Fed. 770, 70 C. C. A. 346.

Ferrochrome held dutiable under Act 1894, by reason of its similarity in use, as ferromanganese, and not as a manufactured article not enumerated or provided for. U. S. v. Dana (1900) 99 Fed. 433, 39 C. C. A. 590.

Ferrochrome held not dutiable under Act 1897 as a metal "unwrought," it being obtained from chrome ore by a blast furnace process, the same as that by which pig iron is made from iron ore. Dana v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 933.

Tungsten ore, or wolfram.—Tungsten ore, or wolfram, held dutiable under paragraph 183, Act 1897, as "metallic mineral substances in a crude state," and not exempt under Free List, par. 614, as "minerals, crude, or not advanced in value or condition by refining or grinding, or by other process, not specifically provided for," nor dutiable as a "raw or unmanufactured article not enumerated or provided for." Hempstead v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 256.

103. Muck bars, bar iron, square iron, rolled or hammered, round iron, in coils or rods, bars or shapes of rolled or hammered iron not specially provided for in this section, 5 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Bar iron.—The words "bar iron," in paragraph 123, Act 1897, which fixes the duty on such iron of certain dimensions, and the words "iron bars," as used in the last proviso of paragraph 124, which fixes the duty at a different and uniform rate on "all iron bars in the manufacture of which charcoal is used as fuel," must be held to mean the same thing, in the absence of evidence showing that the term "bar iron" had a commercial meaning at the date of the passage of the act, and the two paragraphs must be construed together. As so construed, bar iron in the manufacture of which charcoal is used as fuel, of whatever dimensions, is dutiable under the proviso. Milne v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 410.

Where bar or bolt iron has been changed by subsequent manufacture, it ceases to be subject to duty as such, although it may not have become a new and distinct manufacture, having a new name or use. U. S. v. Sarchet (D. C. 1832) Fed. Cas. No. 16,224.

Muck bars.—Muck bars, produced by converting pig iron into wrought iron in the puddling furnace, and then rolling the wrought iron through a set of rolls, from which it comes in the form known as "muck bars," held dutiable under Act 1897 as "bar iron," and not as "steel in all forms and shapes not specially provided for," nor as "iron in * * * forms less finished than iron bars and more advanced than pig iron." Moorhead Bro. & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 127 Fed. 779.

Rolled and hammered iron.—Swedish iron nail rods should be classified as a description of "rolled and hammered iron not otherwise provided for," and not as "bar iron, rolled or hammered, comprising flats less than three-eighths of an inch or more than two inches thick, or less than one inch or more than six inches wide." Worthington v. Abbott (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 562, 124 U. S. 434, 31 L. Ed. 494, affirming judgment Abbott v. Worthington (C. C. 1884) 20 Fed. 495.

104. Beams, girders, joists, angles, channels, car-truck channels, TT, columns and posts or parts or sections of columns and posts, deck and bulb beams, sashes, frames, and building forms, together with all other structural shapes of iron or steel, whether plain, punched, or fitted for use, or whether assembled or manufactured, 10 per centum ad valorem.

Structural shapes.—Where steel parts have been assembled and united into complete window sashes, they have been too far advanced in manufacture to permit their inclusion within Act 1897 as "structural shapes of iron or steel * * * fitted for use." Ackerson v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 303, judgment affirmed (1910) 178 Fed. 1003, 101 C. C. A. 416.

105. Boiler or other plate iron or steel, and strips of iron or steel, not specially provided for in this section; sheets of iron or steel, common or black, of whatever dimensions, whether plain, corrugated or crimped, including crucible plate steel and saw plates, cut or sheared to shape or otherwise, or unsheared, and skelp iron or steel, whether sheared or rolled in grooves, or otherwise, 12 per centum ad valorem.

Plate steel.—Thin checkered steel plates, adapted for use in construction of floors for boiler rooms, held not dutiable as plate steel. See paragraph 110.

Plate steel sheared.—Steel plates cut at a slight variation from a right angle held not dutiable as boiler or other plate iron sheared, etc. See paragraph 110.

Saw plates.—Cold-rolled untempered steel strips held not dutiable as saw plates. See paragraph 110.

The provision in Act 1897, par. 141, for "steel circular saw plates," includes plates that resemble circular saw plates in size, shape, general finish, and general quality of steel, though imported for other uses. Hermann Boker & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 168 Fed. 573.

An article enumerated according to its use as "saw plates" includes articles intended for other uses having the qualities and characteristics of the article designated. Id.

A strip of high-grade steel, 50 feet long by 8 inches wide, fitted by its composition to be used only for making saws, and which is commercially known as a "saw plate," held dutiable as such under paragraph 122, Act 1894, and not under paragraph 116, as "band steel," or under paragraph 124, as "sheet steel in strips." Belcher v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 91 Fed. 975.

106. Iron or steel anchors or parts thereof; forgings of iron or steel, or of combined iron and steel, but not machined, tooled, or otherwise advanced in condition by any process or operation subsequent to the forging process, not specially provided for in this section, 12 per centum ad valorem; antifriction balls, ball bearings, and roller bearings, of iron or steel or other metal, finished or unfinished, and parts thereof, 35 per centum ad valorem.

Anchors.—Construction of terms "anchor iron," "anchors," "straight, bent, and turned links," "cables and parts thereof." U. S. v. Thirty-One Boxes and Packages of Imported Articles (D. C. 1833) Fed. Cas. No. 16,465a.

Ball bearings.—Act 1897, par. 135, does not include such distinctively finished articles as ball bearings in the provision for "steel in all forms and shapes." Maldonado & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 170, judgment affirmed (1910) 176 Fed. 737, 100 C. C. A. 282.

These articles are so far finished when imported as to indicate per se their ultimate use, and their shape and condition unfit them commercially for any other than this use. The words "finished or unfinished, and parts thereof," paragraph 106, Act 1913, apply to finished or unfinished ball bearings, and also to parts of finished or unfinished ball bearings. The importations were properly assessed under that paragraph. Norma Co. of America v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 13.

Forgings of iron or steel.—Iron hooks used in the manufacture of feeders for wicker cards in a carding machine held not dutiable as forgings, etc. See paragraph 167.

Machined steel articles held not dutiable as forgings. See paragraph 167.

Scythes, grass hooks, and carpenters' pincers held not dutiable as forgings, etc. See paragraph 167.

Drawplates and wortles forged from the ingot through various stages and reaching the final shape in which they were delivered to the consumer, the adjusting processes to which they were necessarily subjected being merely incidental to the common use of drawplates and wortles, held "forgings of steel," under paragraph 127, Act 1897, and not articles of steel wholly or partly manufactured. Newman v. U. S. (1907) 159 Fed. 123, 86 C. C. A. 511 (affirming judgment U. S. v. C. Newman Wire Co. [C. C. 1907] 152 Fed. 488); Newman-Andrew v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 4.

In Act 1897, the words forgings of whatever "degree or stage of manufacture" relate only to different stages of the forging process, not extending beyond the completion of that process; and forms that, after being subjected to the final forging process, are further advanced into completed articles practically ready for use, such as axles, piston rods, etc., are removed from said provision into that for manufactured metal in paragraph 193. U. S. v. Thomas Prosser & Son (C. C. 1910) 177 Fed. 569.

So-called machined forgings, being such as in addition to the forging process have been subjected to a machining process wholly or partly complete, held not within Act 1897, for "forgings * * * of whatever degree or stage of manufacture." Thomas Prosser & Son v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 721, order reversed (1907) 158 Fed. 971, 86 C. C. A. 175.

Comparing paragraph 127, Act 1897, with paragraph 123, Act 1909, and especially taking into view what would appear to be a manifest legislative intention with respect to paragraph 123, as evidenced by its history, a forging is advanced in condition when the burr on the edge of the rough-forged article is removed by passing it over a grindstone, and a hoe rough-forged, but so manipulated, is dutiable under paragraph 123. U. S. v. Anderson & Co. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 350.

Steel piston rods, which have been rough-machined and not further advanced than close forged, remain forgings of steel, under paragraph 127, Act 1897. Prosser & Son v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 550.

The phrase "forgings of iron and steel," as used in Act 1883, includes forgings made of iron and forgings made of steel, and is not limited to articles composed of both iron and steel combined in the same forging. (1888) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 157.

107. Hoop, band, or scroll iron or steel not otherwise provided for in this section, and barrel hoops of iron or steel, wholly or partly manufactured, 10 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Cotton ties.—Cotton ties held not dutiable as band hoop and scroll iron. See paragraph 167.

Hoop iron.—Hoop iron subjected to mechanical treatment held not dutiable as hoop iron. See paragraph 167.

108. Railway fishplates or splice bars made of iron or steel, 10 per centum ad valorem.

Worn-out fish plates.—Worn-out fish plates held not dutiable as fish plates. See paragraph 518.

109. All iron or steel sheets, plates, or strips, and all hoop, band, or scroll iron or steel, when galvanized or coated with zinc, spelter, or other metals, or any alloy of those metals; sheets or plates composed of iron, steel, copper, nickel, or other metal with layers of other metal or metals imposed thereon by forging, hammering, rolling, or welding; sheets of iron or steel, polished, planished, or glanced, by whatever name designated, including such as have been pickled or cleaned by acid, or by any other material or process, or which are cold rolled, smoothed only, not polished, and such as are cold hammered, blued, brightened, tempered, or polished by any process to such perfected surface finish or polish better than the grade of cold rolled, smoothed only; and sheets or plates of iron or steel, or taggers iron or steel, coated with tin or lead, or with a mixture of which these metals, or either of them is a component part, by the dipping or any other process, and commercially known as tin plates, terne plates, and taggers tin, and tin plates coated with metal, and metal sheets decorated in colors or coated with nickel or other metals by dipping, printing, stenciling, or other process, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Articles of metal enameled.—Mythological paintings on enameled copper held not dutiable as articles of metal enameled. See paragraph 652.

Corrugated iron sheets galvanized.—Corrugated iron sheets galvanized held not dutiable under the terms of this paragraph. See paragraph 167.

Metal plates welded together.—A thin plate of iron or steel, common or black, three-eighths of an inch thick, on which a thin sheet of nickel or copper of the same dimensions has been laid and then subjected to a process of hot rolling to weld the metals together, held not sheet iron or steel; and since in thickness it exceeds No. 10 wire gauge, it was not dutiable under either paragraph 126 or paragraph 131, Act 1897, but under paragraph 193 of that act as "manufactures of metal." Boker v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 180 Fed. 959; Boker v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 162.

Steel strips plated with nickel.—Steel strips plated with nickel held not dutiable as steel sheets or plate coated, etc. See paragraph 167.

Terne tin.—"Terne tin" in strips formed of short plates locked together, and coated, held dutiable as "terne tin," and not as articles or manufactures of tin. Act July 14, 1862. Bruce v. Murphy (C. C. 1872) Fed. Cas. No. 2,047.

Tin plates.—Under Act 1890, "finished gunstocks with locks and mountings" are dutiable at 45 per cent. ad valorem, under paragraph 215, as "manufactures, articles, or wares not specially enumerated," "composed wholly or in part of iron, steel," etc., and the fact that the finished gun barrels are imported separately by another firm, under an arrangement with the importer of the stocks with intent that they shall be brought together here, does not render the importation dutiable at the higher rate prescribed by paragraph 170 for all double-barreled, sporting, breech-loading shotguns, when it does not appear that the stocks had ever formed part of completed guns in Europe. U. S. v. Schoverling (1892) 146 U. S. 76, 13 Sup. Ct. 24, 36 L. Ed. 893, affirming (C. C. 1891) 45 Fed. 349, following Robertson v. Gerdan (1889) 132 U. S. 454, 10 Sup. Ct. 119, 33 L. Ed. 403, and distinguishing Falk v. Robertson (1890) 137 U. S. 225, 11 Sup. Ct. 41, 34 L. Ed. 645.

The term "sheets * * * commercially known as tin plates," in Act 1897, par. 134, means rectangular sheets, and does not include small disks. Shallus v. U. S. (1908) 162 Fed. 653, 89 C. C. A. 445, reversing decree (C. C. 1907) 155 Fed. 213.

"Tin plates" are not included in R. S. § 2503, under the terms "metals not herein otherwise provided for," or "manufactures of metals." May v. Simmons (C. C. 1880) 4 Fed. 499.

110. Steel bars, and tapered or beveled bars; mill shafting; pressed, sheared, or stamped shapes, not advanced in value or condition by any process or operation subsequent to the process of stamping; hammer molds or swaged steel; gun-barrel molds not in bars; all descriptions and shapes of dry sand, loam, or iron molded steel castings, sheets, and plates; all the foregoing, if made by the Bessemer, Siemens-Martin, open-hearth, or similar processes, not containing alloys, such as nickel, cobalt, vanadium, chromium, tungsten or wolfram, molybdenum, titanium, iridium, uranium, tantalum, boron, and similar alloys, 8 per centum ad valorem; steel ingots, cogged ingots, blooms and slabs, die blocks or blanks; billets and bars and tapered or beveled bars; pressed, sheared, or stamped shapes not advanced in value or condition by any process or operation subsequent to the process of stamping; hammer molds or swaged steel; gun-barrel molds not in bars; alloys used as substitutes for steel in the manufacture of tools; all descriptions and shapes of dry sand, loam, or iron molded castings, sheets, and plates; rolled wire rods in coils or bars not smaller than twenty one-hundredths of one inch in diameter, and steel not specially provided for in this section, all the foregoing when made by the crucible, electric, or cementation process, either with or without alloys, and finished by rolling, hammering, or otherwise, and all steels by whatever process made, containing alloys such as nickel, cobalt, vanadium, chromium, tungsten, wolfram, molybdenum, titanium, iridium, uranium, tantalum, boron, and similar alloys, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Pressed or stamped shapes.—Steel shapes ready for conversion into pitchers, knobs, handles, spouts, etc., held not dutiable as pressed, sheared, or stamped shapes. See paragraph 167.

Act 1897, par. 135, relating to "pressed or stamped shapes," includes steel stampings which have been pressed or stamped into an openwork or raised pattern and are used in manufacturing ornaments, etc. U. S. v. A. & H. Veith (C. C. 1909) 169 Fed. 665.

Articles were for use as frames of automobiles. Paragraph 121, Act 1909, enumerates as dutiable thereunder articles which have been subjected to the more common processes in steel working, namely, hammering, rolling, or casting. Paragraph 131 provides for "pressed, sheared, or stamped shapes." The goods here are admittedly "pressed." Paragraph 131 applies. Kuyper & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 175.

Rolling, hammering, etc.—Pile protectors held advanced in condition beyond hammering, rolling, etc. See paragraph 167.

Sheared shapes of steel.—As in steel plates changed from the usual form by being cut at a slight variation from a right angle, for a special purpose and not for evasion, held that they are provided for in Act 1897, par. 135, enumerating "sheared * * * shapes" of steel and "plates and steel in all forms and shapes not specially provided for" rather than in paragraph 126, enumerating "boiler, or other plate iron or steel * * * sheared or unsheared." U. S. v. Vandegrift (1905) 142 Fed. 448, 73 C. C. A. 564, affirming decree In re F. B. Vandegrift & Co. (C. C. 1905) 139 Fed. 790.

Sheets and plates of steel in general.—Ball bearings held not dutiable as steel in all forms and shapes. See paragraph 106.

Cast steel, machined, worked, and forming a combination of parts ready for use in a cement mill, held not dutiable as sheets. See paragraph 167.

Drawplates and wortles held not dutiable as plates. See paragraph 106.

Drill rods held not dutiable as steel in all forms and shapes. See paragraph 113.

Horseshoe calks held not dutiable as steel in all forms and shapes. See paragraph 167.

Muck bars held not dutiable as steel in all forms and shapes not specially provided for. See paragraph 103.

The provision in Act 1897, par. 135, for "plates and steel in all forms and shapes," does not include plates that have been manufactured into some other completed commercial article, such as a so-called engraved steel table, consisting of a rectangular slab incised with a pattern to be impressed upon plate glass. Theodore W. Morris & Co. v. U. S. (1909) 174 Fed. 656, 98 C. C. A. 410 (affirming judgment [C. C. 1909] 169 Fed. 666); Morris v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 140 Fed. 774.

Crop ends of Bessemer steel rails are taxable at 45 per cent. ad valorem, under R. S. § 2502, Schedule C, as "steel not specially enumerated or provided for," and not under the amendment (Act March 3, 1883, c. 121, § 6) imposing a duty of 20 per cent. ad valorem on "mineral substances in a crude state, and metals unwrought, not specially enumerated or provided for." Robertson v. Perkins (1889) 129 U. S. 233, 9 Sup. Ct. 279, 32 L. Ed. 686, reversing (C. C. 1887) 29 Fed. 842.

Thin, checkered, steel plates about 12 by 5 feet, specially adapted for use in the construction of floors for boiler rooms, held dutiable as steel "plates," under Act 1897, par. 135, rather than as "plate * * * steel," under paragraph 126. Hill v. R. D. Wood & Co. (1908) 163 Fed. 51, 89 C. C. A. 635.

Misnomer alone cannot make a tariff provision applicable; and the appellation of "drawplates" cannot bring articles within the enumeration of "plates," which are not plates in form, nor commercially known as plates, and to which such name has clung inappropriately because plates were formerly used for the same purpose. Newman v. U. S. (1907) 159 Fed. 123, 86 C. C. A. 511.

Steel in strips, varying from ½ inch to 6 inches in width, and from No. 10 wire gauge to No. 36 in thickness, mostly in coils exceeding 100 feet in length, produced by rolling a billet or bar cold, and not by shearing from commercial sheet steel of greater width, and known commercially as "steel strips," or "cold-rolled steel," held dutiable under Act 1894, par. 122 which provides for "steel in all forms and shapes," and not under paragraph 124, as "sheet steel in strips," regardless of its value. Boker v. U. S. (1903) 124 Fed. 59, 59 C.

C. A. 425, reversing judgment (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 1015.

"Diamond steel," which is made by crushing small steel ingots, after they have been submitted to a special treatment, to various degrees of fineness, from the size of a buckwheat kernel to an impalpable grain, and which is used in sawing stone and for like purposes, was dutiable under the provision for "steel in all forms and shapes," in paragraph 122, Act 1894, and not as a manufactured article not specially provided for, under paragraph 177. U. S. v. Binney (1896) 82 Fed. 992, 27 C. C. A. 347.

Act 1897, pars. 135, 208, relating to steel shapes, do not include in that provision articles so far completed as to be practically ready for use. U. S. v. Thomas Prosser & Son (C. C. 1910) 177 Fed. 569.

The provision for steel plates in Act 1897, par. 135, while not covering all steel articles that are known as plates, includes so-called monogram dies and plates used in engraving, which, besides being called plates, are within the dictionary definitions of "plates." U. S. v. Sellers (C. C. 1908) 160 Fed. 518, judgment affirmed (1909) 166 Fed. 1022, 91 C. C. A. 334.

Sheets of iron or steel valued at more than 3 cents per pound held not covered by paragraph 142, Act 1890, but dutiable, according to value, under paragraph 215, as manufactures of metal not specially provided for, and not subject to the additional rate imposed by paragraph 144 when pickled or cleaned; such paragraph being applicable only to sheets dutiable by gauge under paragraph 142. Hampton v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 109.

Steel strips flattened from round steel wire, not smaller than 13 wire gauge, and cut into lengths, not valued at above three cents per pound, held dutiable under paragraph 122, Act 1894, covering "steel in all forms and shapes valued above two and two-tenths cents and not above three cents per pound," and not under paragraph 124, as articles manufactured from round steel wire. U. S. v. H. Boker & Co. (C. C. 1898) 90 Fed. 804.

"Plate" both in common parlance and in commerce is used to designate an article distinct from "drawplate," being in fact the thing out of which "drawplates" are made. The term "plate" is not generic, including "drawplate" as a species. Newman-Andrew v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 4.

Flat pieces of steel, 3 inches by one-eighth of an inch in thickness, and 30 or more feet in length, and known commercially as "flat rods," held not flat wire rods and were dutiable not as flat wire rods, but under the clause "steel in all forms and shapes not specially provided for," paragraph 135, Act 1897. Athenia Steel & Wire Co. v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 494.

111. Steel wool or steel shavings, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Steel wool.—In Act 1897, par. 137, the provision for "articles manufactured from * * * wire," cannot be restricted to manufactured articles which contain the round wire in its integrity; and "steel wool," consisting of filaments shaved from steel wire, and constituting a finished commercial article, is embraced in said provision. Buehne Steel Wool Co. v. U. S. (1907) 159 Fed. 107, 86 C. C. A. 297, reversing decree U. S. v. Buehne Steel Wool Co. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 93, and writ of certiorari denied U. S. v. Buehne Steel Wool Co. (1908) 28 S. Ct. 763, 210 U. S. 435, 52 L. Ed. 1137.

Steel wool, consisting of the filaments or shavings produced by passing toothed knives over steel wire, held dutiable under paragraph 135, Act 1897, as "steel in all forms and shapes," rather than under paragraph 193, as articles composed of steel "not specially provided for." Buehne v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 772, judgment affirmed Buehne Steel Wool Co. v. U. S. (1906) 145 Fed. 1021, 74 C. C. A. 680.

112. Grit, shot, and sand made of iron or steel, that can be used as abrasives, 30 per centum ad valorem.

Iron sand.—Iron sand held dutiable as manufacture of metal. See paragraph 167.

Iron sand, a completed article manufactured from cast iron and steel scrap, held not dutiable as "unwrought metals," under Act 1897. Harrison Supply Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 155.

113. Rivet, screw, fence, nail, and other iron or steel wire rods, whether round, oval, or square, or in any other shape, and flat rods up to six inches in width ready to be drawn or rolled into wire or strips, all the foregoing in coils or otherwise, including wire rods and iron or steel bars, cold rolled, cold drawn, cold hammered, or polished in any way in addition to the ordinary process of hot rolling or hammering, not specially provided for in this section, 10 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That all round iron or steel rods smaller than twenty one-hundredths of one inch in diameter shall be classed and dutiable as wire.

Drill rods.—Polished steel rods made by Stubbs, in England, commonly and commercially known as "drill rods," or "Stubbs steel," which are in fact used for making drill rods, being the standard for making the best drills, held dutiable under paragraph 124, Act 1894, as drill rods, and not under paragraph 122, covering steel in all forms and shapes not specially provided for. U. S. v. Frasse (C. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 483.

Steel bars or rods cold rolled.—In paragraph 141, Act 1897, relating to steel strips "cold rolled, * * * brightened, * * * or polished by any process to such perfected surface finish, or polish better than the grade of cold-rolled, smoothed only," these words were employed by Congress with the meaning theretofore given them by customs authorities under earlier acts, and they, therefore, do not include strips whose only polish or brightening is incidentally acquired during the cold-rolling, and which were not included in similar former provisions. U. S. v. Crucible Steel Co. (1907) 154 Fed. 1005, 83 C. C. A. 679 (affirming decree [C. C. 1906] 147 Fed. 537); Id. (1905) 137 Fed. 384, 69 C. C. A. 576 (affirming judgment Crucible Steel Co. v. U. S. [C. C. 1904] 132 Fed. 269).

Act 1897, par. 141, provides, for "iron * * * rods * * * cold drawn * * * in addition to the ordinary process of hot rolling," a duty "in addition to the rates * * * on * * * rods * * * which are hot rolled." Held, as to wire screw rods which have been cold drawn after being hot rolled, that they are subject to this additional duty, regardless of the fact that such articles are specially enumerated in another paragraph as "wire screw rods," and that cold drawing is a necessary part of the process of making such rods. U. S. v. George Nash & Co. (1907) 158 Fed. 401, 85 C. C. A. 511, reversing judgment George Nash & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 152 Fed. 573.

Steel in the form of strips, 3 to 3½ inches wide, less than 25-1000 of an inch thick, and more than 100 feet long, which were cold rolled to a surface finish, held not subject to the additional duty imposed on "steel bars or rods, of whatever shape or section, which are cold rolled," by Act 1890. In re Wetherell (C. C. 1894) 60 Fed. 267, judgment reversed (1894) 65 Fed. 987, 13 C. C. A. 264.

Swedish iron nail rods.—Swedish iron nail rods should be classified as a description of "rolled and hammered iron not otherwise provided for," and not as "bar iron, rolled or hammered, comprising flats less than three-eighths of an inch or more than two inches thick, or less than one inch or more than six inches wide. Worthington v. Abbott (1888) 124 U. S. 434, 8 Sup. Ct. 562, 31 L. Ed. 494, affirming (C. C. 1884) 20 Fed. 495.

The language of paragraph 113, Act 1913, is comprehensive, including, as it does, "rivet, screw, fence, nail, and other iron or steel wire rods," The testimony shows the goods were sold as iron wire rods and are used in this country as such. The record sustains the conclusion of the board that the merchandise was iron wire rods and dutiable under paragraph 113. Swedish Iron & Steel Corporation v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 225. See, also, Athenia Steel & Wire Co. v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 494.

114. Round iron or steel wire; wire composed of iron, steel, or other metal, except gold or silver, covered with cotton, silk, or other material; corset clasps, corset steels, dress steels, and all flat wires and steel in strips not thicker than number fifteen wire gauge and not exceeding five inches in width, whether in long or short lengths, in coils or otherwise, and whether rolled or drawn through dies or rolls, or otherwise produced; telegraph, telephone, and other wires and cables composed of metal and rubber, or of metal, rubber, and other materials; iron and steel wire coated by dipping, galvanizing, or similar process with zinc, tin, or other metal; all other wire not specially provided for in this section and articles manufactured wholly or in chief value of any wire or wires provided for in this section; all the foregoing 15 per centum ad valorem; wire heddles and healds, 25 per centum ad valorem; wire rope, 30 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Articles made from coated wire.
2. Cables.
3. Coated wire.
4. Coiled wire articles.
5. Covered wire.
6. Flat steel wire.

7. Staples.
8. Steel strips.
9. Steel wool.
10. Wire made of nickel alloy.

1. Articles made from coated wire.—Act 1897, par. 137, imposes a duty on steel wire smaller than No. 16 wire gauge of 2 cents per pound, with an additional duty of 1¼ cents per pound on articles manufactured from such wire, "and on iron or steel wire coated with zinc, tin, or any other metal two-tenths of 1 cent per pound in addition to the duty imposed on the wire from which it is made." In 1900 the Treasury Department ruled that articles manufactured from steel wire coated were subject to all three of such duties, but shortly thereafter, and in the same year, formally reversed such ruling, and has since uniformly ruled that the additional duty of two-tenths of 1 cent was not to be imposed on articles manufactured from coated steel wire. Held, that in view of the uncertainty of the language of the statute such uniform ruling by the executive department, continued for five years, would be treated as a practical construction of the act, and would not be reversed by the courts. Burditt & Williams Co. v. U. S. (1907) 153 Fed. 67, 82 C. C. A. 201, reversing judgment (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 892.

2. Cables.—A cable used for making connections with a telephone switch board, consisting of 64 wires bound together, which, both individually and in the group, are covered with various materials for insulating and waterproofing purposes, held an "article," within the meaning of the second proviso in paragraph 137, Act 1897, relating to "articles manufactured from * * * copper wire," and not dutiable under the provision in the same paragraph for "wire not specially provided for, * * * whether uncovered or covered," nor under paragraph 193 of said act, as a manufacture of metal not specially provided for. Salt v. U. S. (1904) 134 Fed. 1021, 68 C. C. A. 442, affirming judgment (C. C. 1903) 127 Fed. 890.

Telegraph cable, composed of iron wire and gutta percha, held dutiable as a manufacture not otherwise provided for, of which iron is the component material of chief value. Act 1861, § 22. U. S. v. United States Tel. Co. (D. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 16,603.

3. Coated wire.—The provision for "coated wire" in Act 1897, held not limited to a process of covering by galvanizing, dipping, or other similar method; and wire, made by inserting an iron wire in a hollow tube of nickel and then drawing the whole wire down until the nickel covering becomes welded to and a part of the iron core, held "coated," within the meaning of the law. Hermann Boker & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 168 Fed. 464, judgment affirmed U. S. v. Herman Boker & Co. (1910) 176 Fed. 730, 100 C. C. A. 276.

4. Coiled wire articles.—The coiling process to which this wire has been subjected has given the wire a new character, name, and use. It is not according to the accepted definition of "wire," "a slender rod, strand, or thread of ductile metal," but is essentially different from this. It has a use as a spring, resulting from the changed form into which the original wire has been permanently converted. It was dutiable as an article manufactured of wire. Boye Needle Co. v. U. S. (1913) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 43.

5. Covered wire.—Silk-covered collar supporters held not dutiable as covered wire. See paragraph 318.

6. Flat steel wire.—Strips of steel, 3 inches wide, from 100 to 250 feet long, and less than $^{25}/_{1000}$ of an inch in thickness, which have been shaped by passing through cold rolls, held dutiable as "flat steel wire, or sheet steel in strips," under paragraph 148, Act 1890. U. S. v. Wetherell (1894) 65 Fed. 987, 13 C. C. A. 264, reversing judgment In re Wetherell (C. C. 1894) 60 Fed. 267.

Merchandise commercially known as "ribbon wire," held not brought within the terms "round iron or steel wire," as used in paragraph 135, Act 1909. Steinhardt & Bro. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 420.

7. Staples.—Wire in U-forms of heavy wire, used in the manufacture of automobile tires were not imported nor are they designed for use as staples, that is, as fasteners. They have been advanced beyond the condition of a staple proper and should not be classified as such. U. S. v. Goodrich Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 200.

8. Steel strips.—Steel strips flattened from round steel wire held not dutiable as articles manufactured from round steel wire. See paragraph 110.

The provision in Act 1897, par. 137, for "sheet steel in strips," does not include long, narrow, thin, cold-rolled steel strips, because they are not sheet steel, nor stripped from sheet steel, nor commercially known as sheet steel in strips. U. S. v. Hermann Boker & Co. (1907) 158 Fed. 396, 86 C. C. A. 32, affirming judgment Hermann Boker & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 174.

Strips of steel, from 6 to 12 millimeters wide, $^{12}/_{100}$ to $^{20}/_{100}$ of a millimeter long, cold rolled, tempered, polished, with edges slightly rounded, which are used for the manufacture of steel tape measures, held dutiable under paragraph 177, Act 1883, as steel strips, and not as "flat steel, No. 39," at 45 per cent. ad valorem, under paragraph 183. Magone v. Vom Cleff (1895) 70 Fed. 980, 17 C. C. A. 549, affirming judgment Vom Cleff v. Magone (C. C. 1893) 57 Fed. 198.

Strips of steel from 1 to 6 inches wide, in coils of 100 feet or more in length, varying in thickness from No. 10 wire gauge to No. 36, and shaped by passing through cold rolls, held, when of sufficient value, dutiable under Tariff Act 1894, par. 124, providing for sheet steel in strips valued above 4 cents per pound; otherwise, under paragraph 122, providing for steel in all forms and shapes not otherwise provided for. Boker v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 1015, judgment reversed (1903) 124 Fed. 59, 59 C. C. A. 425.

Cold-rolled, untempered steel, from 1¼ to 4½ inches wide, and from 500 to 1,500 feet long, which is largely used for making band saws, but not shown to be unfitted in its composition for other uses, held dutiable under paragraph 124, Act 1894, as "sheet steel in strips," and not under paragraph 116, as "band steel not otherwise provided for," or under paragraph 122, as "saw plates." Belcher v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 91 Fed. 975.

Steel in the form of strips 3 to 3½ inches wide, less than 25-1000 of an inch thick, and more than 100 feet long, which were cold rolled to a surface finish, and not cut from wider pieces, held not "sheet steel in strips," within Act 1890, par. 148, for "sheet steel," as commercially understood, is always hot rolled. In re Wetherell (C. C. 1894) 60 Fed. 267, judgment reversed (1894) 65 Fed. 987, 13 C. C. A. 264.

Paragraph 135, Act 1909, held to exhibit certain well-defined changes from previous enactments that dealt with the same subject-matter and was not to be construed according to the practice of the customs or the decisions of law controlling the first enactment. Strouse, Adler & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 184.

9. Steel wool.—Steel wool held dutiable as articles made from wire. See paragraph 111.

10. Wire made of nickel alloy.—Wire made of nickel alloy held dutiable as a manufactured article not specially provided for. See paragraph 167.

115. No article not specially provided for in this section, which is wholly or partly manufactured from tin plate, terne plate, or the sheet, plate, hoop, band, or scroll iron or steel herein provided for, or of which such tin plate, terne plate, sheet, plate, hoop, band, or scroll iron or steel shall be the material of chief value, shall pay a lower rate of duty than that imposed on the tin plate, terne plate, or sheet, plate, hoop, band, or scroll iron or steel from which it is made, or of which it shall be the component thereof of chief value.

Disks.—Small disks produced in the manufacture of tin held not dutiable as articles wholly or partly manufactured from tin. See paragraph 167.

Tagger's tin.—Under R. S. §§ 2503, 2504, certain articles imported in 1874, and known as "tin in plates," "terne plates," and "tagger's tin," held to be dutiable only at 90 per cent. of the rate of 15 per cent. ad valorem. Arthur v. Dodge (1879) 101 U. S. 34, 25 L. Ed. 948, affirming (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 3,950.

116. No allowance or reduction of duties for partial loss or damage in consequence of rust or of discoloration shall be made upon any description of iron or steel, or upon any article wholly or partly manufactured of iron or steel, or upon any manufacture of iron or steel.

117. All metal produced from iron or its ores, which is cast and malleable, of whatever description or form, without regard to the percentage of carbon contained therein, whether produced by cementation, or converted, cast, or made from iron or its ores, by the crucible, Bessemer, Clapp-Griffith, pneumatic, Thomas-Gilchrist, basic, Siemens-Martin, or open-hearth process, or by the equivalent of either, or by a combination of two or more of the processes, or their equivalents, or by any fusion or other process which produces from iron or its ores a metal either granular or fibrous in structure, which is cast and malleable, excepting what is known as malleable-iron castings, shall be classed and denominated as steel.

Malleable.—The term "malleable," as applied to steel dutiable under the tariff laws, means "capable of being drawn out and extended by beating; capable of extension by hammering; reducible to laminated form by beating." Farris v. Magone (C. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 845.

Steel.—Billets of metal produced from iron or its ores, containing 20 per cent. of carbon and smaller percentages of silicon, manganese, phosphorus, and sulphur, which is granular in structure, malleable, and which, at any stage of the process of production, has been cast, held within the definition of "steel," in Act 1890, par. 150. Gary v. Cockley (1895) 65 Fed. 497, 13 C. C. A. 17.

118. Anvils of iron or steel, or of iron and steel combined, by whatever process made, or in whatever stage of manufacture, 15 per centum ad valorem.

119. Automobiles, valued at $2,000 or more, and automobile bodies, 45 per centum ad valorem; automobiles valued at less than $2,000, 30 per centum ad valorem; automobile chassis, and finished parts of automobiles, not including tires, 30 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Automobiles.—When an automobile is imported without tires, tires contained in the same crate as the car are not dutiable separately; but the whole is dutiable as an entirety, under the provision in Act 1897 relating to "manufactures wholly or in part of metal," though other tires may be substituted for those imported with the car. U. S. v. Auto Import Co. (1909) 168 Fed. 242, 93 C. C. A. 456.

120. Bicycles, motor cycles, and finished parts thereof, not including tires, 25 per centum ad valorem.

121. Axles, or parts thereof, axle bars, axle blanks, or forgings for axles, whether of iron or steel, without reference to the stage or state of manufacture, not otherwise provided for in this section, 10 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That, when iron or steel axles are imported fitted in wheels, or parts of wheels, of iron or steel, they shall be dutiable at the same rate as the wheels in which they are fitted.

Notes of Decisions

Axles.—The commercial character of importations does not depend upon the mere fact that they were or were not finished axles, but whether they were understood and recognized in commerce and the business of trade as axles, by those engaged in such trade, at the time of the passage of the law. Ross v. Fuller (C. C. 1883) 17 Fed. 224.

122. Blacksmiths' hammers, tongs, and sledges, track tools, wedges, and crowbars, whether of iron or steel, 10 per centum ad valorem.

Track tools.—Steel picks, spike hammers, and clawed bars, held to be "track tools," and dutiable as such under Act 1883. Procter v. Spalding (C. C. 1885) 26 Fed. 610.

123. Nuts or nut blanks, and washers, 5 per centum ad valorem; bolts of iron or steel, with or without threads or nuts, or bolt blanks, finished hinges or hinge blanks, 10 per centum ad valorem; spiral nut locks and lock washers, whether of iron or steel, 30 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Washers.—The authorities concur in the conclusion that lock washers or nut locks, such as these of the importation, intended for use on automobiles, are an evolution of the common washer, and they are properly to be designated "washers." The importation held dutiable as such under paragraph 162, Act 1909, and not as manufactures of steel not specially provided for. U. S. v. Motor Car Equipment Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 77.

124. Card clothing not actually and permanently fitted to and attached to carding machines or to parts thereof at the time of importation, when manufactured with round iron or untempered round steel wire, 10 per centum ad valorem; when manufactured with tempered round steel wire, or with plated wire or other than round iron or steel wire, or with felt face, or wool face, or rubber face cloth containing wool, 35 per centum ad valorem.

Card clothing.—Card clothing attached to iron flats held not dutiable as card clothing. See paragraph 167.

125. Cast iron pipe of every description, cast-iron andirons, plates, stove plates, sadirons, tailor's irons, hatter's irons, and castings and vessels wholly of cast iron, including all castings of iron or cast-iron plates which have been chiseled, drilled, machined, or otherwise advanced in condition by processes or operations subsequent to the casting process but not made up into articles or finished machine parts; castings of malleable iron not specially provided for in this section; cast hollow ware, coated, glazed, or tinned, 10 per centum ad valorem.

Castings.—Nickel-plated cast-iron eccentrics held not dutiable as castings. See paragraph 167.

The term "cashings," in Act 1897, par. 148, does not include articles which have been advanced in condition by work bestowed on them after they were cast. John Bromley & Sons v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 399.

The provision for "castings" in Act 1897, par. 148, does not include cast-iron machinery parts, which have been drilled, bored, planed, fitted, and finished. Lehigh Mfg. Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 596.

Iron castings, intended to form parts of an ice machine, but which require to be put together after their arrival, and other parts added, in order to make a complete machine held "castings of iron" within Act 1883. Julius Winkelmeyer Brewing Co. v. Whitney (C. C. 1887) 29 Fed. 780; Wolff v. Spalding (C. C. 1885) 26 Fed. 609.

Parts of textile machinery, made ready for immediate attachment to the machines for which they had been severally designed, held iron castings advanced in condition, as defined by paragraph 147, Act 1909. U. S. v. Leigh & Butler (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 304. See, also, Jackson Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 475.

Hollow ware.—See, also, paragraph 134.

Spelter ware held not dutiable as cast hollow ware. See paragraph 167.

"Hollow ware," as used in Act 1883, means cast iron ware. Strausky v. Erhardt (C. C. 1892) 52 Fed. 808.

Legislation, and the judicial interpretation of this, establishes the intent of congress to preserve in the tariff act of 1909 the distinction long maintained between glazed cast-iron goods and other glazed iron wares, and to subject glazed iron hollow ware and glazed cast-iron hollow ware to different rates of duty. Sittig v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 281.

Make-up.—The imported articles were finished castings, molded, drilled, and machined; but to make the machine complete rubber gaskets, filter cloths, bronze fittings, cocks, etc., are required. They are not adapted to the final use for which they were made; they are not "made up into articles." Lang v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 362.

"To make up" invariably expresses a process of aggregating or assembling different units into a composite entirety. A made-up article is one which has been composed by uniting together various parts. U. S. v. Leigh & Butler (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 304.

Plates.—Cast-iron disks subjected to a process of manufacture held not plates. See paragraph 167.

126. Chain or chains of all kinds, made of iron or steel, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per centum ad valorem; sprocket and machine chains, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Bicycle chains.—Steel chains used for bicycle gearing held dutiable under the provision in Act 1883, for "chain or chains of all kinds, made of iron or steel," etc., and not as "manufactures, articles, or wares, not specifically enumerated or provided for." (1890) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 527.

Chain links.—To authorize the entry of small pieces of bolt iron under the name of "chain links," it must be proved that they have been previously known in commerce by that name. U. S. v. Sarchet (D. C. 1832) Fed. Cas. No. 16,224.

Shot chains.—So-called "shot chains" of iron or steel, consisting of iron or steel balls fastened together with swivels or links, held not dutiable, under paragraph 216 of Act 1883, as an article composed wholly or in part of iron, steel, etc., but under paragraph 171, under the description, "chains of all kinds made of iron or steel" (according to their diameter). In re Lorsch (C. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 221.

127. Lap-welded, butt-welded, seamed, or jointed iron or steel tubes, pipes, flues, or stays; cylindrical or tubular tanks or vessels, for holding gas, liquids, or other material, whether full or empty; flexible metal tubing or hose, not specially provided for in this section, whether covered with wire or other material, or otherwise, including any appliances or attachments affixed thereto; welded cylindrical furnaces, tubes or flues made from plate metal, and corrugated, ribbed, or otherwise reenforced against collapsing pressure, and all other iron or steel tubes, finished, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Copper tubing or hose.—Generally speaking, "pipe" implies an article tubular in form and rigid, while "tubing" implies an article that is flexible. Paragraph 151, Act 1909, provides in precise language for flexible metal tubing or hose, and this being a more specific, definite enumeration than "copper pipes," the importation was dutiable not under paragraph 176 of that act, but under paragraph 151. Hensel v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 221.

Furnaces.—The provision for "furnaces," in Act 1897, par. 152, does not include so-called arched Purves furnaces, consisting simply of corrugated steel cylinders or tubes, which are not furnaces in fact, but are intended to be used in the manufacture of furnaces. Such articles held dutiable under the provision in the same paragraph for boiler tubes or flues. Thomas v. F. B. Vandegrift & Co. (1908) 162 Fed. 645, 89 C. C. A. 437, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 591.

"Purves' ribbed boiler flues" held dutiable as "boiler flues," under Act 1890, par. 157, and not under par. 215, as manufactures not specially enumerated, composed wholly or in part of iron, steel, or other metal. In re Whitney (C. C. 1892) 53 Fed. 235.

Cylindrical or tubular tanks or vessels.—Steel cylinders, severally 19 feet in length and 4 feet in diameter and 35 feet in length and 8 feet in diameter used as storage tanks for illuminating gas, held "tubes finished," within Act 1897, par. 152. U. S. v. Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne (1909) 168 Fed. 539, 93 C. C. A. 619.

The provision in Act 1897, par. 152, for "steel tubes, finished," held to include bottle-shaped vessels of steel, which are used in the transportation of gas and are about four feet long and eight inches in diameter, with one end permanently closed and the other tapered to a neck. U. S. v. Liquid Carbonic Co. (1908) 160 Fed. 455, 87 C. C. A. 671.

Finding of the board of general appraisers that imports were steel tubes, finished, dutiable under Act 1897, par. 152, held not to be disturbed. Page v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 113 Fed. 1006.

Tubes of wrought steel for holding gas under pressure held dutiable under Act 1894, par. 130, as tubes of steel for "boiler or other tubes," and not as manufactures of steel not otherwise provided for, under paragraph 177. Downing v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 423.

Strong sheet-iron drums, containing binoxide of barium, some barrel-shaped and some tubular, the barrel-shaped ones having in the head an opening closed by a readily removable and replaceable lid, and the tubular one, closed by a cork and sealed by a tin cap the removal of which does not injure the container, the single completed use of which did not destroy them or affect their status as containers, are dutiable under paragraph 127, Act 1913, as "* * * cylindrical or tubular tanks or vessels, for holding gas, liquids, or other material." U. S. v. Bene (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 523. See, also, Same v. Braun Chemical Co. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 57.

Within the meaning of paragraph 127, Act 1913, a barrel-shaped drum may properly be regarded as a cylindrical vessel. U. S. v. Bene (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 523.

Strong sheet-iron drums containing sulphide of sodium, which, when in proper condition, will admit of their contents being removed without destroying them or their usefulness as containers, are dutiable under paragraph 127, Act 1913, as "* * * cylindrical or tubular tanks or vessels, for holding gas, liquids, or other material"; and this tariff status is not affected by their having, since importation, become damaged so that the removal of their contents necessitates their destruction. U. S. v. Geisenheimer & Co. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 520. See, also, Same v. Braun Chemical Co. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 57.

Paragraph 151, Act 1909, imposes a duty upon cylindrical or tubular tanks or vessels for holding gas, liquids, or other material whether full or empty,

This duty is laid upon containers, and not upon the things contained, and this regardless of whether the contents bear specific duties or are free of duty. Colby & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 234. See, also, Merritt v. Stephani (1883) 108 U. S. 106, 2 Sup. Ct. 308, 27 L. Ed. 668; U. S. v. Braun Chemical Co. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 57.

"Cylindrical or tubular tanks or vessels," made and used for "holding gas, liquids, or other material," and "full" when imported, and after they have been emptied of their contents, some are used again in the transportation of crude or refined glycerine and some are sold in competition with similar articles in the domestic market, held dutiable under paragraph 151, Act 1909. Marx & Rawolle v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 94.

In view of the legislative history of the clause and its judicial interpretation, and in view of the common significance of the language employed, the cylindrical containers as described in paragraph 151, § 1, Act 1909, cannot be taken to remove small tin cans with contents of tomatoes and of tomato sauce from the operation of subsection 18 of section 28 of that act, though these tins are cylindrical in shape and they were dutiable ad valorem under said subsection 18. U. S. v. Garramone (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 30.

It would seem "cylindrical or tubular tanks or vessels" appearing in paragraph 151, Act 1909, must be taken to refer to containers made in part at least of metal and of such strong and permanent construction that on being emptied of their contents they might properly be devoted to further similar use and possessing appreciable value for such purposes. Id.

Reviewing in full the history of legislation affecting these containers, cylindrical iron drums used in commerce to convey glycerine are held dutiable under paragraph 151, Act 1909. U. S. v. Marx (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 152.

128. Penknives, pocketknives, clasp knives, pruning knives, budding knives, erasers, manicure knives, and all knives by whatever name known, including such as are denominatively mentioned in this section, which have folding or other than fixed blades or attachments, and razors, all the foregoing, whether assembled but not fully finished or finished; valued at not more than $1 per dozen, 35 per centum ad valorem; valued at more than $1 per dozen, 55 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That blades, handles, or other parts of any of the foregoing knives, razors, or erasers shall be dutiable at not less than the rate herein imposed upon the knives, razors and erasers, of which they are parts. Scissors and shears, and blades for the same, finished or unfinished, 30 per centum ad valorem: Provided further, That all articles specified in this paragraph shall, when imported, have the name of the maker or purchaser and beneath the same the name of the country of origin die-sunk conspicuously and indelibly on the blade, shank, or tang of at least one or, if practicable, each and every blade thereof.

Hair clippers.—Hair clippers held not dutiable as scissors or shears. See paragraph 167.

"Hair clippers" used by barbers in cutting hair close or short should be rated for duty as "cutlery," and charged duty at 35 per cent. ad valorem. Koch v. Seeberger (C. C. 1887) 30 Fed. 424.

Knives with other than fixed blades.—The fact that some of the articles dutiable under paragraph 128, Act 1913, may be put to agricultural uses and that paragraph 391 exempts from duty all agricultural implements creates no irreconcilable conflict. Quirk v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 444. See, also, Powers v. Barney (C. C. 1863) Fed. Cas. No. 11,361.

Knives with folding blades and spring backs, designated as budding and pruning knives, are dutiable under paragraph 128, Act 1913; and are not to be admitted free under paragraph 391 as agricultural implements because they are capable of being put to agricultural uses. Id.

A strip of metal suitable for opening envelopes that has been riveted to the handle of a knife makes of this something other than the ordinary penknife; it remains, however, a knife, with folding or other than fixed blades or attachments under paragraph 152, Act 1909. Silberstein v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 239.

Metal erasers.—Erasers of metal with fixed or rigid blades set into handles of wood or other material are dutiable under paragraph 152, Act 1909. Irwin & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 296.

Parts of knives.—Mother of pearl cut for knife handles held not dutiable as parts of knives. See paragraph 369.

Penknives.—Small knives used as toys held not dutiable as penknives. See paragraph 342.

Pocketknives.—Pocketknives, with all but the scales for the sides of the handles, held dutiable under Act 1897, par. 153, as pocketknives, or parts thereof, partly or wholly manufactured. U. S. v. Silberstein (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 263.

Scissors and shears.—Sheep shears held included within the meaning of the word "cutlery," as used in Act 1883. Simmons Hardware Co. v. Lancaster (C. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 445.

These articles have been brought into a condition where their only practical use or purpose is to be finished as scissors blades, and they are commercially unsuitable for any other purpose. They were properly assessed under the provision for "scissors and shears, and blades for the same, finished or unfinished," in paragraph 152, Act 1909. Redden & Martin v. U. S. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 485.

The definition of "shears" in Knight's American Mechanical Dictionary is accepted as correct: A cutting instrument operating like scissors, but on a larger scale and somewhat differently shaped; the edges of the blades are beveled and the handles adapted for thumb and fingers, respectively, instead of being duplicates. Sheldon v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 109.

129. Sword blades, and swords and side arms, irrespective of quality or use, in part of metal, 30 per centum ad valorem.

Side arms.—A bayonet when in use is affixed to a gun, but is not to be considered a part of the gun, but dutiable as side arms under paragraph 153, Act 1909. American Express Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 312.

Swords.—The provision for "swords" in Act 1897, par. 154, held not to include so-called "bone swords," used as curios, ornaments, etc. Morimura Bros. v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 165 Fed. 64.

130. Table, butchers', carving, cooks', hunting, kitchen, bread, butter, vegetable, fruit, cheese, carpenters' bench, curriers', drawing, farriers', fleshing, hay, tanners', plumbers', painters', palette, artists', and shoe knives, forks and steels, finished or unfinished, without handles, 25 per centum ad valorem; with handles, 30 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That all the articles specified in this paragraph, when imported, shall have the name of the maker or purchaser, and beneath the same the name of the country of origin indelibly stamped or branded thereon in a place that shall not be covered thereafter.

Notes of Decisions

Hunting knives.—A 6-inch knife, with a 5-inch folding blade that when opened fastens with a spring lock, blade and handle measuring 10 inches in length, held dutiable under Act 1897 as a "hunting knife." U. S. v. Borgfeldt (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 255.

Kitchen knives.—Certain knives, used in the kitchen by cooks, held dutiable under Act 1890, par. 167, and not as a manufacture of metal, under paragraph 215. U. S. v. Curley (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 720.

131. Files, file blanks, rasps, and floats, of all cuts and kinds, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Nail files.—Silver handled nail files held not dutiable as files. See paragraph 167.

132. Muskets, air-rifles, muzzle-loading shotguns and rifles, and parts thereof, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Gun stocks.—Gun stocks held dutiable as manufactured articles not specially enumerated. See paragraph 133.

133. Breech-loading shotguns and rifles, combination shotguns and rifles, and parts thereof and fittings therefor, including barrels further advanced than rough bored only; pistols, whether automatic, magazine, or revolving, or parts thereof and fittings therefor, 35 per centum ad valorem.

Gun stocks.—The fact that finished gun barrels are imported separately by another firm, under an arrangement with the importer of the finished stocks with intent that they shall be brought together here, does not render the importation of stocks dutiable at the higher rate prescribed by paragraph 170, Act 1890, for all double-barreled, sporting, breech-loading shotguns, when it does not appear that the stocks had ever formed part of completed guns in Europe. U. S. v. Schoverling (1892) 13 Sup. Ct. 24, 146 U. S. 76, 36 L. Ed. 893, affirming In re Schoverling (C. C. 1891) 45 Fed. 349, following Robertson v. Gerdan (1889) 10 Sup. Ct. 119, 132 U. S. 454, 33 L. Ed. 403, and distinguishing Falk v. Robertson (1890) 11 Sup. Ct. 41, 137 U. S. 225, 43 L. Ed. 645.

Gun barrels and gun stocks, with locks, etc., constituting all the parts of complete breech-loading shotguns, and so adapted to each other in the process of manufacture as to be made into complete shotguns by inserting the barrels into the stocks, held dutiable, when shipped to the same person, on the same vessel, under the tariff act of 1890, as shotguns, and not as manufactures of metal not specially provided for, though the barrels and stocks are separately packed and invoiced. U. S. v. Irwin (1897) 78 Fed. 799, 24 C. C. A. 349.

Parts of rifles.—The provision in Act 1897, par. 157, for "parts of rifles," is not limited to those in a finished condition, but embraces parts, such as rough-bored rifle barrels, advanced to a condition unfitting them for any other use than in connection with rifles. U. S. v. Riga (C. C. 1909) 171 Fed. 783.

Rubber recoil pads.—Rubber recoil pads held not dutiable as parts or fittings of guns. See paragraph 368.

134. Table, kitchen, and hospital utensils or other similar hollow ware composed of iron or steel, enameled or glazed with vitreous glasses; table, kitchen, and hospital utensils or other similar hollow ware composed wholly or in chief value of aluminum; all the foregoing not especially provided for in this section, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Hollow ware.—See, also, paragraph 125, ante.

Spelter ware held not dutiable as hollow ware. See paragraph 167.

Blue and white kitchen utensils, consisting of pots, kettles, saucepans, coffeepots, and similar ware, made of sheet steel, and glazed or enameled, held not dutiable as "hollow ware, coated, glazed, or tinned," under Act 1883, but are "manufactures, articles or wares * * * composed wholly or in part of iron, steel, etc.," under Schedule C, par. 216, of that act. Strausky v. Erhardt (C. C. 1892) 52 Fed. 808.

Legislation and the judicial interpretation thereof establishes the intent of Congress to preserve in the act of 1909 the distinction long maintained between glazed cast-iron goods and other glazed iron wares, and to subject glazed iron hollow ware and glazed cast-iron hollow ware to different rates of duty. Sittig v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 281.

135. Needles for knitting or sewing machines, latch needles, crochet needles, and tape needles, knitting and all other needles not specially provided for in this section, bodkins of metal, and needle cases or needle books furnished with assortments of needles or combinations of needles and other articles, 20 per centum ad valorem; but no articles other than the needles which are specifically named in this section shall be dutiable as needles unless having an eye and fitted and used for carrying a thread.

Needle books.—Paper folders of a flimsy nature held not dutiable as needlecases. See paragraph 555.

Needlecases in which steel needles constitute the element of chief value should be considered as manufactures in chief value of needles, rather than as articles composed in part of steel under Act 1897, par. 193, and as needles are on the free list, and there is no tariff provision for manufacture of needles, such articles are dutiable as unenumerated manufactured articles under section 6. Dieckerhoff, Raffloer & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 151 Fed. 957, judgment affirmed U. S. v. Dieckerhoff, Raffloer & Co. (1908) 160 Fed. 449, 87 C. C. A. 410.

These boxes contain needles in combination with pins, thread, and a thimble. A needlecase is a case of metal or other material to contain needles, and the statute has enlarged the meaning to include other articles required in the use of the needle itself. The goods fall under paragraph 135 as needlecases furnished with assortments of needles or combination of needles and other articles. U. S. v. Poirier & Lindeman (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 239.

Needle books, containing needles, and the like articles, are not dutiable as manufactures in chief value of metal. Paragraph 164, Act 1909, singles them out and establishes a rule for the determination of their dutiable status, and that is according to the chief components included within and going to make up the entirety. The importations were dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles under the provisions of paragraph 480. Steinhardt & Bro. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 361. See, also, Hartranft v. Sheppard (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 920, 125 U. S. 337, 31 L. Ed. 763.

136. Fishhooks, fishing rods and reels, artificial flies, artificial baits, snelled hooks, and all other fishing tackle or parts thereof, not specially provided for in this section, except fishing lines, fishing nets and seines, 30 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That any prohibition of the importation of feathers in this section shall not be construed as applying to artificial flies used for fishing.

Cork floats.—Cork floats held not dutiable as fishing tackle. See paragraph 342.

137. Steel plates engraved, stereotype plates, electrotype plates, halftone plates, photogravure plates, photo-engraved plates, and plates of other materials, engraved for printing, plates of iron or steel engraved or fashioned for use in the production of designs, patterns, or impressions on glass in the process of manufacturing plate or other glass, 15 per centum ad valorem; lithographic plates of stone or other material engraved, drawn, or prepared, and wet transfer paper or paper prepared wholly with glycerin, or glycerin combined with other materials, containing the imprints taken from lithographic plates, 25 per centum ad valorem.

138. Rivets, studs, and steel points, lathed, machined, or brightened, and rivets or studs for nonskidding automobile tires, and rivets of iron or steel, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per centum ad valorem.

139. Crosscut saws, mill saws, pit and drag saws, circular saws, steel band saws, finished or further advanced than tempered and polished, hand, back, and all other saws, not specially provided for in this section, 12 per centum ad valorem.

140. Screws, commonly called wood screws, made of iron or steel, 25 per centum ad valorem.

141. Umbrella and parasol ribs and stretchers, composed in chief value of iron, steel, or other metal, in frames or otherwise, and tubes for umbrellas, wholly or partially finished, 35 per centum ad valorem.

142. Wheels for railway purposes, or parts thereof, made of iron or steel, and steel-tired wheels for railway purposes, whether wholly or partly finished, and iron or steel locomotive, car, or other railway tires or parts thereof, wholly or partly manufactured, 20 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That when wheels for railway purposes, or parts thereof, of iron or steel, are imported with iron or steel axles fitted in them, the wheels and axles together shall be dutiable at the same rate as is provided for the wheels when imported separately.

Steel bicycle rims.—Steel bicycle rims held not dutiable as wheels, etc. See paragraph 167.

Steel tire blooms.—R. S. § 2504, provides that "all manufactures of steel, or of which steel shall be a component part, not otherwise provided for," shall pay duty at "forty-five per cent. ad valorem. But all articles of steel partially manufactured, not otherwise provided for, shall pay the same rate of duty as if wholly manufactured." "Locomotive tires, or parts thereof, three cents per pound." "Steel in any form, not otherwise provided for, thirty per cent. ad valorem." Held, that "steel tire blooms" which had been cast and hammered, and had had a hole swedged in the middle and had been then hammered on the horn of an anvil, expanding the circumference, and on which the rudiments of a flange had been swedged on the outer periphery of the circle, and were all ready to be rolled or spun into the proper size and shape, and finished on a lathe for use as tires of locomotive and car wheels, were manufactures of steel, and subject to the duty of 45 per cent. ad valorem. Chicago Tire & Spring Works Co. v. Spaulding (1886) 6 Sup. Ct. 498, 116 U. S. 541, 29 L. Ed. 720, affirming judgment Chicago Tire & Spring Works Co. v. Spaulding (C. C. 1884) 19 Fed. 412.

143. Aluminum, aluminum scrap, and alloys of any kind in which aluminum is the component material of chief value, in crude form, 2 cents per pound; aluminum in plates, sheets, bars, strips, and rods, 3½ cents per pound; barium, calcium, magnesium, sodium, and potassium, and alloys of which said metals are the component material of chief value, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Aluminum.—Aluminum in coils held not dutiable as sheet aluminum. See paragraph 167.

Blanks cut from aluminum held not dutiable as sheets of aluminum. See paragraph 167.

Reviewing the processes by which aluminum is prepared for market and also the legislation affecting aluminum itself, these disks are found not to be included in any of the terms "plates," "sheets," "bars," "strips," or "rods," as these are employed in paragraph 143, Act 1913; nor is it aluminum in crude form or an alloy thereof under the same paragraph. Guiterman, Rosenfeld & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 514. See, also, Universal Shipping Co. v. Same (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 245.

Sheets.—The term "sheets" is ordinarily applied to a broad general surface, and in paragraph 172, Act 1909, may fairly be said to mean the sheet of the metal made in that form as one of the developments in the process of manufacture, and not intended to include the articles made from such sheets. Universal Shipping Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 245.

144. Antimony, as regulus or metal, and matte containing antimony but not containing more than 10 per centum of lead, 10 per centum ad valorem; antimony oxide, salts, and compounds of, 25 per centum ad valorem.

145. Argentine, albata, or German silver, unmanufactured, 15 per centum ad valorem.

146. Bronze powder, brocades, flitters, and metallics; bronze, or Dutch-metal or aluminum, in leaf, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Flitters.—Flitters held not free of duty as "composition metal," under Act 1897, par. 533, but dutiable as manufactures of metal under paragraph 193. U. S. v. George Meier & Co. (1905) 136 Fed. 764, 69 C. C. A. 421, reversing judgment Geo. Meier & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 472.

Flitters, which are produced by hammering metal clippings into minute flakes, and are used on wall paper, held not dutiable as bronze powder, under paragraph 175, Act 1897, nor as a color or pigment, under paragraph 58, but as manufactures of metal, under paragraph 193 of said act. Baer v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 130 Fed. 391.

147. Copper, in rolled plates, called braziers' copper, sheets, rods, strips, pipes, and copper bottoms, sheathing or yellow metal of which copper is the component material of chief value, and not composed wholly or in part of iron ungalvanized, 5 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Copper in rolled plates.—Rollers used in printing patterns composed wholly of copper held, under Act 1883, dutiable as "copper in rolled plates, * * * and all manufactures of copper, or of which copper shall be a component of chief value," and not as manufactured articles, not specifically enumerated. Magone v. King (1892) 51 Fed. 525, 2 C. C. A. 363.

Copper pipes.—Copper tubing or hose held not dutiable as copper pipes. See paragraph 127.

Copper sheets.—Small copper plates, completely finished for engravers' use, are not within the provision for copper "sheets," in Act 1897, par. 176. B. F. Drakenfeld & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 296, judgment reversed contained in imported lead bullion is to be by official weighing only, and the application of assay to lead bullion under the current treasury regulations for bonded smelters and refiners is without warrant of law. (1902) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 45, affirmed (1903) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 569.

153. Lead dross, lead bullion or base bullion, lead in pigs and bars, lead in any form not specially provided for in this section, old refuse lead run into blocks and bars, and old scrap lead fit only to be remanufactured; lead in sheets, pipe, shot, glaziers' lead, and lead wire; all the foregoing, 25 per centum ad valorem, on the lead contained therein.

Base bullion.—"Base bullion," an intermediate or provisional product in the crude reduction of gold and silver ore, formed by smelting the same with a flux of lead ore or silver lead ore, and which is composed of gold, silver, and lead, held not dutiable, under paragraph 166 Act 1894, covering "lead in pigs and bars, molten and old refuse lead run into blocks and bars, and old scrap lead fit only to be remanufactured," which includes only pure lead in its different forms; nor within the terms of paragraph 165, fixing the duty on lead ores and lead dross and the lead contained in other ores, since it is not an ore; but dutiable as a nonenumerated article "similar" to the ores containing lead as therein described, within the provisions of section 4, in view of the intention evidenced by section 21, that metals in crude form, unless expressly exempted, should be dutiable. In re Guggenheim Smelting Co. (1901) 112 Fed. 517, 50 C. C. A. 374, writ of certiorari denied U. S. v. Guggenheim Smelting Co. (1902) 22 S. Ct. 942, 186 U. S. 485, 46 L. Ed. 1260.

Pig and bar lead.—Pig and bar lead held dutiable under paragraph 166, Act 1894, at one cent per pound on the gross weight of the metal imported, without deduction for loss or wastage in refining; the duty being fixed at the time of entry, and being the same whether the metal is withdrawn before refining, or refined in a bonded smelter. Collector of Customs at Newark v. Balbach Smelting & Refining Co. (C. C. 1897) 81 Fed. 950.

154. Metallic mineral substances in a crude state, and metals unwrought, whether capable of being wrought or not, not specially provided for in this section, 10 per centum ad valorem; monazite sand and thorite; thorium, oxide of and salts of; gas, kerosene, or alcohol mantles treated with chemicals or metallic oxides, 25 per centum ad valorem; and gas-mantle scrap consisting in chief value of metallic oxides, 10 per centum ad valorem.

Alloy.—An alloy in the form of pigs, which is used chiefly in hardening manganese bronze, and which, in order to produce that effect must be melted and mixed with other metals, held dutiable under paragraph 183, Act 1897, as "metallic mineral substances in a crude state, and metals unwrought," rather than under paragraph 193, relating to articles composed of metal, or paragraph 122, by similitude to the "ferromanganese" there enumerated. Thomas v. William Cramp & Sons Ship & Engine Bldg. Co. (1906) 142 Fed. 734, 74 C. C. A. 66, affirming judgment William Cramp & Sons Ship & Engine Bldg. Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 139 Fed. 303.

Without meaning to imply that no alloy is entitled to be called ferromanganese in case its manganese content exceeds in any measure 80 per cent. of the entire article, yet where the manganese is so considerable and the iron and carbon so slight, as in the present importation, the commodity held not to be deemed ferromanganese as that term appears in the law. The importation was properly assessed as metal unwrought, not specially provided for, under paragraph 183, Act 1909. Goldschmidt-Thermit Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 187.

Asphalt mastic.—Asphalt mastic, an article produced by crushing an asphaltum mined or quarried in rough chunks, and by melting and mixing together such crushed asphaltum and a natural mineral bitumen, and by afterwards casting for transportation the mixture so obtained in molds into loaves or cakes, is dutiable at 10 per cent. ad valorem under the provision for "all nondutiable crude minerals, but which have been advanced in value or condition by refining or grinding, or by other process of manufacture, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act," contained in Schedule A, par. 95, Act 1883. Wootton v. Magone (C. C. 1892) 54 Fed. 673.

Metals unwrought.—Alloys experimently wrought held not dutiable as unwrought metals. See paragraph 102.

Ferroalloys held not dutiable as metals unwrought. See paragraph 102.

Iron sand held not dutiable as unwrought metal. See paragraph 112.

In construing the provision in paragraph 183, Act 1897, for "metals unwrought," held, that "unwrought" implies a metal which is capable of being wrought, and not a substance fit only to be used with other ingredients to produce an entirely different and distinct product. U. S. v. Roesseler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. (1905) 137 Fed. 770, 70 C. C. A. 346.

Tungsten ore or wolfram.—Tungsten ore or wolfram held dutiable as metallic mineral substances. See paragraph 102.

Zinc dust.—Zinc dust held not dutiable as a metallic mineral substance in a crude state. See paragraph 624.

155. Nickel, nickel oxide, alloy of any kind in which nickel is a component material of chief value, in pigs, ingots, bars, rods, or plates, 10 per centum ad valorem; sheets or strips, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Construction of paragraph in general.—In construing Act 1897, par. 185, relating to nickel, nickel oxide, and nickel alloy, "in pigs, ingots, bars, or sheets," held, that only nickel in one of the forms enumerated is included. Hermann Boker & Co. v. U. S. (1907) 157 Fed. 1003, 85 C. C. A. 678, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 152 Fed. 589.

Alloys.—Wire made of nickel alloy held not dutiable as an alloy. See paragraph 167.

Nickel alloy, in rods and sheets, which is incapable of practical use without being subjected to further manipulation and manufacture, held dutiable under paragraph 167½ of Act 1894, as an alloy "in which nickel is the component material of chief value," and not under paragraph 177, covering "manufactured articles or wares, not specifically provided for, composed wholly or in part of any metal." Boker v. U. S. (1899) 97 Fed. 205, 38 C. C. A. 114.

Rods and plates of nickel alloy, incapable of practical use without further manipulation or manufacture, held dutiable as alloy in which nickel is the component material of chief value, under paragraph 167½, Act 1894, and not as manufactured articles composed in whole or in part of any metal, not specifically provided for. Boker v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 86 Fed. 119.

Anodes.—Anodes, consisting of nickel plates, held dutiable as manufacture of nickel. See paragraph 167.

156. Pens, metallic, not specially provided for in this section, 8 cents per gross; with nib and barrel in one piece, 12 cents per gross.

157. Penholder tips, penholders and parts thereof, gold pens, fountain pens, and stylographic pens; combination penholders, comprising penholder, pencil, rubber eraser, automatic stamp, or other attachment, 25 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That pens and penholders shall be assessed for duty separately.

Fountain pens.—Fountain pens held not dutiable as penholders. See paragraph 369.

The legislative history of paragraph 187, Act 1909, shows that the several parts of fountain pens are to be distinguished on assessment from fountain pens themselves; that a fountain pen is an ink-holding writing instrument with a pen and complete for use; hence parts of fountain pens were properly assessed under paragraph 464, as manufactures of hard rubber. Schrader & Ehlers v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 180 Fed. 953; Schrader & Ehlers v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 100.

158. Pins with solid heads, without ornamentation, including hair, safety, hat, bonnet, and shawl pins; any of the foregoing composed wholly of brass, copper, iron, steel, or other base metal, not plated with gold or silver and not commonly known as jewelry, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Hairpins.—Iron and steel wire hairpins, which are not specifically enumerated in the act of 1883, held not dutiable as "pins, solid head or other," mentioned in section 2502, Schedule C, of that act, but as "manufactures, articles or wares, not specifically enumerated, * * * composed wholly or in part of iron, steel," etc., as previous tariff acts treated hairpins as distinct from "pins, solid head or other." Robertson v. Rosenthal (1889) 10 Sup. Ct. 120, 132 U. S. 460, 33 L. Ed. 392.

"Metallic."—The word "metallic," in paragraph 170, Act 1894, qualified the whole paragraph; and pins which were not metallic were not within its provisions. H. B. Claflin Co. v. U. S. (C.

C. 1897) 78 Fed. 805, judgment reversed U. S. v. Giese (1897) 83 Fed. 692, 28 C. C. A. 380.

Pins with glass heads.—Pins with glass heads held not dutiable as pins metallic. See paragraph 95.

Black-headed pins held dutiable under paragraph 206 of the act of 1890, as "pins, metallic," and not under paragraph 108, as manufactures of glass, or of which glass is the component material of chief value. Steinhardt v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 92 Fed. 139.

Fancy pins, with metal shafts, and metal, glass, or paste heads, held dutiable under paragraph 206, Act 1890, as "pins, metallic," and not under paragraph 108, as "manufactures of which glass is the component of chief value, not specially provided for." Worthington v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 90 Fed. 797.

Hat and lace pins, having heads of glass or similar material, held dutiable as "metallic" bonnet and lace or belt pins, under Act 1890, par. 206, and not as manufactures of metal, under paragraph 215. U. S. v. Wolff (C. C. 1895) 69 Fed. 327.

"Mourning pins," "hat pins," "bonnet pins," "shawl pins," being articles composed of a steel or hardened-iron shank, having a round or cut head of glass or jet, either polished or dull, held "pins, solid head or other," dutiable under Schedule C of Act 1883, and not as "manufactures, articles, or wares not specially enumerated." Dieckerhoff v. Robertson (C. C. 1890) 44 Fed. 160.

Plated.—Whether paragraph 188 be considered independently or in its relation to other parts of the law, there is no ground either in its legislative history or its administrative construction for going beyond its express terms in fixing its meaning. No commercial designation is shown, and according to the very terms of the paragraph all the hairpins or safety pins of the importation overlaid or coated with precious or base metals were "plated" within those terms. Bloomingdale Bros. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 204.

Safety pins.—"Safety pins," composed of metal and having a shank of about 1¼ inches in length, the point being protected by a shield or guard, also composed of metal, held "pins, solid head or other," dutiable, under Schedule C, Act 1883. Dieckerhoff v. Robertson (C. C. 1890) 44 Fed. 160.

159. Quicksilver, 10 per centum ad valorem. The flasks, bottles, or other vessels in which quicksilver is imported shall be subject to the same rate of duty as they would be subjected to if imported empty.

160. Type metal, and types, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Type metal.—The provision for "types, old," in Act 1897, par. 690, does not include an alloy, containing approximately 85 per cent. of lead, 12 per cent. of antimony, and 3 per cent. of tin and copper, made from the dross of type metal refined and melted with 15 to 20 per cent. of old movable types, and cast in the form of stereotype plates, which were never used as such, but broken into pieces and packed in barrels for importation. Such material is dutiable as "type metal," under paragraph 190. Sapery v. U. S. (1905) 135 Fed. 332, 68 C. C. A. 140.

Roughly smelted lead bullion, imported and deposited in the bonded smelting warehouse of the importer; later refined, precious metals and a percentage of refined lead being extracted and leaving a by-product of lead, antimony, and other substances; this by-product is not to be deemed bullion, but type metal, and when this is withdrawn from the bonded warehouse for domestic consumption it is dutiable under paragraph 191, Act 1909. American Smelting & Refining Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 231.

161. Watch movements, whether imported in cases or not, watch-cases and parts of watches, chronometers, box or ship, and parts thereof, lever clock movements having jewels in the escapement, and clocks containing such movements, all other clocks and parts thereof, not otherwise provided for in this section, whether separately packed or otherwise, not composed wholly or in chief value of china, porcelain, parian, bisque, or earthenware, 30 per centum ad valorem; all jewels for use in the manufacture of watches, clocks, or meters, 10 per centum ad valorem; time detectors 15 per centum ad valorem; enameled dials and dial plates for watches or other instruments, 30 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That all watch and clock dials, whether attached to movements or not, shall have indelibly painted or printed thereon the name of the country of origin, and that all watch movements, and plates, lever clock movements with jewels in the escapement, whether imported assembled or knocked down for reassembling, and cases of foreign manufacture, shall have the name of the manufacturer and country of manufacture cut, engraved, or die-sunk conspicuously and indelibly on the plate of the movement and the inside of the case, respectively, and the movements and plates shall also have marked thereon by one of the methods indicated the number of jewels and adjustments, said numbers to be expressed either in words or in Arabic numerals; and if the movement is not adjusted, the word "unadjusted" shall be marked thereon by one of the methods indicated; and none of the aforesaid articles shall be delivered to the importer unless marked in exact conformity to this direction.

Cases covering watch movements.—Act 1897, par. 191, imposes specific and ad valorem duties on "watch movements, whether imported in cases or not," and then provides that "watch cases and parts of watches" shall pay 40 per cent. ad valorem. Held, that while such paragraph assumed that completed watches, including case and works, would sometimes be imported, it nevertheless imposed duties on the cases separately, and that they were not dutiable as an entirety, under the first half of such paragraph, as "watch movements in cases." Racine v. U. S. (1901) 107 Fed. 111, 46 C. C. A. 171, affirming judgment (C. C. 1899) 99 Fed. 557.

The first part of paragraph 191, Act 1897, imposing upon "watch movements, whether imported in cases, or not," a specific duty, based on the number of jewels, in addition to an ad valorem duty applies only to the movements; and, when imported in cases, such cases are dutiable separately, under the succeeding part of the paragraph. Racine v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 99 Fed. 557.

Under the act of 1897 it was held that "watch movements" included "time-detector movements," and the insertion in paragraph 192, Act 1909, after "watch movements," the words "including time-detectors," plainly adopts that construction. Accordingly the merchandise was not dutiable as entireties, but as assessed under paragraph 192 and 199 of the later act. Chicago Watchman's Clock Works v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 105.

Jewels.—The merchandise here is watch jewels made of reconstructed rubies. They cannot, it would seem, be devoted to any other use or purpose except as jewels for watches. They are the more specifically provided for by paragraph 192, Act 1909. U. S. v. Elgin Nat. Watch Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 336.

Parts of clocks.—The question whether pieces of glass are dutiable as articles of glass, or as parts of clocks, is to be determined by whether their principal or chief use is as parts of clocks, and not by whether that is their exclusive use or exclusive commercial use. Magone v. Wiederer (1895) 16 Sup. Ct. 122, 123, 159 U. S. 555, 40 L. Ed. 258.

Watch movements.—So-called time detectors, used for registering the movements of watchmen, which have a clock mechanism or time indicator, held dutiable under paragraph 191, Act 1897, as "watch movements, whether imported in cases or not." Hensel, Bruckmann & Lorbacher v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 135 Fed. 255.

Certain incomplete watch movements, adjusted so as to run, the only parts lacking being the dial, or the dial, the various hands, and the minute wheel, held dutiable as "watch movements," and not as "parts of watches, * * * not otherwise provided for," under paragraph 191, Act 1897. Hipp, Didisheim & Bro. v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 123 Fed. 998.

White hard enamel.—White hard enamel held not dutiable as watch material. See paragraph 385.

162. Zinc-bearing ores of all kinds, including calamine, 10 per centum ad valorem upon the zinc contained therein: Provided, That on all importations of zinc-bearing ores the duties shall be estimated at the port of entry, and a bond given in double the amount of such estimated duties for the transportation of the ores by common carriers bonded for the transportation of appraised or unappraised merchandise to properly equipped sampling or smelting establishments, whether designated as bonded warehouses or otherwise. On the arrival of the ores at such establishments they shall be sampled according to commercial methods under the supervision of Government officers, who shall be stationed at such establishments, and who shall submit the samples thus obtained to a Government assayer, designated by the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall make a proper assay of the sample and report the result to the proper custom officers, and the import entries shall be liquidated thereon, except in case of ores that shall be removed to a bonded warehouse to be refined for exportation as provided by law. And the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to make all necessary regulations to enforce the provisions of this paragraph.

Zinc-bearing ores.—The zinc ores known as carbonate, silicate, and sulphide of zinc held free of duty, the carbonate and silicate as "calamine," and the sulphide as "minerals, crude," under Act 1897, Free List, pars. 514, 614, except that when they contain lead they are subject to the duty provided on "lead-bearing ore of all kinds," paragraph 181. U. S. v. Brewster (1909) 167 Fed. 122, 92 C. C. A. 574.

A commodity, it is true, is properly assessable in its condition as imported, but where ore, as here, is shown to have contained, as imported, both lead and zinc, the zinc appearing in a quantity exceeding 10 per cent, the metal content in both is dutiable, the lead under paragraph 181, the zinc under paragraph 193, Act 1909. Consolidated Kansas City Smelting & Refining Co. v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 472.

163. Zinc in blocks, pigs, or sheets, and zinc dust; and old and worn-out zinc fit only to be remanufactured, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Lithographic zinc sheets.—"Lithographic zinc sheets," commercially so known, being sheets of zinc as they come from the rolling mill, but coated on one side with a preparation suiting them for use by lithographers, held dutiable as "zinc in sheets," under paragraph 213, Act 1890, and not as manufactures not specially provided for, under paragraph 215. Langerman & Petty v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 75 Fed. 1.

Sheets of zinc enameled and baked.—Sheet of zinc enameled and baked held not dutiable as zinc in sheets. See paragraph 167.

Zinc dust.—Zinc dust, used in dyeing, held entitled to free entry, under paragraph 386, Act 1894, as an article in a crude state, used in dyeing, not specially provided for, and not dutiable under section 3, as a nonenumerated manufactured article, nor under paragraph 174 and section 4, as assimilated to zinc in pigs and blocks. U. S. v. Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. (1900) 99 Fed. 552, 39 C. C. A. 651; Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 822.

164. Bottle caps of metal, collapsible tubes, and sprinkler tops, if not decorated, colored, waxed, lacquered, enameled, lithographed, electroplated, or embossed in color, 30 per centum ad valorem; if decorated, colored, waxed, lacquered, enameled, lithographed, electroplated, or embossed in color, 40 per centum ad valorem.

Bottle caps of metal.—Viscose bottle caps held not dutiable as bottle caps of metal. See paragraph 385.

"Bottle caps of metal" in paragraph 196, Act 1909, is not to be deemed a term of exclusion forbidding classification by similitude thereunder. Nevin v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 423. See, also, Strauss & Co. v. Same (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 203.

165. All steam engines, steam locomotives, printing presses, and machine tools, 15 per centum ad valorem; embroidering machines, and lace-making machines, including machines for making lace curtains, nets, or nettings, 25 per centum ad valorem; machine tools as used in this paragraph shall be held to mean any machine operated by other than hand power which employs a tool for working on metal.

Machines.—In an importation of carding machines some of the clothing was packed separately. This clothing was so made as to fit the different parts of the machines, except that a certain amount of stretching would be necessary in the final adjustment. It would have been impracticable to import the machines with all the clothing attached, and it was customary to pack this part of the clothing separately. Held, that this clothing was not dutiable separately from the rest of the machines, but that the whole apparatus was dutiable as an entirety at the same rate. U. S. v. Leigh (C. C. 1908) 159 Fed. 314.

A machine may be dutiable as an entirety though imported in separate packages and requiring labor and adjustment to be assembled; but if, under the name of adjustment, a considerable part of the manufacture of a machine takes place, so that the component parts when imported are related to the machine as a raw material, the raw material is dutiable accordingly. Id.

Squeezers, doublers, spreaders, drawing frames, roving frames, and spinning frames, which operate directly on the jute and are all suitable, necessary, and are actually used for the making of jute yarns of the accepted and recognized commercial sizes, held dutiable as jute manufacturing machinery, under act 1909. U. S. v. Murphy & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 301.

Machine tools.—A machine designed and used for shearing or cutting metal plates held not a machine tool. See paragraph 167.

Appliance for sharpening pencils held not a machine tool. See paragraph 167.

Bench lathe held not dutiable as machine tool. See paragraph 167.

Meat-slicing machines held not dutiable as machine tools. See paragraph 167.

Pantograph machines held not dutiable as machine tools. See paragraph 167.

Power-driven machine for cutting bark off logs held not dutiable as a machine tool. See paragraph 167.

Machine tools in paragraph 197, Act 1909, include the machine proper and one set of such alternate parts thereof as are necessary for the proper performance of the several functions of the machine, but does not include duplicate, extra, or spare parts, or parts designed for use upon machines not covered by the importations, or any that are hand tools or appliances. Norma Co. of America v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 89.

"Machine tools" connotes the application of power to an implement or tool in its use and operation other than hand power alone, and the multiplication of the manual power of the operator by mechanical device is not such other motive power. U. S. v. Bernard, Judae & Co. (1913) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 503. See, also, Same v. Georgia Paper & Pulp Mfg. Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 410; Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 329.

Paragraph 197, Act 1909, applies according to the usual and common or chief use of the articles there designated, and it is not necessary to show that the imported machinery is used solely in the manufacture of jute, to make the importation assessable as jute machinery. U. S. v. Hempstead & Son (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 436.

The machines are composed of metal, are used for pinking or cutting the edges of samples or other textile materials, giving them a scalloped edge, and are operated entirely by hand power. Being operated by hand power, they are not "machine tools," and were properly assessed as composed wholly or in part of metal, under paragraph 199, Act 1909. Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 435. See, also, Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Same (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 329.

The importation is not a "machine tool," and it was properly assessed under paragraph 199, Act 1909, as an article composed wholly or in part of metal. Surgical Supply Importing Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 429. See, also, Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Same (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 329.

Floor planers, with an electric motor for the attached planes, resembling generally lawn mowers, but portable and when in use propelled by hand, held machine tools under Act 1909. Myers v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 226.

Printing press. — Bench-lever embossers held not dutiable as printing presses. See paragraph 167.

A printing press is a machine used in letterpress printing on paper and like substances, and is designed to produce books, newspapers, magazines, circulars, handbills, and the like. Lang v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 199.

Steam engines.—Rock drills and bar hoists held not dutiable as steam engines. See paragraph 167.

166. Nippers and pliers of all kinds wholly or partly manufactured, 30 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Surgical instruments.—Surgical instruments are not made classifiable as "nippers" or "pliers" under paragraph 166, by reason of the fact that they have two lever handles working on a pivot and operating two cutting, gripping, or pinching jaws or blades. Koch & Co. v. U. S. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 534.

Congress rejected a motion to amend paragraph 166 so as to include surgical and dental instruments; and the court declines to adopt a construction effecting a result precisely contrary to this action by congress. Id.

To hold this would reduce to surplusage the enumeration elsewhere in the act of other instruments embodying this mechanical principle and render either the word "nippers" or the word "pliers" in this paragraph unnecessary. Id.

167. Articles or wares not specially provided for in this section; if composed wholly or in part of platinum, gold, or silver, and articles or wares plated with gold or silver, and whether partly or wholly manufactured, 50 per centum ad valorem; if composed wholly or in chief value of iron, steel, lead, copper, brass, nickel, pewter, zinc, aluminum, or other metal, but not plated with gold or silver, and whether partly or wholly manufactured, 20 per centum ad valorem.

99. Zinc sheets.

1. Construction of paragraph in general.—The term "manufactures of metal," in Act 1872, refers to manufactured articles in which metals form a component part, and not to articles in which they have lost their form entirely, and have become the chemical ingredients of new forms. Meyer v. Arthur (1875) 91 U. S. 570, 576, 23 L. Ed. 455.

White lead, nitrate of lead, oxide of zinc, and dry or orange mineral, are not metals; they have no metallic qualities. Id.

This paragraph, being a catch-all clause and imposing a high rate of duty, should not be construed to include any article which, upon a fair and reasonable interpretation of the preceding paragraphs, may be included in one or the other of them. Dieckerhoff v. Robertson (C. C. 1890) 44 Fed. 160, 162.

The third clause of the schedule of articles not specially enumerated cannot be construed to specifically enumerate an article, and therefore an article coming within its general description cannot be held to be specifically enumerated, within the meaning of the last clause of the metal schedule, imposing duties upon articles composed in whole or in part of metal not elsewhere specifically enumerated. Aloe v. Churchill (C. C. 1890) 44 Fed. 50, 51.

An article is not composed in part of metal unless a substantial part thereof is composed of metal. Id.

2. Abrasives.—The term "artificial abrasives" implies an abrasive product resulting from some processing or treatment, and the word "crude" implies that such artificial product must be in a crude condition. The merchandise here is a finished, not a crude, article, not being designed for further processing. Harrison Supply Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 72.

3. Acetylene lamp lighter.—Acetylene lamp lighters held not smokers' articles, but dutiable as a manufacture of metal under paragraph 199, Act 1909. Sheldon & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 439.

4. Advertising cards.—Iron show or advertising cards, printed in different colors, on plates of sheet iron, held dutiable under R. S. § 2502, as "manufactures * * * not specially enumerated, * * * composed wholly or in part of iron," etc., and not as "printed matter." Forbes Lithograph Mfg. Co. v. Worthington (1889) 10 Sup. Ct. 180, 132 U. S. 655, 33 L. Ed. 453, affirming judgment (C. C. 1886) 25 Fed. 899.

5. Aigrettes.—So far as appears from the record and the samples in evidence, these aigrettes are manufactures of metal, and therefore dutiable under the provisions of paragraph 199, Act 1909. Lang v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 85; U. S. v. Edson Keith & Co., Id. 82.

6. Alloy.—An alloy in the form of pigs, which alloy is mixed with other metals, held not dutiable as an article composed of metal. See paragraph 154.

Rods and plates of nickel alloy held not dutiable as manufactured articles not specially provided for. See paragraph 155.

7. Aluminum in coils.—Sheet aluminum and aluminum in sheets are not the same, and proof of a commercial designation of the first is not applicable to the other article. But aluminum in coils, the goods here, differs inherently from aluminum in sheets, and the testimony sustains this view. The aluminum coils were properly held dutiable under paragraph 199, Act 1909. Seligmann v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 85.

8. Anodes.—Anodes, consisting of nickel plates, held not dutiable as sheets of nickel, but as a manufacture of nickel, under paragraph 193, Act 1897. Hermann Boker & Co. v. U. S. (1907) 157 Fed. 1003, 85 C. C. A. 678, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 152 Fed. 589.

9. Articles in part of silver.—The presence in an article of .276 per cent. of silver, constituting the silver coating therefor, is sufficiently substantial to affect its classification under a tariff provision for articles "in part" of silver. La Manna, Azema & Farnan v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 955.

10. Articles of bronze and glass.—Articles of bronze and glass and china, such as inkstands, stamp boxes, etc., where the component material of chief value is metal, held, under Act 1897, dutiable as articles of chief value of metal. Vandiver v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 194.

11. Artificial grasses bound with metal wire.—Artificial grasses bound with metal wire held dutiable within the metal paragraph (paragraph 193, Act 1897), according to the weight of the evidence. U. S. v. Edson Keith & Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 82.

12. Azimuth mirrors, sextants, and octants.—Azimuth mirrors, sextants, and octants are dutiable as composed chiefly of metal, under paragraph 167, Act 1913; and, not being aids to vision, are not classifiable as optical instruments under paragraph 93. U. S. v. Bliss & Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 433.

13. Ball bearings.—Ball bearings held dutiable as manufactures of metal. See paragraph 106.

14. Bench-lever embossers.—Every printing press may be correctly described as a printing machine, but not every printing machine as a printing press; and bench-lever embossers built and used to emboss and stamp in gold various substances, particularly leather employed in the manufacture of pocketbooks and notebooks, held properly dutiable under paragraph 199, Act 1909, as manufactures in part of metal. Petry & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 348.

15. Bicycle chains. — Bicycle chains held not dutiable as manufactures of iron or steel. See paragraph 126.

16. Bicycle rims.—Light steel rims used in the manufacture of bicycle wheels held dutiable under Act 1890 as nonenumerated articles composed of steel, and not as "wheels, or parts thereof, made of iron or steel, and steel-tired wheels for railway purposes, whether wholly or partly finished." Stone v. U. S. (1893) 56 Fed. 826, 6 C. C. A. 153; Stover Bicycle Co. v. U. S. (1893) 56 Fed. 1023, 16 C. C. A. 683.

17. Blanks cut from aluminum.—Blanks cut from aluminum held not sheets of aluminum under Act 1909, but articles or wares composed wholly of aluminum, party manufactured, and dutiable under paragraph 199 of that act. Universal Shipping Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 245.

18. Boiler flues.—Purves' ribbed boiler flues held not dutiable as manufactures not specially enumerated. See paragraph 127.

19. Braids.—Narrow metal braids, used as garment trimmings, held not dutiable as manufacture of metal. See paragraph 358.

20. Brass.—Brass is a metal within the tariff acts, and Dutch metal, being a manufacture of brass, will not be considered a manufacture of which copper is a component of chief value. Act Fed. 24, 1869. U. S. v. Ullman (D. C. 1871) Fed. Cas. No. 16,593.

21. Bronze ornaments.—Bronze ornaments, being manufactured articles and advanced beyond the condition of the "old copper," "clipping" and "composition metal," in Free List, Act 1894, held dutiable as manfactures of metal under paragraph 177. Tiffany v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 142 Fed. 282.

22. Buckles.—Shoe buckles held not dutiable as manufactures of metal. See paragraph 356.

Slides or buckles, made of steel or a base metal, some ornamented with rhinestones and some colored in imitation of precious metals, and used in ornamenting slippers, held not within the provision in Act 1897, for "articles commonly known as jewelry," but dutiable as manufactures of metal, not specially provided for, under paragraph 193 of said act. E. H. Bailey & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 135 Fed. 917.

Buckles used on shoulder straps of overalls held not trouser buckles, dutiable under Act 1897, par. 412, as such, but dutiable under paragraph 193, as articles of steel or iron not specially provided for. U. S. v. Topken (C. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 233.

23. Bullion fringe.—Bullion fringe held not dutiable as a manufacture of metal not provided for. See paragraph 150.

24. By-products of tin.—Small disks produced in the manufacture of tin cans, being a by-product in the process of cutting an aperture for filling, and being of much less value than the tin from which they were cut, held not articles "wholly or partly manufactured from tin plate," under Act 1897, nor "waste" but are dutiable as articles of metal, "whether partly or wholly manufactured." Shallus v. U. S. (1908) 162 Fed. 653, 89 C. C. A. 445.

25. Cables.—A cable held not dutiable as a manufacture of metal. See paragraph 114.

26. Card clothing attached to iron flats.—Card clothing which is attached by means of rivets to iron flats, for the purpose of being attached to machines for carding cotton, held not card clothing, under Act 1883, but manufactures composed wholly or in part of iron, steel, etc. U. S. v. Leigh (C. C. 1890) 41 Fed. 33.

27. Castings.—Iron castings which by careful additional work have been fitted as parts of machines, held no longer dutiable as "castings," under Act 1897, but have been advanced to the condition of "articles * * * of iron * * * partly * * * manufactured." John Bromley & Sons v. U. S. (1907) 156 Fed. 958, 84 C. C. A. 458.

28. Cast-iron disks.—Cast-iron disks, when subjected to processes of manufacture and made thinner on one edge than the other and with an irregular surface, held not "plates" within the meaning of paragraph 148, Act 1897, and were dutiable under paragraph 193 of that act. Prosser v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 29.

29. Cast steel machine worked.—Pieces of cast steel upon which machine work had been done after being cast, and so forming a combination of parts ready for immediate use in a cement mill, held finished articles, and not "plates," as provided for under paragraph 135, Act 1897, but dutiable under paragraph 193. U. S. v. Prosser (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 22.

30. Coin swords.—So-called "coin swords," which consist of copper coins corded together and securely fastened around an iron bar or rod covered by metal foil, and used for ornamental purposes, held not within the provision for "coins," in Act 1897, but dutiable under paragraph 193 of the act. Soy Kee & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 177 Fed. 601.

31. Combs.—Combs held not dutiable as manufacture of metal. See paragraph 356.

32. Compasses.—It is agreed these goods, of chief value in brass, were improperly assessed by the collector. From the testimony and the exhibits themselves it appears these articles are not intended for use as parts of watches or watchcases or as field glasses, and they are not jewelry or parts thereof. They are intended to be used as a part of something else and were dutiable as articles or wares not specially provided for composed wholly or in part of metal under paragraph 199, Act 1909. Sussfeld, Lorsch & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 382.

33. Composition metal.—Composition metal held not dutiable as a partly manufactured article of metal. See paragraph 460.

34. Corrugated iron sheets galvanized.—An article of merchandise held dutiable in the condition it finds itself when imported; and corrugated iron sheets that have been galvanized were not dutiable under paragraph 131, Act 1897, but were dutiable under paragraph 193 of that act, though not subject to the additional duty of two-tenths of 1 cent per pound under paragraph 132 of said act. Moore v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 115.

35. Cotton ties.—Cotton ties, each tie consisting of an iron strip and an iron buckle, imported in bundles, each bundle consisting of 30 strips and 30 buckles, each strip 11 feet long, the whole blackened, are subject to a duty of 35 per cent. ad valorem, as "manufactures of iron not otherwise provided for," under Schedule E, R. S. § 2504, and not to a duty of one and a half cents per pound, under said schedule, as "band, hoop, and scroll iron." Badger v. Ranlett (1882) 106 U. S. 255, 1 Sup. Ct. 346, 350, 27 L. Ed. 194; Kennedy v. Hartranft (C. C. 1881) 9 Fed. 18.

36. Dragees.—Dragees held not dutiable as articles in part of silver. See paragraph 180.

37. Electric light bulbs.—Electric light bulbs, colored and shaped as fruit, were assessed by the board as "articles or wares * * * composed wholly or in part of iron, steel, lead, copper, nickel, pewter, zinc, gold, silver, platinum, aluminum, or other metal; * * *" under paragraph 199, Act 1909. This assessment was proper. "Manufactures of metal" refers to the material and includes all the component classes of such by whatever distinctive name known. U. S. v. Wolff & Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 418.

38. Figures of animals.—The provision for toys in Act 1897, par. 434, does not include figures of animals, single or groups, which are known in trade as metal novelties, and are generally used as mantel or cabinet ornaments, but are dutiable under paragraph 193. Samstag & Hilder Bros. Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 756.

39. Fireplace and mantel sets.—Fireplace and mantel sets, so designed, formed, shaped, and fitted together that they have lost their identity as castings and have become parts of a consistent whole, held dutiable under paragraph 199, Act 1909. Jackson Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 475.

40. Flitters.—Flitters held dutiable as manufacture of metal. See paragraph 146.

41. Floor frame.—Pieces of iron specially manufactured, fitted, purchased, and shaped, as parts of a particular floor frame held not dutiable under Act 1883 as "iron or steel beams, girders, joists, * * * and building forms, together with all other structural shapes of iron," but as "manufactures, articles, or wares not specially enumerated, * * * composed wholly or in part of iron." Birtwell v. Saltonstall (C. C. 1889) 39 Fed. 383, judgment reversed Saltonstall v. Birtwell (1893) 14 Sup. Ct. 169, 150 U. S. 417, 37 L. Ed. 1128.

T-beams, girders, joists, columns, posts, and other manufactures of iron, which, when put together, constitute a floor frame for one or more floors of a building, should not be classified under Act 1883 as an entirety as a manufacture, but the several parts should be classified under such several specific provisions of the act as are applicable to each class of merchandise in the entry. (1886) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 475.

42. Furniture.—Furniture with metal ornamentation held not dutiable as manufacture of metal. See paragraph 176.

43. Gallilith belts.—Gallilith belts held not dutiable as manufactures of metal. See paragraph 356.

44. Hair clippers.—Hair clippers held dutiable as cutlery. See paragraph 128.

Steel hair clippers are not to be deemed machine tools and dutiable as such, but are dutiable as steel not specially provided for, under paragraph 199, Act 1909. Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 329.

A tool supplied with rotating or reciprocating knives or cutters arranged for clipping the hair short or close is not to be deemed scissors or shears, but is a manufacture of steel not specially provided for, and the importation was properly assessed under paragraph 199, Act 1909. Sheldon v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 109.

45. Hairpins.—Hairpins held dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles. See paragraph 158.

46. Hoop iron.—If hoop iron has been subjected to such mechanical treatment as to convert it into an article fitted for a special use, without any further mechanical treatment, and unfitted for the general purposes to which hoop iron is adapted, such article is a manufacture of iron, dutiable as such, and not as hoop iron. Kennedy v. Hartranft (C. C. 1881) 9 Fed. 18.

47. Harmonicas.—Harmonicas made of metal held not dutiable as manufactures of metal. See paragraph 342.

48. Hollow ware.—Glazed hollow ware held dutiable as manufactures of iron, etc. See paragraph 134.

49. Hooks and eyes.—Hooks and eyes held not dutiable as manufactures of iron. See paragraph 151.

50. Horseshoe calks.—Act 1897, par. 135, does not include such distinctively finished articles as horseshoe calks in the provision for steel in all forms and shapes, but such calks held dutiable as a manufacture of metal. Maldonado & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 170, judgment affirmed (1910) 176 Fed. 737, 100 C. C. A. 282.

51. Iron hooks.—Iron hooks, used in the manufacture of feeders for wicker cards in a carding machine, sharpened after being set in the cylinder, but first hammered up in the iron and then struck in a die, and known to the trade as hooks, and not as iron forgings, held a manufactured article, within the meaning of the tariff act, and liable to duty under paragraph 216. Lemaire Feeder Co. v. Cadwalader (C. C. 1890) 42 Fed. 529.

52. Iron sand.—So-called "iron sand," a completed article produced by a series of manufacturing processes from cast iron and steel scrap, held not within the provision for "all iron in * * * forms less finished than iron in bars, and more advanced than pig iron," in Act 1897, but dutiable as "iron manufactured," under paragraph 193. Harrison Supply Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 155.

The testimony showed that the globular iron sand was used in substantial quantities as counterpoise in the manufacture of scales and cement, that the angular shapes thereof were used in the manufacture of cement, and so negatives the idea that the sand could only be used as abrasives, as required by paragraph 133, Act 1909. It was dutiable as an unenumerated manufactured article under paragraph 199 of that act. Harrison Supply Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 72.

53. Iron turnings.—Iron turnings held not dutiable as manufactured iron. (1884) 17 Op. Atty. Gen. 647.

54. Kitchen knives.—Kitchen knives held not dutiable as a manufacture of metal. See paragraph 130.

55. Lawn rakes.—Iron lawn rakes with wooden handles, chiefly, if not exclusively, used for raking lawns, either to clear them of leaves or other rubbish or to gather up the cut grass left by a lawn mower, serve no agricultural purpose and are not admissible free under paragraph 391, Act 1913. They are dutiable under paragraph 167 as a manufacture in chief value of metal. U. S. v. Tower (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 562.

56. Machined steel articles.—Steel articles that have been either fully machined, or that are rough in part and fully machined in part, held something, not forgings, but articles of steel partly or wholly manufactured, under paragraph 193, Act 1897. Prosser & Sons v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 550.

57. Machines and appliances.—Appliances for sharpening pencils, admittedly hand-power machines, held dutiable as manufactures of metal not specially provided for, under paragraph 199, Act 1909, and not as machine tools. Favor, Ruhl & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 292.

Pantograph machines, operated by hand power, held, under Act 1909, not machine tools, but dutiable as a manufacture of metal. Johnson & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 63.

Meat-slicing machines, whether operated by hand power or otherwise, held not used in mechanical work, so as to be regarded as machine tools, but dutiable under Act 1909 as manufacture of metal. Gallagher & Ascher v. U. S. (1913) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 520.

A bench lathe, operated exclusively by force applied to a treadle by the foot of the operator, held, under Act 1909, not a machine tool, but dutiable as a manufacture of metal. U. S. v. Bernard, Judae & Co. (1913) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 503.

Machines composed of metal, used for pinking or cutting the edges of samples or other textile materials, giving them a scalloped edge, operated entirely by hand power, are not "machine tools," and were properly assessed as composed wholly or in part of metal, under paragraph 199, Act 1909. Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 435.

Importation held not a "machine tool," and properly assessed under paragraph 199, Act 1909, as an article composed wholly or in part of metal. Surgical Supply Importing Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 429.

A machine, made wholly of metal, operated entirely by hand power, and designed and used for shearing or cutting metal plates or bars, held not a machine tool under Act 1909, but dutiable as a manufacture of metal. U. S. v. Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 419.

Large, power-driven machines, containing a mechanism for revolving logs while the bark on these is cut away by fixed knives, held not "machine tools," under Act 1909, but articles wholly or in part of metal not specially provided for. U. S. v. Georgia Pulp & Paper Mfg. Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 410. See, also, Hedden v. Richard (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 891, 149 U. S. 346, 37 L. Ed. 763; Pickhardt v. Merritt (1889) 10 Sup. Ct. 80, 132 U. S. 252, 33 L. Ed. 353; Myers v. Same (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 226.

Exhausters, composed of stoneware and iron, stoneware being the component material of chief value, but iron couplings and screws, connecting the stoneware parts, being substantial and material constituents of the machines, held dutiable under paragraph 193, Act 1897. U. S. v. Didier-March Co. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 436.

Machine in machine tools connotes the application of some kind of power in the operation of an implement other than hand power alone, and steel hair clippers held not dutiable as such, but as steel not specially provided for, under paragraph 199, Act 1909. Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 329.

58. Mechanism for marking collapsible metal tubes.—The article here, a printing mechanism for lacquering and marking collapsible metal tubes, is not used by "the art or trade of letterpress printing," and it was properly assessed as a manufacture of metal not specially provided for, under paragraph 199, Act 1909. Lang v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 199.

59. Metallic bedsteads.—Bedstead mounts, brass and iron castings, bedstead tubes, bedstead knobs, vases, castors, etc., for use in the manufacture of metallic bedsteads, held not dutiable as "house and cabinet furniture in piece or rough, and not finished," under Act 1883, but as "manufactures of metal." Combs v. Erhardt (C. C. 1891) 49 Fed. 635.

60. Metal vessels used in reducing metals.—Metal vessels designed to be incased in brick for use, fires being built under them, in the reduction of metals, held not containers dutiable under paragraph 151, Act 1909, but dutiable under paragraph 199 of that act. Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 132.

61. Millinery articles, ornaments, dress trimmings, braids, cords, etc.—Metal beads temporarily strung on cotton cords or strings for the purpose of facilitating transportation held not dutiable, under Act 1897, as loose beads, but articles or wares not specially provided for in the act, composed wholly or in part of metal, whether wholly or partly manufactured. Henry E. Frankenberg Co. v. U. S. (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 628, 206 U. S. 224, 51 L. Ed. 1034, affirming judgment (1906) 146 Fed. 63, 76 C. C. A. 514.

Millinery articles, made almost wholly of feathers, but containing a small quantity of wire, held dutiable as "articles in part of metal," under Act 1897, rather than as "feathers advanced or manufactured." U. S. v. Berlinger, Brown & Meyer (1909) 167 Fed. 800, 93 C. C. A. 190, writ of certiorari denied (1909) 29 S. Ct. 704, 214 U. S. 527, 53 L. Ed. 1068.

"Gold straw braids" and "silver straw braids," composed mostly of hemp fiber, the remainder being metal, cotton, and glue, held not entitled to free entry, under Act 1890, which puts on the free list braids, plaits, laces, and similar manufactures, "composed of straw, chip, grass, palm leaf, willow, osier or rattan," suitable for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets, and hoods, but assessable as manufactures in part of metal, not specially provided for. Schiff v. U. S. (1900) 99 Fed. 555, 39 C. C. A. 652.

"Soutache gilt braid," consisting of cotton cables around which is braided a gilt thread composed of metal wire and cotton thread, held dutiable under Act 1890, as a manufactured article composed in part of metal, and not as metal thread of gilt, silver, or other metals, not specially provided for. Wolff v. U. S. (1895) 71 Fed. 291, 18 C. C. A. 41.

Black hat ornaments, composed of metal and black glass, made to resemble jet, held not articles commonly known as jewelry, under Act 1897, but millinery trimmings, dutiable either as manufactures of glass, or as articles made wholly or in part of metal, not specially provided for, depending upon whether or not the glass is the component material of chief value. A. Bader & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 541.

Metal beads should be assessed under Act 1897, as articles composed wholly or in part of iron, steel, or other metal, and not as articles composed wholly or in part of beads. Steinhardt v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 113 Fed. 996.

Steel bead trimmings held dutiable under Act 1883 as manufactures of metal, metal chief value. Loewenthal v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 91 Fed. 644.

Strung beads of glass, metal lined or coated, the metal being of chief value, held dutiable under Act 1890, as manufactures of metal not specially provided for, and not as manufactures of which glass is the component of chief value, not specially provided for. Samuel Schiff & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 90 Fed. 795.

Cords, fringes, tassels, and braids, composed in chief value of metal, and not known commercially as metal threads, nor as bullion held dutiable under Act 1890, as manufactures composed wholly or in part of metal, and not as a manufacture of glass. Bloomingdale v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 89 Fed. 663.

Whether ornaments made of cut steel, steel, brass, copper, or mother of pearl, used for belts, dresses, and sometimes for the hair, are dutiable as "manufactured articles not specifically provided for, composed wholly or in part of iron, steel," etc., or as "jewelry of all kinds," depends on the meaning attached by the trade to the phrase "jewelry of all kinds," with reference to which congress is presumed to legislate in the tariff acts. Robbins v. Robertson (C. C. 1888) 33 Fed. 709.

Small imitation diamonds, rubies, and other precious stones, set in metal claws suitable for dress trimmings, held dutiable as manufactures of metal. U. S. v. American Bead Co. (1913) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 509.

62. Neck chain.—Metal neck chain held not dutiable as manufacture of metal. See paragraph 356.

63. Miniature frames set with precious stones.—The provision in Act 1897, par. 434, for "articles commonly known as jewelry," does not include miniature frames composed of precious metals set with diamonds and pearls, which are not used as articles of personal adornment but for utility, but they are dutiable under paragraph 193. U. S. v. M. Knoedler & Co. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 928.

64. Nickel-plated cast-iron eccentrics.—Eccentrics for sewing machines were made of cast iron, drilled, reamed, and nickel plated. Paragraph 147, Act 1909, is limited to castings made wholly of iron. These goods, composed of cast iron and nickel, are strictly within the terms of paragraph 199, where a duty of 45 per cent. ad valorem is laid on articles or wares partly or wholly manufactured not specially provided for and composed wholly or in part of metal. U. S. v. Durbrow & Hearne Mfg. Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 410.

65. Night lights.—Night lights of which metal forms not only a very considerable part, but is, in fact, a very important, substantial, and material constituent, held dutiable under Act 1909 as a manufacture of metal. U. S. v. American Import Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 361; Same v. Borgfeldt & Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 408.

66. Old cannon.—Old cannon, made of composition metal, and useless as artillery, but salable as relics and souvenirs, held dutiable under Act 1897 as manufactures of metal, and not free of duty as "old brass," or as "composition metal." Downing v. U. S. (1903) 122 Fed. 445, 58 C. C. A. 427, affirming judgment (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 779.

67. Opera glasses. — Opera glasses held dutiable as articles in part of metal. See paragraph 93.

68. Paper lamp shades.—Paper lamp shades, with rings of wire at the top and bottom to hold the paper in position, and with a wire framework across the top the metal constituting a substantial part of the article both in value and in use, held under R. S. § 2499, dutiable as "manufactures, articles, or wares not especially enumerated or provided for in this act, composed wholly or in part of iron, * * * or any other metal," etc., and not as "paper, manufactures of, or of which paper is a component material, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act." Hohenstein v. Hedden (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 94, judgment reversed (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 1047, 149 U. S. 776, 37 L. Ed. 963.

69. Parts of lamps for burning gas.—Parts of lamps for burning gas cannot be said to be hollow ware of iron or steel similar to table, kitchen, and hospital utensils. The article is a part of a fixed device not complete in itself, lacking as it does the gas mantel and the globe which ordinarily accompany it, and it must be joined with a gas pipe when put in use. It was dutiable under paragraph 199, Act 1909. Fensterer & Ruhe v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 61.

70. Philosophical apparatus. — Philosophical apparatus, see paragraph 573.

71. Pile protectors. — Pile protectors were made of sectional, semicircular, iron plates, which when riveted together took a drum shape. As to the point whether the holes in the plates were punched before or after rolling, the testimony is distinct that they were punched after rolling. This constitutes an advancement in the course of manufacture beyond hammering, rolling, or casting, resulting in changing the crude article into a form ready for actual use. The merchandise was properly assessed under paragraph 199, Act 1909, as manufactures of iron not specially provided for. U. S. v. American R. Co. of Porto Rico (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 474.

72. Plated with gold and silver.—The term "plated with gold or silver," when used without limitation, signifies that the given articles are coated with gold or silver by any one of the several known processes which are employed to cover or coat such articles with a layer of gold or silver. It signifies a final condition rather than the process by which the condition was produced. The articles here in question held to be "plated with gold or silver." Tuska, Son & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 506.

73. Rock drills and bar hoists.—The testimony shows both as to these rock drills and bar hoists that they were manufactured as machines to be operated by compressed air and as to the bar hoists they were specially designed for use underground where steam cannot be employed as a propelling force. The articles cannot be deemed steam engines and they were properly assessed as manufactures of metal. Hensel, Bruckmann & Lorbacher v. U. S. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 481.

74. Rollers used in printing patterns.—Rollers used in printing patterns held not dutiable as manufactured articles not enumerated. See paragraph 147.

75. Scythes, grasshooks, etc.—Scythes, grass hooks, and carpenters' pincers, subjected before completion to grinding, tempering, or polishing, held dutiable as "manufactures, articles, or wares, not specially enumerated * * * composed * * * of iron, steel, * * * or any other metal, and whether wholly or partly manufactured," and not as "forgings of iron and steel, or forged iron." Saltonstall v. Wiebusch & Hilger (1895) 15 Sup. Ct. 476, 156 U. S. 601, 39 L. Ed. 549, reversing Wiebusch & Hilger v. Saltonstall (C. C. 1891) 45 Fed. 40.

76. Sheets of zinc enameled and baked.—Sheets of zinc on which several coats of enamel had been applied, one coat at a time, and after each application baked in an oven, held not dutiable under Act 1909 as zinc in sheets coated or plated with nickel or other metal or solutions, but as zinc partly or wholly manufactured. Stengel v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 137. See, also, Dejonge v. Magone (1895) 16 Sup. Ct. 119, 159 U. S. 562, 40 L. Ed. 260; Langerman & Petty v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 75 Fed. 1.

77. Shot chains.—Shot chains held not dutiable as an article composed wholly or in part of iron, etc. See paragraph 126.

78. Silver hand bags. — Silver hand bags held dutiable as articles of silver. See paragraph 356.

79. Silver-handled nail cleaners.—Silver-handled nail cleaners held dutiable as "manufactures of metal," under act 1890, and not as "files." Stern v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 72 Fed. 52.

80. Sparklers or sparklets.—A mixture of iron filings, magnesium, aluminum, nitrate of barium, and gum, attached to a thin strip of metal to serve as a handle, constituting what are known as "sparklers" or sparklets," held not dutiable as toys under Act 1897, but as manufactures of metal. Illfelder v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 109.

81. Statues and busts.—Bronze statuary, made by casting from a clay or plaster model, made by the artist, held not dutiable under Act 1890, as "statuary * * * wrought by hand * *. * from metal," but as a manufacture of metal. Tiffany v. U. S. (1896) 71 Fed. 691, 18 C. C. A. 297, affirming judgment (C. C. 1895) 65 Fed. 494.

Bronze statues molded, but finished by the hand of the sculptor, held dutiable as manufactures of metal, under Act 1890, and not as "statuary." Tiffany v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 737.

Under Act 1909, pars. 149, 158, cast hollow ware must be made of cast iron, and hence bronze statuary made of spelter must be assessed under paragraph 199, as a manufacture of metal. Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 451.

82. Steam dredge.—A steam dredge and scows used in connection therewith are "vessels," within the meaning of R. S. § 3, ante, § 3, and neither is dutiable under Act 1894, par. 177, as "manufactured articles," not specially provided for, and composed wholly or in part of metal. The International (1898) 89 Fed. 484, 32 C. C. A. 258, affirming decree (D. C. 1897) 83 Fed. 840.

83. Steel shapes.—No commercial designation appearing, a variety of steel shapes ready to be enameled and converted into pitchers, knobs, handles, spouts, etc., held, under Act 1897, less aptly described as pressed, sheared, or stamped shapes, or as steel in all forms and shapes, than as articles or wares composed of steel, whether wholly or partly manufactured. Lunham & Moore v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 1.

84. Steel rods tipped with diamond chips.—Steel rods, 1⅛ of an inch in length and $^{3}/_{16}$ of an inch in diameter, tipped with diamond chips, and used in an engraving machine, held dutiable under Act 1897 as articles not specially provided for, composed wholly or in part of steel, and not as "precious stones set." In re John Hope & Sons Engraving & Manufacturing Co. (C. C. 1900) 100 Fed. 286.

85. Steel strips plated with nickel.—Steel strips plated with nickel, held dutiable under act 1909 as manufactures of metal not provided for. Hirsch & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 82. See, also, Eckstein v. Same (C. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 94; Victor v. Same (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 472.

86. Terne tin.—Terne tin held not dutiable as manufacture of tin. See paragraph 109.

87. Tin boxes for use of smokers.—Tin boxes for use of smokers held not dutiable as manufactures of metal. See paragraph 381.

88. Tin parings and lead shavings.—Tin parings and lead shavings obtained by the use of a lathe in the ordinary methods of turning bars of metal to shape and form held dutiable under Act 1909, as articles or wares not specially provided for composed wholly or in part of lead or other metal, and not as waste. Hodgart & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 311.

89. Tin plates.—Tin plates held not dutiable as manufactures of metal. See paragraph 109.

90. Traveling clock.—Traveling clocks held dutiable as manufactures of metal, under Act 1890. Tiffany v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 737.

91. Traveling set.—Leather cases fitted with an assortment of tools, consisting of a screw driver, saw, file, and small blades, for which a single handle suffices when used, held not dutiable under section 452, Act 1909, as a "traveling set," but, adapted and intended for emergencies only, they are dutiable as articles made wholly or in part of metal, under paragraph 199 of that act. U. S. v. Ovington Bros. & Co. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 393.

92. Tubes for holding gas.—Tubes of wrought steel for holding gas under pressure held not dutiable as manufacture of steel. See paragraph 127.

93. Washers.—Washers intended for use on automobiles held not dutiable as manufactures of steel. See paragraph 123.

94. Watch cases.—Cases covering watch movements held dutiable separately as manufactures of metal not provided for. See paragraph 161.

95. Wax tapers.—Wax tapers with metal base held not dutiable as articles in part of metal. See paragraph 367.

96. Wire cloth.—Brass and bronze wire cloth held not dutiable as articles made from metal threads, but dutiable as manufactures of metal under paragraph 199, Act 1909. Tyler Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 158.

97. Wire composed of nickel alloy.—Wire made of nickel alloy held not dutiable under Act 1894 as an alloy, but as a manufactured article not specially provided for. Boker v. U. S. (1899) 97 Fed. 205, 38 C. C. A. 114.

Wire composed of nickel alloy, imported in spools, and ready for use in the construction of rheostats, held dutiable as a manufactured ware not specifically provided for, composed wholly or in part of metal, under Act 1894, and not as nickel alloy. Boker v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 86 Fed. 119.

98. Wreaths, artificial flowers, etc., made of cotton and wire.—Wreaths and crosses mounted on wire held not dutiable as manufactures of metal. See paragraph 347.

Where artificial flowers, leaves, and the like, have taken on, through the use of metal wire in their construction, a new form and shape and name, they are to be deemed manufactures of metal. Gage Bros. & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 427. See, also, U. S. v. Downing (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 337.

Burial or bridal wreaths, made of wax, cotton, tin, wire, and other metal, held not dutiable under Act 1897, limited to feathers, fruits, grains, leaves, flowers and stems, or parts thereof, but under paragraph 193 of that act. U. S. v. Downing (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 337. See, also, Seeberger v. Schlesinger (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 729, 152 U. S. 581, 587, 38 L. Ed. 560.

99. Zinc sheets.—Lithographic zinc sheets held not dutiable as manufactures not specially provided for. See paragraph 163.

Zinc sheets, when nickel plated, held not within the provision in paragraph 192, Act 1897, for "zinc * * * in sheets," but dutiable under paragraph 193 of said act, covering "articles or wares not specially provided for, * * * composed wholly or in part of nickel, * * * zinc, * * * whether partly or wholly manufactured." Eckstein v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 94 (judgment affirmed [1906] 145 Fed. 1021, 74 C. C. A. 494); Victor v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 472.

SCHEDULE D.—WOOD AND MANUFACTURES OF

168. Briar root or briar wood, ivy or laurel root, and similar wood unmanufactured, or not further advanced than cut into blocks suitable for the articles into which they are intended to be converted, 10 per centum ad valorem.

169. Cedar commercially known as Spanish cedar, lignum-vitæ, lancewood, ebony, box, granadilla, mahogany, rosewood, and satinwood; all the foregoing when sawed into boards, planks, deals, or other forms, and not specially provided for in this section, and all cabinet woods not further manufactured than sawed, 10 per centum ad valorem; veneers of wood, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Mahogany boards.—Sawed mahogany boards are not dutiable, under Schedule D, Act March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 501), as "manufactures of mahogany," but are dutiable under the provision of that schedule "for all other articles of sawed lumber," etc. Opinion of Attorney General Garland of January 21, 1887 ([1887] 18 Op. 535), concurred in. (1889) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 366.

Mahogany boards and planks held not dutiable as manufactures of mahogany, under the clause in Schedule D, Act March 3, 1883, imposing a duty on "manufactures of cedar wood," etc.; but they fall within the designation of lumber in the clause in same schedule which imposes a duty on "sawed boards, planks, deals," etc., and are dutiable under the latter clause. (1887) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 535.

Sawed cedar.—Spanish cedar strips or boards, intended for use in the manufacture of cigar boxes, held properly assessed with duty as sawed cedar under paragraph 203, Act 1909. U. S. v. Owen & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 480.

Veneers of wood.—As to veneers of wood of exceeding thinness, pasted on paper for the purpose of keeping them in shape, the paper being in some instances the component material of chief value, held, that they are within the provision in Act 1897, par. 198, for "veneers of wood." American Trading Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 142 Fed. 214.

170. Paving posts, railroad ties, and telephone, trolley, electric-light, and telegraph poles of cedar or other woods, 10 per centum ad valorem.

Telephone poles.—Poles unnotched cannot be considered as a matter of law an unfinished telephone pole. U. S. v. Myers & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 431.

171. Casks, barrels, and hogsheads (empty), sugar-box shooks, and packing boxes (empty), and packing-box shooks, of wood, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem.

172. Boxes, barrels, or other articles containing oranges, lemons, limes, grapefruit, shaddocks, or pomelos, 15 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That the thin wood, so called, comprising the sides, tops and bottoms of fruit boxes of the growth and manufacture of the United States, exported as fruit box shooks, may be reimported in completed form, filled with fruit, without the payment of duty; but proof of the identity of such shooks shall be made under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Fruit box shooks.—Boxes containing oranges and lemons, the sides, tops, and bottoms of which were in fact of American growth and manufacture, and which were exported as shooks, held not to be deprived of the benefit of the proviso to paragraph 216, Act 1894, under which they were entitled to re-entry, when filled, on payment of half-rate duties, merely because proof of such facts was not made in the particular mode prescribed by the treasury regulations. U. S. v. E. L. Goodsell Co. (1899) 91 Fed. 519, 33 C. C. A. 661, affirming judgment Same v. Goodsell (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 155.

In showing that fruit boxes are entitled to classification under act 1897, par. 205, as being made from reimported shooks, it is not enough to establish a probability that many of the boxes were of such origin, but there must be definite evidence as to the quantity in each importation entitled to such classification. W. H. Westervelt & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 150 Fed. 378.

173. Chair cane or reeds wrought or manufactured from rattans or reeds, 10 per centum ad valorem; osier or willow, including chip of and split willow, prepared for basket makers' use, 10 per centum ad valorem; manufactures of osier or willow and willow furniture, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Manufactures of willow.—Under Act 1897, par. 206, relating to "willow prepared for basket makers' use, * * * manufactures of * * * willow," it was the intention for the final clause to cover completed manufactures from the "prepared" willow enumerated in the preceding clause; and baskets made from willow chip would be dutiable thereunder rather than as "manufactures of chip" under paragraph 449. Theodore Ollesheimer & Bro. v. U. S. (1907) 158 Fed. 977, 86 C. C. A. 181, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 167.

The merchandise is composed of glass bottles and woven willow, and the willow is so woven and attached to the bottles that it produces an article differing from what is commonly understood to be a plain green, etc., glass bottle. The wicker is the component material of chief value, and the bottle so covered is classifiable as a manufacture of willow under paragraph 212, per force of the similitude clause in Act 1909. U. S. v. Mulhens & Kropff (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 496. See, also, Same v. Zinn (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 419.

Reeds manufactured from rattans.—Partly manufactured whipstocks, fishing poles, and canes held not dutiable as reeds manufactured from rattans. See paragraph 176.

Slab rattan and broom rattan, used only in the manufacture of brooms, held not dutiable as reeds, etc. See paragraph 648.

Rattan reeds, from which the outside has been removed, held not "in the rough," within the meaning of Act 1890, Free List, par. 756, but "reeds wrought or manufactured from rattans," within the meaning of paragraph 229. Foppes & Partisch v. U. S. (C. C. 1894) 154 Fed. 866, decree affirmed Foppes v. U. S. (1895) 79 Fed. 995, 24 C. C. A. 682.

The provision in paragraph 212, Act 1909, for "chair cane or reeds wrought or manufactured from rattans or reeds" is more specific than the free list provision for "reeds unmanufactured," and the clause applies to chair reeds made from rattans or other reeds, whatever their shape, and regardless of whether they are made by the first stripping of the rattan or by a subsequent reduction of stripped reeds. Rattan & Cane Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 1; U. S. v. Gerdau Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 7.

Willow.—"Willow" is used botanically, colloquially, and commercially to describe a kind of wood. Krauss & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 17.

174. Toothpicks of wood or other vegetable substance, 25 per centum ad valorem; butchers' and packers' skewers of wood, 10 cents per thousand.

Notes of Decisions

Toothpicks.—Toothpicks held not dutiable as "quills, prepared or unprepared," under paragraph 768, Act 1883, but as nonenumerated articles, manufactured in part, under R. S. § 2516. U. S. v. Borgfeldt (1897) 79 Fed. 953, 25 C. C. A. 257, affirming judgment Same v. Stearns (C. C. 1896) 75 Fed. 833.

175. Blinds, curtains, shades, or screens any of the foregoing in chief value of bamboo, wood, straw, or compositions of wood, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per centum ad valorem; if stained, dyed, painted, printed, polished, grained, or creosoted, and baskets in chief value of like material, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Baskets.—Bamboo basket bags, which may be closed at the top by drawing the material together, held improperly classified as a basket. U. S. v. Vantine & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 516.

"Baskets" is a term, descriptive eo nomine, and the sole requirement needed to bring "baskets" within the provisions of paragraph 214, Act 1909, is that they should in fact be the articles there described, namely, baskets made of bamboo, wood, straw, or compositions of wood. U. S. v. Zinn & Co. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 419.

Baskets of wood, stained, dyed, or painted might be classed as baskets of wood under paragraph 214, or as manufactures of chip under paragraph 463, Act 1909; but as the applicable language in paragraph 214 is the more exact and specific, it must be held to be controlling, and the importation is dutiable under that paragraph. Thomsen v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 36.

It was the purpose of congress in enacting paragraph 214, Act 1909, to constitute a new class for all baskets made of any kind of wood, and, instead of continuing a former provision whereby different kinds of wooden baskets should be classified differently and with differing rates of duty to make all wooden baskets dutiable at the same rate; and market baskets and hampers made of willow held dutiable, not as manufactures of willow, but, according to the more specific of two possible designations, as baskets of wood. Krauss & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 17.

Manufactures of willow are covered by paragraph 212, Act 1909, and baskets of wood are covered by paragraph 214 of that act. Applying the recognized doctrine that an eo nomine provision is more specific than one of general description, it must be held that the term "baskets of wood," willow being concededly wood, is more specific than "manufactures of willow," and baskets made of willow wood are dutiable under paragraph 214 of the act in question. Brody v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 15.

Manufactures of willow are covered by paragraph 212, Act 1909, and baskets of wood are covered by paragraph 214 of that act. Applying the recognized doctrine that an eo nomine provision is more specific than one of general description, it must be held that the term "baskets of wood," willow being concededly wood, is more specific than "manufactures of willow," and baskets made of willow wood are dutiable under paragraph 214 of the act in question. Id.

Both wistaria, a vine-like shrub with a bark, and rattan, which belongs to the palm family, have the appearance and general qualities of wood; and bags and baskets made of either held dutiable under paragraph 208, Act 1897. Tuska v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 535.

Splash mats.—Wood strips, joined or sewed together with cords, with figures in imitation of paintings stenciled on these, used as splash mats, placed above washstands, held dutiable under paragraph 214, Act 1909. U. S. v. Butler Bros. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 390.

176. House or cabinet furniture wholly or in chief value of wood, wholly or partly finished, and manufactures of wood or bark, or of which wood or bark is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Construction of paragraph in general.
2. Bamboo.
3. Bedsteads.
4. Boards planed and matched for splines.
5. Boards tongued and grooved.
6. Boxes veneered with rosewood or ebony.
7. Ceilings painted on wood.
8. Embroidered silk screens.
9. Frames for pictures.
10. Furniture with metal ornamentation.
11. Harmonicas.
12. Holly whips.
13. Lumber fireproofed.
14. Manicure sticks.
15. Paintings on panels of papier mâché.
16. Partly manufactured whipstocks, fishing poles, and canes.
17. Picture frames.
18. Racing shells.
19. Smokers' tables.
20. Split bamboo.
21. Spools.
22. Statues in wood.
23. Upholstered furniture.
24. Wood brushes.
25. Wood flour.

1. Construction of paragraph in general.—In Act 1897, par. 208, providing for "furniture of wood, * * * or of which wood is the component material of chief value," the last clause as to chief value does not relate to the provision for furniture; and furniture whose frame work and principal bulk are of wood is furniture "of wood," within the meaning of the paragraph, though decorative metal may be the component of chief value. O. G. Hempstead & Son v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 168 Fed. 450, judgment affirmed U. S. v. O. G. Hempstead & Son (1910) 175 Fed. 966, 99 C. C. A. 356.

The provision for house or cabinet furniture of wood wholly or partly finished and manufactures of wood, in Act 1897, par. 208, was intended to cover all finished manufactured wooden articles, however different they may be from house or cabinet furniture. Nairn Linoleum Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 151 Fed. 955.

"Manufactures of wood," as used in paragraph 181, Act 1894, means articles made of wood, and completed into things different from what the wood was before. Dudley v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 74 Fed. 548, applying Hartranft v. Wiegmann (1887) 7 Sup. Ct. 1240, 121 U. S. 609, 30 L. Ed. 1012, and Maddock v. Magone (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 588, 152 U. S. 368, 38 L. Ed. 482, and judgment affirmed U. S. v. Dudley (1897) 79 Fed. 75, 24 C. C. A. 449.

Cabinet ware and house furniture, whether in pieces fitted so that they can be put together and made ready for use, or actually put together and made ready for use, as such furniture, if "finished," held dutiable under the provision for "cabinet ware and house furniture, finished," in Act 1883, and not under the provision for "house or cabinet furniture in piece or rough, and not finished." Richard v. Hedden (C. C. 1890) 42 Fed. 672, judgment reversed Hedden v. Richard (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 891, 149 U. S. 346, 37 L. Ed. 763.

The house or cabinet furniture dutiable under the provision for "house or cabinet furniture in piece or rough, and not finished," contained in Act 1883 is house or cabinet furniture, not only "in piece or rough," but also "not finished." Id.

The term "finished," as applied to house or cabinet furniture at and prior to the passage of Act 1883, in the furniture trade of this country, was used to designate not only house or cabinet furniture that was in pieces fitted so that they could be put together, and made ready for use as such furniture, but also house or cabinet furniture that was actually put together, and made ready for use as such furniture when shellacked or varnished or painted, etc. Id.

Where the importation consisted of the defined parts of a piece of furniture, it being apparent those parts were designed for a particular use and that their suitableness for any other purpose had been destroyed, the merchandise is taken out of the category of lumber or wood, it has become, as in the case here, a partly finished chair or an article of house furniture partly finished, and as such is dutiable under paragraph 215, Act 1909. Wanner v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 68.

2. Bamboo.—Bamboo scrolls for wall decoration and bamboo blinds for window shades, composed of strips of bamboo, joined together by cords, held dutiable under paragraph 230, Act 1890, as manufactures of wood. U. S. v. China & Japan Trading Co. (1896) 71 Fed. 864, 18 C. C. A. 335, reversing China & Japan Trading Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 733.

3. Bedsteads.—Metallic bedsteads held not dutiable as house or cabinet furniture. See paragraph 167.

4. Boards planed and matched for splines.—Boards planed and matched for splines held not dutiable as manufacture of wood. See paragraph 647.

5. Boards tongued and grooved.—Boards tongued and grooved held not dutiable as manufactures of wood. See paragraph 647.

6. Boxes veneered with rosewood or ebony.—Fancy boxes, of common wood, veneered with rosewood or ebony, and known to the trade as rosewood and ebony boxes, and as fancy boxes and furnished boxes, held dutiable under the act of 1846, as "manufactures of ebony, rosewood," etc. Sill v. Lawrence (C. C. 1850) Fed. Cas. No. 12,-850.

7. Ceilings painted on wood.—Ceilings painted on wood held not dutiable as manufactures of wood. See paragraph 652.

8. Embroidered silk screens.—Embroidered silk screens with wooden frames held not dutiable as screens of wood. See paragraph 358.

9. Frames for pictures.—Where paintings have been admitted free of duty, the frames on these, when framed, have, by a long course of practice in the customs, recognized in law, been dutiable; and where paintings are dutiable and are imported in frames, these frames are not integral parts of the pictures and cannot be deemed containers, either in themselves or by the rule ejusdem generis. The pictures and the frames are separable for tariff purposes. Kronfeld, Saunders & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 222. See, also, U. S. v. Hensel (1899) 98 Fed. 418, 39 C. C. A. 121.

10. Furniture with metal ornamentation.—Act 1897, par. 208, includes under the provision for "furniture of wood" Buhl furniture, in which metal ornamentation is the element of chief value, but in which wood predominates in quantity. O. G. Hempstead & Son v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 168 Fed. 450, judgment affirmed U. S. v. O. G. Hempstead & Son (1910) 175 Fed. 966, 99 C. C. A. 356.

11. Harmonicas.—Harmonicas made of wood held not dutiable as manufactures of wood. See paragraph 342.

12. Holly whips.—Holly whips, kept for sale by carriage men and hardware men, held improperly classified as "saddlery," under Act 1897, par. 447, but dutiable under paragraph 208, as manufactures of which wood is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for. Davies v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 107 Fed. 266.

13. Lumber fireproofed.—Lumber fireproofed held not dutiable as manufacture of wood. See paragraph 647.

14. Manicure sticks.—Manicure sticks, being completed articles of wood, several inches long, pointed at one end and beveled off at the other to form a cutting edge, held "manufactures of wood," under Act 1897, par. 208. E. B. Estes & Sons v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 176 Fed. 932.

15. Paintings on panels of papier mâché.—Paintings in oil on panels of papier mâché to go into frames of a false door held not dutiable as manufactures of wood. See paragraph 652.

16. Partly manufactured whipstocks, fishing poles, and canes.—Rattan sticks for whip handles, painted, polished, and nearly completed, were dutiable as "manufactures of wood," under paragraph 230 of the act of 1890, and not as "reeds, wrought or manufactured from rattans or reeds," under paragraph 229. Foppes v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 72 Fed. 45, following In re Foppes (C. C. 1893) 56 Fed. 817.

Partly-manufactured whipstocks, fishing poles, and canes, being made from rattans and malacca, having the outer rind or enamel removed, and being tapered, turned, sandpapered, and varnished, held dutiable as "manufactures of wood," under paragraph 230, Act 1890, and the similitude clause, and not as "reeds manufactured from rattans or reeds," under paragraph 229. In re Foppes (C. C. 1893) 56 Fed. 817.

17. Picture frames.—The word "paintings," as used in paragraph 454, Act 1894, cannot be construed to include the frames in which such paintings are imported; nor are the frames to be assessed for duty as "coverings," under section 19 of the customs administrative act of 1890 (section 5599, post), but they are to be classified as separate importations, and are dutiable, under paragraph 208, as manufactures of wood. U. S. v. Hensel (1899) 98 Fed. 418, 39 C. C. A. 121, reversing judgment (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 523.

An antique carved wood picture frame, imported in connection with a single painting, held subject to duty under Act 1890, par. 230, as a manufacture of wood, and not exempt as a part of a collection of antiquities. U. S. v. Gunther (1896) 71 Fed. 499, 18 C. C. A. 219.

18. Racing shells.—Racing shells held dutiable as manufactures of wood, under paragraph 215, Act 1909. Thayer v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 526.

19. Smokers' tables.—Tables having smokers' accessories held not dutiable as cabinet furniture of wood. See paragraph 381.

20. Split bamboo.—Split bamboo held not dutiable as a manufacture of wood. See paragraph 648.

21. Spools.—Wooden spools being excluded from subsection 18, § 28, Act 1909, as they are neither coverings, containers, nor of the costs, charges, and expenses therein provided, they must be rated for duty as though separate and distinct importations under paragraph 215 of that act. U. S. v. Hogan (1913) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 1; Same v. Ringk & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 349. See, also, Karthaus v. Frick (C. C. 1840) Fed. Cas. No. 7,615.

Spools not designed for use otherwise than in the bona fide transportation of the artificial silk yarn which they contained, and as used entering into the cost and value of their contents as appraised and assessed for duty, are not "containers or coverings" as those terms appear in subsection 18, § 28, Act 1909, and they are not ratable for duty as a separate entity under the fundamental rule that forbids double taxation. They are dutiable as a part of the contents themselves. U. S. v. Vandegrift & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 355. See, also, Karthaus v. Frick (C. C. 1840) Fed. Cas. No. 7,615.

22. Statues in wood.—Statues in wood held not dutiable as manufactures of wood. See paragraph 652.

23. Upholstered furniture.—In Act 1897, par. 208, relating to "furniture of wood, * * * and manufactures of wood, or of which wood is the component material of chief value," the furniture provision is not modified by the chief value clause; and upholstered furniture, whose frames are of wood, held dutiable under that provision, though wood is not the most valuable component. A. J. Woodruff & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 168 Fed. 452, judgment affirmed U. S. v. A. J. Woodruff & Co. (1909) 175 Fed. 776, 99 C. C. A. 348.

24. Wood brushes.—Sticks with the end cut so as to resemble a feather duster held dutiable as manufactures of wood under Act 1909, and not as brushes. U. S. v. Sheldon & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 330.

25. Wood flour.—Wood flour or wood pulp held dutiable as manufacture of wood. See paragraph 648.

SCHEDULE E.—SUGAR, MOLASSES, AND MANUFACTURES OF

177. Sugars, tank bottoms, sirups of cane juice, melada, concentrated melada, concrete and concentrated molasses, testing by the polariscope not above seventy-five degrees, seventy-one one-hundredths of 1 cent per pound, and for every additional degree shown by the polariscopic test, twenty-six one-thousandths of 1 cent per pound additional, and fractions of a degree in proportion; molasses testing not above forty degrees, 15 per centum ad valorem; testing above forty degrees and not above fifty-six degrees, 2¼ cents per gallon; testing above fifty-six degrees, 4½ cents per gallon; sugar drainings and sugar sweepings shall be subject to duty as molasses or sugar, as the case may be, according to polariscopic test: Provided, That the duties imposed in this paragraph shall be effective on and after the first day of March, nineteen hundred and fourteen, until which date the rates of duty provided by paragraph two hundred and sixteen of the tariff Act approved August fifth, nineteen hundred and nine, shall remain in force: Provided, however, That so much of paragraph two hundred and sixteen of an Act to provide revenue, equalize duties, and encourage the industries of the United States, and for other purposes, approved August fifth, nineteen hundred and nine, as relates to the color test denominated as Number Sixteen Dutch standard in color, shall be and is hereby repealed.

This paragraph, as originally enacted, contained the following proviso: "Provided further, That on and after the first day of May, nineteen hundred and sixteen, the articles hereinbefore enumerated in this paragraph shall be admitted free of duty." Said proviso was repealed by Act April 27, 1916, c. 93, § 1, 39 Stat.

Beet sugar.—In construing Act 1897, par. 209, relating to "sugar above number sixteen Dutch standard in color, and * * * sugar which has gone through a process of refining," held, that it is not necessary that, in order to come within the first clause of this provision, sugar should be capable of being used commercially, without refining, as cane sugar; and therefore beet sugar, which is not so capable, is included therein. Franklin Sugar Refining Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 653.

Color test.—Color, not quality, held to be the test in determining the rate of duty on sugar under R. S. § 2504, Schedule G. Merritt v. Welsh (1881) 104 U. S. 694, 26 L. Ed. 896.

Loaf sugar.—In determining whether sugar drainings should be classed under a tariff act as "not above fifty-six degrees" by the polariscope, or as "fifty-six degrees and above," held, that the rule of de minimis non curat lex does not apply to drainings testing 56.-025, so as to require their classification under the former provision as testing 56, by disregarding the fraction of a degree. U. S. v. Lueder (1907) 154 Fed. 1, 83 C. C. A. 131, reversing decision (C. C. 1906) 146 Fed. 149.

In construing the provision in paragraph 209, Act 1897, regulating duty on sugars according to the polariscopic test, held that the expressions therein, "testing by the polariscope" and "shown by the polariscopic test," are not used with any special trade meaning that would confine them to a particular method of conducting such test, but import an intention on the part of Congress that the method adopted should be the one best calculated to make a scientific determination. U. S. v. Bartram Bros. (1904) 131 Fed. 833, 65 C. C. A. 557, reversing judgment Bartram Bros. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 123 Fed. 327, and writ of certiorari denied Bartram v. Same (1904) 25 Sup. Ct. 792, 195 U. S. 635, 49 L. Ed. 354.

Where no official polariscopic test had been made of the imported sugar, it was proper to classify the sugar in accordance with the settlement test, especially as the importers had agreed to accept such tests, and the Secretary of the Treasury had authorized their use. American Sugar Refining Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 893.

Crushed loaf sugar is not "loaf sugar," within Act 1816, c. 107, where in commerce loaf sugar means sugar in loaves. U. S. v. Breed (C. C. 1832) Fed. Cas. No. 14,638.

Polariscope test.—Under Act 1897, specific rates of duties are laid upon imported sugars graduated according to the polariscopic test. These tests, while made by officers and experts subordinate to the appraiser, are reported to him, and by him, after ascertainment of the quality and value of the sugar, reported to the collector for classification. (1900) 23 Op. Atty. Gen. 238.

178. Maple sugar and maple sirup, 3 cents per pound; glucose or grape sugar, 1⅛ cents per pound; sugar cane in its natural state, or unmanufactured, 15 per centum ad valorem.

This paragraph, as originally enacted, contained the following proviso: "Provided, That on and after the first day of May, nineteen hundred and sixteen, the articles enumerated in this paragraph shall be admitted free of duty." Said proviso was repealed by Act April 27, 1916, c. 93, § 2, 39 Stat.

Notes of Decisions

Glucose and grape sugar.—Glucose and grape sugar are not dutiable as "burnt starch or gum substitute," as provided for in R. S. § 2504, Schedule M, but are properly assessed as nonenumerated manufactures, under section 2516. Weilbacher v. Merritt (C. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 85.

179. Saccharin, 65 cents per pound.

Saccharine.—Dulcin held not dutiable as saccharine. See paragraph 5.

Saccharine held not free of duty under the provision in Act 1883, for "all acids used for medicinal, chemical, or manufacturing purposes not specially enumerated or provided for," but dutiable, as a "chemical compound," under the provision for "all chemical compounds, * * * by whatever name known, and not specially enumerated or provided for." Lutz v. Magone (C. C. 1890) 41 Fed. 128, judgment affirmed (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 777, 153 U. S. 105, 38 L. Ed. 651; Cohn v. Spalding (C. C. 1885) 24 Fed. 19.

180. Sugar candy and all confectionery not specially provided for in this section, valued at 15 cents per pound or less, 2 cents per pound; valued at more than 15 cents per pound, 25 per centum ad valorem. The weight and the value of the immediate coverings, other than the outer packing case or other covering, shall be included in the dutiable weight and the value of the merchandise.

Chocolate.—Chocolate held not dutiable as confectionery. See paragraph 231.

Dragées.—Dragées are "confectionery," within Act 1897, par. 212. U. S. v. La Manna, Azema & Farnan (1908) 166 Fed. 751, 92 C. C. A. 431, reversing judgments La Manna, Azema & Farnan v. U. S. (1906) 144 Fed. 683, 75 C. C. A. 485, and Id. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 955.

Fruit tablets.—Confectionery known as "fruit tablets" held dutiable under Act 1883 as "sugar candy not colored." (1887) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 606.

Sweet crackers.—Sweet crackers, known as "wafers and biscuits," in which the proportion of the sweetened centers to the pastry envelopes, is large, but in which flour is used to a substantial extent, held not dutiable either directly or by similitude as "confectionery," under Act 1897. U. S. v. Thomas Meadows & Co. (1907) 154 Fed. 1005, 83 C. C. A. 297, affirming decree (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 757.

SCHEDULE F.—TOBACCO AND MANUFACTURES OF

181. Wrapper tobacco, and filler tobacco when mixed or packed with more than 15 per centum of wrapper tobacco, and all leaf tobacco the product of two or more countries or dependencies when mixed or packed together, if unstemmed, $1.85 per pound; if stemmed, $2.50 per pound; filler tobacco not specially provided for in this section, if unstemmed, 35 cents per pound; if stemmed, 50 cents per pound.

Notes of Decisions

Percentage test.—Unstemmed leaf tobacco suitable for cigar wrappers, when mixed or packed with filler tobacco, though constituting less than 15 per cent. of the whole, is separately dutiable at $1.85 per pound as wrapper tobacco, under paragraph 213 of the tariff act of July 24, 1897, and not as filler tobacco at 35 cents per pound. Rothschild & Bro. v. U. S. (1900) 21 Sup. Ct.

197, 198, 179 U. S. 463, 45 L. Ed. 277, answering certified questions (1901) 109 Fed. 1062, 47 C. C. A. 686.

The percentage test is to be applied to the bale as a unit if the leaves are of such uniform character as to be collectively of one class, and otherwise to the amount of each class in the bale; the separate hands in the bale are not to be taken as the unit. The test of size is to be applied, not to a leaf as a whole, but to each half as divided by the stem, and there must be 85 halves out of each 100 halves having a portion sufficiently fine in texture, of the requisite size, to make at least one wrapper. The test of whether "100 leaves are required to weigh a pound" is applied to the whole leaves. Erhardt v. Schroeder (1894) 15 Sup. Ct. 45, 48, 155 U. S. 124, 39 L. Ed. 94.

Under Schedule F, Act 1883, the bale in which tobacco is imported held not the unit upon which duty is to be calculated, but such unit is the separate quantity of such tobacco. Falk v. Robertson (1890) 11 Sup. Ct. 41, 137 U. S. 225, 34 L. Ed. 645; (1884) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 1.

Except for the purpose of imposing a penalty for importing a bale containing more than 15 per cent. of wrapper, and less than 85 per cent. of filler, any percentage system is abandoned in Act 1897, and all wrapper tobacco, wherever found, and in whatever amount, is subject to the duty of $1.85 per pound, provided in paragraph 213 of said act. Rothschild v. U. S. (1901) 106 Fed. 989, 46 C. C. A. 86, affirming judgment U. S. v. Rothschild (C. C. 1898) 87 Fed. 798.

In determining the classification of leaf tobacco under Act 1883, par. 246, the unit to which the percentage test is to be applied is the commercial bale. U. S. v. Rosenwald (1895) 67 Fed. 323, 14 C. C. A. 399, following Same v. Blumlein (1893) 5 C. C. A. 142, 55 Fed. 383, distinguishing Falk v. Robertson (1890) 11 Sup. Ct. 41, 137 U. S. 225, 34 L. Ed. 645; Erhardt v. Schroeder (1894) 15 Sup. Ct. 45, 155 U. S. 124, 39 L. Ed. 94, and reversing judgment In re Rosenwald (C. C. 1894) 59 Fed. 765.

Under the provisions of Act 1883, pars. 246, 247, that "leaf tobacco of which 85 per cent. is" suitable for wrappers, and of a specified grade, shall be subject to a certain duty, and that "all other tobacco in leaf" shall pay a lower duty, the unit upon which the percentage is to be calculated is the bale as packed at the plantation. In re Blumlein (1893) 55 Fed. 383, 5 C. C. A. 142, affirming (C. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 228; Hubbard v. Soby (1893) 55 Fed. 388, 5 C. C. A. 147, affirming judgment Soby v. Hubbard (C. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 234, and distinguishing Falk v. Robertson (1890) 11 Sup. Ct. 41, 137 U. S. 225, 34 L. Ed. 645.

The 85 per cent. clause does not refer merely to size and fineness, but to size, fineness, and weight. Id.

If a bale of tobacco contained any portion suitable for cigar wrappers, the whole bale was dutiable, under paragraph 242, Act 1890, as "suitable for cigar wrappers," and the court had no discretion to determine whether there was an appreciable percentage of such tobacco in the bale. Stachelberg v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 72 Fed. 50.

182. The term wrapper tobacco as used in this section means that quality of leaf tobacco which has the requisite color, texture, and burn, and is of sufficient size for cigar wrappers, and the term filler tobacco means all other leaf tobacco. Collectors of customs shall not permit entry to be made, except under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, of any leaf tobacco, unless the invoices of the same shall specify in detail the character of such tobacco, whether wrapper or filler, its origin and quality. In the examination for classification of any imported leaf tobacco, at least one bale, box, or package in every ten, and at least one in every invoice, shall be examined by the appraiser or person authorized by law to make such examination, and at least ten hands shall be examined in each examined bale, box, or package.

Wrapper tobacco.—Under Act 1883, § 246, declaring the duty on leaf tobacco of which 85 per cent. is of the requisite size and fineness of texture to be suitable for wrappers, and of which more than 100 leaves are required to weigh a pound, the percentage test is to be applied to the bale as a unit, if the leaves are of such uniform character as to be collectively of one class, otherwise to the amount of each class in the bale. The separate hands in the bale are not to be taken as the unit. Erhardt v. Schroeder (1894) 155 U. S. 124, 15 Sup. Ct. 45, 39 L. Ed. 94.

The test of size is to be applied, not to a leaf as a whole, but to each half as divided by the stem, and there must be 85 halves out of each 100 halves having a portion sufficiently fine in texture, of the requisite size, to make at least one wrapper. Id.

The test of whether "100 leaves are required to weigh a pound" is applied to the whole leaves. Id.

Evidence held to show that importations of unstemmed Sumatra tobacco were suitable for cigar wrappers, and therefore dutiable at $2 per pound under Act 1890, deteriorated by drying five months. In re Phelps (C. C. 1892) 53 Fed. 238.

183. All other tobacco, manufactured or unmanufactured, not specially provided for in this section, 55 cents per pound; scrap tobacco, 35 cents per pound.

Notes of Decisions

Manufactured tobacco.—A cigar-shaped bundle of tobacco of an extremely large size, if used for display, though capable of being smoked held dutiable as manufactured tobacco and not as a cigar. D'Estrinoz v. Gerker (C. C. 1890) 43 Fed. 285.

Scrap tobacco.—Tobacco sweepings, used in manufacture of stogies and cigarettes, held dutiable under Act 1897, par. 215, as unmanufactured tobacco, and not under paragraph 463, as waste not specially provided for. Latimer v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 242, 223 U. S. 501, 56 L. Ed. 526.

Tobacco composed of fragments clipped from the ends of cigars, or broken off in the course of manufacture, held dutiable as "tobacco, unmanufactured, not specially enumerated," under Schedule F, and not as "tobacco, manufactured, of all descriptions * * * not specially enumerated," under the same Schedule. Seeberger v. Castro (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 766, 153 U. S. 32, 38 L. Ed. 624.

Act 1890, having no provision for "tobacco, unmanufactured, not specially enumerated or provided for," the portions of leaf tobacco which break off in handling the tobacco before stemming or in the process of shipping, and are swept up, and are and can be used only for cigarettes and the fillers of the cheaper grades of cigars, and are not covered by any of the paragraphs of the tobacco schedule, may be classified as waste. U. S. v. Schroeder (1899) 93 Fed. 448, 35 C. C. A. 376, affirming judgment Schroeder v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 87 Fed. 201.

Leaf tobacco scraps, which are the remnants of tobacco, left after making cigars, and are used in the manufacture of snuff, cigarettes, and cheap cigars, held dutiable under paragraph 244, Act 1890, as "tobacco, manufactured, not especially enumerated or provided for," and not as "waste," under paragraph 472, nor as "unenumerated, unmanufactured goods," under section 4. Sheldon v. U. S. (1893) 55 Fed. 818, 5 C. C. A. 282.

Imported scrap tobacco held dutiable as manufactured tobacco under Act 1883. (1884) 17 Op. Atty. Gen. 646.

Tobacco not specially provided for.—Under Act 1897, par. 214, and paragraph 215, defining wrapper and filler tobacco, held, that tobacco neither suitable for wrappers nor fillers, but which may be used as a filler in the manufacture of a very small size of tobacco cigars, was not leaf tobacco, and was properly dutiable under paragraph 215. Dominguez Bros. v. U. S. (D. C. 1903) 122 Fed. 556.

Unmanufactured tobacco.—Congress, in using the words "unmanufactured tobacco," in Act 1897, par. 215, held to have adopted the construction given by Supreme Court to those words in earlier tariff act. Latimer v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 242, 223 U. S. 501, 56 L. Ed. 526.

184. Snuff and snuff flour, manufactured of tobacco, ground dry, or damp, and pickled, scented, or otherwise, of all descriptions, 55 cents per pound.

185. Cigars, cigarettes, cheroots of all kinds, $4.50 per pound and 25 per centum ad valorem, and paper cigars and cigarettes, including wrappers, shall be subject to the same duties as are herein imposed upon cigars.

Notes of Decisions

Cigars.—A cigar-shaped bundle of tobacco for display held not dutiable as a cigar. See paragraph 183.

SCHEDULE G.—AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS AND PROVISIONS

186. Horses and mules, 10 per centum ad valorem.

187. All live animals not specially provided for in this section, 10 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Birds.—Act March 2, 1861, exempted from duty "animals of all kinds; birds, singing and other, and land and water fowls"; and Act May 16, 1866, levied a duty of 20 per cent. "on all horses, mules, cattle, sheep, hogs, and other live animals." Held, that birds were not included in the terms "other live animals." The second statute must be read by the light of the first. Reiche v. Smythe (1871) 80 U. S. (13 Wall.) 162, 20 L. Ed. 566, reversing (C. C. 1870) Fed. Cas. No. 11,666.

Snails.—Words to which congress has given a special meaning in a tariff act will be presumed to retain that signification in a subsequent tariff act relating to the same subject matter, no contrary intention appearing. Accordingly snails may not be deemed "live animals." De Jonghe v. U. S. 1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 134. See, also, Reiche v. Smythe (1871) 13 Wall. 162, 20 L. Ed. 566.

188. Barley, 15 cents per bushel of forty-eight pounds.

189. Barley malt, 25 cents per bushel of thirty-four pounds.

190. Barley, pearled, patent, or hulled, 1 cent per pound.

191. Macaroni, vermicelli, and all similar preparations, 1 cent per pound.

192. Oats, 6 cents per bushel of thirty-two pounds; oatmeal and rolled oats, 30 cents per one hundred pounds; oat hulls, 8 cents per one hundred pounds.

Oat hulls.—A by-product in the manufacture of oatmeal, which consists merely of the broken hulls of the oats, and is known as "oatmeal feed," held dutiable as "oat hulls," under paragraph 231, Act 1897. U. S. v. McGettrick (C. C. 1905) 139 Fed. 304.

193. Rice, cleaned, 1 cent per pound; uncleaned rice, or rice free of the outer hull and still having the inner cuticle on, 5/8 of 1 cent per pound; rice flour, and rice meal, and rice broken which will pass through a number twelve sieve of a kind prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, 1/4 cent per pound; paddy, or rice having the outer hull on, 3/8 of 1 cent per pound.

Broken rice.—The fact that age and repeated handling of broken rice may have caused an infinitesimal increase in the percentage of the material that will pass through the standard sieve is not a sufficient reason for rejecting a test based on samples of such rice, especially where the failure to make a proper test at the time of importation was due to no fault of the importer. Seattle Brewing & Malting Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 176 Fed. 125.

Under paragraph 232, Act 1897, for "rice broken, which will pass through a sieve known commercially as number twelve wire sieve," the Secretary of the Treasury prescribed for the use of customs officers one of several kinds of sieves which were known commercially as "No. 12," though they varied somewhat in the size of their meshes. The kind selected was not the one which would allow the greatest quantity of rice to pass through. Held that the exclusive use of such a sieve might be prescribed, regardless of the fact that it was not the one most favorable to importers. Seattle Brewing & Malting Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 176 Fed. 125; Waken & McLaughlin v. Same (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 874.

Cleaned rice.—Patna or Bengal rice, from which both the outer and inner cuticle has been removed, held dutiable, under paragraph 193, Act 1894, as cleaned rice, though commercially known before the act as uncleaned rice. Talmage v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 77 Fed. 826, judgment affirmed (1897) 80 Fed. 887, 26 C. C. A. 218.

194. Biscuits, bread, wafers, cakes, and other baked articles, and puddings, by whatever name known, containing chocolate, nuts, fruit, or confectionery of any kind, and without regard to the component material of chief value, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Honey cakes.—Honey cakes, or so-called gingerbread, not containing chocolate, nuts, fruit, or confectionery of any kind are excluded from paragraph 194, Act 1913. The record does not sustain the claim that they are biscuits, bread, or wafers entitled to free entry under paragraph 417. The record does support the claim that the goods are classifiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article under paragraph 385 of the act. U. S. v. Neuman & Schwiers Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 228.

Iced sweetened biscuits.—These biscuits, surfaced with icing, "contain" the icing and this icing constitutes confectionery. It is not necessary that it should be made up into forms before it can be so classed. They are dutiable under paragraph 194, Act 1913. U. S. v. Meadows & Co. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 532.

Waverly bread.—Waverly bread is clearly distinguishable by its form, consistency, and composition from both cake and bread, as these terms are commonly understood. Its characteristics make of it biscuits, a term covering not only a species of bread, but also both sweetened and unsweetened crackers. U. S. v. Dunlop & Ward (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 278.

195. Butter and butter substitutes, 2½ cents per pound.

Notes of Decisions

Butter substitutes.—"Ghee" is within the provisions for "butter, and substitutes therefor," in Act 1897, par. 236. Sahadi Bros. v. U. S. (1908) 157 Fed. 1004, 85 C. C. A. 679, affirming judgment (C. C. 1906) 152 Fed. 486.

196. Cheese and substitutes therefor, 20 per centum ad valorem.

197. Beans, and lentils, not specially provided for, 25 cents per bushel of sixty pounds.

Notes of Decisions

Beans and lentils.—Beans in a dry state, used for food, are dutiable as "vegetables" at 10 per cent. ad valorem, under Schedule G of Act 1883, and are not entitled to free entry as "seeds." Sonn v. Magone (1895) 159 U. S. 417, 16 Sup. Ct. 67, 40 L. Ed. 203; Windmuller v. Robertson (C. C. 1885) 23 Fed. 652; Salomon v. Robertson (C. C. 1889) 41 Fed. 517.

Beans and lentils in a mature and dry state held dutiable, under Act 1883, under the description "vegetables," contained in paragraph 286, and not entitled to free entry as "seeds" under paragraph 760. Sonn v. Magone (1895) 16 Sup. Ct. 67, 69, 159 U. S. 417, 40 L. Ed. 203.

The question being whether white beans are "vegetables," within the meaning of the schedule of Act March 3, 1883, entitled "Provisions," or whether they are "seeds," under the head of "Free List—Sundries," evidence of the common designation of beans as an article of food should be admitted. Robertson v. Salomon (1888) 130 U. S. 412, 9 Sup. Ct. 559, 32 L. Ed. 995.

If the commercial designation of an article fails to determine its classification, then resort must be had to its common designation. Thus, the question being whether white beans are "vegetables," within Act 1883, entitled "provisions," or whether they are "seeds," under the head of "Free-List—Sundries," evidence of the common designation of beans as an article of food should be admitted. Id.

The word "beans," appearing in the tariff act of 1897, was continued in the act of 1909, and this continuance carries the presumption that the term was there employed in the sense affixed by judicial interpretation. U. S. v. De Boer & Dik (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 30.

198. Beets of all kinds, 5 per centum ad valorem.

199. Beans, peas, prepared or preserved, or contained in tins, jars, bottles, or similar packages, including the weight of immediate coverings, 1 cent per pound; mushrooms and truffles, including the weight of immediate coverings, 2½ cents per pound.

Notes of Decisions

Beans prepared, etc.—Soya beans, cooked and salted, held not dutiable as beans prepared, etc. See paragraph 606.

Mushrooms.—An edible fungus held not dutiable as mushrooms. See paragraph 215.

Mushrooms, dried in order to preserve them and placed in hermetically sealed tins holding from 30 to 45 pounds, held within the provision in Act 1897 relating to mushrooms prepared or preserved in tins, jars, bottles, etc., rather than paragraph 257, relating to vegetables in their natural state. Choy Chong Woh & Co. v. U. S. (1907) 153 Fed. 879, 82 C. C. A. 608.

Mushrooms contained in tins, and inclosed in differing numbers of tins, and in wooden cases, may not be deemed mushrooms cut, sliced, or dried in undivided packages of a given weight and dutiable as such, but are plainly mushrooms contained in tins and are dutiable per pound, the weight of the immediate coverings included, under the first clause of paragraph 251 Act 1909. Choy Chong Woh & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 274. See, also, U. S. v. Yamashita (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 341.

—— Evaporated mushrooms.—The provision in paragraph 241, Act 1897, for mushrooms "prepared or preserved," held not to include mushrooms dried merely by evaporation, but they were dutiable under paragraph 257 as "vegetables in their natural state." Kraut v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 139 Fed. 94.

Tare.—The merchandise is beans, peas, and mushrooms in tins. The collector included the weight of the water in the tins to determine the weight of the goods. The water was designedly placed in the tins as a preservative of the contents, and is common to the condition of importations of this kind. By paragraph 251, Act 1909, this method of packing was recognized, and the weight of the tins, with their contents, constitutes dutiable weight, and no allowance for tare can be made. Austin, Nichols & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 167. See also, Shallus v. Same (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 316.

Truffles.—Truffles in tins held dutiable as "mushrooms in tins," by similitude, under Act 1897, par. 241, and not as vegetables. Von Bremen, MacMonnies & Co. v. U. S. (1909) 168 Fed. 889, 94 C. C. A. 301.

Truffles held dutiable under Act 1890, par. 287, as "vegetables of all kinds, prepared or preserved, including pickles and sauces of all kinds, not specially provided for," and not under paragraph 271, as "mushrooms, prepared or preserved in tins, jars, bottles or otherwise." Park v. U. S. (C. C. 1894) 61 Fed. 398.

200. Vegetables, if cut, sliced or otherwise reduced in size, or if parched or roasted, or if pickled, or packed in salt, brine, oil, or prepared in any way; any of the foregoing not specially provided for in this section, and bean stick or bean cake, miso, and similar products, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Vegetables in general.
2. Beans.
3. Cabbages partially dried, etc.
4. Capers.
5. Cucumbers and cauliflowers packed in salt.
6. Mushrooms.
7. Peppers and pimentos.
8. Pickled limes.
9. Sliced beets kiln-dried.
10. Sliced vegetables.
11. Soups in tablets.
12. Tomato paste.
13. Truffles.
14. Vegetables in tins.

1. Vegetables in general.—In Act 1897, par. 241, the term "vegetables" is used in accordance with the ordinary understanding, vegetables usually served at dinner. Von Bremen, MacMonnies & Co. v. U. S. (1909) 168 Fed. 889, 94 C. C. A. 301.

2. Beans.—Young, green beans, after being cut and shredded, are placed in barrels, and salt is put over them. The juices of the vegetable mixing with the salt form a brine, and this brine, by the record, acted as a preservative. This importation was of prepared vegetables, and they were dutiable as such. U. S. v. De Boer & Dik (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 30. See, also, Sun Kwong On v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 17.

3. Cabbages partially dried, etc.—Hanks and balls of dried and salted cabbage, the salting and manipulation of which were done as a preparation, fitting the cabbage for cooking purposes, and intended to be permanent, held dutiable as vegetables "prepared or preserved," under Act 1897, par. 241, and not as vegetables in their "natural state," under paragraph 257. Sun Kwong On v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 177 Fed. 595; Id. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 17. See, also, U. S. v. Strohmeyer & Arpe Co. (1909) 167 Fed. 533, 93 C. C. A. 65.

4. Capers.—Capers held not dutiable as vegetables prepared. See paragraph 385.

5. Cucumbers and cauliflowers packed in salt.—Cauliflowers that have been trimmed, washed, and packed in brine for preservation during transportation, and to keep them in their natural state, and that when taken out of it and washed are still in their natural state, held dutiable under Act 1897, par. 257, as "vegetables in their natural state," rather than under paragraph 241, as "vegetables prepared or preserved." U. S. v. Strohmeyer & Arpe Co. (1909) 167 Fed. 533, 93 C. C. A. 65.

Cucumbers and cauliflower, packed in salt, held dutiable under Act 1890, par. 287, as "vegetables * * * prepared or preserved," and not under paragraph 288, as "vegetables in their natural state not specially provided for." Alart v. U. S. (C. C. 1894) 61 Fed. 500.

6. Mushrooms.—Mushrooms held not dutiable as vegetables. See paragraph 199.

7. Peppers and pimentos.—Though pleasantness in taste is essential to a vegetable, Spanish red peppers and pimentos morrones used both as a garnish and as food are vegetables as that term is commonly, ordinarily, and popularly understood, and were dutiable under paragraph 252, Act 1909. Austin, Nichols & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 9.

8. Pickled limes.—Pickled limes held not vegetables. See paragraph 220.

9. Sliced beets kiln-dried.—Sliced beets, kiln-dried, held, under Act 1897, "vegetables prepared," rather than vegetables in their natural state, under paragraph 257, or vegetable substances, crude or manufactured, under paragraph 617. Petry v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 261.

10. Sliced vegetables.—Sliced vegetables held dutiable as vegetables in their natural state. See paragraph 200.

The slicing of vegetables solely to facilitate the natural drying operation held not sufficient to remove them from their natural state; and mushrooms cleaned, sliced, and dried in the sun are dutiable as "vegetables in their natural state," under Act 1897, par. 257, rather than as "vegetables prepared or preserved," under paragraph 241. A. Zanmati & Co. v. U. S. (1907) 153 Fed. 880, 82 C. C. A. 626.

11. Soups in tablets.—The provisions of paragraph 252, Act 1909, were so enlarged as to include bean stick, bean cake, miso, and similar products, and, whether "vegetables prepared in any way" is broad enough to cover Maggi's desiccated soup tablets, it is clear that this product is so similar to bean stick and bean cake that it falls within the "similar products" of the paragraph. Anderson & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 108.

That Maggi's soup tablets are vegetables prepared for soup does not take them out of the category of "vegetables, prepared," in paragraph 252, Act 1909. Hunter & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 32.

12. Tomato paste.—Tomato paste held dutiable as a prepared vegetable under paragraph 252, Act 1909. Vitelli & Son v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 75.

13. Truffles.—Truffles held dutiable as vegetables, etc. See paragraph 199.

14. Vegetables in tins.—Vegetables that have been packed in tin cans and subjected to heat to expel the air, then hermetically sealed and again heated for the purpose of sterilization, held not vegetables in the natural state, but prepared vegetables, and dutiable under paragraph 241, Act 1897. Vitelli v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 237. See, also, U. S. v. Strohmeyer (1909) 167 Fed. 533, 93 C. C. A. 65.

201. Pickles, including pickled nuts, sauces of all kinds, not specially provided for in this section, and fish paste or sauce, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

In general.—Articles are not to be removed from a provision for pickles and sauces, and placed in a provision for drugs, simply because a medical or therapeutic property may be extracted from them. S. S. Pierce Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 176 Fed. 440.

Anchovy and bloater paste.—"Anchovy paste" and "bloater paste" held not dutiable as "sauces," but as "fish preserved or prepared," within Act 1883. Bogle v. Magone (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 718, 720, 152 U. S. 623, 38 L. Ed. 574, reversing (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 226.

"Bloater paste," being a kind of herring ground into paste, and mixed with condiments and spices for use as a sauce, and also packed in small tin cans, held dutiable, under paragraph 295, Act 1890, as "fish in cans or packages made of tin," and not as a "sauce," under paragraph 287. In re Johnson (C. C. 1893) 56 Fed. 822.

Capers.—Capers held not dutiable as pickles. See paragraph 385.

Capers pickled in vinegar, which are used as a condiment and in flavoring sauces, held dutiable under Act 1897, par. 241, relating to "pickles and sauces of all kinds." S. S. Pierce Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 176 Fed. 440.

Capers, put up in vinegar, held dutiable as pickles. Austin, Nichols & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 261.

There is no limitation on the word "pickles" as used in paragraph 253, Act 1909, and pickled capers are dutiable under it. Godillot & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 408.

Pickled walnuts.—The provision for "pickles" in Act 1897, par. 241, covers only vegetables. So pickled walnuts are excluded, and are classifiable as unenumerated manufactures under section 6. U. S. v. Acker, Merrall & Condit Co. (1909) 171 Fed. 77, 96 C. C. A. 181.

Sauces.—Thick soy held not a sauce. See paragraph 385.

In Act 1897, par. 241, the provision for "sauces" means for a seasoning or dressing usually placed on the table to be used with prepared food. U. S v. Wo On & Co. (1909) 167 Fed. 314, 92 C. C. A. 626.

Seed pods packed in brine.—Seed pods of the papperios plant may not be deemed vegetables, but when packed in brine, in view of the marked change indicated by a comparison of the phraseology of paragraphs 252 and 253, Act 1909, and the old law, they must be taken to be pickles, and dutiable as such. Microutsicos v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 342.

202. Cider, 2 cents per gallon.

203. Eggs frozen or otherwise prepared or preserved in tins or other packages, not specially provided for in this section, including the weight of the immediate coverings or containers, 2 cents per pound; frozen or liquid egg albumen, 1 cent per pound.

Notes of Decisions

Eggs frozen in tins.—Hen's eggs, having their whites and yolks mixed in exact proportion, the white and the yolk of each egg being thrown into a common receptacle and the total contents being placed in hermetically sealed tin cans and frozen for shipment, held dutiable under paragraph 256, Act 1909, as eggs not specially provided for. Horsfield v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 178; Id. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 138. See, also, Sun Kwong On v. U. S. (1906) 143 Fed. 115, 74 C. C. A. 309.

204. Eggs, dried, 10 cents per pound; eggs, yolk of, 10 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Dry egg yolk.—Dry egg yolk, not being enumerated in Act 1883, and assimilating to albumen and eggs, articles on the free list, in two or more only of these four particulars, held not free under that act by similitude, but is subject to duty as a nonenumerated manufactured article, under R. S. § 2513. Lazard v. Magone (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 662.

205. Hay, $2 per ton.

Hay.—Hay is a raw or unmanufactured article, and subject to a duty of 10 per centum ad valorem, under R. S. § 2516. Frazee v. Moffitt (C. C. 1882) 18 Fed. 584.

206. Honey, 10 cents per gallon.

207. Hops, 16 cents per pound; hop extract and lupulin, 50 per centum ad valorem.

208. Garlic, 1 cent per pound; onions, 20 cents per bushel of 57 pounds.

209. Peas, green or dried, in bulk or in barrels, sacks, or similar packages, 10 cents per bushel of sixty pounds; split peas, 20 cents per bushel of sixty pounds; peas in cartons, papers, or other similar packages, including the weight of the immediate covering, ⅓ cent per pound.

Notes of Decisions

Native Indian chick pea.—The scientific or botanical name does not control as against an applicable common nomenclature. The "desi gram" of the importation is interchangeable in ordinary use with "chick pea," and the term "pea" as used in paragraph 209, Act 1913, includes every known kind of edible pea. U. S. v. Jones (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 135.

210. Orchids, palms, azalea indica, and cut flowers, preserved or fresh, 25 per centum ad valorem; lily of the valley pips, tulips, narcissus, begonia, and gloxinia bulbs, $1 per thousand; hyacinth bulbs, astilbe, dielytra, and lily of the valley clumps, $2.50 per thousand; lily bulbs and calla bulbs or corms, $5 per thousand; herbaceous peony, Iris Kaempferri or Germanica, canna, dahlia, and amaryllis bulbs, $10 per thousand; all other bulbs, roots, root stocks, corms, and tubers, which are cultivated for their flowers or foliage, 50 cents per thousand: Provided, That all mature mother flowering bulbs imported exclusively for propagating purposes shall be admitted free of duty.

Notes of Decisions

1. Construction of paragraph in general.
2. Bleached wheat stems.
3. Bulbs.
4. —— Mature mother flowering bulbs.
5. Hyacinth clumps.
6. Lily buds.
7. Lily of the valley.
8. Palms preserved.
9. Roses.
10. Tulips.
11. Statice wreaths.

1. Construction of paragraph in general.—This paragraph as written is not ambiguous, and its application as written will lead to no absurdity, manifest contradiction of its apparent purpose, hardship, or injustice. There is, then, no occasion to invoke rules of construction; congress must be presumed to have intended to make the change it did make; and this paragraph must be understood and applied according to the natural import of the language employed. Maltus & Ware v. U. S. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 525.

2. Bleached wheat stems.—Bleached wheat stems held not dutiable as natural flowers preserved or fresh. See paragraph 494.

3. Bulbs.—Bulbs not medicinal and not edible, but used for producing flowers, held not within the provision of the free list of act 1883, but dutiable under the provision for "bulbs and bulbous roots not medicinal, and not specially enumerated and provided for in this act." Rolker v. Erhardt (C. C. 1890) 42 Fed. 443.

Tulip bulbs are not dutiable as "tulips" under the second clause of paragraph 210, Act 1913, but as "all other bulbs" under the sixth. Maltus & Ware v. U. S. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 525.

There is nothing in the act or in its legislative history which would justify the conclusion that congress intended that the term "bulbs" should be given a strictly scientific or botanical meaning; on the contrary, the fact that congress applied the term to other plant growths, not true bulbs, enumerated in paragraph 210, conclusively establishes that such was not its intention. Maltus & Ware v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 376.

4. —— Mature mother flowering bulbs.—Orchid plants, known as Cattleyas, which at the time of importation had already flowered and would never flower again, and were useful for propagating, and for no other commercial purpose, and which, although not true bulbs, were known to the trade as orchid bulbs, were assessed for duty at 25 per cent. ad valorem as orchids under paragraph 210, Act 1913. Held, that the same were entitled to free entry under the proviso to said paragraph as mature mother flowering bulbs imported exclusively for propagating purposes. Maltus & Ware v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 376.

5. Hyacinth clumps.—The only assignable reason for the change of "hyacinths" in paragraph 251, Act 1897, to "hyacinth" in paragraph 263, Act 1909, is the word in the last case was employed as an adjective and not a noun, and "hyacinth" in the connection there used must accordingly take its grammatical construction as an adjective; and this more especially as there is nothing to indicate a contrary intent in framing that paragraph. Hyacinth clumps are clusters of roots or bulbs joined together, and are within the ordinary meaning of the word "clumps." A comparison between the former law and the later form of it seems to make it clear the importation was dutiable not as hyacinth, and so taking a higher duty, but as bulbs from which clumps are propagated, at a lesser rate of duty, under paragraph 261, Tariff Act 1909. Breck & Son v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 26.

6. Lily buds.—Lily buds, imported in condition to open in full bloom immediately upon arrival at their destination in this country, held dutiable as "lilies," under Act 1897, par. 251, and not free of duty under paragraph 617, as "vegetable substances, crude or unmanufactured, not otherwise specially provided for." F. B. Vandegrift & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 123 Fed. 1002.

7. Lily of the valley.—In construing the provision in Act 1894, par. 234½, for "lily of the valley * * * plants used for forcing," held that lily of the valley roots, sprouted, which are imported for forcing, held dutiable thereunder, being included within the term "plants," in a popular sense, though not technically. McAlister v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 147 Fed. 773.

8. Palms preserved.—Palm leaves bleached and dyed held not dutiable as palms preserved. See paragraph 347.

Palm leaves subjected to a process of painting held not dutiable as palms preserved. See paragraph 347.

9. Roses.—Where merchandise comprised certain roses claimed as free under Act 1894, par. 587, as plants known as "nursery stock," they were properly assessed under paragraph 234½ of said act as plants used for forcing under glass as cut flowers. Cleary & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 99 Fed. 432.

10. Tulips.—Congress must be presumed to have intended a change of meaning in changing the adjective "tulip," in Act 1909, to the noun "tulips," in paragraph 210, Act 1913. Maltus & Ware v. U. S. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 525.

11. Statice wreaths.—Statice wreaths, which have all the appearance of "natural flowers * * * preserved," held dutiable under the enumeration of such articles in Act 1897, par. 251. Bayersdorfer & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 171 Fed. 286.

211. Stocks, cuttings, or seedlings of Myrobolan plum, Mahaleb or Mazzard cherry, Manetti multiflora and briar rose, Rosa Rugosa, three years old or less, $1 per thousand plants; stocks, cuttings, or seedlings of pear, apple, quince, and the Saint Julien plum, three years old or less, $1 per thousand plants; rose plants, budded, grafted, or grown on their own roots, 4 cents each; stocks, cuttings, and seedlings, of all fruit and ornamental trees, deciduous and evergreen shrubs and vines, and all trees, shrubs, plants, and vines commonly known as nursery or greenhouse stock, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Cuttings of shrubs and plants.—Under Act 1897, par. 252, relating (1) to "rose plants" and (2) to "cuttings" of "shrubs" and of "plants," rooted rose cuttings that have been placed in sand to facilitate handling, but have never been in soil, fall within the latter provision as cuttings of shrubs or plants. U. S. v. American Express Co. (1908) 158 Fed. 808, 86 C. C. A. 68.

Evergreen seedlings.—In Act 1897, par. 252, the provision for "evergreen seedlings" held not restricted to such evergreen plants as the conifers and box, but extends to those that retain their verdure or greenness throughout the year; and seedlings of rhododendrons and laurels, that remain green constantly, were included in said provision. U. S. v. Ouwerkerk (1908) 166 Fed. 1022, 92 C. C. A. 668, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 916.

Rose plants.—Rose plants and azaleas mollis held dutiable, under paragraph 234½, Act 1894, as plants used for forcing under glass for cut flowers or decorative purposes, and were not entitled to free entry, under paragraph 587, as nursery stock. Richard v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 87 Fed. 192.

Only those briar roses that are three years old or less are entitled to admission at the rate of one dollar per thousand plants (paragraph 264, Act 1909), and the burden of proof was on the importers to show that the plants came within that description. Maltus & Ware v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 354.

212. Seeds: Castor beans or seeds, 15 cents per bushel of fifty pounds; flaxseed or linseed and other oil seeds not specially provided for in this section, 20 cents per bushel of fifty-six pounds; poppy seed, 15 cents per bushel of forty-seven pounds; mushroom spawn, and spinach seed, 1 cent per pound; canary seed, ½ cent per pound; caraway seed, 1 cent per pound; anise seed, 2 cents per pound; beet (except sugar beet), carrot, corn salad, parsley, parsnip, radish, turnip, and rutabaga seed, 3 cents per pound; cabbage, collard, kale, and kohl-rabi seed, 6 cents per pound; egg plant and pepper seed, 10 cents per pound; seeds of all kinds not specially provided for in this section, 5 cents per pound: Provided, That no allowance shall be made for dirt or other impurities in seeds provided for in this paragraph.

Beet and cabbage seed.—Beet and cabbage seed are "garden seed," and subject to a 20 per cent. ad valorem duty, under R. S. § 2502, and turnip and mangel-wurzel seed are field seed, and not garden seed, and are exempt from duty under the "free list" in R. S. § 2503. Ferry v. Livingston (1885) 115 U. S. 542, 6 Sup. Ct. 175, 29 L. Ed. 489.

Canary seed.—Canary seed, which is botanically a grass seed, but is used principally as a bird seed, and which is not known commercially as grass seed, held not free of duty under Act 1897, as "grass seeds," but dutiable as "seeds of all kinds not specially enumerated." Nordlinger v. U. S. (1904) 127 Fed. 683, 62 C. C. A. 409, affirming judgment U. S. v. Nordlinger (C. C. 1902) 119 Fed. 478.

Millet pulp.—Millet pulp, from which the hull has been removed, though adapted for use as food and not for agricultural purposes, and which will not germinate, held dutiable under paragraph 206½ of Act 1894, as seeds. Kaufmann v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 78 Fed. 804, judgment reversed U. S. v. Kauffman (1898) 84 Fed. 446, 28 C. C. A. 150.

Millet seeds.—Hulled millet seeds held not dutiable as seeds. See paragraph 385.

Tare.—Under Act 1883 making flaxseed dutiable at "twenty cents per bushel of fifty-six pounds," less the tare, a deduction should be made for an ascertained percentage of dirt and other impurities contained in the seed. Seeberger v. Wright & Lawther Oil & Lead Mfg. Co. (1895) 15 Sup. Ct. 583, 585, 157 U. S. 183, 39 L. Ed. 665.

Without passing on the relevancy, as testimony here, of a certificate showing the results of an analysis made at the place of export, this certificate may be taken as in the nature of an admission against interest, and since it is made apparent that no allowance is commonly made as between seller and buyer of castor seeds, except in cases where the impurities exceed 3 per cent. and then only for the excess over and above 3 per cent., the allowance here should have been, not for 5, but for the excess above 3, per cent., namely, 2 per cent. U. S. v. Baker Castor Oil Co. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 338.

213. Straw, 50 cents per ton.

214. Teazels, 15 per centum ad valorem.

215. Vegetables in their natural state, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Beans and lentils.
2. Beets, sliced and kiln-dried.
3. Cucumbers and cauliflower packed in salt.
4. Fungus.
5. Melon seeds roasted.
6. Mushrooms.
7. Onions.
8. Tomatoes.
9. Yams.
10. Wai san.

1. Beans and lentils.—Beans and lentils held dutiable as vegetables. See paragraph 197.

2. Beets, sliced and kiln-dried.—Sliced beets, kiln-dried, held not dutiable as vegetables in their natural state. See paragraph 200.

3. Cucumbers and cauliflower, packed in salt.—Cucumbers and cauliflower packed in salt, held not dutiable as vegetables in their natural state. See paragraph 200.

4. Fungus.—An edible fungus, that grows on the bark of trees and has been merely dried and packed loose, bears a greater similitude to vegetables in their natural state, enumerated in Act 1897, par. 257, than to mushrooms prepared, enumerated in paragraph 241. Sun Kwong On v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 170 Fed. 930.

5. Melon seeds roasted.—Melon seeds roasted held not dutiable as vegetables. See paragraph 385.

6. Mushrooms.—Evaporated mushrooms held dutiable as vegetables in their natural state. See paragraph 199.

7. Onions.—In passing Act 1897, par. 249, where onions are made dutiable "per bushel," congress must be assumed to have known the practice of the treasury department to consider 57 pounds as a bushel and to have intended to accept that as a standard. Hills Bros. Co. v. U. S. (1906) 151 Fed. 476, 81 C. C. A. 14, affirming judgment (C. C. 1906) 143 Fed. 695.

8. Tomatoes.—Tomatoes are "vegetables," rather than "fruits," in the common and popular acceptation of such words, and were not free of duty under the provision of the free list for "fruits, green, ripe, or dried," but dutiable under Act 1883, as "vegetables in their natural state." Nix v. Hedden (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 881, 882, 149 U. S. 304, 37 L. Ed. 745, affirming (C. C. 1889) 39 Fed. 109.

9. Yams.—In Act 1897, Free List, par. 704, the provision for "yams" includes a vegetable (pueraria roots) which, though not scientifically known as a yam, has always been so called in the trade that deals in it, and was the only vegetable so known that was imported prior to the passage of the act. Kwong Yuen Shing v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 317.

A leguminous plant of the genus Pueraria, grown in China, though occasionally designated a "yam" in commerce, as such designation is not definite, uniform, and general, held not a yam, but dutiable under paragraph 257, Act 1897, as a vegetable in its natural state. U. S. v. Kwong Yuen Shing (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 14.

10. Wai san.—Wai san, an edible root used by the Chinese as a vegetable, held because edible, removed from the provision for "drugs," in Act 1897, par. 20, and dutiable as "vegetables," under paragraph 257. Wing On Wo v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 891.

216. Fish, except shellfish, by whatever name known, packed in oil or in oil and other substances, in bottles, jars, kegs, tin boxes, or cans, 25 per centum ad valorem; all other fish, except shell fish, in tin packages, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem; caviar and other preserved roe of fish, 30 per centum ad valorem; fish, skinned or boned, ¾ of 1 cent per pound.

Notes of Decisions

1. Bottles.
2. Fish in packages.
3. Fish boned.
4. Fish roe or caviar.
5. Fish skinned and boned.
6. Haddock.
7. Herring and sardines.
8. Mackerel.
9. Presence of oil.
10. Salt fish in tins.

1. Bottles.—Bottles filled with anchovies, etc., as dutiable, see paragraph 83.

2. Fish in packages.—For decisions under former acts as to the determination of duty in reference to size and contents of packages, see the following cases: Strohmeyer & Arpe Co. v. U. S. (1910) 178 Fed. 268, 101 C. C. A. 400

(affirming judgment [C. C. 1909] 172 Fed. 295); Loggie v. Same (1905) 137 Fed. 813, 70 C. C. A. 433; Wieland v. Collector of Port of San Francisco (1900) 104 Fed. 541, 44 C. C. A. 23; La Manna v. U. S. (1895) 67 Fed. 233, 14 C. C. A. 381; U. S. v. Yamashita (C. C. 1910) 175 Fed. 1018; L. Gandolfi & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 152 Fed. 656; Harvey v. Same (C. C. 1905) 137 Fed. 816, judgment reversed U. S. v. Harvey & Outerbridge (1906) 142 Fed. 1039, 71 C. C. A. 685; Reiss v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 113 Fed. 1001; Meyer & Lange v. Same (C. C. 1900) 124 Fed. 293; Leggett v. Same (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 426; In re Wieland (C. C. 1899) 98 Fed. 99; Meyer v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 86 Fed. 120; Reiss v. Magone (C. C. 1889) 39 Fed. 105; U. S. v. Yamashita (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 341.

3. Fish boned.—Salmon from which large part of backbone had been removed held not dutiable as fish boned. See paragraph 483.

The term "boned," according to its common signification, does not necessarily mean boneless, but substantially freed of bone. Whether or not an article is boned cannot be determined by the process employed. A process, for instance, which will render a flat fish like the halibut boned may not have the same result when applied to a fish of different anatomical construction, such as the salmon. Woodward & Son v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 372.

4. Fish roe or caviar.—Fresh roe packed in tins after running through solution of brine held not dutiable as fish roe preserved for food purposes. See paragraph 478.

Fish roe, or caviar, in tin packages, held by virtue of the similitude clause of Act 1897 dutiable at the rate applicable to fish in tin packages, enumerated in paragraph 258, which article it resembles in quality, texture, and use, especially use, within the meaning of said section. Menzel & Co. v. U. S. (1906) 142 Fed. 1038, 71 C. C. A. 685, affirming judgment (C. C. 1904) 135 Fed. 918.

The constant presence and application of heat or cold as an arresting agency of decomposition does not constitute preservation. Moscahlades Bros. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 399.

Fish roe, salted sufficiently to preserve it during the winter, but not during the summer, in the climate of New York, is not "preserved" within the meaning of paragraph 216, Act 1913. Id.

When fish are dried, whether by means of the heat of the sun or otherwise, being thereby saved from decomposition for a substantial period of time, they are "preserved" within the common meaning of that term. U. S. v. Kagawa & Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 388.

The term "preserved" in paragraph 270, Act 1909, does not bear a restricted interpretation, and the provision there for "caviar, and other preserved roe of fish" was intended to classify all fish roe, which had been treated in any manner for preservation for food purposes, as preserved fish roe. Id.

An examination of the legislative record shows that the "situation as it existed" was known when the paragraph making caviar dutiable under Tariff Act 1909 was "pressed upon the attention of the legislative body"; and the words "other preserved" employed in that paragraph are not to be taken to defeat a manifest intention of the congress, and there being no evidence to show what process the caviar of the importation may have been subjected to, it was dutiable under paragraph 270, Act 1909. U. S. v. American Express Co. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 25. See, also, Kelly v. People (1890) 24 N. E. 56, 132 Ill. 363; U. S. v. Cohn (1899) 52 S. W. 38, 2 Ind. T. 474; Hubbard v. City of Taunton (1886) 5 N. E. 157, 140 Mass. 467.

5. Fish skinned and boned.—Herring in tins, which have been pickled, salted, skinned, or boned, held dutiable as "fish * * * in tin packages," under Act 1897, par. 258, rather than as "herrings, pickled or salted," or as "fish, skinned or boned," under paragraphs 260, 261. The fact of importation in tins controls over the other conditions set forth in the two latter paragraphs. Benson v. U. S. (1907) 159 Fed. 118, 86 C. C. A. 308.

So-called cream of codfish, consisting of codfish skinned and boned, and subjected to the further process of cutting or shredding, held dutiable as "fish, skinned or boned," under Act 1897, par. 261. H. B. Teed & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 447.

Act 1897, par. 259, providing that the duty on fresh-water fish, not specially provided for in the act, shall be a quarter of a cent a pound, does not apply to skinned fish, which are provided for in paragraph 261, relating to "fish, skinned or boned." Lake Ontario Fish Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 551.

Boned or skinned fish, packed in tin packages, but not in oil or in oil and other substances, is dutiable as "all other fish * * * in tin packages," at 15 per cent. ad valorem under the second clause of paragraph 216, Act 1913, and not at three-fourths of 1 per cent. per pound as "fish, skinned or boned," under the last clause. Tokstad-Burger Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 441.

6. Haddock.—As to haddock and other material combined, fish being conceded to be the article of chief value in the compound, the mixed-material clause of paragraph 481, Tariff Act of 1909, applies. It must be taken to be a manufacture in which fish constitutes the material of chief value and it is one not specially enumerated. It was dutiable as if wholly composed of fish and at the rate assessed by the board. Benson v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 467. See, also, Murphy v. Arnson (1877) 96 U. S. 131, 24 L. Ed. 773; American Express Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 39.

7. Herring and sardines.—For decisions under former acts relating to herring and sardines, see the following cases: Benson v. U. S. (1907) 159 Fed. 118, 86 C. C. A. 308; U. S. v. Rosenstein (1899) 98 Fed. 420, 39 C. C. A. 122 (affirming judgment [C. C. 1898] 91 Fed. 637); Lincoln, Willey & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 178 Fed. 599; Kauffmann Bros. v. Same (C. C. 1899) 99 Fed. 430; U. S. v. Rosenstein (C. C. 1898) 91 Fed. 637; Rosenstein v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 71 Fed. 949; In re De Long (C. C. 1895) 70 Fed. 775, judgment affirmed De Long v. U. S. (1896) 76 Fed. 453, 22 C. C. A. 274; In re Johnson (C. C. 1893) 56 Fed. 822; Hansen v. Robertson (C. C. 1887) 29 Fed. 686; U. S. v. Miller & Tokstad (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 256; Smith & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 40; U. S. v. Haaker & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 471; Ahlbrecht & Son v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 471; U. S. v. Rosenstein (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 304.

8. Mackerel.—Tariff acts are not drawn in the terms of science, but in those of commerce, presumptively the language in common use; and while the tunny fish may be a mackerel in the eye of science, it cannot be so classified for customs purposes, it not being popularly or commercially known as such. The fish being fish in tin packages were properly assessed under paragraph 270, Act 1909. Meyer & Lange v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 181.

Merchandise not coming within the eo nomine designation of fresh mackerel in paragraph 273, Tariff Act 1909, was properly assessed as fish in packages of less than one-half barrel, dutiable at 30 per cent. ad valorem under paragraph 270, Act 1909. Strohmeyer & Arpe Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 331.

9. Presence of oil.—Chemical analysis showing 5.7 per cent. oil with fish in tins, it is immaterial how this oil became present. The additional duty provided in paragraph 216, Tariff Act 1913, was intended to reach any case in which oil is part of the substance in which the fish is found packed when offered for importation. Strohmeyer & Arpe Co. v. U. S. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 527.

10. Salt fish in tins.—Merchandise being fish, salted, and at the same time fish in tin packages, it was covered by both paragraphs 270 and 273, Tariff Act 1909. As to which of these apply the more specifically seems to have been determined by judicial interpretation, an interpretation that appears to have received legislative approval. Salt fish in tins was not subject to the duty imposed by paragraph 273 of that act, but was classifiable as "other fish (except shellfish) in tin packages" under paragraph 270. Chee Chong & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 556.

217. Apples, peaches, quinces, cherries, plums, and pears, green or ripe, 10 cents per bushel of fifty pounds; berries, edible, in their natural condition, ½ cent per quart; cranberries, 10 per centum ad valorem; all edible fruits, including berries, when dried, desiccated, evaporated, or prepared in any manner, not specially provided for in this section, 1 cent per pound; comfits, sweetmeats, and fruits of all kinds preserved or packed in sugar, or having sugar added thereto or preserved or packed in molasses, spirits, or their own juices, if containing no alcohol, or containing not over 10 per centum of alcohol, 20 per centum ad valorem; if containing over 10 per centum of alcohol and not specially provided for in this section, 20 per centum ad valorem, and in addition $2.50 per proof gallon on the alcohol contained therein in excess of 10 per centum; jellies of all kinds, 20 per centum ad valorem; pineapples preserved in their own juice, 20 per centum ad valorem.

1. Construction of paragraph in general.—The provision in Act 1897, par. 263, for "comfits, sweetmeats, and fruits preserved in sugar, molasses, spirits, or in their own juices," refers to a class of goods commercially known as preserved fruits, and is intended to apply to fruits treated so as to become a preserve or comfit, and not to such as merely remain temporarily in their natural juice. Causse Mfg. Co. v. U. S. (1906) 151 Fed. 4, 80 C. C. A. 461.

The first part of paragraph 262, Act 1897, imposing a duty per bushel on cherries and other fruits, "green or ripe," applies to those fruits, ripe or unripe, when imported in their natural condition. Id.

The term "fruits preserved in sugar," as used in Act 1883, par. 302, held, under the evidence, not a trade term having a peculiar trade meaning as applied to preserved fruits. U. S. v. Nordlinger (1903) 121 Fed. 690, 58 C. C. A. 438, reversing judgment Nordlinger v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 828, and writ of certiorari denied Id. (1903) 24 Sup. Ct. 848, 191 U. S. 575, 48 L. Ed. 308.

The words "fruits preserved in sugar, molasses, spirits, or in their own juices," occurring in paragraph 263, Act 1897, were not there employed in a commercial or trade sense, but in the sense attaching to these words in common, ordinary usage. Acker v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 328.

Fruits and berries that are put up in hermetically sealed containers in sirup composed of invert sugar, cane sugar, glucose, dextrose, and levulose in amounts varying from 43.39 to 67.56 per cent. of the sirup, constitute fruits preserved in sugar under paragraph 263, Act 1897. Austin v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 287.

2. —— Preserved or prepared.—Fruit hermetically sealed in bottles, which is preserved by the sealing rather than by the sugar, etc., in the surrounding fluid, held dutiable as "fruits * * * prepared," under Act 1897, par. 262, rather than as "fruits preserved in sugar," etc., under paragraph 263. U. S. v. Reiss & Brady (1909) 166 Fed. 746, 92 C. C. A. 408, affirming judgment Reiss & Brady v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 163 Fed. 65.

Under Act 1897, par. 262, relating to fruits "dried, desiccated, evaporated or prepared in any manner," the scope of the expression "prepared in any manner" is not, upon the rule of noscitur a sociis, to be so limited as to embrace only fruits prepared by a drying process. Causse Mfg. Co. v. U. S. (1906) 151 Fed. 4, 80 C. C. A. 461.

The process of hermetically sealing fruit in tin cans, thus preserving it from decay until the cans are opened, constitutes "preservation," rather than "preparation"; and fruit pulp that has been cooked and subjected to such sealing process held dutiable under Act 1897, par. 263, as fruit "preserved * * * in its own juices," rather than under paragraph 262, as fruit "prepared in any manner." Habicht, Braun & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 175 Fed. 1009.

3. Alcohol.—Under Act 1897, par. 263, relating to fruits in spirits and imposing a duty "per proof gallon on the alcohol contained therein in excess of ten per centum," the duty is to be levied on all such excess, whether absorbed by the fruit or supernatant. Mihalovitch, Fletcher & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 160 Fed. 988.

The president's proclamation of May 30, 1898, relating to reciprocity with France, and affecting the rate of duty on brandies and other spirits, does not apply to the excess of alcohol above 10 per centum used in preserving fruits, specially dutiable under paragraph 263, Act 1897. Rheinstrom v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 118 Fed. 303.

Under paragraph 263, Act 1897, relating to fruits in spirits which imposes a duty of $2.50 "per proof gallon on the alcohol contained therein in excess of 10 per centum," the duty is to be computed on all such excess, whether absorbed by the fruit or supernatant. Id.

There is an acknowledged difficulty in determining the precise percentage of alcohol that is necessary to constitute a preservative of cherries in maraschino, when these are packed in hermetically sealed bottles or tins; but where alcohol in amounts from 3.10 per cent. to 5.45 per cent. appears to have been used, and the evidence showing that alcohol in such proportions retards fermentation when the fruit is exposed to air, it is held this amount serves a purpose in preserving the fruit for use, the fruit was so preserved in spirits, and was dutiable under paragraph 263, Act 1897. Godillot v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 239. See, also, U. S. v. Reiss & Brady (1909) 166 Fed. 746, 92 C. C. A. 408.

4. Berries.—Held, that the expression, "berries, edible, in their natural condition," in paragraph 262, Act 1897, means berries which are in their natural condition as imported, and are edible either in that state or after cooking, and that foxberries imported in barrels filled with water are in their natural condition, and are included within said provision in paragraph 262, and not within paragraph 559, Free List, relating to "berries, green, ripe, or dried, * * * not specially provided for." Boak v. U. S. (1903) 125 Fed. 599, 60 C. C. A. 335.

As to foxberries in barrels, with water added to act as a cushion, so as to prevent crushing, held that, in assessing the duty "per quart," provided in paragraph 262, Act 1897, the dutiable quantity should be ascertained by the use of the dry quart and not the liquid quart. U. S. v. Boak Fish Co. (C. C. 1906) 146 Fed. 104.

5. Cherries.—Act 1897, par. 262, enumerates in the first part of the paragraph "apples, peaches, quinces, cherries, plums, and pears, green or ripe," and in the latter part "apples, peaches, pears, and other edible fruits, including berries, * * * prepared." Held, that the inclusion of "cherries" in the first enumeration, and its omission from the second, should not be construed as excluding prepared cherries from the latter, and cherries, which have been washed, pitted, and packed in salt water to preserve them in transit, held not dutiable as "fruits preserved * * * in their own juices," under Act 1897, par. 263, but as "edible fruits * * * prepared in any manner," under paragraph 262. Causse Mfg. Co. v. U. S. (1906) 151 Fed. 4, 80 C. C. A. 461, modifying judgment A. L. Causse Mfg. Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 143 Fed. 690.

Cherries in maraschino held not dutiable under paragraph 218, Act 1894, as "fruits preserved in sirup," but under section 3 of said act, as unenumerated manufactured articles. U. S. v. Reiss & Brady (1906) 142 Fed. 1039, 73 C. C. A. 185, affirming judgment Reiss & Brady v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 135 Fed. 248.

Certain cherries imported in casks, in a surrounding fluid containing alcohol added for the purpose of resisting fermentation and decay, the cherries being an inedible variety, intended to be used in the manufacture of cherry juice, are specially provided for in paragraph 263, Act 1897, as "fruits preserved in * * * spirits," and are not dutiable under paragraph 299, either as "cherry juice" or as an unenumerated article similar thereto, "either in material, quality, texture, or the use to which it may be applied," under section 7 of said act. Voight v. Mihalovitch (C. C. 1899) 125 Fed. 78.

Paragraph 571, Act 1909, admitted "fruits in brine" free of duty, but here the cherries would seem to have been actually preserved by a sulphur treatment and that the infusion of salt in the containing water was negligible. They were properly assessed under paragraph 274 of the act. Delapenha & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 18.

The provision in paragraph 274, Act 1909, for cherries, green or ripe, and for edible fruits, dried, is more specific than the free-entry provision for all fruits green, ripe, or dried. The evidence, moreover, shows the importation to be ripe cherries, but clearly not dried, and they are accordingly dutiable under the paragraph named as ripe cherries. Levy & Levis Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 89.

Cherries put up in hermetically sealed bottles held dutiable under Act 1909 as fruits preserved, etc. U. S. v. Reiss & Brady (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 230. See, also, Id. (1909) 166 Fed. 746, 92 C. C. A. 408.

6. Chestnuts.—The term "comfits" in paragraph 263, Act 1897, held practically synonymous with "confections," and to include boiled marrons (chestnuts) preserved in syrup, and they were not dutiable as nuts. Schall & Co. v. U. S. (1907) 154 Fed. 1005, 83 C. C. A. 329, affirming decree U. S. v. Schall & Co. (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 760.

7. Chutney.—The article commercially known as "chutney," which consists of various fruits preserved with sugar and spices, held dutiable as "fruits preserved," under Act 1897, par. 263, rather than as "edible fruits * * * prepared," under paragraph 262. Park & Tilford v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 910.

Chutney held dutiable under paragraph 263, Act 1897, and this regardless of whether it may or may not have been included within paragraph 262 of that act. Acker v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 328.

8. Citron.—Leghorn citron held not dutiable as a comfit, sweetmeat or fruit preserved in sugar. See paragraph 488.

Leghorn citron, preserved by being cut in halves, boiled and soaked in salt water, freshened, and then covered with syrup and boiled down, and fresh sugar placed thereon, and the process repeated until the peel is thoroughly impregnated with the sugar and cured, held taxable as "fruits preserved in sugar," under Act 1883, par. 302, and not entitled to admission free under paragraph 704, as dried fruits not specifically enumerated. U. S. v. Nordlinger (1903) 121 Fed. 690, 58 C. C. A. 438, reversing judgment Nordlinger v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 828, and writ of certiorari denied Id. (1903) 24 Sup. Ct. 848, 191 U. S. 575, 48 L. Ed. 308.

Candied citron held dutiable under Act 1883, as "comfits, sweetmeats, or fruits preserved in sugar, spirits, syrup, or molasses, not otherwise specified or provided for in this act," and not exempt from duty under the provision in the free list for "fruits, green, ripe, or dried, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act." Hills v. Erhardt (C. C. 1893) 59 Fed. 768; Levy v. Robertson (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 714.

9. Crushed fruits.—Crushed prunes held dutiable as "fruit preserved in own juices" under paragraph 263, Act 1897, and paragraph 274, Act 1909. Meyer & Lange v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 247.

Strawberries and apricots reduced to a pulp, cooked without sugar, and inclosed in hermetically sealed tins, held dutiable under paragraph 263, and not paragraph 262, Act 1897. Habicht v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 10.

10. Dried lychee.—Dried lychee, which is Chinese fruit having, when dry, a thin shell inclosing an edible pulp, held dutiable under paragraph 262 of Act 1897, as an "edible fruit, dried," and not entitled to free entry under paragraph 559, as a fruit not specially provided for. U. S. v. Wing Wo Chong

(1899) 98 Fed. 602, 39 C. C. A. 172, reversing judgment Wing Wo Chung v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 637.

11. Figs.—Held, that the "fruits preserved in sugar, molasses, spirits, or in their own juices," enumerated in Act 1897, par. 263, are known commercially as a class by themselves, of which the use and form constitute the distinctive characteristics, and that figs preserved whole are within that provision, rather than the provision for "figs" in paragraph 264. U. S. v. Reiss & Brady (1905) 136 Fed. 741, 69 C. C. A. 393, reversing judgment Reiss & Brady v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 578.

Figs put up in hermetically sealed bottles held dutiable under Act 1909 as fruits preserved. U. S. v. Reiss & Brady (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 230.

12. Pineapples.—The addition of from 2.28 to 8.82 per cent. of sugar to pineapples preserved in cans in their own juice does not remove the fruit from the provision for "pineapples preserved in their own juice," in Act 1897, par. 263, to the provision in the same paragraph for "fruits preserved in sugar." U. H. Dudley & Co. v. U. S. (1907) 153 Fed. 881, 82 C. C. A. 627, reversing judgment (C. C. 1906) 148 Fed. 333.

Pineapples preserved in cans in their own juice, with 3 per cent. of sugar added for flavoring, and not aiding substantially in the preservation, which is accomplished by the canning process, held dutiable as "pineapples preserved in their own juice," and not as fruit preserved in sugar, under Act 1897, par. 263. U. S. v. J. S. Johnson & Co. (1907) 152 Fed. 164, 81 C. C. A. 416, affirming judgment J. S. Johnson & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 143 Fed. 915.

Act 1897, par. 263, provides for fruit preserved in sugar and for "pineapples preserved in their own juice." Held, as to pineapples in hermetically sealed cans, in their own juice, but with 7 to 20 per cent. of sugar added for flavoring only, that they were dutiable under the latter rather than the former provision. U. S. v. J. S. Johnson & Co. (C. C. 1908) 166 Fed. 1002.

In construing paragraph 263, Act 1897, providing a certain rate of duty on "fruits preserved in sugar, molasses, spirits, or in their own juice," and a lower rate on pineapples "preserved in their own juice," held, that it was not the intention of Congress to impose the added duty in the former provision on account of sugar added for preservation of the fruit, and that the latter provision applies to preserved pineapples, as distinguished from other fruits, without reference to whether sugar is used in their preparation. Held, also, that certain canned pineapples, containing an amount of sugar that is not sufficient to preserve the fruit from spoiling if exposed to the open air, but serves as a flavoring only, are dutiable under the latter provision. U. S. v. Boden (C. C. 1904) 133 Fed. 839.

Pineapples, peeled, sliced, and placed in cans filled with cold water, and hermetically sealed, their juice permeating the water, are "fruits preserved in their own juices," within Act 1890, par. 304, and cannot be classified, under paragraph 580, as "fruits, green, ripe, or dried." Johnson v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 725, judgment affirmed (1895) 79 Fed. 996, 25 C. C. A. 298.

13. Plums.—Plums preserved held not dutiable under Act 1909 as plums, prunes, or prunelles, but as fruits preserved. Meyer & Lange v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 422.

14. Prunes.—Prunes boiled in water, and pressed through a colander, without the addition of sugar or any other material, which article held not a "jelly," in the common meaning of that term, nor commercially known as jelly, but dutiable under paragraph 219, Act 1894, as fruits preserved in their own juices. U. S. v. Rosenstein (C. C. 1898) 90 Fed. 801.

Crushed prunes held dutiable as fruits preserved in own juices, under paragraph 263, Act 1897, and paragraph 274, Act 1909. Meyer & Lange v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 247.

15. Sweetmeats.—Marmalade and berry jam held not jellies, but sweetmeats, dutiable as such under paragraph 263, Act 1897. Bogle v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 889; Id. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 144.

Berry jams are dutiable under Act 1897, par. 263, as sweetmeats or preserved fruits, rather than as "jelly" under the same paragraph, or as "edible fruits prepared," under paragraph 262. Bogle v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 889.

Stem and cargo ginger held not to lose its character as a sweetmeat when imported in bulk in casks, but dutiable under paragraph 263, Act 1897. Delapenha v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 113.

16. Umeboshi.—Umeboshi held not dutiable as fruit packed in its own juices. See paragraph 488.

218. Figs, 2 cents per pound; plums, prunes, and prunelles, 1 cent per pound; raisins and other dried grapes, 2 cents per pound; dates, 1 cent per pound; currants, Zante or other, 1½ cents per pound; olives, 15 cents per gallon.

Notes of Decisions

Currants.—Dried currants held not dutiable as dried grapes including Zante currants. See paragraph 488.

Imported currants, packed in casks, held dutiable under paragraph 264, Act 1897 which imposes a duty of two cents per pound on currants, "Zante or other," without any deduction on account of the dirt or other impurities contained therein. U. S. v. Reid, Murdoch & Co. (1903) 120 Fed. 242, 56 C. C. A. 538, writ of certiorari denied Reid, Murdock & Co. v. U. S. (1903) 23 Sup. Ct. 855, 190 U. S. 560, 47 L. Ed. 1184.

"Zante currants," as used in paragraph 217, Act 1894, applies to the small, seedless raisins grown on the mainland of Greece, in the Archipelago, and other places in the Levant, and is not confined to currants raised only in the island of Zante. "Zante Currants" (C. C. 1896) 73 Fed. 183.

Merchandise consisting of the pulp and juice of the currant, preserved, presumably, in sirup or molasses, is not a jelly in fact, and while the board found it to be commercially known as jelly, there was no proof of commercial designation. The collector's assessment, in the absence from the record of evidence to controvert it, must be sustained. U. S. v. Sheldon & Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 371. See, also, Same v. Oberle (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 527.

Figs.—Figs preserved whole held not dutiable as figs. See paragraph 217.

Olives.—Under Act 1897, par. 264, imposing a duty at various rates "per gallon," according to condition, the duty should be assessed on the basis of the wine or liquid gallon and not the dry gallon, regardless of whether the olives are imported dried or in brine. Ceballos v. U. S. (1906) 146 Fed. 380, 76 C. C. A. 652, affirming judgment J. M. Ceballos & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 139 Fed. 705.

Olives which have been immersed in salt and water for the purpose of preserving them from decay in shipment, and which had been subjected to no preparation to fit them for eating, held not "olives prepared," within Act 1897, par. 264. U. S. v. Zucca & Co. (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 578.

Act 1897, par. 264, relates to olives "in bottles, jars, or similar packages," and "in casks or otherwise than in bottles, jars, or similar packages." Held, that this language does not import an intention to make a division between olives in retail packages and those in wholesale packages, and that olives in jars holding 10 gallons are therefore within the first of these provisions. U. S. v. Shing Shun & Co. (C. C. 1909) 173 Fed. 844.

Black or ripe olives in brine held dutiable under paragraph 275, Act 1909. Goussios & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 317.

Plums.—Plums preserved held not dutiable under this paragraph. See paragraph 217.

Prunes.—Crushed prunes held dutiable as fruits preserved in own juices. See paragraph 217.

219. Grapes in barrels or other packages, 25 cents per cubic foot of the capacity of the barrels or packages.

Notes of Decisions

Allowance for packing.—Grapes imported in barrels, and packed in saw dust or cork dust, are dutiable under paragraph 299 of Act 1890, at the rate of 60 cents per barrel of three cubic feet, or fraction thereof, without allowance for the cork dust in which they are packed. U. S. v. Mayer (1896) 71 Fed. 501, 18 C. C. A. 221, reversing judgment (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 719.

220. Lemons, limes, oranges, grapefruit, shaddocks, and pomelos in packages of a capacity of one and one-fourth cubic feet or less, 18 cents per package; in packages of capacity exceeding one and one-fourth cubic feet and not exceeding two and one-half cubic feet, 35 cents per package; in packages exceeding two and one-half and not exceeding five cubic feet, 70 cents per package; in packages exceeding five cubic feet or in bulk, ½ of 1 cent per pound.

Notes of Decisions

Package.—Two boxes of oranges, each 7¾ by 10½ by 5½ inches, firmly tied together to facilitate marketing and safe transportation, this method of packing being an established custom of the trade, constitute one package under the first clause of paragraph 220, Tariff Act 1913. Bush & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 401.

Pickled limes.—Limes in brine held not dutiable as limes. See paragraph 488.

Pickled limes, not being vegetables, held not dutiable under Act 1897, par. 241, providing for all vegetables, including pickles, nor exempt under section 2, free list, par. 559, providing for fruits, green, ripe, or dried, and fruits in brine, not specifically provided for, but dutiable under paragraph 266, providing for oranges, lemons, limes, grape fruit, shaddocks, or pomelos. Roche v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 911.

221. Orange peel or lemon peel, preserved, candied, or dried, 1 cent per pound; coconut meat or copra desiccated, shredded, cut, or similarly prepared, and citron or citron peel, preserved, candied, or dried, 2 cents per pound.

Halved lemons in brine.—Halved lemons in brine held not lemon peel preserved. See paragraph 488.

Orange and lemon peel.—Orange and lemon peel immersed in brine for the purpose of protecting it from decay during transit, without affecting its properties or quality, held not "preserved," within Act 1897, par. 267, but free of duty as "not preserved, candied, or dried," under paragraph 627. Causse Mfg. Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 150 Fed. 419.

222. Pineapples, in barrels or other packages, 6 cents per cubic foot of the capacity of the barrels or packages; in bulk, $5 per thousand.

223. Almonds, not shelled, 3 cents per pound; almonds, shelled, 4 cents per pound; apricot and peach kernels, 3 cents per pound.

Almonds shelled.—In ascertaining the dutiable weight of shelled nuts dutiable by the pound under Act 1897, pars. 269, 270, no allowance should be made for impurities in importations not shown to contain abnormal quantities of foreign matter, nor to vary from the ordinary wholesale condition. Spencer & Co. v. U. S. (1907) 151 Fed. 1022, 82 C. C. A. 656, affirming decree (C. C. 1906) 143 Fed. 916.

In Act 1897, par. 269, the provision for "clear" shelled almonds refers to nuts that are practically and substantially free from shells, dust, and dirt, and after being divested of their outer covering are fairly free from that covering. Heide v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 316.

Clear almonds, shelled, remain almonds, though they should contain a certain amount of broken kernels, dust, and shells, and they are not to be classified generally with "nuts of all kinds." They are dutiable as clear almonds, shelled, under paragraph 280, Tariff Act 1909. Paragraph 283 of that act forbids any allowance for the weight of the dust and shells. Spencer Importing & Trading Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 444; Heide v. Same (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 399.

224. Filberts and walnuts of all kinds, not shelled, 2 cents per pound; shelled, 4 cents per pound.

Walnuts shelled.—Walnut meat, broken in parts less than halves, are dutiable as "walnuts of all kinds," "shelled," under paragraph 281, Act 1909. Habicht, Braun & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 457.

225. Peanuts or ground beans, unshelled, ⅜ of 1 cent per pound; shelled, ¾ of 1 cent per pound.

226. Nuts of all kinds, shelled or unshelled, not specially provided for in this section, 1 cent per pound; but no allowance shall be made for dirt or other impurities in nuts of any kind, shelled or unshelled.

Notes of Decisions

Apricot stones and kernels.—Apricot stones come within the common definition of "nuts," and apricot kernels held dutiable as "nuts * * * not specially provided for," under paragraph 272, Act 1897. U. S. v. Spencer & Co. (1907) 151 Fed. 1022, 81 C. C. A. 683, affirming decree Spencer & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 146 Fed. 112.

Impurities.—Italian pine cones with the nuts attached thereto, held to be dutiable under the eo nomine provision for nuts in paragraph 283, Act 1909. The cones are not shell, nor "dirt or other impurities" in the nuts, and duty should be assessed upon the weight of the nuts alone. U. S. v. Amendola (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 516.

Marrons.—Marrons (chestnuts) preserved in syrup held not dutiable as nuts. See paragraph 226.

227. Venison, and other game, 1½ cents per pound; game birds, dressed, 30 per centum ad valorem.

228. Extract of meat, not specially provided for in this section, 10 cents per pound; fluid extract of meat, 5 cents per pound, but the dutiable weight of the extract of meat and of the fluid extract of meat shall not include the weight of the packages in which the same is imported.

Notes of Decisions

Bouillon.—Bouillon cubes held not dutiable as meat extract. See paragraph 385.

229. Poultry, live, 1 cent per pound; dead, or prepared in any manner, including the weight of the immediate coverings or containers, 2 cents per pound.

Notes of Decisions

Poultry.—Guinea fowl and turkeys, not shown to have been wild, are classifiable as "poultry," under Act 1897, par. 278, rather than as "birds and land * * * fowls," under free list, par. 494. Silz v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 167 Fed. 686, judgment affirmed (1910) 178 Fed. 273, 101 C. C. A. 537.

The provision in paragraph 229, Act 1913, that relates to "poultry prepared in any manner," clearly appears to have been enacted in view of Kwong Yuen Shing v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 16, and must be taken accordingly to enlarge the terms used so as to include dried ducks' feet and gizzards here as poultry prepared. Articles of food "prepared or preserved" do not necessarily retain their original form and separate identity. U. S. v. Weber (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 234; Same v. Brown & Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 242.

230. Chicory root, raw, dried, or undried, but unground, 1 cent per pound; chicory root, burnt or roasted, ground or granulated, or in rolls, or otherwise prepared, and not specially provided for in this section, 2 cents per pound.

Coffee substitute.—A coffee substitute containing chicory held not dutiable as chicory. See paragraph 233.

231. Unsweetened chocolate and cocoa, prepared or manufactured, not specially provided for in this section, 8 per centum ad valorem. Sweetened chocolate and cocoa, prepared or manufactured, not specially provided for in this section, valued at 20 cents per pound or less, 2 cents per pound; valued at more than 20 cents per pound, 25 per centum ad valorem. The weight and the value of the immediate coverings, other than the outer packing case or other covering, shall be included in the dutiable weight and the value of the merchandise.

Chocolate.—Chocolate eo nomine held dutiable as such under Act 1864, and not as confectionery, though presented in a form in which it was ordinarily sold as such. Arthur v. Stephani (1877) 96 U. S. 125, 126, 24 L. Ed. 771.

The official statements of members of the conference committees on the tariff act of 1890 that by a clerical mistake paragraph 318 of Schedule G was made to read, "Chocolate, (other than chocolate confectionery, and chocolate commercially known as 'sweetened chocolate,') two cents per pound;" but that the parenthesis should have ended after "confectionery," although supported by the history of the bill, the attention of congress having been called to the mistake, and no action taken, do not authorize the courts to change the punctuation actually made. In re Schilling (1892) 53 F. 81, 3 C. C. A. 440, affirming decree (C. C. 1891) 48 Fed. 547.

Cocoa.—The article commercially known as "sweetened chocolate" held not dutiable as chocolate confectionery, under paragraph 239, Act 1890, nor as similar thereto, under the similitude section, nor under paragraph 318, but should be classed as "cocoa, manufactured, not specially provided for," under paragraph 319. In re Schilling (1892) 53 Fed. 81, 3 C. C. A. 440, affirming decree (C. C. 1891) 48 Fed. 547; In re Austin (C. C. 1891) 47 Fed. 873.

Coverings.—Under Act 1897, par. 281, providing for a duty on chocolate, and that "the weight and value of all coverings other than plain wooden, shall be included in the dutiable weight and value" thereof, the dutiable value of chocolate packed in tin boxes should be arrived at by adding the number of pounds of the chocolate and the tin coverings, and the outside wooden boxes in which it is packed for transit should not be included, pursuant to the method of estimating the value prescribed by Customs Administrative Act June 10, 1890, c. 407, § 19, 26 Stat. 139, since the later statute plainly intends that the wooden coverings should be free from duty, and the interior coverings alone treated for duty purposes as if they were chocolate. U. S. v. Volkmann (1901) 107 Fed. 109, 46 C. C. A. 169, affirming judgment Volkman v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 264.

Certain coverings for chocolate, consisting of small boxes, some in the form of a trunk, having hinged tops fastened with a catch and hook, and lined with fancy paper, held "coverings, other than plain wooden," within paragraph 281, Act 1897, which provides that "the weight and value of all coverings other than plain wooden, shall be included in the suitable weight and value" of their contents, when containing chocolate and cocoa. Cure v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 123 Fed. 994.

232. Cocoa butter or cocoa butterine, refined deodorized coconut oil, and all substitutes for cocoa butter, 3½ cents per pound.

Cocoa butterine.—"Nucoa butter," made from cocoanut oil by pressing the oil in a solid state to eliminate the softer oils, then melting the remaining solid, and washing it with steam, held dutiable as "cocoa butterine," under paragraph 230 of Act 1894, and is neither exempt from duty as "cocoanut oil," under paragraph 568, nor dutiable as an unenumerated manufactured article, under section 3. Apgar v. U. S. (1896) 78 Fed. 332, 24 C. C. A. 113.

Cocoa butterine, as provided for in paragraph 282, Act 1897, consists of products made in imitation of cocoa butter, and adapted for use as a substitute therefor. U. S. v. Oriental Amer. Co. (C. C. 1904) 129 Fed. 249.

Cocoanut oil.—Cocoanut oil held not dutiable as cocoanut butter. See paragraph 561.

233. Dandelion root, and acorns prepared, and articles used as coffee, or as substitutes for coffee not specially provided for in this section, 2 cents per pound.

Dandelion root.—Dandelion root not edible held not dutiable as dandelion root prepared, etc. See paragraph 477.

Substitutes for coffee.—Coffee essence which is used as coffee or as a substitute therefor, held not "coffee," within Act 1897, Free List, par. 529, but dutiable, either directly or by similitude, as "articles used as coffee, or as substitutes for coffee," under paragraph 283. E. C. Hazard & Co. v. U. S. (1909) 175 Fed. 967, 99 C. C. A. 357, reversing judgment (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 907.

An imported article styled on the wrapper in which the same is imported "Seelig's Kaffee" and "Seelig's Coffee," but invoiced as chicory, which is composed of more than 68 per cent. of its total weight, but of only about 43 per cent. of its total value, of chicory root, which possesses, as its predominating flavor, that of chicory root, and which is mixed with coffee for use, or is used alone like coffee, held not dutiable as chicory root in any of the conditions provided for in paragraph 317, Act 1890, but dutiable as an article used as coffee, or as a substitute for coffee, under paragraph 321. U. S. v. Rosenstein (1894) 60 Fed. 74, 8 C. C. A. 474; In re Rosenstein (C. C. 1893) 56 Fed. 824.

An article represented to be and sold as a substance not alone for coloring coffee, but as a substitute for a portion of each drawing of coffee, adding, it being claimed, to the quality, purity, and wholesomeness of the beverage as served, held dutiable under paragraph 283, Act 1897, as a substitute for coffee. Petru American Importing Co. v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 106.

234. Starch, made from potatoes, 1 cent per pound; all other starch, including all preparations, from whatever substance produced, fit for use as starch, ½ cent per pound.

Notes of Decisions

In general.—The farina of the root of the plant of the genus manihot, whether known as root flour, cassava, or tapioca, having been expressly exempted from duty by congress (R. S. § 2505), is not included in R. S. § 2504, imposing a duty on starches, though it may be largely composed of starch granules and fit for use as starch. Chung Yune v. Kelly (C. C. 1882) 14 Fed. 639.

Flour made from a farinaceous plant, for food, though largely composed of starch granules, is not, therefore, the "made" or manufactured starch of commerce, upon which R. S. § 2504, imposes a duty when brought from a foreign country; and it matters not that it may be in some measure used as starch. Id.

Bone size substitute.—Bone size substitute held not a preparation fit for use as starch. See paragraph 5.

Arrowroot.—Held, that the provision in Act 1897, Free List, par. 478, for "arrowroot in its natural state and not manufactured," relates to the tubers or root of the arrowroot plant, though no importations are ever made in that form, and does not include the article commercially known as arrowroot, consisting of starch made from arrowroot tubers, which is more properly classifiable as "starch," under paragraph 285. Middleton & Co. v. U. S. (1906) 151 Fed. 16, 80 C. C. A. 512; Leaycraft & Co. v. U. S. (1904) 130 Fed. 106, 64 C. C. A. 440, affirming judgment (C. C. 1903) 124 Fed. 999.

Potato starch.—Starch made from potatoes, and pulverized or ground so as to take the form of a fine flour or powder, and invoiced as "sifted farina," held not within the meaning of the term "farina," as used in paragraph 694, Act 1883, and consequently free of duty, but is to be classified as "potato starch," and subject to a duty of two cents per pound, under paragraph 269. Union Nat. Bank v. Seeberger (C. C. 1887) 30 Fed. 429.

"Preparations."—The general words "preparations * * * fit for use as starch," are insufficient to show that an article fit for such use, but which is specially named on the free list, is "otherwise specially provided for," so as to prevent its exemption from duty. Chew Hing Lung & Co. v. Wise (1900) 20 Sup. Ct. 320, 176 U. S. 156, 320, 44 L. Ed. 412, reversing judgment Wise v. Chew Hing Lung (1897) 83 Fed. 162, 27 C. C. A. 494.

Sago flour.—Sago flour held not dutiable as starch. See paragraph 590.

Tapioca flour.—Tapioca flour held not dutiable as a preparation fit only for starch. See paragraph 625.

235. Spices, unground: Cassia buds, cassia, and cassia vera; cinnamon and cinnamon chips; ginger root, unground and not preserved or candied; nutmegs; pepper, black or white; capsicum or red pepper, or cayenne pepper; and clove stems, 1 cent per pound; cloves, 2 cents per pound; pimento, ¾ of 1 cent per pound; sage, ½ cent per pound; mace, 8 cents per pound; Bombay or wild mace, 18 cents per pound; ground spices, in each case, the specific duty per pound enumerated in the foregoing part of this paragraph for unground spices, and in addition thereto a duty of 20 per centum ad valorem; mustard, ground or prepared, in bottles or otherwise, 6 cents per pound; all other spices not specially provided for in this section, including all herbs or herb leaves in glass or other small packages for culinary use, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Ginger root.—The article known as spent ginger, which is a by-product from the treatment of ginger root in the manufacture of ginger extract, etc., and consists of a dried cake of ginger particles, is held to be "ginger root, unground," as enumerated in Act 1897, Free List, par. 667. Lewis German & Co. v. U. S. (1905) 137 Fed. 817, 70 C. C. A. 315.

A by-product in the process of extracting the essence of ginger root, which results from cracking the crude root in a machine and running it through a still, and consists of the residue of the process pressed into cakes, held not within Act 1897, Free List, par. 667, for "ginger root, unground." Cracking the root, so that it is reduced to small particles and pulverized, is a process of grinding. Lewis German & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 467.

Peppers.—Sierra Leone chillies, or bird peppers, held not dutiable as cayenne pepper unground. See paragraph 477.

The residuum in the process of decorticating pepper berries, consisting of the inner cuticle in the form of a powder, which, without further grinding, is mixed with ground pepper as an adulterant, held not within the provision in Act 1897, Free List, par. 667, for pepper "unground." Frame & Co. v. U. S. (1906) 149 Fed. 1022, 79 C. C. A. 532, affirming judgment (C. C. 1906) 143 Fed. 692.

Shells of pepper, which, when ground, make a low grade of black pepper, held within the provision for the entry free of duty of "pepper, white or black, * * * when unground," in Free List, par. 667, Act 1897. U. S. v. Leggett (C. C. 1899) 124 Fed. 1015.

236. Vinegar, 4 cents per proof gallon. The standard proof for vinegar shall be taken to be that strength which requires thirty-five grains of bicarbonate of potash to neutralize one ounce troy of vinegar.

SCHEDULE H.—SPIRITS, WINES, AND OTHER BEVERAGES

237. Brandy and other spirits manufactured or distilled from grain or other materials, and not specially provided for in this section, $2.60 per proof gallon.

238. Each and every gauge or wine gallon of measurement shall be counted as at least one proof gallon; and the standard for determining the proof of brandy and other spirits or liquors of any kind imported shall be the same as that which is defined in the laws relating to internal revenue: Provided, That it shall be lawful for the Secretary of the Treasury, in his discretion, to authorize the ascertainment of the proof of wines, cordials, or other liquors, by distillation or otherwise, in cases where it is impracticable to ascertain such proof by the means prescribed by existing law or regulations: And provided further, That any brandy or other spirituous or distilled liquors imported in any sized cask, bottle, jug, or other packages, of or from any country, dependency, or province under whose laws similar sized casks, bottles, jugs, or other packages of distilled spirits, wine, or other beverage put up or filled in the United States are denied entrance into such country, dependency, or province, shall be forfeited to the United States; and any brandy or other spirituous or distilled liquor imported in a cask of less capacity than ten gallons from any country shall be forfeited to the United States.

Notes of Decisions

Demijohns.—There is no law prohibiting the importation of liquors in demijohns, and so imported they would be classed among those "not otherwise provided for," and pay a duty of two dollars per proof gallon. U. S. v. Ninety Demijohns of Rum (C. C. 1880) 8 Fed. 485.

Standard of measurement.—All importations of liquids, including ale and porter, are to be estimated according to the standard of the wine gallon of commerce, containing 231 cubic inches of measurement. Nichols v. Beard (C. C. 1883) 15 Fed. 435, 437.

239. On all compounds or preparations of which distilled spirits are a component part of chief value there shall be levied a duty not less than that imposed upon distilled spirits.

No article containing alcohol was to be classified for duty under paragraphs 9, 11, 27, 31, or 46, of Schedule A of this section, by provisos annexed to said paragraphs, ante.

No article containing more than 10 per centum of alcohol was to be classified for duty under paragraph 29 of Schedule A of this section, by a proviso annexed to said paragraph, ante.

No article containing alcohol was to be admitted free of duty, under paragraph 477 of the Free List, post.

240. Cordials, liqueurs, arrack, absinthe, kirschwasser, ratafia, and other spirituous beverages or bitters of all kinds, containing spirits, and not specially provided for in this section, $2.60 per proof gallon.

Angostura bitters.—"Angostura Bitters," used principally as a flavoring extract for mixed drinks, held dutiable as "spirituous liquors not otherwise enumerated," and not as a medicinal preparation. Dallet v. Smythe (C. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 3,545.

Amer Picon.—The preparation known as "Amer Picon," which is prepared by Picon & Co. according to a private formula used by them, which contains from 30 to 40 per cent. of alcohol, and which is advertised as a specific against malaria, and also as a tonic, held dutiable under Act 1883 as "bitters containing spirits," and not as a "proprietary preparation." Curiel v. Beard (C. C. 1890) 44 Fed. 551.

Arp's pepsin bitters.—Arp's pepsin bitters held not dutiable as bitters. See paragraph 16.

Benedictine.—The liqueur cordial known as "Benedictine," held dutiable under Act 1883, as a cordial containing spirits, and not as a proprietary preparation. In re Gourd (C. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 728.

Boonekamp bitters.—Boonekamp bitters held not dutiable as a cordial liqueur, etc. See paragraph 16.

Juniper cordial.—Juniper cordial, which contains sufficient saccharine matter to disguise 11 per cent. of alcohol, is a sweet cordial, within section 103, Customs Act 1799. U. S. v. Three Hundred Casks of Juniper Cordial (D. C. 1859) Fed. Cas. No. 16,511.

241. No lower rate or amount of duty shall be levied, collected, and paid on brandy, spirits, and other spirituous beverages than that fixed by law for the description of first proof; but it shall be increased in proportion for any greater strength than the strength of first proof, and all imitations of brandy or spirits or wines imported by any names whatever shall be subject to the highest rate of duty provided for the genuine articles respectively intended to be represented, and in no case less than $1.75 per gallon.

242. Bay rum or bay water, whether distilled or compounded, of first proof, and in proportion for any greater strength than first proof, $1.75 per gallon.

243. Champagne and all other sparkling wines, in bottles containing each not more than one quart and more than one pint, $9.60 per dozen; containing not more than one pint each and more than one-half pint, $4.80 per dozen; containing one-half pint each or less, $2.40 per dozen; in bottles or other vessels containing more than one quart each, in addition to $9.60 per dozen bottles, on the quantity in excess of one quart, at the rate of $3 per gallon; but no separate or additional duty shall be levied on the bottles.

Notes of Decisions

Bottles.—Under Act June 30, 1864, which lays a specific duty per gallon upon wines, and an ad valorem duty also, with a proviso that no champagne in bottles shall pay a less rate than $6 per dozen (quart) or two dozen (pint) bottles, the effect is that if the specific duty upon the gallon and the ad valorem duty exceed the sum of $6 per dozen (quart) or two dozen (pint), the rate thus estimated will be the duty imposed. It is only when the rate falls under the sum of $6 that no less sum is chargeable. Bollinger's Champagne (1865) 70 U. S. (3 Wall.) 560, 18 L. Ed. 78.

Bottles coming within the provisions of paragraph 88, Act 1894, held subject to separate duty thereunder, though imported filled with champagne, dutiable at a fixed rate per dozen, under paragraph 243. U. S. v. De Luze (1898) 95 Fed. 971, 37 C. C. A. 344, reversing judgment De Luze v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 156.

"Magnums" are only bottles of an especially large size and are as clearly embraced in the expression "bottles or jugs," in the second proviso of paragraph 296, as in the expression "other vessels," in paragraph 295, Act 1897. (1900) 23 Op. Atty. Gen. 48.

Rate of duty affected by packing.—In determining the rate of duty to be imposed on champagnes, wines, and other liquors under Act 1897, paragraph 295 of that act should be read in conjunction with paragraph 296. The former paragraph fixes the rate of duty to be imposed upon all wines included within the class therein named, when imported in legal packages; while the second proviso of the latter paragraph determines the rate of duty on all wines and other liquors when imported in other than legal packages. (1900) 23 Op. Atty. Gen. 48.

244. Still wines, including ginger wine or ginger cordial, vermuth, and rice wine or sake, and similar beverages not specially provided for in this section, in casks or packages other than bottles or jugs, if containing 14 per centum or less of absolute alcohol, 45 cents per gallon; if containing more than 14 per centum of absolute alcohol, 60 cents per gallon. In bottles or jugs, per case of one dozen bottles or jugs, containing each not more than one quart and more than one pint, or twenty-four bottles or jugs containing each not more than one pint, $1.85 per case; and any excess beyond these quantities found in such bottles or jugs shall be subject to a duty of 6 cents per pint or fractional part thereof, but no separate or additional duty shall be assessed on the bottles or jugs: Provided, That any wines, ginger cordial, or vermuth imported containing more than 24 per centum of alcohol shall be classed as spirits and pay duty accordingly: And provided further, That there shall be no constructive or other allowance for breakage, leakage, or damage on wines, liquors, cordials, or distilled spirits, except that when it shall appear to the collector of customs from the gauger's return, verified by an affidavit by the importer to be filed within five days after the delivery of the merchandise, that a cask or package has been broken or otherwise injured in transit from a foreign port and as a result thereof a part of its contents amounting to 10 per centum or more of the total value of the contents of the said cask or package in its condition as exported, has been lost, allowance therefor may be made in the liquidation of the duties. Wines, cordials, brandy, and other spirituous liquors, including bitters of all kinds, and bay rum or bay water, imported in bottles or jugs, shall be packed in packages containing not less than one dozen bottles or jugs in each package, or duty shall be paid as if such package contained at least one dozen bottles or jugs, and in addition thereto, duty shall be collected on the bottles or jugs at the rates which would be chargeable thereon if imported empty. The percentage of alcohol in wines and fruit juices shall be determined in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury shall by regulation prescribe.

Allowance for leakage, breakage, etc. —The word "liquors," as used in the proviso of Schedule H of Act 1883, prohibiting any allowance for breakage, leakage, or damage in respect to "wines, liquors, cordials, or distilled spirits," is simply a misspelling of the word "liqueurs," and does not include beer. Hollender v. Magone (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 932, 933, 149 U. S. 586, 37 L. Ed. 860, reversing (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 912.

Vermuth held not a "wine," "cordial," or "liqueur," within the meaning of Act 1897, par. 296, prohibiting an allowance for leakage. U. S. v. Julius Wile, Sons & Co. (1910) 178 Fed. 269, 101 C. C. A. 574, affirming judgment Julius Wile & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 164.

In construing the provision in Act 1897, par. 296, that "there shall be no constructive or other allowance for * * * leakage * * * on wines," etc., held, that there can be no allowance made for leakage of wine while in transit to this country. Duty must be assessed on the quantity shipped from abroad. U. S. v. A. D. Shaw & Co. (1906) 144 Fed. 329, 75 C. C. A. 291, reversing judgment Alexander D. Shaw & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 141 Fed. 469, and writ of certiorari denied Shaw v. U. S. (1906) 27 S. Ct. 779, 203 U. S. 591, 51 L. Ed. 331.

In an importation of 3,660 gallons of wine there was a shortage of 12.17 gallons in excess of the normal leakage. Held, that no allowance for this shortage was permissible, under Act 1897. A. D. Shaw & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 158 Fed. 648, appeal dismissed Shaw v. U. S. (1908) 29 S. Ct. 687, 212 U. S. 559, 53 L. Ed. 652.

Act 1897, and the reciprocal commercial agreement with Spain, suspending "the imposition and collection of the duties mentioned in" said act on wines, etc., has only the effect of reducing the duty on wines provided in paragraph 296 of said act, but does not supersede the further provision in said paragraph that there shall be no allowance for leakage of wines. Id.

On an importation of wine in casks having a wantage in excess of normal, the collector assessed duty without allowance for the excess, on the ground that it was due to leakage and was within the terms of paragraph 296, Act 1897, forbidding "constructive or other allowance for breakage, leakage or damage on wines." Held, that this was in violation of section 8, art. 1, Const. U. S., prescribing that "all duties * * * shall be uniform throughout the United States." Alexander D. Shaw & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 141 Fed. 469, judgment reversed U. S. v. A. D. Shaw & Co. (1906) 144 Fed. 329, 75 C. C. A. 291, writ of certiorari denied Shaw v. U. S. (1906) 27 S. Ct. 779, 203 U. S. 591, 51 L. Ed. 331.

It appears there had been leakage in transitu from some of the tubs of this importation. But section 307, Act 1909, specifically provided that rice wine or sake should enjoy no constructive or other allowance for breakage, leakage, or damage during transportation. S. Ban Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 380.

From the evidence it is concluded the cases containing the liquors were packed at exportation with not less than a dozen bottles each, conforming so to the legal requirements as to packing, and it is further concluded that the shortage appearing was attributable to theft before importation. No allowance may be made for breakage, leakage, or damage in bottle shipments, but this punitive provision of paragraph 296, Act 1897, is not to be enlarged beyond its express terms. Such losses as might be allowed for in bulk shipments would be allowable for in bottle shipments, and a shortage in bottles, as here, that was due to theft, was properly held to be nondutiable. U. S. v. Vignier (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 120. See, also, De Bary v. Arthur (1876) 93 U. S. 420, 23 L. Ed. 936.

In the past there has been much contention over sake and the leakage of sake, but the Tariff Act of 1909 would seem, by providing in paragraph 307 for rice wine or sake expressly and forbidding any allowance should be made for breakage, leakage, or damage on wines, to have placed the question beyond doubt. Furuya & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 371.

The proviso to paragraph 307, Act 1909. forbidding allowance to be made for breakage, leakage, etc., of merchandise therein described, must be strictly construed and cannot be made to apply to merchandise not within its terms; but the legality of that provision itself is now stare decisis. Cataldi Aurola v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 340.

The provision of Act 1897 that no allowance should be made for leakage of wine could not be made to apply to an importation of sake dutiable as still wine only by similitude. Peacock & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 305.

Bottles.—Bottles containing Chinese spirituous beverages assessable under paragraph 311 of the tariff act of 1883 are themselves subject to duty of three cents each, under paragraph 310, which provides that bottles containing spirituous liquors shall pay the said rate unless otherwise specially provided for. Kwong Chin Chong v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 119 Fed. 383.

The glass bottles containing "Amer Picon," which is dutiable under Act 1883, Schedule H, as bitters containing spirits, held dutiable under said Schedule H as bottles containing spirituous liquors. Curiel v. Beard (C. C. 1890) 44 Fed. 551.

Forfeiture for illegal packing.—A violation of an act requiring that certain goods shall be packed in a certain way does not subject goods not so packed to forfeiture, in the absence of a statute declaring such forfeiture. U. S. v. Ninety Demijohns Aquadiente (D. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 15,887.

Rate of duty affected by packing.—Wines imported in cases of 24 bottles, each bottle containing more than one pint and less than one quart, held dutiable at $1.60 per dozen bottles, under Act 1897, par. 296, providing that the duties shall be, "in bottles or jugs, per case of one dozen bottles or jugs, containing each not more than one quart and more than one pint, or 24 bottles or jugs containing each not more than one pint, $1.60 per case; and any excess beyond these quantities found in such bottles or jugs shall be subject to a duty of 5 cents per pint or fractional part thereof." U. S. v. Cerecedo Hermanos y Compañia (1908) 28 Sup. Ct. 532, 209 U. S. 337, 52 L. Ed. 821.

In determining the rate of duty to be imposed on champagne, wines and other liquors under Act 1897, paragraph 295 should be read in conjunction with paragraph 296. The former paragraph fixes the rate of duty to be imposed on all wines included with the class named when imported in legal packages while the second proviso of the latter paragraph determines the rate of duty on all wines and other liquors when imported in other than legal packages. (1900) 23 Op. Atty. Gen. 48.

—— Champagne.—The word "wines," as used in the second proviso to paragraph 296, Act 1897, being used without limitation, the provisions of that paragraph held applicable to champagnes, notwithstanding the special champagne provisions contained in paragraph 295 of that act. (1900) 23 Op. Atty. Gen. 48.

Bovrill wine.—Bovrill wine held not dutiable as a still wine. See paragraph 16.

Sake.—The Japanese beverage "sake" held properly classified under the similitude clause of Act 1897, as similar to still wine, in view of the uniform customs administrative construction. Komada & Co. v. U. S. (1910) 30 S. Ct. 136, 137, 215 U. S. 392, 54 L. Ed. 249; U. S. v. Komada & Co. (1908) 162 Fed. 465, 89 C. C. A. 385 (reversing judgment Stratton v. Komada & Co. [C. C. 1906] 148 Fed. 125).

Sake held dutiable as an unenumerated manufactured article, under section 6, Act 1897. U. S. v. Nishimiya (1905) 137 Fed. 396, 69 C. C. A. 588, affirming Nishimiya v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 650.

Vermuth.—Vermuth is not a "wine," "cordial," or "liqueur," within the meaning of Act 1897, par. 296, prohibiting an allowance for the leakage of those three articles. U. S. v. Julius Wile, Sons & Co. (1910) 178 Fed.

269, 101 C. C. A. 574, affirming judgment Julius Wile & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 164.

Act 1897, par. 296, provides that any excess over one pint or one quart found in bottles of vermuth "shall be subject to a duty of five cents per pint or fractional part thereof." Held, that such duty should be assessed on each bottle containing such excess, rather than on the basis of the total excess per case or per importation. James De Fremery & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 171 Fed. 677.

245. Ale, porter, stout, and beer, in bottles or jugs, 45 cents per gallon, but no separate or additional duty shall be assessed on the bottles or jugs; otherwise than in bottles or jugs, 23 cents per gallon.

Allowance for loss.—Allowance for leakage or loss of beer, see paragraph 244.

Bok ale.—"Bok ale" or barley brew base, which is an unfinished nonalcoholic beverage, but which is produced by processes and from materials similar to those employed in the manufacture of beer, held dutiable by similitude at the same rate of duty as beer, under Act 1897, par. 297. Wakem & McLaughlin v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 180 Fed. 1021.

Bottles.—In addition to the duty of 35 cents per gallon imposed by R. S. § 2504, Schedule D, on ale, porter, and beer in bottles, the bottles were held subject to an ad valorem duty under Schedule B of the same section, imposing an ad valorem duty on glass bottles or jars filled with articles not otherwise provided for. Merritt v. Park (1883) 2 Sup. Ct. 310, 108 U. S. 109, 27 L. Ed. 669; Schmidt v. Badger (1883) 1 Sup. Ct. 530, 107 U. S. 85, 27 L. Ed. 328.

Dregs and lees of ale.—Dregs and lees in ale are not usable ale, but neither is a foreign impurity. They are dutiable as a part of the importation. U. S. v. Cummings (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 291.

Standard of measurement.—All importations of liquids, including ale and porter, are to be estimated according to the standard of the wine gallon of commerce, containing 231 cubic inches of measurement. Nichols v. Beard (C. C. 1883) 15 Fed. 435.

Wantage.—The question of wantage and the proper allowance for it is essentially one of fact, and upon the evidence in this case a proper allowance is found to be 3 per cent. of the invoice or standard capacity of the several kinds of cases containing the ale. U. S. v. Cummings (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 291.

There is no inhibition of allowance for a shortage in ale imports, and it was error on the part of the collector to ignore the actual shortage in the importation as reported by the gaugers. Id.

246. Malt extract, fluid, in casks, 23 cents per gallon; in bottles, or jugs, 45 cents per gallon; solid or condensed, 45 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Malt extract.—A fluid compound labeled, advertised, and sold in bottles as "malt extract" held dutiable as such, though it contains but 12 per cent. of malt extract, under paragraph 338, Act 1890, and not as a proprietary medicine. In re Eisner (C. C. 1893) 54 Fed. 671, distinguishing Ferguson v. Arthur (1886) 6 Sup. Ct. 861, 117 U. S. 482, 29 L. Ed. 979, and reversed U. S. v. Eisner & Mendelsohn Co. (1894) 59 Fed. 352, 8 C. C. A. 148.

Paragraph 309, Act 1909, imposes a duty of 45 per cent. ad valorem on malt extract when solid or condensed, without regard to coverings and in whatever form it may be packed for shipment. U. S. v. Conkey & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 505.

247. Cherry juice and prune juice, or prune wine, and other fruit juices, and fruit sirup, not specially provided for in this section, containing no alcohol or not more than 18 per centum of alcohol, 70 cents per gallon; if containing more than 18 per centum of alcohol, 70 cents per gallon and in addition thereto $2.07 per proof gallon on the alcohol contained therein.

Cherry juice.—Marasque water held not dutiable as cherry juice. See paragraph 48.

A preparation of cherry juice, made by subjecting the natural juice to heat in a vacuum to eliminate the watery parts, and adding 17 per cent. of alcohol, held a different article from the cherry juice known at the time of the passage of Act 1890, and subjected by section 2, p. 339, of that act to a duty of 60 cents per gallon, but dutiable, as an alcoholic compound, under section 2, par. 8, of that act. Smith v. Rheinstrom (1895)

65 Fed. 984, 13 C. C. A. 261, reversing In re Smith (C. C. 1894) 60 Fed. 599.

Concentrated fruit juice in general.—Concentrated fruit juice held dutiable, under Act 1897, par. 299, as fruit juice by similitude. U. S. v. Rich (1910) 176 Fed. 732, 100 C. C. A. 278, affirming judgment Rich v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 293.

Grenadine.—Grenadine held not dutiable as a fruit sirup. See paragraph 385.

It cannot be said that, because certain fruits contain citric acid and grenadine also contains citric acid, therefore grenadine is a fruit sirup; it appearing that citric acid not only exists in certain fruits, but is made synthetically. U. S. v. Wakem & McLaughlin (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 385.

The fact that grenadine contains citric acid and that certain fruits also contain that substance is not sufficient to show such similarity of substance as would justify classifying grenadine by similitude to fruit sirups. Id.

Pineapple juice.—Crushed pineapple, to which has been added the juice of other pineapples, is not dutiable under paragraph 274, Act 1909, as "pineapples preserved in their own juice." It is a mixture of two articles, one of which is dutiable under paragraph 274 as "pineapples preserved in their own juice," and the other under paragraph 310 as "other fruit juices." There being no claim, however, of such a tariff status, and no showing as to how the relative quantities of the component parts may be ascertained, the board properly assessed it as "other fruit juices" under paragraph 310. Johnson Co. v. U. S. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 472.

Pineapple juice, containing no alcohol whatever, held dutiable, under paragraph 247, Act 1894, as "fruit juice * * * containing eighteen per centum or less of alcohol," and not under section 3, as a nonenumerated manufactured article. U. S. v. J. S. Johnson & Co. (C. C. 1898) 90 Fed. 805.

Strawberry and raspberry juice.—Strawberry and raspberry fruit juice, containing no alcohol held dutiable, under paragraph 247, Act 1894, as "other fruit juices, not specially provided for," containing 18 per cent. or less of alcohol. Park v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 159.

248. Ginger ale, ginger beer, lemonade, soda water, and other similar beverages containing no alcohol, in plain green or colored, molded or pressed, glass bottles, containing each not more than one-half pint, 12 cents per dozen; containing each more than one-half pint and not more than three-fourths of a pint, 18 cents per dozen; containing more than three-fourths of a pint each and not more than one and one-half pints, 28 cents per dozen; but no separate or additional duty shall be assessed on the bottles; if imported otherwise than in plain green or colored, molded or pressed, glass bottles, or in such bottles containing more than one and one-half pints each, 50 cents per gallon, and in addition thereto duty shall be collected on the bottles, or other coverings, at the rates which would be chargeable thereon if imported empty. Beverages not specially provided for containing not more than 2 per centum of alcohol shall be assessed for duty under this paragraph.

Ginger ale.—In assessing duty on ginger ale in bottles under paragraph 248, Act 1894, the provision therein that "no separate or additional duty shall be assessed on the bottles" prevents the collector from adding the value of the bottles to the value of the ale, on the ground that they are coverings, under the administrative act of June 10, 1890 (§ 5599, post). U. S. v. Dickson (1896) 73 Fed. 195, 19 C. C. A. 428, affirming Dickson v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 68 Fed. 534.

Ginger ale in bottles, imported when Act 1894 was in effect, was liable for duty, under paragraph 248 of the act, for 20 per cent. ad valorem, but was not liable for duty on the cost of corking, wiring, labeling, and capping, in accordance with Act June 10, 1890, § 19 (section 5599, post). West v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 119 Fed. 495.

Under paragraph 248, Act 1894, which imposes on ginger ale or ginger beer a duty of 20 per cent. ad valorem, but provides that "no separate or additional duty shall be assessed on the bottles," the cost of corking and wiring is not to be deducted in ascertaining dutiable value, on the theory that this is a part of the cost of the bottles, and that the bottles are free; but, as ginger beer is always sold in bottles, corked and wired, the duty should be assessed on the whole value of the goods as thus bought and sold, in the place from which they were imported. U. S. v. Keane (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 330.

Bottles containing ginger ale held not liable to any duty under Act 1883, providing for a duty on "ginger ale or ginger beer, twenty per cent. ad valorem, but no separate or additional duty shall be collected on bottles or jugs containing the same." Lelar v. Hartranft (C. C. 1887) 33 Fed. 242.

Under the clause in Act 1883, providing a duty of 20 per cent. ad valorem on ginger ale or ginger beer, etc., no separate or additional duty is to be collected on the bottles or jugs containing the same. But where the ale or beer is bottled, the ad valorem duty should be levied upon the wholesale value thereof as bottled ale or beer in the general market of the country whence it is imported. (1886) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 478.

Soda water.—In paragraph 88, Act 1894, providing for duties on glass bottles, the words, contained in the first clause, "whether filled or unfilled, and whether their contents be dutiable or free," apply only to the preceding enumerated articles, and not to vials, which are provided for in the following clause. Therefore vials holding from a quarter of a pint to a pint, and imported filled with soda water, were entitled to free entry, along with their contents, under paragraph 555; being the proper and necessary covering thereof. Ross v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 153, judgment affirmed U. S. v. Ross (1898) 91 Fed. 108, 33 C. C. A. 361.

249. All mineral waters and all imitations of natural mineral waters, and all artificial mineral waters not specially provided for in this section, in bottles or jugs containing not more than one-half pint, 10 cents per dozen bottles; if containing more than one-half pint and not more than one pint, 15 cents per dozen bottles; if containing more than one pint and not more than one quart, 20 cents per dozen bottles; if imported in bottles or in jugs containing more than one quart, 18 cents per gallon; if imported otherwise than in bottles or jugs, 8 cents per gallon; and in addition thereto, on all of the foregoing, duty shall be collected upon the bottles or other containers at one-third of the rates that would be charged thereon if imported empty or separately.

Mineral water.—Under R. S. § 2504, Schedule B., which imposed a duty of 30 per cent. ad valorem "on glass bottles or jars filled with articles not otherwise provided for," such duty was chargeable on bottles filled with natural mineral water, though by section 2505 mineral water not artificial was declared exempt. Merritt v. Stephani (1883) 2 Sup. Ct. 308, 108 U. S. 106, 27 L. Ed. 668.

"Nigari" is not palatable, is not used as a drinking water, nor for medicinal purposes, but is used in the cooking of certain oriental dishes. This article is not to be taken as a mineral water as contemplated by paragraph 312, Act 1909. The record does not disclose with precision facts necessary in making a true classification of the merchandise. Iwakami & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 244.

Apollinaris mineral water is regarded as an artificial mineral water, and dutiable as such. (1881) 17 Op. Atty. Gen. 176.

SCHEDULE I.—COTTON MANUFACTURES

250. Cotton thread and carded yarn, warps, or warp yarn, whether on beams or in bundles, skeins, or cops, or in any other form, not combed, bleached, dyed, mercerized, or colored, except spool thread of cotton, crochet, darning and embroidery cottons, hereinafter provided for, shall be subject to the following rates of duty:

Numbers up to and including number nine, 5 per centum ad valorem; exceeding number nine and not exceeding number nineteen, 7½ per centum ad valorem; exceeding number nineteen and not exceeding number thirty-nine, 10 per centum ad valorem; exceeding number thirty-nine and not exceeding number forty-nine, 15 per centum ad valorem; exceeding number forty-nine and not exceeding number fifty-nine, 17½ per centum ad valorem; exceeding number fifty-nine and not exceeding number seventy-nine, 20 per centum ad valorem; exceeding number seventy-nine and not exceeding number ninety-nine, 22½ per centum ad valorem; exceeding number ninety-nine, 25 per centum ad valorem. When combed, bleached, dyed, mercerized, or colored, they shall be subject to the following rates of duty: Numbers up to and including number nine, 7½ per centum ad valorem; exceeding number nine and not exceeding number nineteen, 10 per centum ad valorem; exceeding number nineteen and not exceeding number thirty-nine, 12½ per centum ad valorem; exceeding number thirty-nine and not exceeding number forty-nine, 17½ per centum ad valorem; exceeding number forty-nine and not exceeding number fifty-nine, 20 per centum ad valorem; exceeding number fifty-nine and not exceeding number seventy-nine, 22½ per centum ad valorem; exceeding number seventy-nine and not exceeding number ninety-nine, 25 per centum ad valorem; exceeding number ninety-nine, 27½ per centum ad valorem. Cotton waste and flocks, manufactured or otherwise advanced in value, cotton card laps, roping, sliver, or roving, 5 per centum ad valorem.

Cotton sliver.—Ramie sliver held not dutiable as an unenumerated manufactured article, under Act 1897, but as cotton sliver by similitude. F. B. Vandegrift & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 65, judgment affirmed (1909) 173 Fed. 609, 97 C. C. A. 469.

Rovings.—"Rovings" made of cotton, not commercially known as thread, but being in fact a cotton thread, held dutiable under paragraph 250, Act 1894, as "cotton thread in singles, not advanced beyond a condition of singles, by grouping or twisting two or more single yarns"; and not as manufactures of cotton not specially provided for, under paragraph 264. Dunham v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 87 Fed. 800.

Yarn dyed and glazed.—Under Act 1897, par. 302, and Treasury Department Rule Sept. 8, 1897, for ascertaining the number of cotton yarns, which says to multiply the number of yarns by the number of strands, multiply the product by 8⅓, and divide the resulting product by the weight of the yarn in grains. Held that cotton yarns dyed, glazed, and finished, but not advanced beyond singles, though dyeing and glazing increases the weight and decreases the number of the yarn, and the weight used by the formula is that of, and by it the number is ascertained according to, the original conditions, when the number is so ascertained, the dutiable weight is ascertained by actual weighing. Downing v. U. S. (1901) 109 Fed. 885, 48 C. C. A. 703.

251. Spool thread of cotton, crochet, darning, and embroidery cottons, on spools, reels, or balls, or in skeins, cones, or tubes, or in any other form 15 per centum ad valorem.

Darning cotton.—Under Act 1897, par. 303, providing for a duty on "spool thread of cotton, including crochet, darning, and embroidery cottons on spools or reels" by the 100 yards of thread; "if otherwise than on spools or reels, one-half of one cent for each hundred yards or fractional part thereof"—darning cotton of four strands, slightly twisted, in balls, held dutiable by the yards in length of darning cotton, and not the yards in length of the several strands of which it is composed. Calhoun, Robbins & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 424.

Embroidery cotton.—Because it appears that the expression "embroidery cottons," in Act 1897, par. 303, was a well-known commercial term when the act was passed, and there is nothing in the phraseology of the law to indicate that congress intended to make chief or individual use the test for classification rather than the commercial meaning of said expression, held, that the provision was not intended to include any article not commercially known as "embroidery cottons." Loeb & Schoenfeld v. U. S. (1906) 150 Fed. 327, 80 C. C. A. 211.

The provision in Act 1897, for "embroidery cottons," held not to include so-called "No. 60 5-ply" thread or yarn used in embroidering machines, which is shown not to be within the class commercially known as "embroidery cottons." Loeb & Schoenfeld v. U. S. (1906) 150 Fed. 327, 80 C. C. A. 211, reversing judgment (C. C. 1905) 143 Fed. 698.

252. Cotton cloth, not bleached, dyed, colored, stained, painted, printed, woven figured, or mercerized, containing yarns the average number of which does not exceed number nine, 7½ per centum ad valorem; exceeding number nine and not exceeding number nineteen, 10 per centum ad valorem; exceeding number nineteen and not exceeding number thirty-nine, 12½ per centum ad valorem; exceeding number thirty-nine and not exceeding number forty-nine, 17½ per centum ad valorem; exceeding number forty-nine and not exceeding number fifty-nine, 20 per centum ad valorem; exceeding number fifty-nine and not exceeding number seventy-nine, 22½ per centum ad valorem; exceeding number seventy-nine and not exceeding number ninety-nine, 25 per centum ad valorem; exceeding number ninety-nine, 27½ per centum ad valorem. Cotton cloth when bleached, dyed, colored, stained, painted, printed, woven figured, or mercerized, containing yarn the average number of which does not exceed number nine, 10 per centum ad valorem; exceeding number nine and not exceeding number nineteen, 12½ per centum ad valorem; exceeding number nineteen and not exceeding number thirty-nine, 15 per centum ad valorem; exceeding number thirty-nine and not exceeding number forty-nine, 20 per centum ad valorem; exceeding number forty-nine and not exceeding number fifty-nine, 22½ per centum ad valorem; exceeding number fifty-nine and not exceeding number seventy-nine, 25 per centum ad valorem; exceeding number seventy-nine and not exceeding number ninety-nine, 27½ per centum ad valorem; exceeding number ninety-nine, 30 per centum ad valorem; plain gauze or leno woven cotton nets or nettings shall be classified for duty as cotton cloth.

Notes of Decisions

1. In general.
2. Bleached goods.
3. Embroidery canvas.
4. Figured woven cotton goods.
5. Madras mull.
6. Openwork fabrics.
7. Portières.
8. Scotch hollands.
9. Selvage as part of cloth.
10. Swiss muslins or dotted swisses.
11. Tamboured sash window curtains.
12. Woven figured goods.

1. In general.—See, also, notes under paragraph 253.

2. Bleached goods.—As to cotton cloth which is unbleached, except with respect to figures covering about one-eighth of the surface of the fabric, which are made of bleached threads, held, that these figures do not make the goods "bleached," within the meaning of the various provisions for bleached cotton cloth found in Act 1897. U. S. v. Beer (C. C. 1905) 143 Fed. 918.

Bleached cotton cloth, containing under 50 threads to the square inch, counting both warp and filling, though costing over 9 cents per square yard, held assessable at 1¼ cents per square yard, under Act 1894, par. 252, which enumerates "cotton cloth * * * not exceeding fifty threads to the square inch, counting the warp and filling, * * * bleached, one and one-fourth cents per square yard," and not at 25 per cent. ad valorem, under paragraph 253, which provides for the assessment of bleached cotton cloth "exceeding fifty, and not exceeding one hundred, threads to the square inch, counting the warp and filling," "provided, that in all cotton cloth, not exceeding one hundred threads to the square inch, counting the warp and filling, * * * bleached, valued at over nine cents per square yard, * * * there shall be levied, collected, and paid a duty of twenty-five per cent. ad valorem"; the proviso applying only to paragraph 253. In re Blankensteyn (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 776.

3. Embroidery canvas.—Embroidery canvas (called in trade "Penelope") made of cotton, and containing less than 100 threads to the square inch, held dutiable at 4½ cents per square yard, under the provision in Schedule 1, Tariff Act March 3, 1883, for "all cotton cloth, colored, not exceeding 100 threads to the square inch," and not at 35 per centum ad valorem under the provision in the same act and schedule for "all manufactures of cotton not specially enumerated or provided for." Ullmann v. Hedden (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 95.

4. Figured woven cotton goods.—"Cotton cloth woven figured in the piece" is more specific in describing the goods here than "manufactures of cotton, Jacquard figured." "Cotton cloth woven figured" exactly describes the merchandise, and this is "in the piece." The provisions for cotton cloth in paragraph 252, Tariff Act 1913, as defined in paragraph 253, control. U. S. v. Sherman & Sons Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 271.

5. Madras mull.—Madras mull, consisting of woven cotton cloth in which the groundwork is uniform, and the threads countable by the aid of a magnifying glass, held dutiable under the countable provisions pars. 319–321, Act 1883, and not as a "manufacture of cotton not specially enumerated," under paragraph 324, notwithstanding that it had upon it figures or patterns woven into the groundwork contemporaneously with the weaving thereof, the whole being afterwards run through a clipping machine, which cuts the weft threads so that they do not extend continuously from selvage to selvage. Hedden v. Robertson (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 434, 436, 151 U. S. 520, 38 L. Ed. 257, reversing Robertson v. Hedden (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 322, applying Newman v. Arthur (1883) 3 Sup. Ct. 88, 109 U. S. 132, 27 L. Ed. 883.

6. Openwork fabrics.—The fact that substantial numbers of the warp threads and of the filling threads are absent in fancy fabrics of the openwork variety does not remove the goods from the provision for "all cotton cloth not exceeding one hundred threads to the square inch counting the warp and filling," in Act 1897, par. 305. Wilfred Schade & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 893.

Held, that in order to come within the provision in Act 1897, par. 305, for "all cotton cloth not exceeding one hundred threads to the square inch counting the warp and filling," it is not necessary that the goods should be uniform or homogeneous throughout, and that the provision includes openwork fabrics which contain nowhere more than 100 threads to the square inch and of which substantial portions have no warp and other substantial portions no filling. Quaintance v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 147 Fed. 753.

7. Portières.—Cotton portières and table covers, woven with a border and a selvage and cut to the size and form of the article as intended for sale and use, but needing to be trimmed, or hemmed and fringed, before they can be used, held dutiable as cotton cloth, and not as "manufactures of cotton not specially provided for," under paragraph 322, Act 1897. Stern v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 123 Fed. 192.

8. Scotch hollands.—Cotton goods for window shades held dutiable as Scotch hollands, see paragraph 254.

9. Selvage as part of cloth.—There were mercerized threads in the selvage, but not in the body of the cloth. The selvage is a part of the fabric only in the sense of being attached to it; it has none of the uses or purposes of the textile to which it is woven. It is, accordingly, a distinct entity and cannot be taken to fix the classification of the textile itself. U. S. v. Auffmordt & Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 236.

Cotton cloth with selvage of silk, the selvage ordinary in kind and not designed to form a material and essential part of the goods as these might enter into consumption, was dutiable as cotton cloth under paragraph 306, Act 1897. U. S. v. Mandel (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 223.

10. Swiss muslins or dotted swisses.—Dotted swisses held not dutiable under the countable clauses. See paragraph 358.

"Swiss muslins" or "dotted swisses," being cotton goods in which the threads can be counted independently of the dots, the dots being woven at the same time with the cloth, but consisting of threads distinct from both warp and filling, held dutiable under Act 1890, par. 346, and not under paragraph 355 as "manufactures of cotton not specially provided for." In re Haager (C. C. 1893) 57 Fed. 192; reversed in U. S. v. Albert (1894) 60 Fed. 1012, 9 C. C. A. 332, following Hedden v. Robertson (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 434, 151 U. S. 520, 38 L. Ed. 257.

11. Tamboured sash window curtains.—Tamboured sash window curtains held not dutiable under the countable clause. See paragraph 265.

12. Woven figured goods.—Figured cotton cloth valued at over 11, 12, and 12½ cents per square yard held liable, in addition to the specific duty imposed by Act 1897, par. 313, to the ad valorem tax imposed by paragraphs 306, 307, upon similar plain cotton cloth above those values. U. S. v. George Riggs & Co. (1906) 27 Sup. Ct. 39, 203 U. S. 136, 51 L. Ed. 127, reversing decree (1905) 136 Fed. 583, 69 C. C. A. 357.

In Act 1897, par. 313, providing a duty on figured cotton cloth in addition to that "provided for other cotton cloth of the same description, or condition," the intent is to impose an extra duty in addition to that imposed on "other cotton cloth of the same * * * condition," etc., which has not been figured; and where it is colored, but coloring is given by threads used to form the figures, such extra duty should be added to that applicable to uncolored, rather than colored, cottons. U. S. v. Rusch & Co. (1909) 167 Fed. 523, 93 C. C. A. 159, affirming judgment (C. C. 1908) 160 Fed. 279, and writ of certiorari denied (1909) 29 Sup. Ct. 703, 214 U. S. 525, 53 L. Ed. 1068.

Act 1897, par. 313, imposing an additional duty on "cotton cloth in which other than the ordinary warp and filling threads have been introduced in the process of weaving to form a figure," includes cotton cloth in which there is a separate and extra thread, not introduced for the purpose of ordinary manufacture, but with the sole object of forming the figure, and which does not in any way enter into the structural part of the goods, but is for ornamental purposes, and without which the fabric would have been a completed fabric. Mills v. U. S. (1902) 114 Fed. 257, 52 C. C. A. 92, affirming judgment (C. C. 1901) 109 Fed. 564.

Act 1897, par. 313, imposing an additional duty on "cotton cloth in which other than the ordinary warp and filling threads have been introduced in the process of weaving to form a figure," applies to cotton goods, known as "Madras" or "damask" goods which are "ornamental, with spots or figures woven in by independent filling threads introduced for that purpose"; the threads not being an integral part of the fabric, and the portions not needed to make the figure being cut off after the weaving process is concluded. H. B. Clafin Co. v. U. S. (1902) 114 Fed. 259, 52 C. C. A. 94, affirming judgment (C. C. 1901) 109 Fed. 562.

In Act 1897, par. 313, relating to "cotton cloth in which other than the ordinary warp and filling threads have been introduced in the process of weaving to form figure," the term "threads" is used in a sense including the remnants thereof so introduced, clipped off where appearing at intervals on the back of the fabric. R. B. Maclea Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 167 Fed. 688.

The provision in Act 1897, par. 313, for "cotton cloth in which other than the ordinary warp and filling threads have been introduced in the process of weaving to form a figure," includes goods having dots produced by warp threads which on the back of the fabric hang loosely between the dots, and which add no strength to the cloth, but may be removed without leaving a visible vacancy. Gitterman & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 169.

In the main part of paragraphs 306, 307, Act 1897, there is prescribed a scale of duties for cotton cloth, varying in rate according to certain physical conditions of the fabric, as whether bleached, dyed, colored, stained, painted, or printed, and whether of specified conditions of weight and thread count; and in a proviso to each of these paragraphs there is prescribed a different scale of duties, varying according to the same tests, except as to weight, but regulated by additional conditions as to the value of the cloth. Paragraph 313 of said act provides that such cloth shall, if subjected to certain figuring processes, pay a duty "in addition to the duty herein provided for other cotton cloth of the same description, or condition, weight, and count of threads." Held, that the expression "same description, or condition," as thus used, has no reference to the condition concerning value prescribed in the provisos to paragraphs 306, 307, and that, when cotton cloth is of such character as to become liable to the additional duty prescribed in paragraph 313, such duty should be additional only to that provided in the main part of paragraph 306 or 307, and not to that prescribed in said provisos to those paragraphs, conditioned on the value of the fabric. George Riggs & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 568.

Where a cotton cloth has figures woven in it upon the loom at the same time with the fabric itself, the count must include the threads of the figure, as well as the threads of the groundwork. Robertson v. Hedden (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 322.

In appraising the value of figured cotton cloth, the threads added to constitute the figure are not to be omitted in the valuation, but these, together with the foundation threads, are to be taken into account in fixing ad valorem rates under paragraphs 305 and 306, Act 1897. Quaintance v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 215.

253. The term cotton cloth, or cloth, wherever used in the paragraphs of this schedule, unless otherwise specially provided for, shall be held to include all woven fabrics of cotton, in the piece, whether figured, fancy, or plain, and shall not include any article, finished or unfinished, made from cotton cloth. In the ascertainment of the condition of the cloth or yarn upon which the duties imposed upon cotton cloth are made to depend, the entire fabric and all parts thereof shall be included. The average number of the yarn in cotton cloth herein provided for shall be obtained by taking the length of the thread or yarn to be equal to the distance covered by it in the cloth in the condition as imported, except that all clipped threads shall be measured as if continuous; in counting the threads all ply yarns shall be separated into singles and the count taken of the total singles; the weight shall be taken after any excessive sizing is removed by boiling or other suitable process.

Notes of Decisions

In general.—See, also, notes under paragraph 252.

Cotton cloth.—Fabric containing jute held not dutiable as cotton cloth. See paragraph 266.

In Act 1897, par. 310, the definition of "cotton cloth" as being "all woven fabrics of cotton" refers to goods composed entirely of cotton, or containing at most but a small percentage of some other fiber; and cloth which, though composed chiefly of cotton, yet contains a large minority of jute, is not within the definition. Lord & Taylor v. U. S. (1910) 178 Fed. 270, 101 C. C. A. 575, affirming judgment (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 282.

The provision in paragraph 257, Act 1894, that "cotton cloth," as used in the preceding paragraphs, shall include "all woven fabrics of cotton in the piece, whether figured, fancy, or plain," etc., does not apply to embroidered cotton cloth, which was not embroidered in the loom. U. S. v. Einstein (1897) 78 Fed. 797, 24 C. C. A. 346, certiorari denied Einstein v. U. S. (1897) 17 S. Ct. 993, 166 U. S. 722, 41 L. Ed. 1188.

Held, that the definition of cotton cloth in Act 1897, par. 310, as being "all woven fabrics of cotton in the piece or otherwise," includes cotton blankets with whipped or hemmed edges and in a finished condition. U. S. v. Bernhard (C. C. 1903) 150 Fed. 375.

A woven fabric made of cotton held dutiable under a provision for "cotton cloth," notwithstanding it is not known among merchants and dealers as "cotton cloth." Ullmann v. Hedden (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 95.

The word "cloth" in the provision for "cotton cloth" in Act 1883, is used in its popular and common acceptation, and not in a commercial sense. Ullmann v. Hedden (C. C. 1899) 38 Fed. 95, following Maillard v. Lawrence (1853) 16 How. 251, 14 L. Ed. 925, and Greenleaf v. Goodrich (1879) 101 U. S. 278, 25 L. Ed. 845.

The words cotton cloth or cloth, wherever used in paragraph 320, Act 1909, have the same meaning the first clause of that paragraph declares they shall have when applied to other paragraphs, Schedule I of that act. Shallus v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 556.

Fabrics.—Strips of cotton for bandages held not dutiable as woven fabrics in the piece or cut into lengths. See paragraph 266.

Partly finished articles made of cotton cloth are fabrics within the meaning of that term as used in paragraph 310, Act 1897, providing that all cotton cloth shall be held to include all woven fabrics in the piece or otherwise. Stern v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 123 Fed. 192.

Madras shirting.—The merchandise was a cotton cloth, commonly called striped or madras shirting, so woven that ordinary warp threads are grouped together and covered with another longer warp thread on the face of the fabric and presenting a raised rounded appearance, forming thereby, in effect only, a co-called Russian cord. Irrespective of what it resembles, this cloth is not dutiable under paragraph 323, Act 1909, imposing a cumulative duty, but under paragraph 320 of that act, in connection with paragraph 318. U. S. v. McConnell (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 73.

Method of counting.—Goods of such a fabric that the threads could not be counted except by unraveling the cloth are to be treated within the classification according to the number of threads to the square inch, however such number may be determined, and hence are not to be classed under the final clause as "all other manufactures of cotton not otherwise provided for," though it had been customary to ascertain the number of threads by the use of a glass, and though cloth of the character of that in question was not manufactured at the time of the passage of the act. There is no language in the statute which requires for its interpretation the aid of any extrinsic circumstances, and the law fixes duty by a classification based on the number of threads in a square inch without reference to the mode in which the count is to be made. Newman v. Arthur (1883) 3 Sup. Ct. 88, 91, 109 U. S. 132, 27 L. Ed. 883.

The provisions of Act 1883 for countable cottons, necessarily import that the cloth shall be homogeneous so that the number of threads per square inch will not differ in different parts of the fabric. Robertson v. Hedden (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 322.

Paragraph 320, Tariff Act 1909, makes provision for counting the threads in the fabrics of the importation, and the provision is to the effect that in ascertaining the count of threads per square inch the ordinary as well as the extraordinary threads are to be counted, and counted whether they are clipped or unclipped. Witcombe, McGeachin & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 240.

The texture of the fabric is to be found by counting the threads in one repeat of the pattern and then dividing this result by the number of inches these threads occupy in the cloth. This is to determine the texture not according to the count in the most or the least compact part of the fabric, but according to the average count of the whole. Id.

254. Cloth composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber and silk, whether known as silk-striped sleeve linings, silk stripes, or otherwise, of which cotton or other vegetable fiber is the component material of chief value, and tracing cloth, 30 per centum ad valorem; cotton cloth filled or coated, all oilcloths (except silk oilcloths and oilcloths for floors), and cotton window hollands, 25 per centum ad valorem; waterproof cloth composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, or of which cotton or other vegetable fiber is the component material of chief value or of cotton or other vegetable fiber and india rubber, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Cotton cloth in general.—Colored cotton cloth with polka dots composed of goat hair held not dutiable as cotton cloth. See paragraph 288.

Cotton cloth filled.—The term "filled," as used in paragraph 311, Act 1897, fixing the duty on "cotton cloth, filled or coated," which is a manufacturing, rather than a commercial, term, is not confined in its meaning to such goods as have been weighted with a foreign substance—usually an inorganic material—to give them a factitious solidity, in which sense it was formerly used in England, but the filling may be starch alone. But, whatever substance is used, to constitute "cotton cloth, filled," within the meaning of that section, such quantity must be used as to substantially close the interstices in the cloth, and make a plain surface. U. S. v. Pinney, Casse & Lackey Co. (1900) 105 Fed. 934, 45 C. C. A. 138.

The merchandise is a cotton cloth coated, and artificial silk constitutes its value in chief. In determining its proper classification the rule applies that an eo nomine provision is more specific than words of general description. The duty is not imposed upon the artificial silk as such, but upon a designated article, "cotton cloth, coated." Cotton cloth, coated, is dutiable under paragraph 321, Tariff Act 1909. Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 479. See, also, U. S. v. Zinn & Co. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 419.

Cotton window hollands.—Fabrics made from cotton hollands held dutiable as manufactures of cotton. See paragraph 266.

Cotton goods used for window shades, known as "Scotch hollands" or "King's hollands," stiffened with 20 per cent. of starch, held dutiable under paragraphs 306, 307, and 308, Act 1897, being the countable cotton clauses, and not under paragraph 311, as "cotton cloth, filled." U. S. v. Pinney, Casse & Lackey Co. (1900) 105 Fed. 934, 45 C. C. A. 138; Pinney, Casse & Lackey Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 99 Fed. 720.

It would appear that congress intended paragraph 321, Act 1909, re-enacting and enlarging paragraph 311, Act 1897, to take the construction theretofore given it so far as it applied to the same merchandise named in each paragraph and that certain window shades and filled cloths formerly held dutiable thereunder should so continue regardless of the fact that it is possible to count the number of warp and filling threads of the basic fabric, which might, but for the specific provisions of paragraph 321, render the merchandise dutiable under paragraph 315. Shallus v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 556.

Imitation pongee silk.—Imitation pongee silk, in chief value of cotton, was dutiable under paragraph 311, Act 1897. Saito v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 132.

Waterproof cloth.—Waterproof cloth in chief value of india rubber held not dutiable as waterproof cloth composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber. See paragraph 368.

The principle of ejusdem generis should not be applied to exclude waterproof woolen cloth from the provision for "waterproof cloth" in paragraph 369, Act 1890, because the subject of that schedule is flax, hemp, and jute. U. S. v. Brown & Eadie (1905) 136 Fed. 550, 69 C. C. A. 260.

Certain woolen goods known as "cravenette cloths," which have been subjected to a process intended to make them rain-repellent, which are chiefly used for outer garments to be worn in rainy weather, and which, for all ordinary purposes, are waterproof. held dutiable as "waterproof cloth," under paragraph 369, Act 1890, and not under paragraphs 392 and 395, Schedule K, of said act, relating respectively, to "woolen or worsted cloths" and "dress-goods * * * of wool, worsted," etc. U. S. v. Brown & Eadie (1905) 136 Fed. 550, 69 C. C. A. 260, affirming judgment Brown & Eadie v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 446.

The merchandise is not a velvet cloth, but a waterproof cloth resembling velvet on one side and a rubber-like fabric on the other. Cotton fiber is the component material of chief value. Paragraph 347, Act 1909, applies. U. S. v. Walker (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 215.

In paragraph 347, Act 1909, the words "waterproof cloth composed ,of cotton or other vegetable fiber whether composed in part of india rubber or otherwise," must be taken to mean composed in part of india rubber or not. U. S. v. Vandegrift & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 226.

255. Handkerchiefs or mufflers composed of cotton, not specially provided for in this section, whether finished or unfinished, not hemmed, 25 per centum ad valorem; hemmed, or hemstitched, 30 per centum ad valorem.

Handkerchiefs.—Hemstitched cotton handkerchiefs, known as such in trade and commerce at the time of the passage of Act 1883, having a hem of one inch or more in breadth, with several threads drawn out from the material at the head of the hem, and the hem stitched down by an open stitch, are not "hemmed handkerchiefs," but dutiable as "manufactures of cotton not specially enumerated or provided for" at 35 per cent. ad valorem under the same schedule of said act (paragraph 324). In re H. B. Claflin Co. (1892) 52 Fed. 121, 2 C. C. A. 647; Id. (C. C. 1891) 47 Fed. 875.

Cotton hemstitched handkerchiefs, with an initial embroidered thereon, held dutiable under Act 1890, as "handkerchiefs composed of cotton or other vegetable fibre," under paragraph 349, and not as "embroidered and hemstitched handkerchiefs," under paragraph 373. U. S. v. Jonas (1897) 83 Fed. 167, 27 C. C. A. 500, approving U. S. v. Harden (1895) 68 Fed. 182, 15 C. C. A. 358, and certiorari denied in (1895) 16 Sup. Ct. 1207, 163 U. S. 709, 41 L. Ed. 312.

Imitation hemstitched cotton handkerchiefs held dutiable as "handkerchiefs composed of cotton," under paragraph 349, Act 1890, and not as "embroidered and hemstitched handkerchiefs," under paragraph 373. Rice v. U. S. (1893) 53 Fed. 910, 4 C. C. A. 104.

Hemmed or hemstitched handkerchiefs, which are not also embroidered, held dutiable under paragraph 349 of Tariff Act 1890, as "handkerchiefs—composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber," and not under paragraph 373, as "hemstitched and embroidered handkerchiefs." Wilson v. U. S. (1893) 57 Fed. 199, 6 C. C. A. 310, following Rice v. U. S. (1893) 53 Fed. 910, 4 C. C. A. 104.

Handkerchiefs, composed of linen and cotton, imported under Act 1890, consisting, first, of handkerchiefs with a hemstitched border; second, of handkerchiefs embroidered or scalloped on the edge, and not hemstitched; and, third, of handkerchiefs with a hemstitched border, and embroidered either with initial letters or with figures worked by hand or machinery—held dutiable, the hemstitched handkerchiefs, under paragraph 349 of said act, at 50 per centum ad valorem, as "handkerchiefs"; those with embroidered edge as textile fabrics embroidered by hand or machinery, under the proviso in paragraph 373, at 60 per centum ad valorem; and only those handkerchiefs which are embroidered and also hemstitched are dutiable as such under paragraph 373 of said act. In re Gribbon (C. C. 1892) 53 Fed. 78, judgment affirmed (1893) 55 Fed. 874, 5 C. C. A. 287.

Mufflers.—Mufflers of cotton and silk held not dutiable as cotton mufflers. See paragraph 315.

Shawls.—Shawls worth 15 shillings and 6 pence, containing 1 shilling and 6 pence worth of silk, and the rest cotton, held subject to a duty of 35 per cent. only, as "shawls, cotton chief value," under R. S. § 2504, instead of 60 per cent., as "wearing apparel, silk chief value."—Leahy v. Spaulding (C. C. 1884) 19 Fed. 417.

256. Clothing, ready-made, and articles of wearing apparel of every description, composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, or of which cotton or other vegetable fiber is the component material of chief value, or of cotton or other vegetable fiber and india rubber, made up or manufactured, wholly or in part, by the tailor, seamstress, or manufacturer, and not otherwise specially provided for in this section, 30 per centum ad valorem; shirt collars and cuffs of cotton, not specially provided for in this section, 30 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Articles of wearing apparel.—A child's cap made of elastic braid with a view of preventing the ear from growing abnormally held not dutiable as an article of wearing apparel. See paragraph 262.

Fascinators made of cotton chenille held not dutiable as articles of wearing apparel. See paragraph 258.

Hemstitched lawns held not dutiable as partly made wearing apparel. See paragraph 266.

Hoods made of cotton chenille held not dutiable as articles of wearing apparel. See paragraph 258.

Tennis jackets in part of cotton held not dutiable as articles of wearing apparel of which cotton is the component material of chief value. See paragraph 291.

The words "neckwear" and "neckties" in paragraph 314, Act 1897, held not terms of commercial designation. Goldenberg Bros. & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 124 Fed. 1003, judgment affirmed (1904) 130 Fed. 108, 64 C. C. A. 442, writ of certiorari denied Goldenburg Bros. & Co. v. Same (1904) 25 S. Ct. 791, 195 U. S. 634, 49 L. Ed. 354.

Dresses, composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, in part embroidered and in part made of lace, being so far advanced in manufacture as to be unavailable for other purposes than for completion into light dresses, held dutiable under Act 1894, par. 258, as "articles of wearing apparel * * * made up or manufactured wholly or in part," and not under paragraph 276, covering "laces, * * * embroideries, * * * articles embroidered, * * * and articles made wholly or in part of lace." Meyer v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 124 Fed. 296.

Corsets of which cotton is the component material of chief value, trimmed at the top with lace, held not articles made in any part of lace, though they are so trimmed, but dutiable under Act 1897, par. 314, as wearing apparel of "every description of which cotton is the component material of chief value." Altman Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 263.

Cotton corsets, imported on April 30, 1891, held dutiable under Act 1890, par. 349, as cotton wearing apparel, and not under paragraph 324, of Act 1883, as corsets, nor under paragraph 355, of the said Act 1890, as "manufactures of cotton." In re Ottenheimer (C. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 222.

Certain shirt bosoms are precisely and more specifically described by the term "wearing apparel composed of cotton or of cotton in chief value made up or manufactured in part" (paragraph 256, Tariff Act 1913) than they are by the term "articles made up in part of tuckings of whatever yarns, threads, or filaments composed" (paragraph 358 of that act). The required attributes of wearing apparel most closely describe and identify the goods, and they are dutiable as such under paragraph 256. U. S. v. Snow's U. S. Sample Express Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 120.

The merchandise consists of cotton wearing apparel upon which are sewn strips or bands of goods figured in different colors for ornamental purposes only. The articles are held to be cotton wearing apparel only, and not "appliquéd." U. S. v. Hamburger Levine Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 217.

Imitation horsehair hats are in material almost identical with, and in quality and texture they resemble, hats of cotton; the use of them, too, is similar. They were dutiable at the same rate with cotton wearing apparel under paragraph 314, Act 1897, at 50 per cent. ad valorem. U. S. v. Cochran & Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 57.

The merchandise consisted of slippers made of cotton and leather, the parts of the slippers composed of each of the two materials being made separately for use in producing the completed article. In determining the component of chief value in merchandise of this kind inquiry will be made in each case as it presents itself to discover at what stage the several parts were completed for use in being put together as a completed whole; that stage will be "its condition as found in the article." Here the expense of sewing the pieces of cotton cloth together, in preparation for uniting them with the leather parts, enters into the value of the cotton so employed. According to the evidence cotton was the component of chief value in these slippers and they are dutiable under paragraph 324, Tariff Act 1909. U. S. v. Meadows (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 143. See, also, Seeberger v. Hardy (1893) 14 Sup. Ct. 170, 150 U. S. 420, 37 L. Ed. 1129.

Gloves made of yarn composed of cellulose filaments obtained from cotton waste by subjecting this to a chemical treatment are not articles of wearing apparel to be classed by similitude as silk, but are to be classed by similitude as wearing apparel, value in chief of cotton or other vegetable fiber, and were dutiable as such under paragraph 314, Act 1897. Thomass v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 86.

Clothing, ready made.—Knit shirt and drawers ready to wear, held dutiable as "ready-made clothing" (Act 1832), unless known in trade as "hosiery." Hall v. Hoyt (C. C. 1840) Fed. Cas. No. 5,934.

257. Plushes, velvets, plush or velvet ribbons, velveteens, corduroys, and all pile fabrics, cut or uncut, whether or not the pile covers the entire surface; any of the foregoing composed wholly or in chief value of cotton or other vegetable fiber except flax, hemp, or ramie; and manufactures or articles in any form, including such as are commonly known as bias dress facings or skirt bindings, made or cut from plushes, velvets, velveteens, corduroys, or other pile fabrics composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, except flax, hemp, or ramie, 40 per centum ad valorem.

Pile fabrics.—See, also, notes under paragraphs 280, 305, and 309.

Flax plush held not dutiable as pile fabrics of cotton. See paragraph 280.

A pile fabric commercially known as "velvet cord," "ribbed velvet," or "corded velvet," held not "corduroy composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber," within Act 1897, par. 315, and is not assessable as such. Stewart, Howe & May Co. v. U. S. (1902) 113 Fed. 928, 51 C. C. A. 558, reversing decree (C. C. 1900) 107 Fed. 267.

Construing paragraphs 315 and 342, Act 1897, together, "plushes, velvets, velveteens, corduroys and all pile fabrics cut or uncut," composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber are dutiable under paragraph 315, except "pile fabrics of which flax is the component material of chief value." Stern v. U. S. (1899) 98 Fed. 417, 39 C. C. A. 119, affirming judgment U. S. v. Stern (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 521.

No rule exists in trade or commercial usage declaring that fabrics having a pile of 3.5 millimeters or less in length should be regarded as velvets, and of over 3.5 millimeters as plush. U. S. v. Silberstein, Castell & Co. (C. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 965.

Trimmings cut out of cotton velvet fabric, in various open and scroll work designs and colors, held dutiable as pile cotton fabrics, under the second proviso of paragraph 315, Act 1897, and not as cotton trimmings, under paragraph 339. Horstmann, Von Hein & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 121 Fed. 147.

Held, that certain portières, made from pile fabrics composed in chief value of flax, are not included in the second proviso in paragraph 315, Act 1897, relating to "manufactures or articles in any form, * * * made or cut from * * * pile fabrics composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber." J. B. Ryer, Son & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 246.

Paragraph 315, Act 1897, contains a provision for certain rates of duty on "plushes, velvets, velveteens, corduroys, and all pile fabrics, * * * composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber," to which is added a proviso that "manufactures or articles in any form, * * * made or cut from plushes, velvets, velveteens, corduroys, or other pile fabrics composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, shall be subject to the foregoing rates of duty and in addition thereto ten per centum ad valorem." Held, that this proviso does not refer to any class of pile fabrics not included in the main provision. Id.

In paragraph 325, Act 1909, the words "plushes, velvets, velveteens, corduroys, and all pile fabrics, cut or uncut, whether or not the pile covers the entire surface," are broad enough to include any pile fabric as commonly understood. The phrase "cut or uncut" does not restrict the meaning; it merely makes the meaning clear, and the goods were properly assessed under the named paragraph. Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 128.

Velveteen dress facings.—"Velveteen dress facings" held dutiable as "manufactures of cotton not specially provided for," under paragraph 355, Act 1890, and not as "velveteens," nor as "cotton pile fabrics," under paragraph 350. In re Kursheedt Mfg. Co. (1893) 54 Fed. 159, 4 C. C. A. 262; Id. (C. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 633.

258. Curtains, table covers, and all articles manufactured of cotton chenille, or of which cotton chenille is the component material of chief value, tapestries, and other Jacquard figured upholstery goods, composed wholly or in chief value of cotton or other vegetable fiber; any of the foregoing, in the piece or otherwise, 35 per centum ad valorem; all other Jacquard figured manufactures of cotton or of which cotton is the component material of chief value, 30 per centum ad valorem.

Cotton chenille.—Hoods made of cotton chenille held dutiable under paragraph 351, Act 1890, as goods manufactured of cotton chenille, and not under paragraph 349, as clothing ready made, composed of cotton, not specially provided for. Oppenheimer v. U. S. (1896) 71 Fed. 869, 18 C. C. A. 340, affirming (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 740.

"Fascinators," made of cotton chenille, held dutiable under Act 1890, par. 351, and not under paragraph 349, as "cotton wearing apparel." Oppenheimer v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 740, judgment affirmed (1896) 71 Fed. 869, 18 C. C. A. 340.

Jacquard figured goods.—Cotton cloth, woven figured in the piece, held not dutiable as Jacquard figured goods. See paragraph 252.

Madras muslin curtains and madras muslin curtain goods in the piece, both Jacquard figured, are within the lexicographic definition of upholstery, i. e., the interior decorations of an apartment, and dutiable as "Jacquard figured upholstery goods," under paragraph 258, Act 1913. U. S. v. Snow's U. S. Sample Express Co. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 477.

By the provision for "Jacquard figured upholstery goods, composed wholly or in chief value of cotton or other vegetable fiber, any of the foregoing in the piece or otherwise," in paragraph 258, Act 1913, Congress intended to make the use of this narrowly prescribed goods the test of classification, and to include therewithin all such goods for dutiable purposes, and to invade the other paragraphs of the tariff act, including within this provision for dutiable purposes all goods answering to this description. Downing & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 447.

Jacquard figured manufactures of cotton may be either laces or figured goods of cotton, not lace at all, and accordingly the term is more comprehensive than a provision limited to a particular class of figured goods known as laces or lace articles. Wilson & Son v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 255.

Merchandise consisted of nettings, all of which are jacquard figured, and the relevant paragraphs in Act 1913 are 258 and 358 "Jacquard figured upholstery goods," in paragraph 258, restricts the operation of the term to goods whose chief use is as upholstery goods, the precise character being there defined; and accordingly the description applies to articles that might otherwise be appropriately designated nets or nettings under paragraph 358. Carter & Son v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 253.

Figured cotton panels of various sizes made on a Jacquard loom and designed to be affixed to screens are not manufactures of cotton cloth, but are more aptly described as Jacquard figured upholstery goods, and they are dutiable as such under paragraph 326, Act 1909. Bing & Co.'s Successors v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 115.

259. Stockings, hose and half hose, made on knitting machines or frames, composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, and not otherwise specially provided for in this section, 20 per centum ad valorem.

260. Stockings, hose and half hose, selvedged, fashioned, narrowed, or shaped wholly or in part by knitting machines or frames, or knit by hand, including such as are commercially known as seamless stockings, hose and half hose, and clocked stockings, hose and half hose, all of the above composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, finished or unfinished; if valued at not more than 70 cents per dozen pairs, 30 per centum ad valorem; if valued at more than 70 cents, and not more than $1.20 per dozen pairs, 40 per centum ad valorem; if valued at more than $1.20 per dozen pairs, 50 per centum ad valorem. Gloves by whatever process made, composed wholly or in chief value of cotton, 35 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Embroidered gloves.—Gloves having two rows of single-cord embroidery, between three lines or points of the material, raised up and sewed through and through, are not dutiable, under paragraph 458 of Act 1890, as "embroidered gloves with more than three single strands or cords." Wertheimer v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 77 Fed. 600.

Embroidered hosiery.—With respect to embroidered hosiery, the provision in paragraph 339, Act 1897, for "wearing apparel * * * embroidered in any manner by hand or machinery, * * * composed wholly or in chief value of flax, cotton, or other vegetable fiber, * * * and not elsewhere specially provided for," is less specific than the provision in paragraph 318, for "stockings, hose and half-hose * * * composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber." Carter, Webster & Co. v. U. S. (1906) 143 Fed. 256, 74 C. C. A. 394, affirming judgment (C. C. 1905) 137 Fed. 978, and writ of certiorari denied (1906) 26 S. Ct. 764, 202 U. S. 617, 50 L. Ed. 1173.

Gloves.—Articles commercially known as "plaited gloves" or "patent gloves," and not as "silk gloves," which are composed of silk and cotton, the preponderating material being cotton, are not dutiable at 60 per cent., under Act June 30, 1864, § 8, and not being included in such act are dutiable under Act March 2, 1861, § 22, and Act July 14, 1862, § 13. Arthur v. Unkart (1877) 96 U. S. 118, 24 L. Ed. 768.

The provision of paragraph 328, Act 1909, relating to knitted or woven gloves, is not limited in its application to gloves that are knitted, fashioned, and shaped wholly by a machine. Lehman Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 441, following Spielmann & Co. v. Same (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 368.

The importation was of cotton gloves with a knitted fabric. The form of the glove was cut from the fabric, and in completing the glove this form was sewed together with thread. "Cotton gloves knitted or woven," appearing in paragraph 328, Act 1909, is there used in a comprehensive and inclusive sense and embraces gloves manufactured from material either woven or knitted, though not shaped by the weaving process. Spielmann & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 368.

Hosiery.—"Hosiery," in Act 1832, held to have a more general meaning than "stockings," in Act 1816. Hall v. Hoyt (C. C. 1840) Fed. Cas. No. 5,934.

261. Shirts and drawers, pants, vests, union suits, combination suits, tights, sweaters, corset covers and all underwear and wearing apparel of every description, not specially provided for in this section, made wholly or in part on knitting machines or frames, or knit by hand, finished or unfinished, not including such as are trimmed with lace, imitation lace or crochet or as are embroidered and not including stockings, hose and half hose, composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, 30 per centum ad valorem.

262. Bandings, belts, beltings, bindings, bone casings, cords, tassels, cords and tassels, garters, tire fabric or fabric suitable for use in pneumatic tires, suspenders and braces, and fabrics with fast edges not exceeding twelve inches in width, all of the foregoing made of cotton or other vegetable fiber, or of which cotton or other vegetable fiber is the component material of chief value, or of cotton or other vegetable fiber and india rubber, and not embroidered by hand or machinery; spindle banding, woven, braided, or twisted lamp, stove, or candle wicking made of cotton or other vegetable fiber; loom harness, healds, or collets made of cotton or other vegetable fiber, or of which cotton or other vegetable fiber is the component material of chief value; boot, shoe, and corset lacings made of cotton or other vegetable fiber; and labels for garments or other articles, composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, 25 per centum ad valorem; belting for machinery made of cotton or other vegetable fiber and india rubber, or of which cotton or other vegetable fiber is the component material of chief value, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Belting for machinery.—Belting of cotton and india rubber held directly within the terms of paragraph 330, Act 1909. Nairn Linoleum Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 394. See, also, Kenyon Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 344.

The word belting signified originally a flat and not a round article, but the term has taken on a more extended meaning and now covers belts that are round, square, and V-shaped as well as belts that are flat. The merchandise though round and corded in shape has its principal use as belting, and it is dutiable as belting for machinery, made of cotton, under paragraph 330, Act 1909. U. S. v. Pitt & Scott (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 91.

A tapelike article made of cotton or other vegetable fiber and used as a belt running over the wheels of a cigarette-making machine held not dutiable under paragraph 349, Act 1909, but dutiable under paragraph 330 of that act. U. S. v. Horrax (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 142. See, also, Morrison v. U. S. (1901) 107 Fed. 113, 46 C. C. A. 173.

Beltings.—"Beltings," as used in paragraph 320, Act 1897, denotes beltings as articles of dress. Robins v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 252.

Bindings.—A narrow woven tape of cotton, used largely for covering the seams of underwear and waists, if a braid, within Act 1897, par. 339, is also a binding or tape, and therefore otherwise provided for by, and dutiable under, paragraph 320. A. Steinhardt & Bro. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 121 Fed. 442.

No commercial designation is shown. The plain surface of the fabric covers more than half of the fabric itself and the area of this plain surface makes it clear the merchandise is designed to be something more than a mere edge for the side that is ornamented. It cannot, therefore, be deemed a trimming, and the evidence, moreover, shows the use to be chiefly for binding. It was dutiable as binding under paragraph 320, Act 1897. Massce & Whitney v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 470.

Braces.—Braces and suspenders, being specifically enumerated under Act March 2, 1861, § 22, and Act July 14, 1862, § 13, are not subject to the higher duty imposed by the general language of section 8 of the latter act. Arthur v. Davies (1877) 96 U. S. 135, 24 L. Ed. 810.

A child's cap made of elastic braid or straps, connected by narrow bands of cotton tape and designed to prevent the ear from growing abnormally and held in position when spread closely over the skull by being knotted under the chin, is not a bit of cotton wearing apparel and dutiable under paragraph 314, Act 1897, but a brace, dutiable under paragraph 320 of said act. Best v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 49.

Braids.—Braids used in the manufacture of hats composed of 95 per cent. cotton and 5 per cent. of other materials, commercially known as "cotton braids," though bought and sold as "cotton hat braids," etc., held dutiable under Act 1890, par. 354. Zimmerman v. U. S. (C. C. 1894) 61 Fed. 938.

Cords.—Coronation cord not twisted in any way held not dutiable as cord. See paragraph 266.

Cords of cotton and India rubber, the rubber being of chief value, held dutiable as "cords * * * made of cotton or other vegetable fiber, and whether composed in part of India rubber or otherwise," under paragraph 263 of Act 1894, and not as a nonenumerated manufacture of which India rubber is the component material of chief value, under paragraph 352. Hague v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 73 Fed. 810, judgment affirmed (1897) 89 Fed. 1017, 32 C. C. A. 468.

Labels.—Labels of cotton and silk, cotton the chief component, held not to be excluded from the provision in Act 1897, par. 320, for labels "composed of cotton," because not composed wholly of cotton. U. S. v. Herzog (1905) 145 Fed. 622, 76 C. C. A. 373.

In construing the provision in Act 1897, par. 320, for "labels for garments or other articles, composed of cotton," held that labels are not to be excluded therefrom because in the piece and requiring to be cut apart before used as labels. U. S. v. Herzog (1905) 145 Fed. 622, 76 C. C. A. 373, reversing decree Herzog v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 135 Fed. 919.

Tapes.—Cotton ladder tape held not dutiable as tapes. See paragraph 266.

263. Cotton table damask, and manufactures of cotton table damask, or of which cotton table damask is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Cotton table damask.—Cotton table damask made partly of flax held not dutiable as cotton table damask. See paragraph 266.

The expression "cotton table damask," in Act 1897, par. 321, was not used by Congress according to any trade meaning it might have, but according to its denominative, or common, popular sense, which includes completed articles as well as goods in the piece from which such articles are made; but it should be construed in the light of corresponding provisions of previous acts. In enacting the provision congress is presumed to have acted in reference to a decision of the secretary of the treasury, construing a provision for "cotton damask" in a previous tariff act. The provision in Act 1897 for "cotton table damask," is more specific than those in paragraphs 304 to 308 for cotton cloth of various specified numbers of threads to the square inch. James H. Dunham & Co. v. U. S. (1906) 150 Fed. 562, 80 C. C. A. 364.

Articles of cotton table damask, woven in the piece, are included within the expression "cotton table damask" in paragraph 321, Act 1897, and are dutiable under that paragraph rather than under the provisions of Schedule I for "cotton cloth" because it is more specific than such provisions. Wilson v. U. S. (1906) 146 Fed. 64, 76 C. C. A. 515, affirming judgment Thomas Wilson & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 138 Fed. 1007.

The term "cotton table damask," in Act 1897, par. 321, is the trade-name for cotton damask in the piece, or cotton damask cloth, and does not include completed articles made out of such material, and advanced by manufacture beyond the condition of mere cloth. Douglass & Berry v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 123 Fed. 993.

264. Towels, bath mats, quilts, blankets, polishing cloths, mop cloths, wash rags or cloths, sheets, pillowcases, and batting, any of the foregoing made of cotton or of which cotton is the component material of chief value, not embroidered nor in part of lace and not otherwise provided for, 25 per centum ad valorem.

265. Lace window curtains, pillow shams, and bed sets, finished or unfinished, made on the Nottingham lace-curtain machine, and composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, when counting not more than six points or spaces between the warp threads to the inch, 35 per centum ad valorem; when counting more than six and not more than eight points or spaces to the inch, 40 per centum ad valorem; when counting nine or more points or spaces to the inch, 45 per centum ad valorem.

Lace curtains.—Lace curtains, having cotton as the material of chief value, which were made on the Nottingham lace curtain machine, but which, in addition to having undergone the usual finishing process of bleaching, dressing, and starching, have been ornamented by a cord design sewed thereon by the use of a machine known as the "Cornelli machine," which largely increases their market value, held dutiable, under paragraph 339, Act 1897, as lace curtains not elsewhere provided for, and not under paragraph 340, covering curtains, "finished or unfinished," made on the Nottingham machine. Smith v. Read (1901) 111 Fed. 795, 49 C. C. A. 619, affirming decree In re Smith (C. C. 1901) 108 Fed. 800.

Tamboured sash window curtains, of cotton, in the piece, which require only cutting and hemming to make them technically window curtains, held dutiable, as similar articles to lace window curtains, under paragraph 373 of Act 1890, and not classifiable under the "countable clauses" of the cotton schedule (paragraphs 344–348), or as manufactures of cotton not specially provided for under paragraph 255. Lahey v. U. S. (1896) 71 Fed. 870, 18 C. C. A. 341, appeal dismissed U. S. v. Lahey (1897) 89 Fed. 1020, 32 C. C. A. 612.

266. All articles made from cotton cloth, whether finished or unfinished, and all manufactures of cotton or of which cotton is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 30 per centum ad valorem.

1. In general.—Where cotton, though being a component part, is not the component part of chief value, of an article, it is not dutiable under Act June 6, 1872, § 2 (17 Stat. 231), but under Act June 30, 1864, § 6 (13 Stat. 209), as a manufacture of cotton not otherwise provided for. Arthur v. Herman (1877) 96 U. S. 141, 24 L. Ed. 812.

A fabric containing 37 per cent. of jute held not within the definition of "cotton cloth," in Act 1897, par. 310, as including "all woven fabrics of cotton," but dutiable as manufactures of cotton not specially provided for. Lord & Taylor v. U. S. (1910) 178 Fed. 270, 101 C. C. A. 575, affirming judgment (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 282.

Bands of cotton cloth woven in widths from 1 to 2½ inches, and in pieces of various lengths, with perfectly straight or plain selvedged edges or borders, imported in the piece, held not subject to duty as "trimmings," under Act 1894, par. 276, but taxable under paragraph 264, as manufactures of cotton in the piece, not specially provided for. Walter H. Graef & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 120 Fed. 1015, judgment reversed U. S. v. Walter H. Graef & Co. (1904) 127 Fed. 688, 62 C. C. A. 414.

Goods composed in part of wool, but in chief value of cotton, held more specifically enumerated in Act 1890, par. 355, as "manufactures of cotton" than in the provision in paragraph 392, for "manufactures of every description * * * in part of wool," and the provision as to higher rate in case of two applicable provisions has no application. Benoit v. U. S. (C. C. 1892) 150 Fed. 687.

2. Artificial leaves.—Artificial leaves, made from cotton cloth, held dutiable under Act 1890, par. 355, as "manufactures of cotton not specially provided for," and not as "artificial flowers or parts thereof," under paragraph 443. U. S. v. Zeimer (1901) 107 Fed. 912, 47 C. C. A. 60.

3. Bandages.—Narrow individual strips of cotton cloth about 5 yards in length, wrapped, labeled, and ready for use as bandages held not to be deemed woven fabrics of cotton in the piece or cut in lengths. They were manufactures of cotton not specially provided for, dutiable under paragraph 332, Act 1909. Surgical Supply Importing Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 112.

4. Button forms.—Strips of cotton not fit for buttons exclusively held dutiable as a manufacture of cotton under paragraph 332, Act 1909, and not as button forms under paragraph 426. Rothschild Bros. & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 430.

5. Calf-hair goods.—"Calf-hair goods," manufactured of cotton and hair, the warp being cotton, and the woof being cattle hair, held not dutiable as a manufacture of hair, but as a manufacture of cotton. R. S. §§ 2499, 2504. Butterfield v. Arthur (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 2,249.

6. Canvas embroidered.—Cotton canvas embroidered held not dutiable as manufacture of cotton. See paragraph 358.

Embroidery canvas held not dutiable as a manufacture of cotton not specially provided for. See paragraph 252.

7. Chinese shoes.—Chinese shoes, consisting of an upper part of cotton and a sole of felt and leather, held not taxable under Act 1883 as wearing apparel in part of wool, but dutiable as a manufacture of cotton. Swayne v. Hager (C. C. 1889) 37 Fed. 780, judgment reversed Hager v. Swayne (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 841, 149 U. S. 242, 37 L. Ed. 719.

8. Cloth with goat hair polka dots.—Colored cotton cloth, with polka dots, composed of goat hair, held not dutiable as a manufacture of cotton. See paragraph 288.

9. Coat hangers.—The merchandise consists of running lengths of woven cotton strips with cross marks appearing at short intervals to indicate the points for cutting the strips into small pieces suitable for use as coat hangers. The uncontradicted testimony is to the effect that the merchandise has been for a number of years used exclusively for coat hangers and that there is no other use to which they are commercially applied. They were not dutiable as tapes but as manufactures of cotton not specially provided for under paragraph 332, Tariff Act 1909. U. S. v. Buss & Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 110.

10. Coronation cord.—Coronation cord, which has not been twisted in any way, does not come within the meaning of "cords," as that term is used in paragraph 349, Act 1909; but the goods were dutiable under paragraph 332 of that act, as a manufacture of cotton. Ulmann & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 77.

11. Corsets.—Corsets held not dutiable as manufactures of cotton not specially provided for. See paragraph 256.

12. Cotton ladder tape.—Cotton ladder tape, an article produced by a loom, designed to hold slats and used in the manufacture and repair of Venetian blinds, held dutiable as a manufacture of cotton not specially provided for, under paragraph 332, Act 1909, and not as tape or webbing. U. S. v. Walter (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 95; U. S. v. Burlington Venetian Blind Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 378.

13. Cotton table damask.—Cotton damask doilies, napkins, and table covers or cloths, in a completed condition, ready for use, held dutiable under Act 1897, par. 322, as "manufactures of cotton not specially provided for," and not under paragraph 321 of said act, as "cotton table damask." Douglass & Berry v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 123 Fed. 993.

Cotton table damask is substantially wholly made of cotton. A substantial portion of the merchandise here is of flax, though of chief value of cotton. It was properly held dutiable as manufactures of which the component material of chief value is cotton under paragraph 332, Act 1909. Glass & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 430.

14. Curtains, tidies, and shams.—Curtains, tidies, and shams made up from cotton laces, and known commercially by their respective names, held dutiable under paragraph 324, Act 1883, as manufactures of cotton not otherwise provided for, and not under paragraph 325, as cotton laces. Lesser v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 89 Fed. 197.

15. Dotted swisses.—Swiss muslins or dotted swisses held not dutiable as manufactures of cotton not specially provided for. See paragraph 252.

16. Drawn work.—Drawn work held dutiable as manufacture of cotton not enumerated. See paragraph 358.

17. Fabrics made from cotton hollands.—An "article" made from the "fabric known as cotton hollands" held dutiable under paragraph 332, Act 1909. U. S. v. Anderson & Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 191.

18. Hat bands.—Cotton hat bands held not dutiable as manufacture of cotton. See paragraph 358.

19. Hemstitched lawns.—Hemstitched cotton lawns, made by subjecting cotton cloth to the processes of turning over the edges, drawing certain threads, and other manipulation, but not appropriated by these processes to any particular ultimate use, are held to have been advanced beyond the condition of "cotton cloth," and not to be dutiable as such under the "countable clauses" of Act 1894, but to be dutiable as "manufactures of cotton," under paragraph 264. Meyer v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 124 Fed. 296.

Certain hemstitched lawns held to be dutiable as manufactures of cotton not otherwise provided for, under paragraph 355 of Act 1890, and not as "partly made cotton wearing apparel," under paragraph 349. U. S. v. Loeb (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 636.

Cotton hemstitched lawns, having a broad hem turned over and sewed down on one side of the fabric, the body of the goods being a homogeneous cotton cloth, but open-work patterns or figures made by drawing out threads appearing continuously upon certain parts of the goods, the merchandise being chiefly used for women's and girl's dresses, skirts, and aprons, the broad hem constituting a part of such garments when made up, but the material being also sold for sash curtains, held dutiable as manufactures of cotton under paragraph 355, of Act 1890, and not as "partly-made cotton wearing apparel," under paragraph 349. In re Mills (C. C. 1893) 56 Fed. 820.

20. Labels.—The provision in paragraph 320, Act 1897, for "labels for garments or other articles, composed of cotton," held not to include strips of cotton containing certain words woven therein in silk, which were intended, when properly cut, to be attached to the top of shoes, but such articles were dutiable as manufactures of cotton, under paragraph 322 of said act. Herzog v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 135 Fed. 919, decree reversed U. S. v. Herzog (1905) 145 Fed. 622, 76 C. C. A. 373.

21. Linen lusters.—Linen lusters, camlet lusters, toile du nord and lusters composed of linen and cotton, held dutiable as manufactures of cotton not otherwise provided for (Act July 30, 1846), under the rule of construction provided by Act Aug. 30, 1842, § 20. Morlot v. Lawrence (C. C. 1850) Fed. Cas. No. 9,815.

22. Madras mull.—Madras mull held not dutiable as a manufacture of cotton not otherwise provided for. See paragraph 252.

23. Neck rufflings.—Neck rufflings held not dutiable as manufacture of cotton. See paragraph 358.

24. Net.—Cotton net held not dutiable as manufacture of cotton. See paragraph 358.

25. Pulp.—Previous to the present enactment the board had in several opinions construed "manufactures of cotton," and there is a strong presumption that that construction was adopted in the law as it is. Pulp made of cotton rags or linen rags by processes that do not destroy the integrity or strength of the fibers has undergone no such chemical change as would make these goods dutiable by similitude; the pulp was rightly held dutiable, according to the material, as a manufacture of cotton under paragraph 332, or as a manufacture of flax under paragraph 358, Tariff Act 1909. Downing & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 364.

26. Quilts of cotton and eiderdown.—Quilts composed of cotton and eiderdown, or silk and eiderdown, and the eiderdown in each case being the component material of chief value, are dutiable at 20 per cent. ad valorem, as manufactured articles not enumerated under Schedule I. Hartranft v. Sheppard (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 920, 921, 125 U. S. 337, 31 L. Ed. 763.

27. Rovings.—Rovings held not dutiable as manufactures of cotton. See paragraph 250.

28. Screens.—Screens with panels of cotton held not dutiable as manufacture of cotton. See paragraph 358.

29. Shirtings.—Manufactured shirtings, not made up, composed of linen and cotton, the latter the material of chief value and largely predominating, held dutiable as manufactures of cotton under Act 1865. Fisk v. Arthur (1880) 103 U. S. 431, 432, 26 L. Ed. 520.

30. Slippers.—Ordinary slipper patterns, made of cotton canvas cut into strips of the size and shape for slippers, more or less embroidered with worsted and silk, held dutiable under Act 1864 as "manufactures of cotton not otherwise provided for." Kohlsaat v. Murphy (1877) 96 U. S. 153, 154, 24 L. Ed. 844.

31. Tamboured sash window curtains.—Tamboured sash window curtains held not dutiable as manufactures of cotton not specially provided for. See paragraph 265.

32. Union crash.—Merchandise known as "union crash," composed of flax, jute and cotton, of which the component material of chief value is cotton, held properly assessed for duty under Act 1897, par. 322. U. S. v. Churchill (C. C. 1900) 106 Fed. 672.

33. Velveteen dress facings.—Velveteen dress facings held dutiable as manufactures of cotton. See paragraph 257.

34. White frilled muslins.—White frilled muslins held not dutiable as manufactures of cotton. See paragraph 358.

SCHEDULE J.—FLAX, HEMP, AND JUTE, AND MANUFACTURES OF

267. Single yarns made of jute, not finer than five lea or number, 15 per centum ad valorem; if finer than five lea or number and yarns made of jute not otherwise specially provided for in this section, 20 per centum ad valorem.

268. Cables and cordage, composed of istle, Tampico fiber, manila, sisal grass or sunn, or a mixture of these or any of them, ½ cent per pound; cables and cordage made of hemp, tarred or untarred, 1 cent per pound.

269. Threads, twines, or cords, made from yarn not finer than five lea or number, composed of flax, hemp, or ramie, or of which these substances or any of them is the component material of chief value, 20 per centum ad valorem; if made from yarn finer than five lea or number, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Thread.—A manufacture of flax, consisting of hanks of two strands of flax twisted together, held not dutiable under paragraph 347, Act 1897, covering manufactures of flax not specially provided for, but is "thread * * * made from yarn * * * composed of flax," and as such specifically provided for in paragraph 330. Klump v. Thomas (C. C. 1901) 108 Fed. 799.

Twine.—The fact that most of the importation of "gilling twine" is used for other purposes than the making of nets is not sufficient to warrant its being charged with duty as linen thread, instead of the specified duty levied on it under the name of gilling twine. American Net & Twine Co. v. Worthington (1891) 12 Sup. Ct. 55, 56, 141 U. S. 468, 35 L. Ed. 821, reversing (C. C. 1888) 33 Fed. 826.

An article manufactured, imported, and sold under the name "salmon net twine, 14 ply," mainly used for making seines and gilling nets, though it can be used for sewing sacks, shoes, etc., held taxable as "seines" and "seine or gilling twine," under Act 1883, rather than "flax or linen thread." Leeson v. Young (C. C. 1891) 45 Fed. 627.

Linen twine, which was composed of several yarns, loosely twisted together, and known to the trade as "gill twine," held dutiable under Act 1883, par. 347, as seine or gilling twine, and not as linen thread. McNab v. Seeberger (C. C. 1889) 39 Fed. 759.

270. Single yarns, made of flax, hemp, or ramie, or a mixture of any of them, not finer than eight lea or number, 12 per centum ad valorem; finer than eight lea or number and not finer than eighty lea or number, 20 per centum ad valorem; finer than eighty lea or number, 10 per centum ad valorem; ramie sliver or roving, 15 per centum ad valorem.

271. Gill nettings, nets, webs, and seines made of flax, hemp, or ramie, or a mixture of any of them, or of which any of them is the component material of chief value, 25 per centum ad valorem.

272. Floor mattings, plain, fancy, or figured, including mats and rugs, manufactured from straw, round or split, or other vegetable substances, not otherwise provided for in this section, and having a warp of cotton, hemp, or other vegetable substances, including what are commonly known as China, Japan, and India straw matting, 2½ cents per square yard.

Notes of Decisions

Straw mats.—Mats of straw having no warp of cotton held not dutiable under this paragraph. See paragraph 368.

273. Carpets, carpeting, mats and rugs made of flax, hemp, jute, or other vegetable fiber (except cotton), 30 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Hemp carpets.—If merchandise, such as "hemp carpet," is shown to be a manufacture of a material bearing another name than hemp, such as "jute," and the tariff act makes a clear and positive distinction between these materials by imposing thereon, eo nomine, different rates of duty, the court, in considering the tariff act, will make the same distinction, although the name of the second material is the name of the genus, and the name of the first is the name of a species thereof. Smith v. Schell (C. C. 1886) 27 Fed. 648.

"A manufacture of hemp" does not include "hemp carpeting" so called in the trade, which, in fact, contains no hemp. Baxter v. Maxwell (C. C. 1857) Fed. Cas. No. 1,126.

274. Hydraulic or flume hose, made in whole or in part of cotton, flax, hemp, ramie, or jute, 7 cents per pound.

275. Tapes composed wholly or in part of flax, woven with or without metal threads, on reels, spools, or otherwise, and designed expressly for use in the manufacture of measuring tapes, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Tapes.—Measuring tapes of flax, in cases of leather and metal, flax being the component material of chief value, held dutiable under Act 1883 as manufactures of flax or of which flax is the component material of chief value, and are subject to the duty of 40 per cent. ad valorem imposed by paragraph 336 of the act, and not to the duty of 35 per cent. imposed by paragraph 334. Wiebusch v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 78 Fed. 807, judgment reversed Wiebusch & Hilger v. U. S. (1898) 84 Fed. 451, 28 C. C. A. 154.

Act 1883 provides, in paragraph 334, for "brown and bleached linens, ducks, canvas, * * * handkerchiefs, lawns, or other manufactures of flax, jute, or hemp, * * * not specially enumerated or provided for." Paragraph 336 provides for "flax or linen thread, twine, and pack thread, and all manufactures of flax * * * not specially enumerated or provided for." Held, that these paragraphs were to be construed by the rule of "noscitur a sociis," so as to confine the concluding general descriptive terms to articles of like kind with those enumerated; that the former paragraph was therefore confined to woven fabrics capable of being measured by the square yard, and the latter to spun and twisted goods; and, hence, that the former covered measuring tapes mounted for use, which were woven with a warp and filling in complete widths, with selvages. Id.

276. Linoleum, plain, stamped, painted, or printed, including corticine and cork carpet, figured or plain, also linoleum known as granite and oak plank, 30 per centum ad valorem; inlaid linoleum, 35 per centum ad valorem; oilcloth for floors, plain, stamped, painted, or printed, 20 per centum ad valorem; mats or rugs made of oilcloth, linoleum, corticine, or cork carpet shall be subject to the same rate of duty as herein provided for oilcloth, linoleum, corticine, or cork carpet.

Cork carpeting.—Cork carpet or carpeting, used to cover floors, and composed of ground waste cork bark, linseed oil, gum, and a loosely woven jute fabric as a back, such cork bark, though greater in bulk than the bulk of its other component materials combined, being one-eleventh only of its entire value, held not dutiable as "cork bark, manufactured," under Act 1883, par. 422, but as assimilating to "oil cloth," under Schedule J, par. 507. Keveney v. Magone (C. C. 1890) 42 Fed. 491.

Linoleum.—Linoleum of colored material, mixed in making, and taking such form as the pressure of the rollers and resistance of the materials give them, held not dutiable as "inlaid linoleum," but as linoleum "figured or plain," under Act 1897, par. 337. U. S. v. Hunter & Whitcomb (1904) 127 Fed. 1022, 61 C. C. A. 270, affirming judgment Hunter & Whitcombe v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 121 Fed. 207.

Plank linoleum, made by running upon the burlap foundation paste of two colors in stripes of equal width, a process differing from that employed in making inlaid linoleum, held under Act 1897, par. 337, dutiable as "linoleum * * * figured or plain," rather than as "inlaid linoleum." U. S. v. Scott & West (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 285.

A plastic material, composed of cork and linseed oil, when placed on a stencil over a burlap foundation and forced by pressure into separate and distinct bodies, in separate and distinct colors, in separate and distinct positions, and through to the base, constitutes inlaid linoleum and was dutiable as such under paragraph 337, Act 1897. Keveney v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 101.

277. Shirt collars and cuffs, composed in whole or in part of linen, 30 per centum ad valorem.

278. Bands, bandings, belts, beltings, bindings, cords, ribbons, tapes, webs and webbings, all the foregoing composed wholly of flax, hemp, or ramie, or of flax, hemp, or ramie and india rubber, and not otherwise specially provided for in this section, 30 per centum ad valorem; wearing apparel composed wholly of flax, hemp, or ramie, or of flax, hemp, or ramie and india rubber, 40 per centum ad valorem.

Cords.—A cord is a string or small rope composed of several strands twisted together. Ulmann & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 77.

Tapes.—Woven cotton strips used for coat hangers held not dutiable as tapes. See paragraph 266.

279. Plain woven fabrics of single jute yarns, by whatever name known, bleached, dyed, colored, stained, painted, printed, or rendered noninflammable by any process, 10 per centum ad valorem.

Canvas, burlap, etc.—Paddings, canvas, or burlaps, see paragraph 408.

280. All pile fabrics, whether or not the pile covers the entire surface, composed of flax, hemp, or ramie, or of which flax, hemp, or ramie is the component material of chief value and all articles and manufactures made from such fabrics, not specially provided for in this section, 40 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Pile fabrics.—No rule exists in trade or commercial usage declaring that fabrics having a pile of 3.5 millimeters or less in length should be regarded as velvets, and of over 3.5 millimeters as plush. U. S. v. Silberstein, Castell & Co. (C. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 965.

Flax plush held dutiable as a "pile fabric of which flax is the component material of chief value," under paragraph 342, Act 1897, and not as plush or pile fabric "of cotton or other vegetable fiber," under paragraph 315; the former paragraph being more specific than the latter. U. S. v. Stern (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 521.

281. Bags or sacks made from plain woven fabrics, of single jute yarns, not dyed, colored, stained, painted, printed, or bleached, 10 per centum ad valorem.

Grain bags.—Empty grain bags, made of burlap, of foreign manufacture, were properly assessed at 2 cents per pound, under Act 1890, par. 365, since Act Feb. 8, 1875, § 7, under which such bags would have been admitted free of duty, was repealed by acts of 1883 and 1890. Kent. v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 68 Fed. 536, judgment affirmed (1896) 73 Fed. 680, 19 C. C. A. 642.

282. Handkerchiefs composed of flax, hemp, or ramie, or of which these substances, or any of them, is the component material of chief value, whether in the piece or otherwise, and whether finished or unfinished, not hemmed or hemmed only, 35 per centum ad valorem; if hemstitched, or imitation hemstitched, or revered, or with drawn threads, but not embroidered, initialed, or in part of lace, 40 per centum ad valorem.

Handkerchiefs.—The provision in paragraph 345, Act 1897, for "handkerchiefs * * * unfinished," held to include cloth cut into pieces which are in the shape of squares and other geometrical figures, and which in that shape are principally used in the manufacture of handkerchiefs. Meyer v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 138 Fed. 974.

Handkerchiefs on which an initial is embroidered held dutiable, under paragraph 258, Act 1894, as "handkerchiefs," and not under paragraph 276, as "embroidered handkerchiefs." Robbins v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 90 Fed. 805.

Linen pocket handkerchiefs, hemstitched or hemmed, held dutiable as "linens or a manufacture of flax," and not as "articles worn by men, women or children, made up wholly or in part by hand." Act Aug. 30, 1842. Richardson v. Lawrence (C. C. 1849) Fed. Cas. No. 11,785.

Cambric linen hankerchiefs, cut from the piece, and made abroad, held free of duty, under Act 1832, as linen cambric. Sheldon v. Swartwout (D. C. 1834) Fed. Cas. No. 12,749.

283. Plain woven fabrics, not including articles, finished or unfinished, of flax, hemp, or ramie, or of which these substances or any of them is the component material of chief value, including such as is known as shirting cloth, 30 per centum ad valorem.

Woven fabrics.—Fabrics in chief value of flax, but in part of wool, held dutiable under Act 1897, par. 346, relating to goods "the component material of chief value" in which is flax, and not under Schedule K, par. 366, relating to cloths "in part of wool." U. S. v. Charles A. Johnson & Co. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 752, judgment affirmed (1907) 157 Fed. 754, 85 C. C. A. 147; U. S. v. Walsh (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 749, judgment affirmed (1907) 154 Fed. 770, 83 C. C. A. 472.

In construing paragraph 346, Act 1897, providing for flax fabrics and articles at rates varying according to the count of threads per square inch, held, that it is not necessary, in order to be brought within this provision, that goods should be homogeneous, and that certain fabrics in which various ornamental effects have been produced by withdrawing a portion of the threads and adding others are not excluded from that paragraph by reason of such treatment. U. S. v. B. Ulmann & Co. (1905) 139 Fed. 3, 71 C. C. A. 415, affirming judgments J. R. Simon & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 649.

Act 1897, par. 346, imposing on "woven fabrics or articles of flax," weighing 4½ ounces or more per square yard, specified rates of duty, varying with the number of threads to the square inch, "provided that none of the foregoing articles * * * shall pay a less rate of duty than 50 per cent. ad valorem," and then imposing a duty on "woven fabrics of flax" weighing less than 4½ ounces per square yard, uses the words "fabrics" and "articles" interchangeably, so that the latter provision applies not only to piece goods, but to articles, like "doilies" and "tray cloths," weighing less than 4½ ounces per square yard. U. S. v. McBratney (1901) 105 Fed. 767, 45 C. C. A. 37, writ of certiorari denied (1901) 21 S. Ct. 924, 181 U. S. 621, 45 L. Ed. 1032.

In construing Act 1897, par. 346, which relates to "woven fabrics or articles" of flax, etc., with a proviso "that none of the foregoing articles in this paragraph shall pay a less rate of duty than fifty per centum ad valorem," held, that this proviso includes the foregoing "woven fabrics" as well as "articles." Schulemann v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 123 Fed. 1002.

Linen doilies and tray cloths, under 4½ ounces to the square yard, and containing more than 100 threads to the square inch, are woven fabrics of flax, dutiable under Act 1897, par. 346, last clause. McBratney v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 424.

The testimony fails to show that there was, prior to the enactment of the tariff law of 1913, any recognized class of goods in the trade known as "plain woven fabrics." U. S. v. Douglas & Berry (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 100.

Where two weaves, each of which if alone employed would result in a plain woven fabric as an entirety, are in fact combined and contrasted in the same fabric, as here, the result must be a figured fabric and it is aptly designated "chain-bordered" crash to distinguish it from goods without such figure or design. U. S. v. White & Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 382.

Plain woven fabrics are to be distinguished by their not having twilled or figured effects produced in the process of weaving. White & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 327.

284. All woven articles, finished or unfinished, and all manufactures of flax, hemp, ramie, or other vegetable fiber, or of which these substances, or any of them, is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 35 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Canvas, burlaps, or padding.
2. Flax in general.
3. Flax scarfing.
4. Linen damask.
5. Linen tapes.
6. Pulp.
7. Scalloped articles.
8. Tidies.
9. Torchons.
10. Woven articles in general.

1. Canvas, burlaps, or padding.—See notes under paragraph 408.

Canvas woven with double warp and single filling, each of single jute yarn, held not dutiable as a manufacture of vegetable fiber. See paragraph 279.

2. Flax in general.—A manufacture of flax, consisting of hanks of two strands of flax twisted together, held not dutiable as manufacture of flax. See paragraph 269.

3. Flax scarfing.—Flax scarfing, with a hem and hemstitching, is not an article finished or unfinished, but it has been advanced beyond condition as a plain woven fabric. By its weight it is excluded from the first part of paragraph 357, Act 1909, and by its condition it is excluded from the last part of that paragraph. It falls within paragraph 358 of that act. Lamb, Finlay & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 115.

4. Linen damask.—Linen damask, not being a plain woven fabric, held to be dutiable under paragraph 358, Act 1909, as "all woven articles * * * and all manufactures of flax * * * not specially provided for." White & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 327.

5. Linen tapes.—As linen tapes, composed wholly of flax, or of which flax is the component material of chief value, woven in a loom, and having a warp and weft; linen corset laces, a braided fabric; and linen "braids" or "bobbins,"—come within the description in both paragraphs 334 and 336, of Act 1883, viz., "manufactures of flax, or of which flax shall be the component material of chief value," they are dutiable under the highest rate provided in the two paragraphs mentioned, viz., 40 per cent. ad valorem under 336, according to R. S. § 2499, as amended by Act 1883, which provides that, when two or more rates are applicable, the articles shall be classified under the highest. Dieckerhoff v. Robertson (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 568.

6. Pulp.—Previous to the present enactment the board had in several opinions construed "manufactures of cotton," and there is a strong presumption that that construction was adopted in the law as it is. Pulp made of cotton rags or linen rags by processes that do not destroy the integrity or strength of the fibers has undergone no such chemical change as would make these goods dutiable by similitude; the pulp was rightly held dutiable, according to the material, as a manufacture of cotton under paragraph 332, or as a manufacture of flax under paragraph 358, Tariff Act 1909. Downing & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 364.

7. Scalloped articles.—Something more than stitches, utilitarian in character, are needed to bring the scalloped articles of the importation within the term "embroidered articles." There should be stitches superimposed with the purpose of producing an ornamental effect. The articles themselves and the testimony here go to show they were dutiable under paragraph 346, Tariff Act 1897. Simpson v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 263.

8. Tidies.—Renaissance lace tidies held not dutiable as manufactures of tidies. See paragraph 358.

9. Torchons.—Under Rev. St. § 2504, p. 462, laces made by machinery out of linen thread, and known as "torchons," were dutiable as "manufactures of flax," and could not be classed under Schedule C, p. 463, as "thread lace," which is always hand-made. Meyerheim v. Robertson (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 754, 755, 144 U. S. 601, 36 L. Ed. 559.

10. Woven articles in general.—Certain goods were so woven as to produce a distinctly discernible border the whole length of the piece, and this border, whether in color or plain white, constitutes a figure. Irrespective of the particular machinery employed in producing this effect, the goods were figured and not plain woven. U. S. v. Douglas & Berry (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 100.

285. Istle or tampico, when dressed, dyed, or combed, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Bassine or palmyra fiber.—Bassine or palmyra fiber held not dutiable by similitude as istle or tampico dressed. See paragraph 385.

SCHEDULE K.—WOOL, AND MANUFACTURES OF

286. Combed wool or tops and roving or roping made wholly or in part of wool or camel's hair, and on other wool and hair which have been advanced in any manner or by any process of manufacture beyond the washed or scoured condition, not specially provided for in this section, 8 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

In general.—See notes under paragraphs 650 and 651.

287. Yarns made wholly or in chief value of wool, 18 per centum ad valorem.

288. Cloths, knit fabrics, felts not woven, and all manufactures of every description made, by any process, wholly or in chief value of wool, not specially provided for in this section, 35 per centum ad valorem; cloths if made in chief value of cattle hair or horse hair, not specially provided for in this section, 25 per centum ad valorem; plushes, velvets, and all other pile fabrics, cut or uncut, woven or knit, whether or not the pile covers the entire surface, made wholly or in chief value of wool, and articles made wholly or in chief value of such plushes, velvets, or pile fabrics, 40 per centum ad valorem; stockings, hose and half hose, made on knitting machines or frames, composed wholly or in chief value of wool, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per centum ad valorem; stockings, hose and half hose, selvedged, fashioned, narrowed, or shaped wholly or in part by knitting machines or frames, or knit by hand, including such as are commercially known as seamless stockings, hose and half hose, and clocked stockings, hose and half hose, gloves and mittens, all of the above, composed wholly or in chief value of wool, if valued at not more than $1.20 per dozen pairs, 30 per centum ad valorem; if valued at more than $1.20 per dozen pairs, 40 per centum ad valorem; press cloth composed of camel's hair, not specially provided for in this section, 10 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Blankets for printing press.
2. Bombazine.
3. Camel's hair press cloth.
4. Cattle hair goods.
5. Cotton cloth with goat's hair superimposed.
6. Cotton quilts with fringe of wool.
7. Delaines.
8. Felt.
9. Gloves.
10. Knit goods.
11. Manufacturers of wool in general.
12. Rugs.
13. Slipper patterns.
14. Waterproof cloth.
15. Worsted coatings.
16. Worsted cravats.

1. Blankets for printing press.—Thick-woven, endless woolen belts or blankets, for paper or printing machines, held dutiable under Act 1890, par. 392, as a manufacture wholly or in part of wool, not specially provided for, and not under paragraph 393, as "blankets." Bredt v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 65 Fed. 496.

2. Bombazine.—Bombazines, being goods of which wool is a component part, held dutiable at 30 per cent. Act 1824, c. 136. U. S. v. Clarke (C. C. 1828) Fed. Cas. No. 14,813.

3. Camel's hair press cloth.—Camel's hair press cloth is dutiable as manufactures of "wool" under Act 1897 pars. 366, 383, rather than as "hair press cloth" under paragraph 431. Oberle & Henry v. U. S. (1908) 165 Fed. 53, 91 C. C. A. 139.

4. Cattle hair goods.—Cattle hair goods held dutiable by similitude as manufactures of "wool," under Act 1897, par. 366, being similar in quality, use, and texture. F. Rosenstern & Co. v. U. S. (1909) 171 Fed. 71, 96 C. C. A. 175.

5. Cotton cloth with goat's hair superimposed.—Colored cotton cloth, having polka dots about one-quarter inch in diameter, composed of goat hair and superimposed upon the fabric with a species of glue, and applied by a process of printing held assessable, under Act 1897, par. 366, as a "fabric made wholly or in part of wool," and not dutiable under paragraph 308, as "cotton cloth," nor under paragraph 322, as a "manufacture of cotton," nor under paragraph 339, as a "fabric appliquéed composed wholly or in chief value of cotton." Converse v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 113 Fed. 817.

6. Cotton quilts with fringe of wool.—Cotton quilts having a fringe of wool held assessable under Act 1897, par. 366, as "manufactures made wholly or in part of wool," and not under paragraph 322, as "manufactures of cotton not specially provided for." U. S. v. Rouss (C. C. 1902) 113 Fed. 816.

7. Delaines.—In an action against a collector to recover a tax paid under protest on certain imported goods, it appeared that they were bought and sold as poil de chevres, reps, plaids, lustres, Saxony dress goods; that they were always woven in colors, the yarns being dyed before weaving; that they never existed in the uncolored (or gray) condition; that delaines differed from them principally in being printed or dyed in the piece; and that as early as 1857 delaines were known in the trade by names changing from time to time to suit the fancy of importers and purchasers. Held, that the jury were properly instructed that, in addition to the duty of 30 per cent. ad valorem imposed by 12 Stat. 192, 12 Stat. 553, "imposed a specific duty on all delaines, whether colored or uncolored, and all goods of similar description to delaines, whether colored or uncolored, if such delaines or goods of similar description do not exceed in value 40 cents a square yard." Greenleaf v. Goodrich (1879) 101 U. S. 278, 25 L. Ed. 845.

Under Act July 14, 1862, § 9, imposing a duty "on all delaines * * * and on all goods of similar description," goods which are similar to delaines in product, in adaptation to uses, and in uses, are dutiable as delaines, even though in commerce they may be classed as different articles. Schmieder v. Barney (1885) 5 Sup. Ct. 624, 113 U. S. 645, 28 L. Ed. 1130.

In the provision for "all delaines, cashmere delaines, muslin delaines, barege delaines, composed wholly or in part of worsted, wool, mohair, or goat's hair, and on all goods of similar description," contained in section 9 of Act 1862, the phrase "goods of similar description" held to mean completed fabrics, composed wholly or in part of worsted, wool, mohair, or goat's hair, and used for dress goods. White v. Barney (C. C. 1890) 43 Fed. 474, judgment affirmed Barney v. White (1895) 15 Sup. Ct. 1037, 159 U. S. 246, 40 L. Ed. 146.

8. Felt.—Felt carpeting held not dutiable as a manufacture of wool. See paragraph 302.

That the article here contains no wool must be assumed, but it appears certainly to be felt, and since its use is substantially the same with woolen felt, there being shown a similar, though not identical, use, it is dutiable under the similitude clause, Tariff Act 1909. Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 389. See, also, U. S. v. Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. (1905) 137 Fed. 770, 70 C. C. A. 346.

9. Gloves.—The wool in the lining of gloves, which enhances their value, adds to their comfort and warmth, aids in their sale, making thus of the wool a substantial and necessary part of the gloves, makes them dutiable under paragraph 382, Act 1909, as knitted articles composed in part of wool. U. S. v. Burne (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 298.

10. Knit goods.—Knit woolen undershirts held not dutiable as knit fabrics made on frames. See paragraph 291.

While the expressions "knit goods" and "knit fabrics" are frequently used interchangeably, it would seem that the former more appropriately describes manufactured articles, while the latter refers more especially to manufactured material as piece goods, and this distinction is recognized in the trade. Arnold v. U. S. (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 406, 408, 147 U. S. 494, 37 L. Ed. 253, affirming judgment In re Arnold (C. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 510.

Knit stockings, composed in part of wool, held dutiable as a manufacture of wool under Act 1867. Miller v. Vietor (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 1225, 1226, 127 U. S. 572, 32 L. Ed. 201.

Stockings of worsted, or worsted and cotton, made on frames, worn by men, women, and children, imported after the Revised Statutes of 1874 went into effect, held dutiable as knit goods, under R. S. § 2504, and not as stockings, under Schedule M. Vietor v. Arthur (1881) 104 U. S. 498, 26 L. Ed. 633.

Articles made of wool, knit on frames, imported from Scotland, and used for a covering for the head, held dutiable under Act 1883, par. 363, which reads: "Flannels, blankets, hats of wool, knit goods, and all goods made on knitting frames," etc., and not under paragraph 400, which provides for duty on "bonnets, hats, and hoods for men, women, and children composed of chip, grass, palm leaf," etc., as the word "bonnet" in the statute is not so broad, nor coupled with such peculiar technical trade meaning, as to cover these goods. Toplitz v. Hedden (C. C. 1888) 33 Fed. 617, judgment affirmed (1892) 13 Sup. Ct. 70, 146 U. S. 252, 36 L. Ed. 961.

11. Manufactures of wool in general.—Fabrics of silk and wool held dutiable as silk goods. See paragraph 318.

The proviso in Act 1897, par. 391, that manufactures in which wool is a component shall be classified as manufactures of wool, is restricted at least to said schedule, and possibly to the paragraph in which it is found. Therefore the provision for furniture in another schedule is not subject to this proviso, though in part of wool. A. J. Woodruff & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 168 Fed. 452, judgment affirmed U. S. v. A. J. Woodruff & Co. (1909) 175 Fed. 776, 99 C. C. A. 348.

In Act 1897, par. 391, the proviso that "all manufactures, of which wool is a component material, shall be classified and assessed for duty as manufactures of wool," is not limited to the goods containing silk which are the subject of said paragraph, but extends to all silk and wool goods; and dress goods in chief value of silk, but in part of wool, become by virtue of this proviso subject to the duty on wool goods, rather than that on silks. U. S. v. Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney Dry Goods Co. (1907) 156 Fed. 940, 84 C. C. A. 440, reversing decree (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 888, and writ of certiorari denied Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney Dry Goods Co. v. U. S. (1908) 28 Sup. Ct. 757, 209 U. S. 545, 52 L. Ed. 920.

The provision of Act 1883 for "all manufactures of wool of every description made wholly or in part of wool," covers all manufactures of wool whether they were made from wool by one step or by two, and covers all articles manufactured of wool which are not elsewhere provided for in the schedule. Bernheimer v. Robertson (C. C. 1889) 39 Fed. 190, judgment reversed (1891) 11 Sup. Ct. 1017, 140 U. S. 672, 35 L. Ed. 603.

Schedule K, § 2502, Act 1883, imposes a duty of 35 per centum ad valorem upon "all manufactures of wool of every description, made wholly or in part of wool, not specially enumerated or provided for" in the act. Schedule S. imposes a duty of 50 per centum ad valorem upon "all goods, wares, and merchandise made of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value." Held, that the two phrases must be construed together, and are to be read thus: All manufactures of wool of every description, not especially enumerated or provided for in this act, shall be subject to a duty of 35 per cent. ad valorem; but if silk is the component material of chief value, they shall be subject to a duty of 50 per cent. ad valorem. Myer v. Hartranft (C. C. 1886) 28 Fed. 358.

The phrase "manufactures of wool" in paragraph 297, Act 1894, held not to include articles of which wool is a component material, but of which it is not the material of chief value. (1894) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 66.

12. Rugs.—Chinese goatskins used as a lap robe held not dutiable as a rug. See paragraph 300.

Hearth rugs held not dutiable as manufactures of wool. See paragraph 303.

Traveling rug held not dutiable as manufacture of wool not specially provided for. See paragraph 300.

Lap robes made in part of wool, but of which cotton is the component of chief value, held assessable under Act 1897, par. 366, as "manufactures made wholly or in part of wool," and not classifiable, under paragraph 322, as "manufactures of cotton not specially provided for. Vandegrift v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 113 Fed. 816.

Wool traveling rugs, which are not "portions of carpets or carpeting," held not included in Act 1890, par. 408, as "rugs * * * and other portions of carpets or carpeting, made wholly or in part of wool," but dutiable under paragraph 392 as "all manufactures of every description made wholly or in part of wool." U. S. v. Haynes (C. C. 1901) 124 Fed. 295.

If certain lap robes or carriage robes, sometimes called railway or traveling rugs, were commercially known at the time of the passage of Act 1883 as mats or rugs, they should be classified under a clause of Schedule K of that act, providing for "carpets and carpetings of wool, etc., and mats, rugs," etc.; but if not so known, nor by any other designation provided for, they should be classified according to the component material. (1888) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 104.

13. Slipper patterns.—Slipper patterns embroidered with worsted held not dutiable as manufacture of worsted. See paragraph 358.

14. Waterproof cloth.—In paragraph 347, Act 1909, the words "waterproof cloth composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, whether composed in part of india rubber or otherwise," must be taken to mean composed in part of india rubber or not. The goods here, a waterproof cloth composed in chief value of other material than cotton or vegetable fiber, do not fall within the provisions of that paragraph. Being made wholly or in part of wool, they were dutiable as such, not specially provided for under paragraph 378, Act 1909. U. S. v. Vandegrift & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 226. See, also, Gartner, Sons & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 957.

Waterproof cloth held dutiable under paragraph 378, Act 1909, wherein provision is made for a duty on "all manufactures of every description made wholly or in part of wool," not as a manufacture with india rubber as the component of chief value. U. S. v. Vandergrift & Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 161. See, also, Hartranft v. Meyer (1890) 10 Sup. Ct. 751, 135 U. S. 237, 34 L. Ed. 110.

15. Worsted coatings.—Worsted cloths or coatings, known in the trade as "diagonals," "corkscrews," "fancy weaves," etc., manufactured entirely of yarn produced from wool of the sheep by carding, combing, and spinning, a process resulting in a product known in 1883 and prior thereto as "worsted yarns," held "manufactures of worsted," under paragraph 363, Act 1883. Ballin v. Magone (C. C. 1890) 41 Fed. 921, judgment reversed (1891) 11 Sup. Ct. 1015, 140 U. S. 670, 35 L. Ed. 602.

"Worsted coatings," or "cotton backed worsteds," being goods of which the face is of worsted and the back of cotton warp and shoddy filling, held dutiable as "manufactures of wool of every description composed wholly or in part of wool," under the provision therefor in Act 1883, par. 362, and not as manufactures of every description composed wholly or in part of worsted (except such as are composed in part of wool), under the succeeding provision of the same schedule. Bernheimer v. Robertson (C. C. 1889) 39 Fed. 190, judgment reversed (1891) 11 Sup. Ct. 1017, 140 U. S. 672, 35 L. Ed. 603.

16. Worsted cravats.—Worsted cravats woven on stocking frames, and known in commerce under the general class of "hoisery," held dutiable as such. Act 1832. Dorr v. Hoyt (C. C. 1840) Fed. Cas. No. 4,009.

289. Blankets and flannels, composed wholly or in chief value of wool, 25 per centum ad valorem; flannels composed wholly or in chief value of wool, valued at above 50 cents per pound, 30 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Blankets.—Blankets for paper or printing machines held not dutiable as blankets. See paragraph 288.

290. Women's and children's dress goods, coat linings, Italian cloths, bunting, and goods of similar description and character, composed wholly or in chief value of wool, and not specially provided for in this section, 35 per centum ad valorem.

Dress goods.—Haircloth not dutiable as dress goods. See paragraph 353.

Women's dress goods, composed chiefly of wool, with from 1.99 to 4.47 per cent. of cotton introduced in the warp and selvedges thereof, for the purpose of changing the classification, in the form of a fiber, the warp being a compound thread of cotton, held not "goods made with threads of other materials," for the purpose of changing the classification, within the meaning of R. S. § 2502. Magone v. Luckemeyer (1891) 11 Sup. Ct. 651, 139 U. S. 612, 35 L. Ed. 298, affirming Luckemeyer v. Magone (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 30.

Women's and children's dress goods which contain no cotton except about 6 per cent., carded into the wool from which the warp is spun, held within the description of goods composed in part of wool, being of less value than 20 cents per square yard, under R. S. § 2502, and not "goods with selvedges, made wholly or in part of other materials, or with threads of other materials introduced for the purpose of changing the classification." Seeberger v. Farwell (1891) 11 Sup. Ct. 650, 139 U. S. 608, 35 L. Ed. 297, affirming Farwell v. Seeberger (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 529.

Embroidered woolen dress goods held dutiable as "dress goods * * * of wool, and not specially provided for," under paragraph 369, Act 1897, and not under paragraph 371 of said act, as "articles embroidered, * * * made of wool." Hall v. U. S. (1905) 136 Fed. 774, 69 C. C. A. 494, affirming judgment Hall & Bishop v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 648.

Wool "dress robes" or "dress patterns," consisting of women's dress goods of wool, embroidered with silk, imported in single patterns in separate lengths and pieces, each pattern comprising the material for the body and trimming of a dress, held "dress goods," under paragraph 369, Act 1897, for "women's * * * dress goods * * * composed wholly or in part of wool," which is limited by the expression "not specially provided for in this act," and not under paragraph 371 of said act, as "articles embroidered, * * * made of wool," nor under paragraph 370 of said act, as "articles of wearing apparel of every description, * * * manufactured * * * in part, * * * composed wholly or in part of wool." Thomas v. Wanamaker (1904) 129 Fed. 92, 63 C. C. A. 594, affirming decree U. S. v. Wanamaker (C. C. 1903) 123 Fed. 193.

Gloria cloth, composed of silk and worsted, weighing less than 4 ounces to the square yard, and used for women's and children's dresses, held dutiable at 12 cents per square yard and 50 per cent. ad valorem, as "women's and children's dress goods," or "goods of similar description and character, composed wholly or in part of wool, worsted," etc., under paragraph 395, Act Oct. 1, 1890, and not at 50 per cent. ad valorem, as a "manufacture of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value," under paragraph 414. Bister v. U. S. (1894) 59 Fed. 452, 8 C. C. A. 175, distinguishing Hartranft v. Meyer (1890) 10 Sup. Ct. 751, 135 U. S. 237, 34 L. Ed. 110, and affirming judgment In re Bister (C. C. 1893) 54 Fed. 158.

Woolen dress patterns, embroidered with silk, or silk and metal, held not dutiable as woolen "embroideries," under paragraph 398, Act 1890, but at 44 cents per pound and 50 per cent. ad valorem, under paragraph 395, as woolen dress goods. In re Crowley (1893) 55 Fed. 283, 5 C. C. A. 109, following In re Schefer (1893) 53 Fed. 1011, 4 C. C. A. 153, affirming In re Crowley (C. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 465.

Construing Act 1897, par. 356, providing an increased duty on wool "changed in its character or condition for the purpose of evading the duty," held, that it is not necessary that there should be any mechanical or chemical change, disguising the quality or character of the wool; and that, where white and black Iceland wools, which had always been dealt in and imported separately in different bales, were imported mixed together in the same bale for the purpose of securing a lower rate of duty on the white wool, the wool had been changed in condition within the meaning of the law. Stone & Downer Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 603.

Under Act 1894, "worsted dress goods" held dutiable at 50 per cent. ad valorem, under paragraph 283, and not at 12 cents per square yard and 50 per cent. Murphy v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 68 Fed. 908, judgment reversed U. S. v. Klumpp (1898) 18 Sup. Ct. 311, 169 U. S. 209, 42 L. Ed. 720.

The proviso as to goods weighing over four ounces per square yard, at the end of the paragraph relating to women's and children's dress goods composed wholly or in part of wool or worsted, in Schedule K, Act 1883, relates only to such goods as are composed wholly of wool or worsted. Sullivan v. Robertson (C. C. 1889) 37 Fed. 778, following Ellison v. Hartranft (C. C. 1885) 24 Fed. 136.

Articles known as "Thybet" cloths or coatings, made of cotton warp and worsted filling, which are commercially known as "dress goods," or are of like description to dress goods, as known in trade and commerce, held properly dutiable under the provision for women's and children's dress goods in Act 1883, and not at 35 cents per pound and 40 per cent. ad valorem, under the provision in the same schedule for "all manufactures of every description composed wholly or in part of worsted, valued at above 80 cents per pound." Id.

Goods of like description.—The phrase "goods of like description" in the provision of Act 1883, for "women's and children's dress goods, coat linings, Italian cloths, and goods of like description," etc., is not restricted in its application to Italian cloths, but relates also to "women's and children's dress goods." Sullivan v. Robertson (C. C. 1889) 37 Fed. 778.

291. Clothing, ready-made, and articles of wearing apparel of every description, including shawls whether knitted or woven, and knitted articles of every description made up or manufactured wholly or in part, and not specially provided for in this section, composed wholly or in chief value of wool, 35 per centum ad valorem.

Wearing apparel in general.—Fabrics in chief value of flax held not dutiable as cloths in part of wool. See paragraph 283.

Wool dress robes held not dutiable as articles of wearing apparel. See paragraph 290.

As used in tariff legislation, the words "clothing and articles of wearing apparel" are more specific than "cloths and knit fabrics," since out of cloths and knit fabrics clothing and wearing apparel are made; the latter being included in the former, while the former are not included in the latter. Arnold v. U. S. (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 406, 407, 147 U. S. 494, 37 L. Ed. 253, affirming judgment In re Arnold (C. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 510.

The purpose, adaptation, and use of the article, and not its commercial designation, is the test of its dutiable description by the words "wearing apparel." Act July 30, 1846. Maillard v. Lawrence (C. C. 1849) Fed. Cas. No. 8,971.

This merchandise—boys' suits—consisting of a blouse, flannel neckpiece, and trousers, were properly assessed under paragraph 382, Act 1909. There was no purpose on the part of the congress to limit that paragraph to woolen wearing apparel not otherwise provided for. Hecht & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 261.

Cloaks lined with fur.—Cloaks of woolen cloth, lined and trimmed with fur, and not reversible, held dutiable at 4½ times the duty on unwashed wool of the first class, and 60 per cent. ad valorem, under Act 1890, par. 397. In re Certain Merchandise (C. C. 1894) 64 Fed. 577.

Hair rolls or "rats".—"Wearing apparel of every description" includes hair rolls or "rats" composed of cotton, wool, and metal, metal being the component material of chief value, and as such these were dutiable under paragraph 370, Act 1897. Guthman v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 170.

Knit hats.—"Wool knit hats," invoiced as "red fez caps," held dutiable as wearing apparel. Wanamaker v. Cooper (C. C. 1895) 69 Fed. 465.

Shawls.—Under Act 1832, imposing a specific duty on enumerated articles, and providing for a duty of 50 per cent. ad valorem on merino shawls made of wool, all other manufactures of wool, or of which wool is a component part, and on ready made clothing, worsted shawls with cotton borders and worsted suspenders with cotton straps or ends are not subject to the ad valorem duty. Elliott v. Swartwout (1836) 10 Pet. 137, 151, 9 L. Ed. 373.

Worsted shawls embroidered with silk, and worth over 40 cents per pound, held dutiable at 44 cents per pound and 50 per cent. ad valorem, as worsted shawls, under paragraph 392, Act Oct. 1, 1890, and not at 60 cents per pound and 60 per cent. ad valorem, as embroideries made of worsted, under paragraph 398 and the proviso of paragraph 373 of said act. In re Schefer (1893) 53 Fed. 1011, 4 C. C. A. 153; Id. (C. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 826.

Shawls or scarfs manufactured on looms in strips or pieces, but separated before importation, held dutiable as "wearing apparel." Act July 30, 1846. Maillard v. Lawrence (C. C. 1849) Fed. Cas. No. 8,971.

Shawls, in part woolen, held dutiable at 50 per cent., under Act 1832, § 2, art. 2. Hughes v. Hoyt (C. C. 1839) Fed. Cas. No. 6,846. See, also, Albers v. Frick (D. C.) Fed. Cas. No. 136.

Tennis jackets.—Tennis jackets of material composed chiefly of cotton, with a small percentage of wool, cotton being the material of chief value, held dutiable under paragraph 370, Act 1897, as "articles of wearing apparel * * * composed wholly or in part of wool," and not under paragraph 314, which covers wearing apparel of which cotton is the component material of chief value, "not otherwise provided for." Stone v. Heineman (C. C. 1900) 100 Fed. 940.

Underclothing.—Under Act 1890, knit woolen undershirts, drawers, and hosiery held dutiable as "woolen wearing apparel," under section 1, par. 396, and not as "knit fabrics made on frames," under paragraph 392. In re Arnold (C. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 510, judgment affirmed Arnold, Constable & Co. v. U. S. (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 406, 147 U. S. 494, 37 L. Ed. 253.

Underclothing, composed in part of wool and in part of cotton, and known commercially as merino goods, held dutiable under Act 1882 (22 Stat. 301), in amendment of R. S. § 2504, irrespective of the proportions in which the wool and cotton are combined, or the comparative value of the wool in the fabric. Greenleaf v. Worthington (C. C. 1885) 26 Fed. 303.

292. Webbings, suspenders, braces, bandings, belts, beltings, bindings, cords, cords and tassels, and ribbons; any of the foregoing made of wool or of which wool or wool and india rubber are the component materials of chief value, and not specially provided for in this section, 35 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Bands.—Woolen bands intended for the use of veterinary surgeons, to be applied to lame legs, held properly assessed under Act 1897, par. 366, as manufactures of wool, and not under paragraph 447, which provides for "harness, saddles, and saddlery." Veil v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 113 Fed. 856.

Bindings.—Under Tariff Act 1832, § 2, subd. 2, worsted carpet bindings are not chargeable with the duty of 25 per cent. Chester v. Curtis (C. C. 1849) Fed. Cas. No. 2,661.

Tariff Act 1832, c. 227, § 2, cl. 25, includes all bindings, whether they are worsted or woolen. Whiting v. Bancroft (C. C. 1841) Fed. Cas. No. 17,575.

Webbing.—Webbing in part of India rubber held not dutiable as wool webbing. See paragraph 368.

Elastic goods used to insert in the upper part of shoes or gaiters could not be classified as "fabrics in part India rubber, not otherwise provided for," dutiable at 30 per cent., under Schedule N, but, when composed of cotton, silk, and India rubber, were dutiable at 35 per cent. as "webbing, composed of cotton, flax, or other material," under Schedule N, and, when composed of worsted and India rubber, were dutiable either under Schedule N, or under Schedule K (at 30 cents per pound and 50 per cent. ad valorem in addition), as "webbing, gorings," etc., made of wool, worsted, etc.; the classification depending upon whether the goods were known to the trade simply as "webbing," or as both "webbing" and "goring"; and, in an action to recover duties paid, this question was one for the jury, and not for the court. Robertson v. Salomon (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 752, 754, 144 U. S. 603, 36 L. Ed. 560.

The question whether goods are known to the trade simply as "webbing," or as both "webbing" and "goring," in an action to recover duties paid, is a question for the jury, and not for the court. Id.

Under R. S. § 2504, webbing made of India rubber, wool, and cotton, and known as "wool elastic webbing," to distinguish it from "union elastic webbing," and "cotton elastic webbing," which is used in the manufacture of congress boots, and which would not be adapted to that use without the rubber, is dutiable as "webbing * * * composed wholly or in part of India rubber, not otherwise provided for," at 35 per cent. ad valorem (Schedule M), and not as "webbing * * * made of wool, * * * or of which wool * * * is a component material," at 50 cents per pound and 50 per cent. ad valorem (Schedule L). Beard v. Nichols (1887) 120 U. S. 260, 7 Sup. Ct. 548, 30 L. Ed. 652, affirming (C. C. 1881) 7 Fed. 579.

293. Aubusson, Axminster, moquette, and chenille carpets, figured or plain, and all carpets or carpeting of like character or description, 35 per centum ad valorem.

294. Saxony, Wilton, and Tournay velvet carpets, figured or plain, and all carpets or carpeting of like character or description, 30 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Tournay velvet carpets.—Tournay velvet carpets being specifically made subject, by Act 1894, par. 288, to a certain duty, they cannot be treated as "manufactures of wool," within the meaning of paragraph 297, which provided that the rates of duties fixed by the act for manufactures of wool should take effect January 1, 1895. U. S. v. Field (1896) 71 Fed. 513, 18 C. C. A. 225.

295. Brussels carpets, figured or plain, and all carpets or carpeting of like character or description, 25 per centum ad valorem.

296. Velvet and tapestry velvet carpets, figured or plain, printed on the warp or otherwise, and all carpets or carpeting of like character or description, 30 per centum ad valorem.

297. Tapestry Brussels carpets, figured or plain, and all carpets or carpeting of like character or description, printed on the warp or otherwise, 20 per centum ad valorem.

298. Treble ingrain, three-ply, and all-chain Venetian carpets, 20 per centum ad valorem.

299. Wool Dutch and two-ply ingrain carpets, 20 per centum ad valorem.

300. Carpets of every description, woven whole for rooms, and Oriental, Berlin, Aubusson, Axminster, and similar rugs, 50 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Chinese goatskins.—"Chinese goatskins," tanned with the hair on, and sewed together in pieces 18 inches wide and from 36 to 48 inches long, and used as rugs, sleigh and carriage robes, or cut up for lap-robe and overcoat trimmings, held not dutiable as "rugs," under Act 1883. Seeberger v. Schlesinger (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 729, 730, 152 U. S. 581, 38 L. Ed. 560, affirming in part Schlesinger v. Seeberger (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 872.

Oriental rugs.—In assessing the duty "per square foot" provided for rugs in paragraph 379, Act 1897, held, as to certain oriental rugs having a pile and a selvage, that the entire area of the rug, including the selvage, should be measured, in ascertaining the number of square feet. Fritz & La Rue v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 135 Fed. 916.

Traveling rugs.—Traveling rugs imported during the year 1888 held dutiable as rugs, under paragraph 378, Act 1883, and not as manufactures of wool not specially enumerated, under paragraph 362. Ingersoll v. Magone (C. C. 1891) 48 Fed. 159, reversed (1893) 53 Fed. 1008, 4 C. C. A. 150.

301. Druggets and bockings, printed, colored, or otherwise, 20 per centum ad valorem.

302. Carpets and carpeting of wool or cotton, or composed in part of either of them, not specially provided for in this section, and on mats, matting, and rugs of cotton, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Felt carpeting.—Felt carpeting though not woven, held a carpeting of wool, dutiable under Act 1897, par. 381, and not under paragraph 370. U. S. v. Bouttell (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 260.

303. Mats, rugs for floors, screens, covers, hassocks, bed sides, art squares, and other portions of carpets or carpeting, composed wholly or in part of wool, and not specially provided for in this section, shall be subjected to the rate of duty herein imposed on carpets or carpeting of like character or description.

Notes of Decisions

Brussels and Wilton rugs.—Brussels and Wilton rugs, composed wholly of linen and worsted, held not dutiable as carpets or carpeting, or as manufactures of wool. Act 1832. Hadden v. Hoyt (C. C. 1840) Fed. Cas. No. 5,890.

Daghestan rugs.—Daghestan rugs and Dag. Dag. rugs of like character or description to Tournay velvet carpets, though not, or not made from, portions of such carpets, are, under Act 1883, dutiable at the rate of duty imposed upon Tournay velvet carpets. Beuttell v. Magone (C. C. 1890) 48 Fed. 157.

Hearth rugs.—Hearth rugs, made of worsted, held not dutiable as manufactures of wool. Act July 14, 1832. Riggs v. Frick (C. C. 1840) Fed. Cas. No. 11,825.

Rugs in general.—Traveling rugs held not dutiable as rugs and other portions of carpet. See paragraph 288.

Under Act 1883, rugs, made as rugs, and clearly distinguishable as such by reason of their process of manufacture, size, shape, pattern, etc., held dutiable at 40 per cent. ad valorem; but rugs made from pieces of carpets or carpeting were subject to the same rate imposed upon the kind of carpets or carpeting from which they were made. Beuttell v. Magone (1895) 15 Sup. Ct. 566, 567, 157 U. S. 154, 39 L. Ed. 654, reversing (C. C. 1890) 48 Fed. 157.

"Chinese goatskins," tanned with the hair on, and sewed together in pieces 18 inches wide and from 36 to 48 inches long, and used as rugs, sleigh and carriage robes, or cut up for lap robe and overcoat trimmings, were not dutiable as "rugs," under Schedule K, Act March 3, 1883. Seeberger v. Schlesinger (1894) 152 U. S. 581, 14 Sup. Ct. 729, 38 L. Ed. 560, affirming (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 872.

Screens.—Paper screens held not dutiable as screens. See paragraph 332.

304. Whenever in this section the word "wool" is used in connection with a manufactured article of which it is a component material, it shall be held to include wool or hair of the sheep, camel or other like animals, whether manufactured by the woolen, worsted, felt, or any other process.

Wool.—Act May 9, 1890 (26 Stat. 105), declaring that "the secretary of the treasury be, and he hereby is, * * * directed to classify as woolen cloths all imports of worsted cloths," does not require that the secretary in person shall make the classification, but only that it shall be done by the customs department, of which the secretary is the head. U. S. v. Ballin (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 507, 144 U. S. 1, 36 L. Ed. 321.

Diagonal cloths, used mainly for the manufacture of men's wearing apparel, and known to the trade as "worsteds," being composed mainly of worsted, mixed with about 10 per cent. of shoddy, made from wool and cotton, held subject to duty as "manufactures of worsted," under Act 1883, "Wool and Woolens," par. 363, fixing the rate on all manufactures "composed wholly or in part of worsted," and not subject to duty as "manufactures of wool" under paragraph 362. Seeberger v. Cahn (1890) 11 Sup. Ct. 28, 29, 137 U. S. 95, 34 L. Ed. 599.

Act May 9, 1890, known as the "Dingley Act," which required the secretary of the treasury to classify all worsted cloths as woolens, was not a mere administrative regulation, but an amendment to the existing tariff law (Act 1883), changing the duty on worsteds (United States v. Ballin [1892] 12 Sup. Ct. 507, 144 U. S. 1, 36 L. Ed. 321), and hence was superseded by the McKinley Act Oct. 1, 1890, which covered the entire field of wool and worsted manufactures. U. S. v. Murphy (1896) 72 Fed. 1008, 19 C. C A. 343, affirming judgment Murphy v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 68 Fed. 908, judgment reversed U. S. v. Klumpp (1898)

Act 1883 itself recognizes a difference between woolen and worsted articles; and the words "woolen cloths," used in paragraph 362, are to be taken as including only those woolen cloths which are not worsted, or composed of worsted, within the meaning of those terms as used in the tariff act. Ballin v. Magone (C. C. 1890) 41 Fed. 921, judgment reversed (1891) 11 Sup. Ct. 1015, 140 U. S. 670, 35 L. Ed. 602.

"Wool," within dictionary definitions, includes the hair of the alpaca and of the angora goat, but never is used to include all goat's hair, nor yet camel's hair, cow hair, or horse hair; but as used in paragraph 297, Act 1894, refers to hair of the sheep only, and the new duties upon articles made of the hair of other animals went immediately into effect upon the passage of the act. (1894) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 66.

305. Hair of the Angora goat, alpaca, and other like animals, and all hair on the skin of such animals, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Hair of the Angora goat.—Uncleaned and unmanufactured goats' hair held entitled to entry duty free, under Act March 2, 1861, § 23. In re Fifty-One Bales of Goats' Hair (D. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 4,781.

306. Tops made from the hair of the Angora goat, alpaca, and other like animals, 20 per centum ad valorem.

307. Yarns made of the hair of the Angora goat, alpaca, and other like animals, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Mohair yarn.—Goods made of mohair yarn, which is made from the hair of the Angora goat, imported on August 28, 1894, are subject to duty under the Tariff Act Aug. 27, 1894. Such articles cannot be considered as manufactures of wool, on which the reduction of duties made by such act were postponed, though the material is known commercially as "ice wool," in view of the fact that it has been separately provided for in several tariff acts. Oppenheimer v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 90 Fed. 796.

308. Cloth and all manufactures of every description made by any process, wholly or in chief value of the hair of the Angora goat, alpaca, and other like animals, not specially provided for in this section, 40 per centum ad valorem.

Astrachans. — Astrachan trimmings held not dutiable as manufacture of animal hair. See paragraph 309.

"Astrachans," being a woven material consisting of a cotton foundation or weft, and a rough and more or less curled pile warp composed of goat hair, in which, in some of the samples, the loops of the pile were cut and in others remained uncut, the goat hair being the material of chief value, held dutiable as a manufacture in whole or in part of goat hair, under paragraph 392, Act 1890, and not as "pile fabrics," under paragraph 396. In re Herrman (C. C. 1892) 52 Fed. 941; Id. (1893) 56 Fed. 477, 5 C. C. A. 582.

Chinese shoes.—Chinese shoes, composed of felt, leather, and cotton, should be classified under the twelfth clause of Schedule K, Act 1883 which provides generally for "all goods * * * and manufactures of every description, composed wholly or in part of worsted, the hair of the alpaca, goat or other animals * * * not specially enumerated or provided for." (1889) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 273.

Goat hair.—In Schedule K, Act March 3, 1883, the words in class 2, "combing wools," apply only to the first part of the clause, which enumerates wools, and not to the latter part, reading, "and also all hair of the alpaca, goat, and other like animals"; and such hairs, whether fit for combing or not, are dutiable at a uniform rate of 10 cents a pound. Common goat hair is therefore included in this specification, and is not comprehended in the clause (paragraph 717) relating to hair "not specially provided for in this act." Cooper v. Dobson (1895) 157 U. S. 148, 15 Sup. Ct. 568, 39 L. Ed. 652, reversing (D. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 184, and approving U. S. v. Hopewell (1892) 51 Fed. 798, 2 C. C. A. 510, 5 U. S. App. 137.

Manufactures of hair.—Goods composed of 80 per cent. goat's hair and 20 per cent. cotton, such as brilliantines, lustrines, alpacas, and mohairs, which prior to 1870 had not come to be specifically known in this country as women's dress goods, are assessable under Act July 14, 1870, § 21, as amended by Act 1871 (16 Stat. 592), providing for duties on hair cloth known as "crinoline cloth," and "on all other manufactures of hair not otherwise herein provided for," and not under Act March 2, 1867 (14 Stat. 561), relating to women's dress goods composed wholly or in part of wool, worsted, hair of the alpaca, goat, or other like animal. Arthur's Ex'rs v. Butterfield (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 714, 715, 125 U. S. 70, 31 L. Ed. 643.

Women's and children's dress goods manufactured of hair imported between April 30, 1874, and June 24, 1874, held dutiable under Act 1870, § 21, as amended January 30, 1871, prescribing the duty on "haircloth known as crinoline cloth, and all other manufactures of hair not otherwise herein provided for." Falconer v. Miller (1899) 93 Fed. 655, 35 C. C. A. 528.

Importations of bindings, braids, and buttons made between the 6th day of February and the 15th day of June, 1874, all made of mohair, should have been classified for duty under Act July 14, 1870, § 21, as corrected by joint resolution of January 30, 1871, providing that the duty "on hair-cloth known as crinoline cloth, and on all other manufactures of hair not otherwise herein provided for, 30 per cent. ad valorem," and not under Act March 2, 1867. Dieckerhoff v. Miller (1899) 93 Fed. 651, 35 C. C. A. 525.

Cloakings made of calf hair and cotton, imported in 1881, were dutiable at 30 per cent., under the provisions of Schedule M, § 2504, R. S., for "all other manufactures of hair not otherwise provided for;" and, being thus enumerated, could not be held dutiable under the provision of section 2499, R. S., that "on all articles manufactured from two or more materials the duty shall be assessed at the highest rates at which any of its component parts may be chargeable." Herman v. Robertson (C. C. 1889) 41 Fed. 881, writ of error dismissed Robertson v. Herrman (1891) 11 Sup. Ct. 1027, 140 U. S. 695, 35 L. Ed. 603, judgment affirmed Herrman v. Robertson (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 686, 152 U. S. 521, 38 L. Ed. 538.

Mohair braids.—Mohair braids made of the hair of the Angora goat held not woolen goods, within Act 1894, par. 297, suspending till January 1, 1895, reduction of duties on such goods. Wolff v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 113 Fed. 1001.

309. Plushes, velvets, and all other pile fabrics, cut or uncut, woven or knit, whether or not the pile covers the entire surface, made wholly or partly of the hair of the Angora goat, alpaca, or other like animals, and articles made wholly or in chief value of such plushes, velvets, or pile fabrics, 45 per centum ad valorem.

Astrachan trimmings. — Astrachans held not dutiable as pile fabrics. See paragraph 308.

"Astrachan trimmings," formed by weaving a fabric with alternate astrachan and plain strips, which is cut into single widths, and the plain portion turned under and stitched, held dutiable under Act 1890, par. 398, and not under paragraph 392, as manufactures of animal hair not specially provided for. Lowenthal v. U. S. (1896) 71 Fed. 692, 18 C. C. A. 299, affirming (C. C. 1895) 65 Fed. 420.

Fabrics, known in trade as "Astrachan trimmings," being a woven material consisting of a cotton foundation and a raised, curled pile, composed of goat's hair,—the latter being the component material of chief value,—cut into narrow strips, and the edges roughly basted down by hand, held dutiable at 49½ cents per pound, and, in addition thereto, 60 per cent. ad valorem, as "pile fabrics," under paragraph 396 of the same schedule and act. In re Downing (C. C. 1893) 56 Fed. 815.

Plushes.—No rule exists in trade or commercial usage declaring that fabrics having a pile of 3.5 millimeters or less in length should be regarded as velvets and of over 3.5 millimeters as plush. U. S. v. Silberstein, Castell & Co. (C. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 965.

Goats' hair plush or mohair plush, composed partly of cotton, held dutiable as a manufacture of "goats' hair or mohair," under Act Aug. 30, 1842. Thorp v. Lawrence (C. C. 1848) Fed. Cas. No. 14,005.

310. The provisions of this schedule (K) shall be effective on and after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and fourteen, until which date the rates of duty now provided by Schedule K of the existing law shall remain in full force and effect.

Construction of former acts.—See U. S. v. Klumpp (1898) 18 Sup. Ct. 311, 312, 169 U. S. 209, 42 L. Ed. 720; Same v. Murphy (1896) 72 Fed. 1008, 19 C. C. A. 343 (affirming Murphy v. U. S. [C. C. 1895] 68 Fed. 908, and judgment reversed Robinson v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 143 Fed. 919; Lesher, Whitman & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 641.

SCHEDULE L.—SILKS AND SILK GOODS

311. Silk partially manufactured from cocoons or from waste silk and not further advanced or manufactured than carded or combed silk, and silk noils exceeding two inches in length, 20 cents per pound.

Notes of Decisions

Combed silk.—Combed silk that has fallen from or been caught in the machines in which it was undergoing further operations held dutiable under paragraph 384, Act 1897, as silk not further manufactured than combed, and is not subject to the provision for silk waste in paragraph 661, Free List. Fawcett v. U. S. (1907) 154 Fed. 1003, 83 C. C. A. 197, affirming judgment (C. C. 1906) 146 Fed. 83.

Silk on tubes.—In construing the provision in Act 1897, par. 660, for "silk, raw, or as reeled from the cocoon, but not * * * advanced in manufacture in any way," held: (1) That the provision does not cover any form of raw silk advanced beyond the condition of skeins; (2) that silk known as "singles" or "silk on tubes," which has been wound from the skeins onto tubes, the effect of this process being to advance the silk a stage in preparation for its ultimate use, has been "advanced in manufacture"; and (3) that silk in this form is not free of duty under this provision, but dutiable under paragraph 384 as "silk * * * not further advanced or manufactured than carded or combed silk." Klots v. U. S. (1905) 139 Fed. 606, 71 C. C. A. 590, affirming judgment U. S. v. Klotz (C. C. 1904) 133 Fed. 808.

Raw tussah silk.—Raw tussah silk held not dutiable as silk partially manufactured. See paragraph 600.

312. Spun silk or schappe silk yarn, 35 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Artificial silk yarn.—Artificial silk yarn held not dutiable as silk yarn. See paragraph 250.

Schappe silk yarn.—The testimony shows such a general trade adoption of and acquiescence in the conditioning rule for finding the number to be assigned schappe silk yarns according to the metric system, that the reference to this system in paragraph 397, Act 1909, may be fairly held to indicate this conditioning rule as a proper guide. This conditioning rule having been complied with in the case here, there is no error in the appraisement. U. S. v. Bouchsein (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 227.

Spun silk on beams.—The merchandise is spun silk on beams, dutiable under that title at a specific rate (paragraph 397, Act 1909). The beams were separately assessed with duty as manufactures of wood. Held, that the beams should be admitted without separate assessment as parts of the entirety "spun silk on beams." Stirn v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 47.

313. Thrown silk not more advanced than singles, tram, or organzine, sewing silk, twist, floss, and silk threads or yarns of every description made from raw silk, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Chenilles.—Chenilles held not dutiable as thrown silk. See paragraph 318.

Organzine.—Silk organzine, damaged in dyeing, held not by reason of the damage removed from the provision for "organzine," in Act 1897, par. 385, but classifiable as such, rather than as "silk waste," under paragraph 661. Cohen v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 180 Fed. 634.

Thread.—A manufacture formed of two or more strands or threads of silks, with short cross threads interlaced, so as to make a kind of fringed thread or embroidery yarn known as "silk arrasene," held to be dutiable at 30 per cent. ad valorem, as silk thread, under Schedule L, Act March 3, 1883. Mandel v. Spalding (C. C. 1885) 26 Fed. 609.

Twist.—"Twist," composed of goat or mohair and silk, or entirely of silk, if not known as "sewing silk" in commerce, held not dutiable as such. Act March 2, 1833. Dorr v. Hoyt (C. C.) Fed. Cas. Nos. 4,007, 4,008.

314. Velvets, plushes, chenilles, velvet or plush ribbons, or other pile fabrics, composed of silk or of which silk is the component material of chief value, 50 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Panne velvet.—So-called "panne velvet" held dutiable as "plush," and not as "velvets," under Act 1897, par. 386. U. S. v. Passavant & Co. (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 912.

Under Act 1897, par. 386, enumerating "plush" and "velvets" as subject to different rates of duty, panne velvets are subject to the former classification. U. S. v. Silberstein, Castell & Co. (C. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 965.

Plushes.—Goods imported by a manufacturer of women's hats held dutiable as silk plush and not as plush for making men's hats. Comey & Johnson Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 532.

Velvet ribbons.—Velvet ribbons held dutiable as "manufactures of silk," under paragraph 414, Act 1890, and not as "velvets, plushes," etc., under paragraph 411. U. S. v. Jaffray (1897) 77 Fed. 868, 23 C. C. A. 497; Jaffray v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 71 Fed. 953.

Silk and cotton velvet ribbons, silk constituting the chief value, held dutiable at 60 per cent. under section 8 Act June 30, 1864. Lane v. Russell (C. C. 1870) Fed. Cas. No. 8,053.

Velvets.—Woven fabrics commonly known as figured "velvets," or "velours," composed wholly or in chief value of silk, the face of the fabric, having substantially a pile surface, held dutiable under paragraph 399, Act 1909, according to their weight per square yard, as "velvets * * * and other pile fabrics." U. S. v. Schumacher & Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 301. See, also, McGibbon v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 107 Fed. 265.

Silk and cotton velvets imported subsequent to October 6, 1890, held dutiable on the weight of the goods, including the selvedges, under paragraph 411, Tariff Act Oct. 1, 1890. In re Megroz (C. C. 1892) 53 Fed. 244.

Tapestries.—Tapestries held not dutiable as pile fabrics. See paragraph 318.

315. Handkerchiefs or mufflers composed wholly or in chief value of silk, finished or unfinished; if cut, not hemmed or hemmed only, 40 per centum ad valorem; if hemstitched or imitation hemstitched, or revered, or having drawn threads, but not embroidered in any manner with an initial letter, monogram, or otherwise, 50 per centum ad valorem.

Mufflers.—Goods held not mufflers. See paragraph 317.

Paragraph 400, Act 1909, held not restricted in its operation to mufflers that are handkerchiefs or that are similar to handkerchiefs, but embraces both knit and woven mufflers, "finished or unfinished, if cut, not hemmed or hemmed only." Hensel, Bruckmann & Lorbacher v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 486; Kaskel & Kaskel v. Same (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 38.

Mufflers composed of cotton and silk held dutiable under Act 1897, par. 388, covering "handkerchiefs or mufflers composed wholly or in part of silk," and not under paragraph 312, covering "handkerchiefs or mufflers composed of cotton," though the cotton is the component material of chief value of the mufflers in question. Guiterman v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 113 Fed. 994.

With these mufflers the threads are in all cases introduced to perfect and hold in place the overwhelmed and overlapped edges and are necessary as well for ornamentation. Being necessary to complete the hemming process or its equivalent, this cannot be said to be a process beyond hemming; and the threads holding the individual pieces together being cut, the merchandise was brought within the provisions of paragraph 400, Act 1909. U. S. v. Lines & Warne (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 552.

316. Ribbons, bandings, including hatbands, belts, beltings, bindings, all of the foregoing not exceeding twelve inches in width and if with fast edges, bone casings, braces, cords, cords and tassels, garters, suspenders, tubings, and webs and webbings; all the foregoing made of silk or of which silk or silk and india rubber are the component materials of chief value, if not embroidered in any manner, and not specially provided for in this section, 45 per centum ad valorem.

Elastic cords and braids.—Ornaments composed chiefly of silk cord held not dutiable as cords. See paragraph 358.

The word "fabric," as used in the Tariff Act of 1883, making "india rubber fabrics" dutiable, includes elastic cords and braids made of silk and india rubber. In re Mills (C. C. 1891) 49 Fed. 726.

Ribbons.—Ribbons composed chiefly of silk, but in part of cotton, held not "ribbons * * * of cotton, * * * whether composed in part of india rubber or otherwise," under Act 1897, par. 320, for the word "otherwise" is there used with the meaning of "not," and not as relating to other materials than india rubber, such ribbons are properly assessed as manufactures of silk, under paragraph 391 of Schedule L. Gartner, Sons & Co. v. U. S. (1908) 158 Fed. 1019, 85 C. C. A. 509, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 957.

Under Act June 30, 1864, § 8, "ribbons" does not include cotton ribbons. Chapon v. Smythe (C. C. 1873) Fed. Cas. No. 2,611.

317. Clothing, ready-made, and articles of wearing apparel of every description, including knit goods, made up or manufactured in whole or in part by the tailor, seamstress, or manufacturer; all the foregoing composed of silk or of which silk or silk and india rubber are the component materials of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 50 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

In general.—Act July 30, 1864, § 8, providing "that on all manufactures of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, not otherwise provided for, 50 per cent. ad valorem" shall be charged, construed to have no reference to the acts of May 2, 1861, and July 14, 1862, which imposed a duty of but 35 per cent. on "articles worn by men, women, or children, of whatever material made," the words, "not otherwise provided for," meaning not otherwise provided for by previous parts of the section of which they make the closing words. Smythe v. Fiske (1874) 90 U. S. (23 Wall.) 374, 23 L. Ed. 47.

Gloves.—Gloves commercially known as "silk-plated gloves" or "patent gloves" made on frames of silk and cotton, the latter being the chief component, held not dutiable as silk gloves under Act 1864, but otherwise as gloves made on frames. Arthur v. Unkart (1877) 96 U. S. 118, 120, 24 L. Ed. 768.

Taffeta gloves containing over 50 per cent. in value of silk and over 25 per cent. of cotton held subject to a duty of 50 per cent. ad valorem under the last paragraph of Schedule H, R. S. § 2504, and Act Feb. 1, 1875, § 1. Wilson v. Spaulding (C. C. 1884) 19 Fed. 413.

French silk gloves held free under Act 1833, c. 54, § 4. Adams v. Bancroft (C. C. 1838) Fed. Cas. No. 44.

Wearing apparel.—Gloves made of yarn composed of cellulose filaments obtained from cotton waste held not dutiable by similitude as silk wearing apparel. See paragraph 256.

Shawls of silk and cotton held not dutiable as wearing apparel, silk chief value. See paragraph 256.

Shawls of which silk is a component part are "wearing apparel," within Act 1846, and therefore subject to a duty of 30 per cent. Maillard v. Lawrence (1853) 57 U. S. (16 How.) 251, 14 L. Ed. 925, affirming (C. C. 1849) Fed. Cas. No. 8,971.

In applying the provision in Act 1897, par. 432, for "hats * * * trimmed, * * * composed wholly or in chief value of fur," the composition of the hats should be determined by reference to the whole hat, including the trimming so that where hats, the bodies of which are fur, are so trimmed that the silk trimming is the component of chief value in the hats, they are dutiable under paragraph 390, as "wearing apparel in chief value of silk." Leon Rheims Co. v. U. S. (1908) 160 Fed. 925, 88 C. C. A. 107, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 969.

Silk veils or veilings in the piece, with borders, and clearly defined lines between the borders, indicating where they were to be cut off, held dutiable as "wearing apparel," under paragraph 413 of Act 1890, and not under paragraph 414, as "manufactures of silks not specially provided for." Oppenheimer v. U. S. (1895) 66 Fed. 52, 13 C. C. A. 327, affirming (C. C. 1894) 61 Fed. 283.

Artificial silk hats are dutiable under Act 1897, par. 390, by similitude to silk wearing apparel. Wanamaker v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 169 Fed. 664, decree reversed U. S. v. Wanamaker (1910) 175 Fed. 900, 99 C. C. A. 390.

Dress shields, which are articles for women's wear, intended to be worn under the arms to protect the dress from perspiration, held "wearing apparel," within the meaning of paragraph 413, Act 1890. Darlington, Runk & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 136 Fed. 716.

Garters held included within the term "wearing apparel" in Act 1890. U. S. v. A. Steinhardt & Bro. (C. C. 1892) 141 Fed. 494, affirming judgment In re Steinhardt (1893) 4 C. C. A. 679.

Silk neckties held dutiable as "wearing apparel," under the acts of 1861 and 1862. Fiske v. Smythe (C. C. 1872) Fed. Cas. No. 4,833.

Under the evidence, trimmed straw hats held dutiable as silk wearing apparel. Schmitt v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 312.

"Muffler," as commonly understood, refers to something worn round the neck or throat, and, perhaps, mainly for warmth. The merchandise of the importation, as appears from the evidence, is usually worn about the shoulders, rather than about the neck or throat. The collector's classification is not shown to be incorrect. They are not mufflers, and were properly assessed as silk wearing apparel under paragraph 402, Tariff Act 1909. Vantine & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 3.

Garments designed to be worn about the shoulders by women, if made in network or openwork design and of silk cord and braid, taking a shape like that of bolero jackets, held dutiable as articles of wearing apparel wholly or in chief value of silk, under paragraph 390, Act 1897. Taxis v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 92.

318. Woven fabrics, in the piece or otherwise, of which silk is the component material of chief value, and all manufactures of silk, or of which silk or silk and india rubber are the component materials of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 45 per centum ad valorem.

1. Bolting cloth.—Bolting cloth of silk and cotton held not dutiable as manufacture of silk. See paragraph 422.

2. Chenilles.—Chenilles, used only for working into embroideries, held dutiable under Heyl's Revenue Laws, cl. 383, as articles not specially enumerated, "made of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value," and not, under clause 381, as "thrown silk in gum." Walker v. Seeberger (D. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 724, judgment reversed (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 981, 149 U. S. 541, 37 L. Ed. 839.

3. "Chief" value.—The word "chief," as used in section 1, Act Feb. 8, 1875, imposing a duty of 60 per cent. ad valorem on all goods, wares, and merchandise made of silk or of which silk is a component material of chief value, etc., means greater than either of the other materials, not greater than their aggregate. (1882) 17 Op. Atty. Gen. 337.

4. Chiffon.—Chiffon held not dutiable as manufacture of silk. See paragraph 358.

5. Chinese shoes.—Chinese shoes in which silk is the component material of chief value should be classified under the fourth clause of Schedule L of Act 1883. (1889) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 273.

6. Cigar ribbons.—Cigar ribbons, galloons, and braids, made substantially of silk, although cotton forms a part thereof, were subject to a duty of 60 per cent. ad valorem, under 13 Stat. 181. Swan v. Arthur (1880) 103 U. S. 597, 26 L. Ed. 525.

7. Crape veils.—Veils which are manufactured of silk, but not commonly called "silk veils," and known commercially as "crape veils" and not otherwise, held not dutiable under Act 1864 as "silk veils," but as "manufactures of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, not otherwise provided for." Arthur v. Morrison (1877) 96 U. S. 108, 109, 24 L. Ed. 764.

8. Crapes.—Mourning crapes held not dutiable as woven fabrics in the piece. See paragraph 358.

Silk crapes held dutiable as "manufactures of silk not otherwise provided for," and not as "piece silks." Act 1864. Lottimer v. Smythe (C. C. 1871) Fed. Cas. No. 8,523.

9. Drapery net.—Drapery net, consisting of a silk fabric having a foundation of plain net with embroidered figures, held dutiable as manufactures of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for, under paragraph 414, Act 1890. U. S. v. McAlpin (C. C. 1896) 76 Fed. 451.

10. Elastic cords and braids.—Elastic cords and braids, manufactured of silk and india rubber, silk being the component material of chief value, held dutiable under Schedule L, Act 1883, and not under the provision for india rubber fabrics, etc., in Schedule N. In re Mills (C. C. 1891) 49 Fed. 726.

11. Fans.—Fans of silk and bone bearing artistic paintings held not dutiable as manufactures of silk. See paragraph 652.

12. Fabrics in general.—Fabrics of silk and wool held dutiable as wool goods. See paragraph 288.

13. Garnitures and hussar sets.—Garnitures and hussar sets in designs of silk cord and braid, held not dutiable as silk trimmings, under Act 1897, par. 390, but as manufactures of silk not specially provided for, under paragraph 391. U. S. v. Garrison, Wright & Co. (1904) 127 Fed. 1022, 61 C. C. A. 10, affirming judgment Garrison, Wright & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 121 Fed. 149.

14. Gloria cloth.—Gloria cloth held not dutiable as a manufacture of silk. See paragraph 290.

15. Hat bands.—Hat bands held not dutiable as manufacture of silk. See paragraph 358.

16. Imitation seal skin.—Imitation seal skin cloakings made of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, are dutiable under Act 1883, § 383, as articles composed wholly or in part of silk, and not under R. S. § 2499, as articles not enumerated bearing similitude to one enumerated for duty. Hermann v. Robertson (C. C. 1888) 33 Fed. 654.

17. India rubber.—In construing Act 1897, par. 390, relating to articles of silk, or in chief value of silk, with a proviso that "the articles provided for in this paragraph, * * * when composed in part of india rubber, shall be subject to the same duty," held, that the proviso does not cover articles not in chief value of silk. Simpson-Crawford Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 301, judgment affirmed U. S. v. Simpson-Crawford Co. (1910) 178 Fed. 1006, 101 C. C. A. 665.

18. Insertions.—"Insertions" or "inserting," of silk, held dutiable under Act 1894, par. 302, as "manufactures of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value," and not as "articles made wholly or in part of lace," under paragraph 301. Kleeberg v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 72 Fed. 252.

19. Jacquard figured goods.—In regard to a fabric of two colors, one of which is produced by threads introduced by the swivel process to form figures, and not extending across the cloth from selvage to selvage, held, that the swivel threads are not a part of the filling, and that the goods are not within the provision in Act 1897, par. 391, for Jacquard figured silks containing two or more colors "in the filling." A. Wimpfheimer & Co. v. U. S. (1906) 149 Fed. 1022, 79 C. C. A. 532, affirming judgment Wimpfheimer v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 142 Fed. 849.

Silk goods woven on Jacquard looms, with broad and narrow stripes, the body between having a watered effect, held within Act 1897, par. 391, for "Jacquard figured goods" of silk. U. S. v. Johnson & Faulkner (1906) 142 Fed. 1039, 71 C. C. A. 686, affirming judgment (C. C. 1905) 139 Fed. 55.

Goods which have been made on a Jacquard loom and contain two or more colors in the filling held dutiable under Act 1897, par. 391, for "all Jacquard figured goods in the piece, made on looms * * * and containing two or more colors in the filling," irrespective of the fact that they are not such goods as are customarily made upon the Jacquard loom nor are its characteristic and usual product. Bassett, McNab & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 681.

Jacquard figured goods, in the piece, made of silk and cotton, silk being the component of chief value, two colors in the filling and the fabric dyed in the yarn, held dutiable under paragraph 391, Act 1897. Knauth v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 178.

20. Laces.—Under section 8, Act 1864, imposing a duty of 60 per cent. on "silk laces," and a duty of 50 per cent. on "all manufactures of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, not otherwise provided for," an article of silk and cotton, bought and sold as "spotted or dotted net," but which was a lace, in which silk was the component material of chief value, was a "silk lace," and subject to a duty of 60 per cent. Drew v. Grinnell (1885) 6 Sup. Ct. 117, 115 U. S. 477, 29 L. Ed. 453.

Silk goods, which, although made in the manner of laces, and having the substantial characteristics of laces, are not commercially known as "laces," but as "silk nets," "veilings," and "drapery nets," held dutiable under Act 1890 as a manufacture of silk not otherwise provided for, and not as silk laces. Appeal of Field (C. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 908, affirmed U. S. v. Field (1893) 54 Fed. 367, 4 C. C. A. 371.

21. Lamp shades.—Lamp shades held not dutiable as a manufacture in chief value of silk. See paragraph 358.

22. Manufacture of silk in general.—Cloth, of which silk is the component material of chief value, held dutiable under Act 1883, as goods made of silk, though it is made partly of wool. Hartranft v. Meyer (1890) 10 Sup. Ct. 751, 135 U. S. 237, 34 L. Ed. 110, affirming Myer v. Hartranft (C. C. 1886) 28 Fed. 358.

Goods in which the warp is of cotton and the filling partly silk, and in which silk is the component material of chief value, held dutiable under Act 1864 as manufacture of silk not otherwise provided for. Solomon v. Arthur (1880) 102 U. S. 208, 211, 26 L. Ed. 147.

The provision in the silk schedule in Act 1897, par. 391, "that all manufactures, of which wool is a component material, shall be classified and assessed for duty as manufactures of wool," is limited to goods of which silk is a component, and does not include flax-wool fabrics. U. S. v. Charles A. Johnson & Co. (1907) 157 Fed. 754, 85 C. C. A. 147, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 752.

In construing Act 1897, relating to "all manufactures * * * of which silk is the component material of chief value," and containing a proviso that "all manufactures of which wool is a component material shall be classified and assessed for duty as manufactures of wool," held, that the ordinary rule should be applied that a proviso at the close of an independent paragraph like this should be construed as limiting only what precedes it, and that the words "all manufactures" in the proviso have no broader relation than the same words in the beginning of the paragraph. U. S. v. Walsh (1907) 154 Fed. 770, 83 C. C. A. 472, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 749.

To authorize the classification of an article as a manufacture of silk, under a tariff law providing separately for manufactures of which silk is the component of chief value, such article must be entirely or substantially made of silk; and an article of silk and cotton, of which the cotton constitutes more than 25 per cent. in value, cannot be so classified, in the absence of any commercial designation requiring it. Robertson v. Edelhoff (1899) 91 Fed. 642, 34 C. C. A. 34.

The proviso in the silk provisions in Act 1897, par. 391, which prescribes that "all manufactures, of which wool is a component material, shall be classified and assessed for duty as manufactures of wool," relates only to goods composed of wool and silk, and not to fabrics of wool and flax. U. S. v. Walsh (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 749, judgment affirmed (1907) 154 Fed. 770, 83 C. C. A. 472.

In approving woolen fabrics containing silk for duty under Act 1897, which requires the ascertainment of the number of ounces in weight per square yard, the percentage of silk therein, and other conditions relating to dyeing, etc., under the statutes and regulations the goods may appropriately be sent to an examiner, rather than to a weigher, whose duty is confined to weighing articles in bulk; and it is within the examiner's duty to make return of the weight, as well as the other requisite facts. U. S. v. Rosenthal (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 766, judgment affirmed Browne v. U. S. (1905) 145 Fed. 1, 76 C. C. A. 31, writ of certiorari denied (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 755, 200 U. S. 618, 50 L. Ed. 623.

Goods woven wholly from silk from 4 to 12 inches wide, and used directly in these widths for trimming women's hats, etc., are not assessable as trimmings, under paragraph 390, Act 1897, not being trimmings until made into designs to be applied as trimmings, or into trimmings as they are applied to articles being trimmed, but are assessable as manufactures of silk, under paragraph 391. Robinson v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 121 Fed. 204.

Merchandise composed of silk and wool, silk being the component material of chief value, cannot be classified under Act 1890, as a "manufacture of silk or of which silk is the component material of chief value," being within the proviso of that paragraph declaring that "all such manufactures of which wool * * * is a component material shall be classified as manufactures of wool." Arnold v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 113 Fed. 1004.

Fabrics composed in chief value of silk woven 22 inches wide, and used for making waists or skirts for women's and children's dresses, and also for sleeves and trimming of dresses, and which were known commercially as silks, held to be dutiable under paragraph 302, Act 1894, as manufactures of silk, "or of which silk is the component material of chief value," and not under paragraph 283. McCreery v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 87 Fed. 191, judgment affirmed U. S. v. McCreery (1898) 91 Fed. 115, 33 C. C. A. 398.

A light woven fabric, used for the lining of coats, of which one-sixth of the material is silk and the rest cotton, and in which one proportion in bulk of silk is worth as much as seven proportions of cotton, held properly assessed for duty, under Act 1883, as manufacture of silk and cotton, of which silk is the component material of chief value. Lesher v. Seeberger (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 61.

23. Mousselines.—Light-weight woven silk fabrics, 6, 8, and 10 inches, respectively, in width, and generally known as "chiffon," "gauze," or "mousseline bands," held not articles made of chiffon, but are the material, chiffon, from which something can be made. The fabrics are dutiable as manufactures of silk under paragraph 403, Act 1909. U. S. v. Ceasar & Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 214.

Mousselines held dutiable, not as woven fabrics in the piece, but as manufactures of silk, under paragraph 403, Act 1909. U. S. v. Wertheimer Bros. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 515. See, also, Robinson v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 121 Fed. 204.

24. Parasol covers.—Parasol covers of silk, with an overwork finish of netting and figured silk, were dutiable as "manufactures of silk," under paragraph 414, Act 1890, and not as "laces," under paragraph 413. U. S. v. Stern (C. C. 1896) 72 Fed. 44.

25. Powder made from raw silk.—A powder made from raw silk, which is used in the manufacture of wall paper and artificial flowers, held dutiable under paragraph 391, Act 1897, as manufactures of silk, or at least so dutiable by similitude. W. W. Thomas & Co. v. U. S. (1906) 145 Fed. 1023, 74 C. C. A. 682, affirming judgment (C. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 93.

26. Remanit.—So-called remanit, in the form of ropes, braids, and mats, which has been manufactured from silk produced by carbonizing rags containing silk, held to be a manufacture of silk, within the meaning of Act 1897, par. 391. Frank v. U. S. (1906) 149 Fed. 1023, 79 C. C. A. 360, affirming judgment (C. C. 1906) 143 Fed. 702.

27. Ribbons.—Ribbons of silk used in trimming hats held not dutiable as silk merchandise. See paragraph 358.

Silk ribbons, of which some were, and others were not, in the nature of trimmings, but which, whenever used for trimmings, are required to be further fashioned for such use, and which are not in fact or commercially within the class of goods known as "trimmings," held not dutiable as silk trimmings, under paragraph 300, Act 1897, but as manufactures of silk, not specially provided for, under paragraph 391. Gartner & Friedenheit v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 574.

28. Screens. — Embroidered silk screens with wooden framework held dutiable as articles in chief value of silk. See paragraph 358.

29. Shirtings.—Silk and cotton shirtings, invoiced as "mixed shirtings," consisting of cotton warp threads, some white and some colored, and silk weft threads, the cotton constituting 63.27 per cent. in weight of the fabric, and the silk 36.73 per cent. in weight, the silk being largely the component material of chief value, held dutiable at 50 per cent. ad valorem, under paragraph 414, Act 1890, and not at 10 cents per square yard, and 35 per cent. ad valorem, under paragraph 348. In re Quaintance (C. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 829.

30. Silk-covered wire.—Collar supporters, made of a thin steel silk-covered wire bent into a series of open loops, with the ends of the wire bent back and soldered so as to form a closed loop at each end of the article, held dutiable under Act 1909 as manufactures of silk not specially provided for. Schloss Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 459. See, also, Strouse, Adler & Co. v. Same (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 184.

31. Silk in the gum.—Decisions on the computation of duties by weight, and as to silk in the gum, and silk boiled off, see H. Mendelson & Co. v. U. S. (1907) 154 Fed. 33, 83 C. C. A. 145 (reversing decision [C. C. 1906] 146 Fed. 78); U. S. v. H. B. Claflin Co. (1899) 92 Fed. 914, 35 C. C. A. 80; Rice v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 123 Fed. 848; Mendelson v. Same (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 346.

32. Strings for musical instruments.—Strings for musical instruments, composed of catgut wound with silk, silk being the component material of chief value, are dutiable under paragraph 318, Act 1913, as a manufacture of which silk is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for, and not under paragraph 373, as parts of musical instruments. Fischer v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 443.

33. Tapestries. — Articles known as "tapestries," and not commercially known as "pile fabrics," though a portion thereof has a pile surface, held improperly assessed for duty as "pile fabrics," under Act 1894, par. 299, but within the provisions of paragraph 302. U. S. v. McGibbon (1902) 113 Fed. 1021, 51 C. C. A. 625, affirming judgment McGibbon v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 107 Fed. 265.

34. Veilings.—Silk veilings held not dutiable as manufactures of silk. See paragraph 317.

35. Vest chains.—Silk vest chains, in which silk is the component of chief value, held dutiable at 50 per cent. ad valorem, under Act 1883, par. 383. Zimmern v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 69 Fed. 467.

319. Yarns, threads, filaments of artificial or imitation silk, or of artificial or imitation horsehair, by whatever name known, and by whatever process made, 35 per centum ad valorem; beltings, cords, tassels, ribbons, or other articles or fabrics composed wholly or in chief value of yarns, threads, filaments, or fibers of artificial or imitation silk or of artificial or imitation horsehair, or of yarns, threads, filaments or fibers of artificial or imitation silk, or of artificial or imitation horsehair and india rubber, by whatever name known, and by whatever process made, 60 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Artificial horsehair.—Imitation horsehair produced from cotton waste by a chemical process, being like cotton yarn as to material and use, is dutiable under the similitude clause of Act 1897, at the rate levied by paragraph 302, on cotton yarn, and not under section 6, as a nonenumerated manufactured article. U. S. v. Eckstein (1911) 32 Sup. Ct. 65, 222 U. S. 130, 56 L. Ed. 125, affirming judgment Eckstein v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 802, 93 C. C. A. 192.

On reliquidation the collector disregarded the mandate of the board. The board had made an attempt by its order to segregate the cases in which the artificial horsehair covered by its decision was contained, and it is clear it was intended to decide that the cases named contained artificial horsehair. U. S. v. Eckstein (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 315.

Viscelline, which is cotton thread coated with viscose material, held dutiable under paragraph 405, Act 1909, artificial or imitation horsehair, by whatever name known and by whatever process made. U. S. v. Eckstein (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 75.

Artificial silk.—The proper rate of duty in this case is such an ad valorem rate as, upon a computation based upon the value per pound of the artificial silk fabric, it is found such fabric would pay under the compound rates provided for in paragraph 405. So the intention of the law, that the artificial silk fabric shall not escape the duty imposed thereon under paragraph 405, is attained, the beads and other materials entering into the fringe pay a rate of duty not less than the 60 per cent. ad valorem imposed thereon under paragraph 421, and at the same time such beads and other materials are not charged with the extreme penalty it is contended should be charged on them, they being found associated with the artificial silk fabric. U. S. v. Ewing & Clancy (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 333. See, also, Stein & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 519; U. S. v. Vietor (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 297.

The merchandise is the crudest form of artificial silk known to the throwster's trade. It corresponds precisely to the natural silk single as this is made up from the cocoon. It was properly held to be in the form of singles and not tram, and, the form being the determining fact for consideration, it was dutiable as singles under paragraph 405, Tariff Act 1909. U. S. v. Straus & Co. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 395.

Imitation yarn.—Imitation silk yarn, which is made from cotton waste subjected to a chemical process, whereby it loses its identity as cotton, and which resembles silk yarn in quality, texture, and use, held, by virtue of the similitude clause in section 7, Act 1897, to be dutiable at the rate applicable to silk yarn, under paragraph 385. Von Bernuth v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 133 Fed. 800, judgment reversed Hardt Von Bernuth & Co. v. Same (1906) 146 Fed. 61, 76 C. C. A. 638.

SCHEDULE M.—PULP, PAPERS, AND BOOKS

320. Sheathing paper, pulpboard in rolls, not laminated, roofing felt, common paper-box board, not coated, lined, embossed, printed or decorated in any manner, nor cut into shapes for boxes or other articles, 5 per centum ad valorem.

321. Filter masse or filter stock, composed wholly or in part of wood pulp, wood flour, cotton or other vegetable fiber, 20 per centum ad valorem.

322. Printing paper (other than paper commercially known as handmade or machine handmade paper, japan paper, and imitation japan paper by whatever name known), unsized, sized, or glued, suitable for the printing of books and newspapers, but not for covers or bindings, not specially provided for in this section, valued above 5 cents per pound, twelve per centum ad valorem: Provided, however, That if any country, dependency, province, or other subdivision of government shall impose any export duty, export license fee, or other charge of any kind whatsoever (whether in the form of additional charge or license fee or otherwise) upon printing paper, wood pulp, or wood for use in the manufacture of wood pulp, there shall be imposed upon printing paper, values above 5 cents per pound, when imported either directly or indirectly from such country, dependency, province, or other subdivision of government, an additional duty equal to the amount of the highest export duty or other export charge imposed by such country, dependency, province, or other subdivision of government, upon either printing paper, or upon an amount of wood pulp, or wood for use in the manufacture of wood pulp necessary to manufacture such printing paper.

This paragraph was amended by Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, § 600, 39 Stat., to read as set forth above. Said amendment consisted in changing the figures in the sixth line from 2½ to 5, and in changing the figures in the twelfth line from 2½ to 5.

Notes of Decisions

Canadian reciprocity act.—Section 2 of the Canadian reciprocity act, relating to entry of wood pulp, etc., held not affected by the operation of section 1 of such act. Cliff Paper Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 186.

Countervailing duty.—In the form of a license fee for the privilege of cutting pulp wood on public lands in the province of Quebec, a certain sum is collected on what is consumed in manufacture within Canada and a greater sum on what is exported. Held, that in its essential nature this is the imposition of an export duty equal to the difference between the two sums, and is therefore within the purview of Act 1897, par. 393. Heckendorn v. U. S. (1908) 162 Fed. 141, 89 C. C. A. 165, writ of certiorari denied (1909) 29 Sup. Ct. 696, 214 U. S. 514, 53 L. Ed. 1063.

In regard to pulp imported from Canada, made from wood of which a part is subject to a Canadian export duty, held that the countervailing duty equal to such export duty, which is imposed under Act 1897, should be assessed on the basis of the percentage used therein of wood subject to the export duty, when such percentage is established by satisfactory evidence. The action of the province of Quebec in imposing a license fee for cutting wood on public lands, which is reduced when the wood is manufactured into pulp in Canada, is in effect the imposition of an "export duty on pulp wood exported to the United States." Pulp produced in Canada from wood cut on public lands in Quebec is subject to the countervailing duty, irrespective of whether it is manufactured into pulp in that province or not. The British North America Act (St. 30–31 Vict. c. 3, §§ 91, 92) gives the Dominion of Canada exclusive power to impose export and import duties, but distributes among the provinces of Canada certain legislative powers, including that of taxation by way of license; and under this authority the province of Quebec imposes what is in point of fact and in effect an export duty. Held, that such duty is imposed by a "country or dependency." [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1671]. F. W. Myers & Co. v. U. S. (1906) 144 Fed. 1021, 73 C. C. A. 596.

The question is whether there was by a Canadian rule or regulation any prohibition or restriction of exportation, either by contractual relation or otherwise, directly or indirectly, applicable to this merchandise—whether Act July 26, 1911, controls. Section 13 of the Canadian woods and forest regulations did contain such a prohibition, and, so far as the record discloses, it remained in force until December 31, 1912, when, by an order in council, the prohibition was not to be enforced and provision was made that the prohibition was to be deemed inoperative from May 1, 1911. The merchandise here, as the record shows, was cut from the lands described in that order, and was manufactured, in part at least, prior to December 31, 1912. Our statute has its own field of operation, and this operation is not to be defeated by another authority. Under our statute and under the facts shown here this wood pulp and news print paper were not entitled to free entry. U. S. v. Laurentide Paper Co. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 519.

The expression in section 2, Act July 26, 1911, "being the products of Canada," describes and refers to wood pulp manufactured in Canada from pulp wood, without regard to the place or country where the wood grew or was cut. The condition of free entry here was that the wood from which it was made must be entitled to free and unrestricted export and there was no intention to declare that the country of manufacture must also be the country of origin of the raw material. Under the favored nation clause this German wood pulp made of wood cut in Russia was entitled to free entry. U. S. v. Castle, Gottheil & Overton (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 366. See, also, Balfour v. Sullivan (C. C. 1884) 19 Fed. 578.

The question for determination is whether the written contracts between the appellee here and the province of Ontario, Canada, impose any restrictions upon appellee's right to export wood pulp manufactured from pulp wood cut upon crown lands. Held, that the contracts impose certain conditions, some new, some old, to be complied with by the appellee as a continuing consideration for the abrogation of the pre-existing contractual prohibition of export of such pulp wood and the enjoyment of the grant of the right to export the same; that these conditions, whether precedent or subsequent, impose burdens upon and result in a restriction of the export of the pulp wood from which the importations were manufactured; and therefore that free entry cannot be had under the provisions of section 2 of an act of Congress entitled "An act to promote reciprocal trade relations with the Dominion of Canada, and for other purposes," approved July 26, 1911. U. S. v. Spanish River Pulp & Paper Mills (Ltd.) (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 235.

Printing paper.—Imitation parchment paper held not dutiable as printing paper. See paragraph 332.

Paper for printing covers for pamphlets held not dutiable as printing paper suitable for books, etc. See paragraph 332.

Handmade paper suitable for printing books and newspapers held dutiable as "printing paper * * * suitable for books and newspapers," under Act 1897, par. 396, rather than as "handmade * * * paper." U. S. v. Miller, Sloan & Wright (1904) 135 Fed. 349, 68 C. C. A. 131 (affirming judgment Miller, Sloane & Wright v. U. S. [C. C. 1904] 128 Fed. 469); Davies, Turner & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 298 (judgment reversed U. S. v. Davies, Turner & Co. [1910] 177 Fed. 371, 101 C. C. A. 425).

In Act 1897, par. 396, the provision for " 'printing paper' suitable for books and newspapers" prescribes an exceptionally low duty on such material on account of the educational value of books and newspapers, and only such paper as comes within the true spirit of the law should be assessed thereunder. A thin, flimsy, colored paper, said to be used for "printing circulars and printing of all kinds," but not shown to be used for books or newspapers, is not within the scope of the provision. Gallenkamp v. Wyman (C. C. 1906) 178 Fed. 460.

"Suitable."—In the tariff law "suitable" means actually, practically, and commercially fit. Kahlen v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 206.

323. Papers commonly known as copying paper, stereotype paper, bibulous paper, tissue paper, pottery paper, letter-copying books, wholly or partly manufactured, crêpe paper and filtering paper, and articles manufactured from any of the foregoing papers or of which such paper is the component material of chief value, 30 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Copying paper.—A paper manufactured of natural barks or reeds having an inherent color that persists through all processes to which it may be subjected and remains a characteristic of the finished product held a colored paper; and copying paper made of it is colored copying paper, dutiable under paragraph 397, Tariff Act 1897. Davison v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 78.

Crepe paper.—The provision for "crepe paper" in Act 1897, was intended to apply to paper subjected to a creping process; and a paper made by that process and resembling crepe paper generally, but somewhat heavier, and treated with sizing for waterproofing purposes, is dutiable thereunder. Fiegel v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 537, 93 C. C. A. 215, affirming judgment (C. C. 1908) 160 Fed. 285.

"Crepe tissue paper" or "crepe tissue," which had acquired no designation in commerce prior to Act 1890, being a crinkled paper, much heavier than tissue paper, made of tougher and stronger stock, is not dutiable as "tissue paper," under paragraph 419, but under paragraph 422, as "all other paper not specially provided for." Dennison Mfg. Co. v. U. S. (1896) 72 Fed. 258, 18 C. C. A. 543, reversing (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 728.

Filtering paper.—Filtering paper that has been cut into disks and made ready for use in filtering held not by this treatment removed from the provision in paragraph 419, Act 1890, for "papers commercially known as * * * 'filtering paper,' * * * made up in copying books, reams, or in any other form." Alexander Murphy & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 148 Fed. 336.

Tissue paper.—An absorbent paper used by dentists held not dutiable as tissue paper. See paragraph 332.

Tissue paper for making letterpress copies of written matter held within the clause imposing a duty of 35 per centum ad valorem "on all other paper not otherwise provided for," and not within the clause providing for "paper, * * * printing, unsized, used for books and newspapers exclusively, 20 per centum ad valorem." Lawrence v. Merritt (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 1099, 127 U. S. 113, 32 L. Ed. 91.

Tissue paper having colors, printed or stamped thereon, and not of one uniform color, held dutiable under Act 1890, par. 419, as "tissue paper, white or colored," and not under paragraph 423, as "printed matter, not specially provided for." Kraft v. U. S. (C. C. 1894) 61 Fed. 398.

Thin, unsized paper, of fine, soft texture, silky to the touch, translucent, and to a limited extent transparent, used for wrapping articles, especially those which the manufacturer does not wish to tarnish, commonly known to the trade as tissue paper, weighing 10¼ to 10½ pounds per ream of 480 sheets measuring 20 by 30 inches, is properly classified as tissue paper, notwithstanding the fact that its weight is much greater than that of the ordinary tissue paper. Such paper is more specifically classified as "tissue paper," under paragraph 323, Act 1913, than as "wrapping paper," under paragraph 328, or "papers * * * not specially provided for," under paragraph 332. Germania Importing Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 467.

The proviso to paragraph 410, Act 1909, covers all articles composed of tissue paper, and by providing that such articles shall pay no less rate of duty than that imposed upon the component paper of chief value of which any such article is made, the classification of tissue paper fans was fixed as proper under that paragraph. U. S. v. Mason Bros. & Co. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 236. See, also, R. F. Downing v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 141 Fed. 490.

324. Papers wholly or partly covered with metal leaf or with gelatin or flock, papers with white coated surface or surfaces, calender plate finished, hand dipped marbleized paper, parchment paper, and lithographic transfer paper not printed, 25 per centum ad valorem; papers with coated surface or surfaces suitable for covering boxes, not specially provided for, whether or not embossed or printed except by lithographic process, 40 per centum ad valorem; all other paper with coated surface or surfaces not specially provided for in this section; uncoated papers, gummed, or with the surface or surfaces wholly or partly decorated or covered with a design, fancy effect, pattern, or character, whether produced in the pulp or otherwise except by lithographic process, cloth-lined or reenforced papers, and grease-proof and imitation parchment papers which have been supercalendered and rendered transparent or partially so, by whatever name known, all other grease-proof and imitation parchment papers, not specially provided for in this section, by whatever name known, bags, envelopes, and all other articles composed wholly or in chief value of any of the foregoing papers, not specially provided for in this section, and all boxes of paper or papier mâche or wood covered with any of the foregoing papers or covered or lined with cotton or other vegetable fiber, 35 per centum ad valorem; albuminized or sensitized paper or paper otherwise surface-coated for photographic purposes, 25 per centum ad valorem; plain basic papers for albuminizing, sensitizing, baryta coating, or for photographic or solar printing processes, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Imitation parchment paper.—Imitation parchment paper. See paragraph 332.

Paper with surface decorated or covered with a design.—Box tops made of surface-coated paper and having designs printed by the lithographic process held dutiable as "surface-coated papers * * * printed," under paragraph 398, Act 1897, rather than as lithographic prints under paragraph 400. Devoy v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 765.

The paper of the importation has an embossed surface design and is intended for use as covers for books and pamphlets. The proviso to paragraph 415, Act 1909, relating to embossed paper is limited to such embossed paper as appears in the form of designs and shapes like those there specified. The proviso does not apply to this importation. Steinman v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 240.

Paper subjected to processes by which, after a finished design in colors had been imprinted on it, it was saturated with linseed oil and no varnish or other substance was applied to produce an added surface, held not a surface-coated paper. It is dutiable as a "paper with the surface decorated or covered with a design, fancy effect, pattern, or character, * * * but not by lithographic process," under paragraph 411, Act 1909. Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 11.

Paper intended for use as book covers, having impressed on it a surface figure or design which makes of the paper something more than plain paper embossed, held dutiable under paragraph 411, Act 1909. Steinman v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 392.

To bring a wrapping paper with a decorated surface within the pertinent provision of paragraph 411, Act 1909, it is unnecessary to show the decoration was placed on the paper by a separate and independent decorative process; the language of the statute is "whether produced in the pulp or otherwise," and it appears here the decorated effect was produced by the intentional use for that purpose of a particular kind of felt or felt blanket. It was dutiable under paragraph 411 of the act. Dunn v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 65.

Papier maché.—Merchandise invoiced and known as "papier maché" held dutiable as such, though every constituent of that article may not be present in the composition of which the merchandise is made. Wanamaker v. Cooper (C. C. 1895) 69 Fed. 465.

Separate provision is made by paragraph 418, Act 1909, for boxes made wholly or in chief value of paper or papier maché, if covered with surface-coated paper; but such an eo nomine designation cannot be taken to exclude the article so designated from an applicable part of the customs law enacted to simplify administration and to minimize frauds on the revenue. Spielman v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 61.

Parchment paper.—Paper made from wood pulp subjected to the single process of immersion in an alkaline solution, while sometimes included, in commercial language, in the general class of parchment paper, is usually designated commercially as "imitation parchment," "parchment No. 2," or "greaseproof wrapping paper," and was not dutiable as parchment paper, under paragraph 308 of Act 1894. U. S. v. Stone (1900) 101 Fed. 713, 41 C. C. A. 624.

Parchment paper is made from vegetable fiber, not from wood pulp, is unsized, and is treated with dilute sulphuric acid. It is dull in finish, dense, hard, and hornlike. It is greaseproof, waterproof, translucent, and is much more tenacious than the original material. White glace wrapping paper held dutiable under Act 1909 as "imitation parchment papers which have been supercalendered and rendered transparent or partly so by whatever name known." Germania Importing Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 29.

An importation known as parchment cloth, made of parchment paper and cotton cloth, the parchment paper being the component of chief value, its use not appearing by proof, but its apparent characteristics indicating an article differing from either paper or cotton cloth taken alone, and with distinguishing characteristics of its own, was properly classified by the collector as a manufacture of parchment paper and cotton cloth, dutiable under paragraph 411, Act 1909. Stursberg, Schell & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 370.

Prints not lithographed on surface-coated paper.—Illustrations were imported for use as pages of a magazine, but came in separately from the text of the magazine. Paragraph 634, Act 1909, granted free entry to "periodicals," but this provision does not extend to parts of periodicals imported alone. They were properly assessed as "prints not lithographed on surface-coated paper," under paragraph 411, Act 1909. Kraemer & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 66.

Surface-coated paper.—Handmade surface-coated paper held not dutiable as surface-coated paper not specially provided for. See paragraph 326.

Paragraph 415, Act 1909, applies only to papers, plain or printed, but not lithographed. Embossed paper ornaments composed in chief value of metal-coated paper held clearly subject to the terms of paragraph 411 of that act. U. S. v. Wyman & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 411. See, also, Same v. Fuld (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 234; Knauth v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 183.

By the deliberate change made and appearing in paragraph 411, Act 1909, making it read "paper with coated surface or surfaces, not specially provided for," it cannot be doubted a change of meaning was intended; and transfer papers that have a coated surface or surfaces held dutiable under that paragraph. American Express Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 459.

Reviewing the history of the relevant clause in Tariff Act 1909 and the construction given to the previous acts, paper, whether plain or surfaced to be coated, metal coated, is found to be dutiable under paragraph 411 of that act as "papers with coated surface or surfaces * * * if wholly or partly covered with metal or its substitutes" at 5 cents per pound and 20 per cent. ad valorem. Kupfer Bros. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 302.

Paper boxes covered with embossed surface-coated paper held dutiable under paragraph 411, Act 1909. Woolworth v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 120.

325. Pictures, calendars, cards, booklets, labels, flaps, cigar bands, placards, and other articles composed wholly or in chief value of paper lithographically printed in whole or in part from stone, gelatin, metal, or other material (except boxes, views of American scenery or objects, and music, and illustrations when forming a part of a periodical or newspaper or of bound or unbound books, accompanying the same, not specially provided for in this section) shall pay duty at the following rates: Labels and flaps printed in less than eight colors (bronze printing to be counted as two colors), but not printed in whole or in part of metal leaf, 15 cents per pound; cigar bands of the same number of colors and printings, 20 cents per pound; labels and flaps printed in eight or more colors (bronze printing to be counted as two colors), but not printed in whole or in part of metal leaf, 20 cents per pound; cigar bands of the same number of colors and printings, 25 cents per pound; labels and flaps printed in whole or in part of metal leaf, 35 cents per pound; cigar bands printed in whole or in part of metal leaf, 40 cents per pound; booklets, 7 cents per pound; all other articles not exceeding eight one-thousandths of an inch in thickness, 15 cents per pound; exceeding eight one-thousandths of an inch and not exceeding twenty one-thousandths of an inch in thickness and less than thirty-five square inches cutting size in dimension, 5 cents per pound; exceeding eight and not exceeding twenty one-thousandths of an inch in thickness and thirty-five square inches and over cutting size in dimension, 7 cents per pound; exceeding twenty one-thousandths of an inch in thickness, 5 cents per pound, providing that in the case of articles hereinbefore specified the thickness which shall determine the rate of duty to be imposed shall be that of the thinnest lithographed material found in the article, but for the purpose of this paragraph the thickness of lithographs mounted or pasted upon paper, cardboard, or other material shall be the combined thickness of the lithograph and the foundation upon which it is mounted or pasted; books of paper or other material for children's use, lithographically printed in whole or in part, not exceeding in weight twenty-four ounces each, 4 cents per pound; fashion magazines or periodicals printed in whole or in part by lithographic process or decorated by hand, 6 cents per pound; booklets, wholly or in chief value of paper, decorated in whole or in part by hand or by spraying, whether or not lithographed, 10 cents per pound; decalcomanias in ceramic colors, weighing not over one hundred pounds per thousand sheets, on a basis of twenty by thirty inches in dimensions, 60 cents per pound; all other decalcomanias, except toy decalcomanias, 15 cents per pound.

Booklets decorated by hand.—Hand-decorated booklets with pyroxylin covers and paper inserts, value in chief of pyroxylin, held dutiable under paragraph 412, Tariff Act 1909, as "booklets, decorated in whole or in part by hand, * * * whether or not lithographed," and not as manufactures of pyroxylin under paragraph 17. U. S. v. Hagelberg (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 341.

Books for children's use.—Books for children's use, containing illuminated lithographic prints, the books being in the German language, held taxable under Act 1897, par. 400, providing for "books of paper or other material for children's use, containing illuminated lithographic prints, not exceeding in weight 24 ounces each," as the provision is more specific than that in paragraph 502, for "books * * * printed exclusively in languages other than English." P. H. Petry & Co. v. U. S. (1903) 127 Fed. 115, 62 C. C. A. 115, affirming judgment F. H. Petry & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 121 Fed. 207.

Decalcomanias.—Decalcomania books held not dutiable as lithographic prints. See paragraph 342.

Chromolithographs printed from oilstones upon paper, commonly known as "decalcomania pictures," are subject to an import duty of 20 per cent. ad valorem, under R. S. § 2504. Arthur v. Moller (1878) 97 U. S. 365, 24 L. Ed. 1046.

Decalcomania paper held not dutiable, under Act 1897, pars. 400, 403, as lithographic prints or printed matter, being commercially a distinct article from either, but falls under the provision for "surface-coated papers * * * printed" under paragraph 398. U. S. v. O. G. Hempstead & Son (C. C. 1908) 159 Fed. 290.

Decalcomanias not in ceramic colors backed with metal leaf fall appropriately under the classification "all other decalcomanias" in paragraph 412, Act 1909. U. S. v. Palm, Fechteler & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 1.

Decalcomanias for ceramic decoration, the decorating to be done by transferring the figures and designs from the paper to pottery and fixing them on the pottery by burning or baking, held lithographic prints, and dutiable as such within the meaning of paragraph 400, Act 1897. U. S. v. Borgfeldt & Co. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 197.

Cigar bands.—Lithographic cigar labels, printed in various colors, including bronze, held dutiable at 20 cents per pound, under paragraph 308, Act 1894, if, reckoning the bronze as two colors, the labels would have less than ten colors, the bronze not being of chief value, nor predominant. U. S. v. Wagner (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 161.

Estimating thickness.—In construing Act 1897, par. 400, held, as to lithographic prints in the form of folding pictures, of which substantial parts are of one thickness, and relatively smaller parts, consisting of little figures of an ornamental and incidental character, of a less thickness, that they should be classified according to the thickness of the substantial portions. Fuld & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 138 Fed. 973.

The narrow strips of hinges to which the lithographic prints are united to make up the folding pictures appear as serving simply to join one with the other and not as a formation or base upon which the print is mounted or pasted. The first part of the proviso to paragraph 412, Act 1909, alone ap-

Fashion plates.—Colored fashion plates held not liable to duty, under R. S. § 2504. Blood v. Merritt (C. C. 1882) 11 Fed. 289.

Labels.—The Christmas seals of the importation are used during the Christmas holidays by attaching them indiscriminately to all kinds of packages, regardless of the contents of these. They are not properly labels, and are not dutiable as such under paragraph 412, Act 1909. Gibson Art Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 385.

Lithographic prints.—Articles composed of cardboard on which lithographic prints have been pasted held not dutiable as lithographic prints. See paragraph 332.

Box tops made of surface-coated paper and having designs printed by the lithographic process held not dutiable as lithographic prints. See paragraph 324.

Lithographic prints, pasted on sheets of paper and embossed so as to form frames, held dutiable as "articles produced in part by lithographic process," under Act 1890, par. 420. U. S. v. Weiller (1895) 65 Fed. 418, 12 C. C. A. 668.

Calendars composed of lithographic sheets with a metal strip at each end, and having a calendar pad composed of lithographic sheets attached thereto, the lithographic prints being the most important feature of the importation, held dutiable as lithographic prints bound, under Act 1897, par. 400, rather than as printed matter (paragraph 403), or as manufactures of paper (paragraph 407). Luyties Bros. v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 180 Fed. 1022.

Under Act 1897, par. 400, relating respectively to "lithographic prints" and to "booklets," articles consisting of several post cards folded together and ready to be detached, with a paper cover pasted thereon, are covered by the former rather than the latter term. Downing & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 447.

The expression "lithographic prints," in Act 1897, par. 400, had no such definite, general, and uniform meaning in the wholesale trade and commerce of the United States at the time of the passage of that act as to control its construction. Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 155 Fed. 144.

A book having no lithographic prints, except one on the front cover, held not to be within the provision for "books * * * containing illuminated lithographic prints," in Act 1897, par. 400. E. P. Dutton & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 214.

The provision in paragraph 412, Act 1909, beginning "all other articles than those hereinbefore specifically provided," relates only to such goods as are lithographically printed and not to such as those in one of these appeals, admittedly not lithographed. U. S. v. Fuld & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 234.

The merchandise consisted of sheets of paper lithographically printed with colored designs, and not exceeding eight one-thousandths of an inch in thickness. Paragraph 412, Act 1909, contains unmistakable evidence that congress intended to name the exceptions to its application, and that apart from those exceptions it was meant to cover, as is there expressly declared, articles composed wholly or in chief value of paper lithographically printed, in whole or in part, whether such articles are or are not ejusdem generis with those first designated. The merchandise is dutiable under that paragraph. Overton & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 422.

Thin, flat pieces of surface-coated paper, with pictures or designs lithographically printed thereon, and of such dimensions as to admit on proper manipulation of being made into box covers and designed for that use, held classifiable either as surface-coated papers printed under paragraph 398, or as lithographic prints under paragraph 400, Act 1897. Conformably, however, to section 7 of that act requiring the higher rate to be imposed, they are dutiable under paragraph 400 as lithographic prints. U. S. v. Tate (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 434. See, also, Devoy v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 765.

Gelatin prints produced by the lichtdrück process were not dutiable under paragraph 403, Act 1897, but under paragraph 400 of that act. Rotograph Co. v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 82.

Views and post cards.—The "cutting size" of post cards, imported in a folded, undetached condition, should be ascertained, under Act 1897, par. 400, by measuring each card by itself, rather than taking the whole series as the unit of measurement. Downing & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 447.

Views covered by paragraph 412, Act 1909, are such as present actual places, buildings, landscapes, or scenes within the United States. And pictures that imaginatively portray events in the life of Washington held not views of American scenery or objects, but dutiable as cards lithographically printed under paragraph 412, Act 1909. Raphael Tuck & Sons Co. v. U. S. (1913) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 501.

Embossing implies a perceptibly raised surface and a raised surface that is perceptibly a form, figure, or design, but the surface of such a form, figure, or design needs, in order to be embossed, to be raised only above the surface immediately surrounding it and not necessarily above the general surface of the article. Post cards ornamented by a printing in gold on a gelatin surface and impressed with an indented design, producing thereby an effect in relief, are dutiable as cards, "either die cut or embossed," under paragraph 412, Act 1909; and this whether the embossed effect was or was not intended to be produced. Stiner & Son and Bischoff & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 347.

326. Writing, letter, note, drawing, handmade paper and paper commercially known as handmade paper and machine handmade paper, japan paper and imitation japan paper by whatever name known, and ledger, bond, record, tablet, typewriter, and onionskin and imitation onionskin papers calendered or uncalendered, whether or not any such paper is ruled, bordered, embossed, printed, lined, or decorated in any manner, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Handmade papers.—Handmade printing paper held not dutiable as handmade paper. See paragraph 322.

The provision in Act 1897, par. 401, for handmade paper held not restricted to paper ejusdem generis with the writing, letter, and other papers enumerated in that paragraph; and handmade surface-coated paper is more specifically provided for thereunder than under the provision in paragraph 398, for surface-coated paper "not specially provided for." U. S. v. Seyd (1907) 158 Fed. 408, 85 C. C. A. 518, reversing judgment Seyd v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 152 Fed. 657.

The handmade papers covered by Act 1897, par. 401, enumerating "writing, letter, handmade, drawing, * * * and typewriter paper," held not only those used as writing papers, but also that suitable for other uses, as handmade India transfer paper used for making lithographic transfers and in printing. Edward Benneche & Bro. v. U. S. (1907) 153 Fed. 861, 83 C. C. A. 43.

The term "handmade" as applied to paper is precise, explicit, specific, and controlling, and since the handmade paper of the importation weighed 10 pounds to the ream, it was dutiable under paragraph 401, Act 1897. American Trading Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 237.

Onionskin paper.—The rare and exceptional use of onionskin paper for printing purposes does not constitute it printing paper and it was dutiable as paper not specially provided for under paragraph 402, Act 1897. Kahlen v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 206.

327. Paper envelopes, folded or flat, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Envelopes.—Paper cut into pieces adapted to be folded into envelopes held not dutiable as paper envelopes. See paragraph 332.

Paper cut into particular shapes and sizes, ready to be folded and gummed, so as to constitute envelopes, and found to have been commercially known as "flat envelopes" at the time of the passage of the act, held dutiable as "paper envelopes, plain" under Act 1897, par. 399. Hunter v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 143 Fed. 914.

328. Jacquard designs on ruled paper, or cut on Jacquard cards, and parts of such designs, cardboard and bristol board, press boards or press paper, paper hangings with paper back or composed wholly or in chief value of paper, and wrapping paper not specially provided for in this section, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Cardboard.—Plain cardboard that has been embossed to give it an appearance of grain leather by passing it between a smooth and an indented roller remains cardboard; and it is not dutiable as paper, but as cardboard, under paragraph 415, Act 1909. U. S. v. Meyerson (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 225.

Wall paper.—The evidence does not show that the paper of the importation is either commercially or commonly known as printing paper, distinguishable as such from wall paper. It was not brought in to be used in printing books, and the testimony is conflicting as to whether it is suitable for such a purpose. Thomas & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 397.

Wrapping paper.—Material having the ordinary thickness of wrapping paper, with the appearance of wrapping paper and used as such, must be deemed not wood pulp, but wrapping paper, and was dutiable under paragraph 402, Act 1897, as paper not specially provided for. Germania Importing Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 55.

329. Books of all kinds, bound or unbound including blank books, slate books and pamphlets, engravings, photographs, etchings, maps, charts, music in books or sheets, and printed matter, all the foregoing, and not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem. Views of any landscape, scene, building, place or locality in the United States, on cardboard or paper, not thinner than eight one-thousandths of one inch, by whatever process printed or produced, including those wholly or in part produced by either lithographic or photogelatin process (except show cards), bound or unbound, or in any other form, 20 cents per pound; thinner than eight one-thousandths of an inch, $2 per thousand.

Notes of Decisions

Books in general.—Books held not "manufactures of paper" within the meaning of this section, providing for a reduction of duties on such manufactures among other articles enumerated. Pott v. Arthur (1881) 104 U. S. 735, 26 L. Ed. 909.

German novels translated into English, printed at stated intervals, and imported in pamphlet form, could not be classed as "periodicals," under Act 1890, par. 657, but were dutiable, under paragraph 423, as books, etc. Eichler v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 71 Fed. 956.

Volumes of a series planned to embrace 1,000 titles, being reprints of the world's classical literature, held dutiable under paragraph 329, Act 1913, at 15 per cent. ad valorem, and not admissible free as text-books under paragraph 426. Dutton & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 460.

Unbound photomechanic reproductions of paintings, having descriptive titles appearing severally in the German, French, and English languages, accompanied by an index, but intended to be completed before being bound or published by the addition of a preface in English, which would constitute English the predominant language, held not so far a completed entity as to warrant their introduction as books published chiefly in a foreign language. These productions are held dutiable as assessed under paragraph 416 of Act 1909. Petry Co. v. U. S. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 524. See, also, Macmillan Co. v. Sarne (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 1018.

Charts.—The meaning of the word "chart" has been broadened since the first use of the term in tariff legislation and that the term was employed in the present law with this accepted broader meaning. "Charts" in paragraph 416, Act 1899, eo nomine describes an importation of articles of paper lithographically printed which exhibit in a pictorial manner the mechanical features of a locomotive or an automobile. Sheldon & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 42.

Engravings.—Under Act 1857, colored engravings held dutiable as "engravings," and not as "nonenumerated articles." Knoedler v. Schell (C. C. 1860) Fed. Cas. No. 7,890.

Printed matter—In general.—Iron advertising cards held not dutiable as printed matter. See paragraph 167.

Paper bags with advertising matter held not dutiable as printed matter. See paragraph 332.

Perforated cardboards with printed mottoes held not dutiable as printed matter. See paragraph 332.

Pictures printed from lithograph stones in color made and used for ornament held dutiable as "printed matter." Arthur v. Moller (1877) 97 U. S. 365, 368, 24 L. Ed. 1046.

Paper used for box tops and similar purposes, printed with trade-marks and business names and addresses, and in some instances with floral or other decorative designs, held dutiable as "printed matter," under Act 1897, par. 403. Hamilton v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 796, 93 C. C. A. 186.

So-called lace paper, which is used in decoratively packing confectionery, etc., held not brought within the provision for printed matter in Act 1897, par. 403, by reason of having names and addresses of merchants printed thereon. Said provision did not cover matter on which the printing is but a subordinate feature. U. S. v. Hensel, Bruckmann & Lorbacher (C. C. 1907) 152 Fed. 578.

Pattern books consisting of sheets of paper stitched or folded together, upon which designs or patterns are printed in colors, held dutiable as printed matter. Weihenmyer v. Arthur (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 17,-360.

German lottery tickets printed in full abroad, so as to require no additions in writing, held dutiable under R. S. § 2504, as "all printed matter," or under section 2516, as nonenumerated articles. U. S. v. Kaub (D. C. 1877) Fed. Cas. No. 15,507.

—— Illustrated supplements.—An edition of illustrated supplements printed in Germany for an American German paper held free of duty as a periodical. See paragraph 329.

—— Japanese napkins.—The provision for "printed matter" in Act 1897, par. 403, held not to include Japanese napkins made of crinkled paper and ornamented with designs in colors, stenciled, stamped, or printed thereon. Morimura Bros. v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 172 Fed. 248.

—— Photographic mounts.—Enameled cards called "photographic mounts," which have passed through a printing press, and have printed thereon the name and address of the photographer for whom they are intended, held dutiable under Act 1883, as "printed matter not specially enumerated or provided for." Bonte v. Seeberger (C. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 884.

—— Post cards.—The provision in Act 1897, par. 403, for "printed matter," includes post cards of paper combined with such materials as celluloid, silk, and wood, the latter the components of chief value; one side bearing floral and decorative effects produced by spraying and embossing, and the other being printed with the words "Post Card" in various languages. U. S. v. Deutsch (1910) 178 Fed. 272, 101 C. C. A. 116, affirming judgment Deutsch v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 290.

Imported post cards bore on the face words printed in different languages and on the back printed pictorial representations, and were ornamented with feathers; the feathers being the element of chief value. Held, that the printing, and not the feathers, constituted the chief feature of the cards, and that therefore the cards were "printed matter," within Act 1897. A. H. Ringk & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 1021.

—— Samples.—These samples that show coloring results are designed for the use of salesmen who place dyes on the market; they are not samples of the dyes themselves. The regulations provide that samples to be entitled to free entry must be such as "are obviously intended for use merely as samples of merchandise to sell the class of goods which they represent." These goods were properly assessed as printed matter under paragraph 416, Act 1909. Badische Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 374.

330. Photograph, autograph, scrap, post-card, and postage-stamp albums, wholly or partly manufactured, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Photograph albums.—Photograph albums, composed of paper, leather, and metal clasps, the paper being the material of chief value, held dutiable as articles not specially enumerated, of which paper is a component material. Liebenroth v. Robertson (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 607, 144 U. S. 35, 36 L. Ed. 336, reversing (C. C. 1888) 33 Fed. 457.

Postal card albums.—Albums intended for holding collections of postal cards, a use to which scrapbooks are not applied, held dutiable as "scrapbooks," because such articles were commercially known as scrapbooks at the time of the enactment of the tariff. American News Co. v. U. S. (1906) 149 Fed. 1022, 79 C. C. A. 531, affirming judgment (C. C. 1906) 142 Fed. 786, and (C. C. A. 1906) 148 Fed. 1017.

331. Playing cards, 60 per centum ad valorem.

332. Papers or cardboard, cut, die cut, or stamped into designs or shapes, such as initials, monograms, lace, borders, or other forms, and all post cards, not including American views, plain, decorated, embossed, or printed, except by lithographic process, and all papers and manufactures of paper or of which paper is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Absorbent paper.
2. Imitation parchment paper.
3. Lace paper.
4. Manufactures of paper.
5. Millboards.
6. Paper boxes.
7. Paper for printing covers of pamphlets.
8. Paper printed and die cut.
9. Paper umbrellas.
10. Screens.
11. Slate books.
12. Transfer paper.
13. Velvet paper.
14. What constitutes paper.

1. Absorbent paper.—A very light paper, soft, semi-transparent, long-fibered, and dull-finished, which is highly absorbent, and therefore much used by dentists, and which is also used for making paper napkins, held to have been dutiable, under paragraph 422 of Act 1890, as "paper not specially provided for," and not to have been "tissue paper," so as to be dutiable under paragraph 419. U. S. v. Moses (1897) 84 Fed. 329, 28 C. C. A. 425.

2. Imitation parchment paper.—An imitation parchment paper, known as grease-proof paper, which, though it can be printed on, is not suitable for printing purposes, but is used almost altogether as wrapping paper, held not dutiable as printing paper, under Act 1897, par. 396, but as paper not specially provided for, under paragraph 402. Germania Importing Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 142 Fed. 215.

3. Lace paper.—Plain paper was stamped by a single operation into shapes with lacelike effects, which are known as tops or doilies, and are used for placing on the tops of packages of candy, fruit, etc., or under finger bowls. Plain paper might have been used for the same purpose, except that it would not have been so pleasing. Held that, as the improvement of the original material had not interfered with its distinguishing characteristics, it was dutiable as "paper," rather than as "manufactures of paper," under Act 1897, pars. 403, 407. Hamilton v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 796, 93 C. C. A. 186.

Lace paper doilies, covers, tops, etc., used in packing confectionery, etc., which are composed of paper perforated with ornamental designs and printed with the names and addresses of merchants, held not dutiable as paper, under Act 1897, par. 402, but as manufactures of paper, under paragraph 407. U. S. v. Hensel, Bruckmann & Lorbacher (C. C. 1907) 152 Fed. 578.

4. Manufactures of paper.—Books held not manufactures of paper. See paragraph 329.

Calendars composed of lithographic sheets held not dutiable as manufactures of paper not otherwise provided for. See paragraph 325.

Cigarette papers held not dutiable as manufactures of paper. See paragraph 381.

Crepe tissue paper held not dutiable as all other paper not specially provided for. See paragraph 323.

"Hanssegen," or wall mottoes, consisting of pasteboard cards, held not dutiable as manufacture of paper. See paragraph 358.

Paper having an embossed surface design not cut into shapes held not dutiable under the terms of this section. See paragraph 324.

Paper lamp shades, with rings of wire, held not dutiable as manufactures of paper. See paragraph 167.

Pieces of paper which have been cut into shapes and sizes adapting them to be folded so as to constitute envelopes, but which are not shown to have been commercially known as envelopes at and prior to the time of the passage of Act 1897, are not dutiable as "paper envelopes," under paragraph 399, but as manufactures of paper, under paragraph 407. Hunter v. U. S. (1904) 134 Fed. 361, 67 C. C. A. 343, affirming judgment (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 894.

Artificial leaves, if made from paper, held dutiable, under Act 1890, as "manufactures of paper not specially provided for," under paragraph 425, and not as "artificial flowers or parts thereof," under paragraph 443. U. S. v. Zeimer (1901) 107 Fed. 912, 47 C. C. A. 60.

Articles composed of cardboard on which lithographic prints have been pasted, and which is cut into forms adapted to be folded into pockets to hang on walls, some of them having pincushions or calendars attached, held not dutiable as "lithographic prints," under Act 1897, par. 400, but as manufactures of paper, under paragraph 407. Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 155 Fed. 144.

Perforated cardboard, on which are printed sentences or mottoes to be filled in with embroidery, held manufactures of paper, and not printed matter. Weihenmyer v. Arthur (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 17,360.

Cardboard, on which is imprinted in colors an ornamental design or pattern for the purpose of showing the method of embroidering the pattern upon canvas, is a manufacture of paper. Id.

Flat cardboards, of different sizes and shapes, upon which lithographic prints have been mounted, and that have been imported in a "knocked-down" condition, but complete in themselves and ready to be assembled and used as wall pockets, are not to be deemed lithographic prints and dutiable as such. They have a new name and new use and were dutiable under paragraph 407, Act 1897, as manufactures of paper. Knauth v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 422.

Fireworks, called night shells, were held to be made of paper, or that paper is the component material of chief value. There is, however, no evidence of record as to what is the component material of chief value in these night shells. On the record they could not properly be held dutiable under paragraph 420, Act 1909. U. S. v. Schade & Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 188.

A review of the judicial, legislative, and administrative interpretations shows cardboard made of a single layer, if not provided for eo nomine, is within the designation "paper," and that articles made of two or more layers of such cardboard are within the designation "manufactures of paper." These goods were properly held dutiable as such under paragraph 420, Act 1909. U. S. v. Overton & Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 248.

5. Millboards.—Millboards made of refuse paper and bent or curved in form for use in ceiling cars held not dutiable under paragraph 402, Act 1897, but dutiable as manufactures of paper under paragraph 407. The Pantasote Co. v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 47.

6. Paper boxes.—Paper bags elaborately printed with advertising matter relating to the goods intended to be packed and sold within them held not "printed matter" within paragraph 403,

Act 1897, but dutiable as manufactures of paper not specially provided for, under paragraph 407. Kraut v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 134 Fed. 701; Id. (C. C. 1903) 130 Fed. 392, judgment affirmed (1905) 142 Fed. 1037, 71 C. C. A. 684.

7. Paper for printing covers of pamphlets.—The provision in Act 1897, par. 396, for "printing paper * * * suitable for books and newspapers," held not limited to such paper as is suitable for printing both books and newspapers, and that certain paper used for printing covers of booklets, pamphlets, and the like but not suitable for printing newspapers, was properly classifiable for duty under said provision, rather than under paragraph 402 of said act. Hensel, Bruckmann & Lorbacher v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 576.

8. Paper printed and die cut.—The proviso to paragraph 415, Act 1909, would appear to have been enacted in view of the decision in Hamilton v. United States, T. D. 29519, and so designed to impose an increased rate of duty over and above the duty on paper, upon paper both printed and die cut with designs. Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 183.

9. Paper umbrellas.—"Giant umbrellas," being many-colored, fantastically decorated articles, of huge size, covered with paper, in the form of umbrellas, but not used or intended for use as such, held dutiable under paragraph 425 of Act 1890, as manufactures of paper, and not under paragraph 470, as umbrellas. U. S. v. China & Japan Trading Co. (1896) 71 Fed. 864, 18 C. C. A. 335, modifying judgment China & Japan Trading Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 733.

10. Screens.—Screens, which were composed of paper, as their component material of chief value, and of wood and metal, which were used on the floors of dwelling houses, or other places, to intercept heat, light, or moving air, or to conceal portions of rooms or objects, and which were then known in trade and commerce of this country as "paper screens," held not dutiable as screens, under the provision for "all other mats not exclusively of vegetable material, screens, hassocks, and rugs," contained in paragraph 378, of Act 1883, but dutiable under the provision for "paper, manufactures of, or of which paper is a component material, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act," contained in paragraph 388. Magone v. American Trading Co. (1892) 57 Fed. 394. 6 C. C. A. 407.

11. Slate books.—"Slate books," of which paper is a component material, of various sizes, and "parchment slates," composed of paper, in one or more folds, and covered with a white composition, to be written on with lead pencil, held dutiable under Act 1883, as "paper, manufactures of, or of which paper is a component material, not specially enumerated or provided for," and not as "card cases, pocketbooks, shell boxes, and all similar articles, of whatever material composed, and by whatever name known, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act, thirty-five per centum ad valorem." Keary v. Magone (C. C. 1890) 40 Fed. 873.

12. Transfer paper.—So-called duplex lithographic transfer paper, which is used in transferring decalcomania designs to pottery, and is produced by pasting together two sheets of paper, one coated with a gummy substance and the other uncoated, is "paper," rather than "manufactures of paper," under Act 1897, pars. 403, 407. B. F. Drakenfeld & Co. v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 798, 93 C. C. A. 188.

13. Velvet paper.—Paper coated, colored, and embossed to imitate leather, or coated with flock to imitate velvet, and known to the trade at the time of the passage of Act March 3, 1883, as "fancy papers," held dutiable as paper not specially enumerated or provided for, and not as a manufacture of paper. Dejonge v. Magone (1895) 16 Sup. Ct. 119, 121, 159 U. S. 562, 40 L. Ed. 260.

Certain fancy papers known as "velvet paper" and "embossed paper," used in the manufacture of boxes, to cover trunks, and for similar uses, held to be dutiable, under Act 1883, par. 392, as "all other paper not specially enumerated or provided for," and not as "manufactures of paper." Dejonge v. Magone (C. C. 1890) 41 Fed. 432.

14. What constitutes paper.—To constitute a material paper, it is not necessary that the machine used in its manufacture should be known as a paper-making machine, nor that the material should contain glue, alum, and clay; the product determines its classification. Germania Importing Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 55.

SCHEDULE N.—SUNDRIES

333. Beads and spangles of all kinds, including imitation pearl beads, not threaded or strung, or strung loosely on thread for facility in transportation only, 35 per centum ad valorem; curtains, and other articles not embroidered nor appliquéd and not specially provided for in this section, composed wholly or in chief value of beads or spangles made of glass or paste, gelatin, metal, or other material, 50 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Bead fringes and trimmings.
2. Beads on strands to be used as embroidery.
3. Bracelets.
4. Curtains.
5. Galloons of glass beads.
6. Gelatin spangles.
7. Glass beads.
8. Not threaded or strung.
9. Imitation pearl beads.
10. Rosaries.
11. Spangled horsehair braids.
12. Slipper cases.

1. Bead fringes and trimmings.—Bead fringes, which consist of beads strung on a cord or webbing and are used to decorate lamps as trimmings and shades, held not removed by the doctrine of ejusdem generis from the provision for "ornaments, trimmings, and other articles * * * in part of beads," in Act 1897, par. 408. Holcomb & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 180 Fed. 795.

Tunics, motifs, garnitures, and gimps of beads are in chief value of beads and paragraph 333, Act 1913, relative to "beads and spangles and other articles not appliquéd, but composed in chief value of beads," applies more specifically to the goods here than paragraph 358 of that act providing for, amongst other articles, "ornaments" and "trimmings." Loewenthal & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 209.

The proper rate of duty in this case is such an ad valorem rate as upon a computation based upon the value per pound of the artificial silk fabric it is found such fabric would pay under the compound rates provided for in paragraph 405. So, the intention of the law, that the artificial silk fabric shall not escape the duty imposed thereon under paragraph 405, is attained, the beads and other materials entering into the fringe pay a rate of duty not less than the 60 per cent. ad valorem imposed thereon under paragraph 421, and at the same time such beads and other materials are not charged with the extreme penalty it is contended should be charged on them, they being found associated with the artificial silk fabric. U. S. v. Ewing & Clancey (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 333. See, also, Stein & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 519; U. S. v. Vietor (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 297.

2. Beads on strands to be used as embroidery.—The phraseology of paragraph 421, Act 1909, relative to beads and spangles, discloses a substantial change from the language in the former law relating to the same subject-matter, and it appearing the importation is of beads on strands of a permanent kind designed for use as embroidery just as imported, they will be deemed dutiable conformably to the requirements of that paragraph. Littauer v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 314.

3. Bracelets.—These bead bracelets are cheap in material and construction, but they are intended for use by children as articles of personal adornment and are so used. They are not used in the sport or play of children, and so are not toys, but dutiable as beaded articles for adornment. U. S. v. Bernard, Judae & Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 202. See, also, Illfelder v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 109.

4. Curtains.—Curtains whose chief value is rice paste formed into regular shaped particles held dutiable under Act 1897, par. 408, relating to "articles * * * in part of beads," not being excluded by the doctrine of ejusdem generis, though the paragraph also enumerates laces, wearing apparel, ornaments, etc. Morimura Bros. v. U. S. (1909) 169 Fed. 279, 94 C. C. A. 555.

5. Galloons of glass beads.—Galloons of glass beads held not dutiable as bead ornaments. See paragraph 358.

6. Gelatin spangles.—The provision in Act 1897, par. 408, for "articles * * * composed * * * in part of * * * spangles made of * * * gelatin," being more specific than that in paragraph 450, for "manufactures of gelatin." Hat crowns composed chiefly of gelatin spangles held dutiable under the former provision. Louis Metzger & Co. v. U. S. (1906) 146 Fed. 132, 76 C. C. A. 558, affirming judgment (C. C. 1905) 141 Fed. 381.

Gelatin spangles strung on cord, and used in making trimmings or ornaments for wearing apparel, are ejusdem generis with the articles enumerated in Act 1897, par. 408, providing for "ornaments, trimmings and other articles" composed of gelatin spangles, and are dutiable under that provision rather than under paragraph 450, relating to "manufactures of * * * gelatin." Hirsch v. U. S. (1906) 145 Fed. 1022, 74 C. C. A. 681, affirming judgment G. Hirsch's Sons v. U. S. (1905) 141 Fed. 380.

7. Glass beads.—Glass beads without holes for stringing held not dutiable as glass beads, loose or unstrung. See paragraph 95.

Hollow glass spheres used on Christmas trees held not dutiable as beads. See paragraph 342.

Pierced opal balls held not dutiable as beads. See paragraph 357.

Strung beads of glass and metal held not dutiable as manufactures of glass. See paragraph 167.

Glass beads, bars, and ornaments, drilled, and unfit for use in the manufacture of jewelry, held dutiable as beads under paragraph 421, Act 1909. U. S. v. American Bead Co. (1913) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 509.

8. Not threaded or strung.—Beads are not to be included within the provision in Act 1897, par. 408, for beads "not threaded or strung," because they are strung only temporarily. Henry E. Frankenberg Co. v. U. S. (1906) 146 Fed. 63, 76 C. C. A. 514, affirming judgment (C. C. 1905) 144 Fed. 704, and judgment affirmed (1907) 27 S. Ct. 628, 206 U. S. 324, 51 L. Ed. 1034.

The provision in paragraph 408, Act 1897, for "beads of all kinds not threaded or strung," was intended to exclude only beads permanently threaded or strung, as in the manufacture of fabrics and other articles, and is held to include metal beads intended for the manufacture of purses, threaded or strung temporarily for the purposes of transportation and sale only, on cheap, weak cotton threads, and arranged in bunches. U. S. v. Buettner (1904) 133 Fed. 163, 66 C. C. A. 289.

9. Imitation pearl beads.—Pierced imitation pearls held dutiable under Act 1897, par. 408, relating to "beads of all kinds, not threaded or strung," rather than under paragraph 435, as imitations of precious stones. U. S. v. Weinberg (C. C. 1905) 139 Fed. 1006.

The provision in Act 1909 for imitation pearl beads is more specific than that for imitation pearls, and the several provisions taken together indicate a legislative purpose to include within paragraph 449 of that act only such imitation pearls for use in the manufacture of jewelry as are not also imitation pearl beads. Cohn & Rosenberger v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 339.

The testimony here is convincing that in trade and commerce, as well as in common speech, the articles of the importation are, while often called imitation pearls, equally well known as imitation pearl beads. They come accordingly within the precise terms of paragraph 421, Act 1909. Lorsch & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 93.

10. Rosaries.—Rosaries are not an enumerated article in the tariff act, and under section 2499 they are liable to the duty of 50 per cent. ad valorem imposed by this section on "beads and bead ornaments." Benziger v. Robertson (1887) 7 Sup. Ct. 1169, 1171, 122 U. S. 211, 30 L. Ed. 1149.

In Act 1897, par. 408, rosaries held not subject to duty as "articles * * * in part of beads," because not ejusdem generis with the other goods (ornaments, trimmings, etc.) there enumerated. Benziger Bros. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 280, judgment affirmed U. S. v. Benziger Bros. (1910) 178 Fed. 1006, 101 C. C. A. 664.

11. Spangled horsehair braids.—Spangled horsehair braids held not assessable as "manufactures of wool ornaments with beads or spangles of whatever material composed," under paragraph 371, Act 1897, but as articles "composed wholly or in part of beads or spangles, * * * but not composed in part of wool," under paragraph 408. Veit Son & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 121 Fed. 205.

12. Slipper cases.—Slipper cases embroidered with beads held not dutiable as bead ornaments. See paragraph 358.

334. Ramie hat braids, 40 per centum ad valorem; manufactures of ramie hat braids, 50 per centum ad valorem.

Ramie braids.—Held that, as to braids of ramie, the provision in paragraph 339, Act 1897, for "braids * * * of * * * vegetable fiber," is more specific than that in paragraph 347, for "all manufactures of * * * ramie" and other vegetable fibers; the latter provision being intended to embrace any manufactures of vegetable fiber that have been omitted elsewhere in the tariff. U. S. v. Rosenberg (1906) 145 Fed. 343, 76 C. C. A. 217.

335. Braids, plaits, laces, and willow sheets or squares, composed wholly or in chief value of straw, chip, grass, palm leaf, willow, osier, rattan, real horsehair, cuba bark, or manila hemp, suitable for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets, or hoods, not bleached, dyed, colored, or stained, 15 per centum ad valorem; if bleached, dyed, colored, or stained, 20 per centum ad valorem; hats, bonnets, and hoods composed wholly or in chief value of straw, chip, grass, palm leaf, willow, osier, rattan, cuba bark, or manila hemp, whether wholly or partly manufactured, but not blocked or trimmed, 25 per centum ad valorem; if blocked or trimmed, and in chief value of such materials, 40 per centum ad valorem. But the terms

"grass" and "straw" shall be understood to mean these substances in their natural form and structure, and not the separated fiber thereof.

Notes of Decisions

1. Braids or plaits of straw.
2. Chinas and marcelines.
3. Feather-stitched braids.
4. Hats composed of horsehair.
5. Hats made of palmetto leaf.
6. Hats trimmed.
7. Horsehair braids.
8. Not otherwise provided for.
9. Plateaux or flats.
10. Straw laces.
11. Untrimmed hats of imitation horsehair.
12. Wool knit goods.

1. Braids or plaits of straw.—Gold straw braids and silver straw braids held not dutiable under the terms of this paragraph. See paragraph 167.

A small amount of cotton thread in straw braids will not remove such articles from the provision in Act 1897, par. 409, for braids composed "wholly" of straw, where the thread is only used for temporarily tying the ends of the braids to prevent them from unraveling. U. S. v. Samuel Schiff & Co. (1906) 145 Fed. 1023, 74 C. C. A. 682, affirming judgment Samuel Schiff & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 63.

Merchandise, consisting of wide braids or plaits of straw, fastened together so as to form rectangular strips measuring about 18 by 36 inches, held not dutiable as hats partly manufactured, under Act 1897, par. 409, but as straw braids or plaits, "suitable for making or ornamenting hats," etc., under the same paragraph. U. S. v. Samuel Schiff & Co. (1906) 145 Fed. 1023, 74 C. C. A. 682.

Braids composed in chief value, but not wholly of straw, were "braids * * * composed of straw," within Act 1890. U. S. v. Rheims (C. C. 1894) 154 Fed. 865, judgment affirmed (1894) 89 Fed. 1020, 33 C. C. A. 687.

2. Chinas and marcelines.—The clause of Act 1883, providing for braids, plaits, flats, laces, trimmings, tissues, willow sheets and squares, used for making or ornamenting hats, etc., includes goods known, respectively, as "chinas" and "marcelines," and principally used for lining hats, if such goods are trimmings, and are chiefly used for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets, and hoods. Meyer v. Cadwalader (C. C. 1891) 49 Fed. 19.

3. Feather-stitched braids.—So-called "feather-stitched braids," being an article from one quarter to one third of an inch in breadth, woven on a loom, and ornamented with certain patterns, "herring bone" and others, held dutiable as cotton braids, under Schedule I, par. 354, of Act 1890, and not as cotton trimmings, under Schedule J, par. 373, of said act. In re Dieckerhoff (C. C. 1893) 54 Fed. 161.

The interpretation acquiesced in hitherto by the Department of Justice that "feather-stitched braids" are dutiable as braids under paragraph 354, Act 1890, should also be applied to the term "braids" as used in paragraph 324 of Act March 3, 1883. (1893) 20 Op. Atty. Gen. 621.

4. Hats composed of horsehair.—By virtue of the similitude clause horsehair hats are dutiable at the rate provided for "hats of straw * * * not trimmed," by Act 1897, par. 409. Wanamaker v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 169 Fed. 664, decree reversed U. S. v. Wanamaker (1910) 175 Fed. 900, 99 C. C. A. 390.

Trimmed and untrimmed hats, and braids, composed of horsehair, are respectively dutiable by similitude as straw hats, trimmed and untrimmed, and straw braids, suitable for hats, under Act 1897, par. 409. Rheims Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 169 Fed. 662, judgment affirmed U. S. v. Rheims Co. (1909) 175 Fed. 778, 99 C. C. A. 350.

5. Hats made of palmetto leaf.—Hats made of palmetto leaf are not hats made of straw, chip, or grass, within Act May 22, 1824, c. 136. U. S. v. Goodwin (C. C. 1825) Fed. Cas. No. 15,229.

6. Hats trimmed.—Straw hats trimmed with silk held not dutiable as trimmed straw hats. See paragraph 317.

Paragraph 335, Act 1913, in so far as it relates to straw hats, clearly appears to have been framed to make of the trimmed hat an entity for determining whether it, when trimmed, is still composed in chief value of the materials therein named. The goods were dutiable as assessed under that paragraph. Aitken, Son & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 232.

On some of these hats the silk trimming is worth more, on others less, than the straw body to which it is attached. Paragraph 422, Act 1909, imposes a certain rate of duty on hats composed wholly or in chief value of straw, whether wholly or partly manufactured, but not trimmed, and another and higher rate of duty on the same hat if trimmed. The hats are here the subject of the duty imposed, and not the trimming on the hats. U. S. v. Lord & Taylor (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 322.

7. Horsehair braids. — Horsehair braids held dutiable under Act 1897, par. 390, as "silk braids" by similitude. John A. Paterson & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 159 Fed. 320, judgment reversed (1908) 166 Fed. 733, 92 C. C. A. 524.

8. Not otherwise provided for.—The words "not specially enumerated or provided for in this act," used in Act 1883, in the clauses fixing a duty upon

"bonnets, hats, and hoods for men, women, children, composed of chip grass," etc., apply to articles of the description mentioned, and not to the material out of which such articles are made. (1884) 17 Op. Atty. Gen. 672.

9. Plateaux or flats.—"Plateaux," which are braids or plaits of straw sewed or woven together into an oval form, and are used for making women's hats, but have to be manipulated into the form desired, and pressed or wired so as to retain that form, and are then trimmed, held properly classified, not under Act 1890, par. 460, § 1, "as manufactures of * * * straw, * * * not specially provided for in this act," but under paragraph 518, § 2, exempting from duty "braids, plaits, laces, and similar manufactures composed of straw * * * suitable for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets, and hoods." U. S. v. Bacharach (1899) 92 Fed. 990, 35 C. C. A. 139.

"Plateaux" or "flats," manufactured from plaits of straw, held free of duty, under paragraph 518, Act 1890, as "plaits, and similar manufactures, composed of straw, suitable for making or ornamenting hats," and not dutiable as "manufactures of straw not specially provided for," under paragraph 460 of the same act. Worthington v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 86 Fed. 118.

The importation was of articles circular in form, slightly convex, but nearly flat in shape, with the appearance of plain round mats of braided straw, but without a crown and untrimmed. Held, since the evidence shows the material to be so constructed as to permit of being blocked into hats, without adding any new material, and that it is so blocked, being practically useless for any other purpose, it was dutiable under paragraph 409, Act 1897, as hats composed of straw partly manufactured and untrimmed. It was so dutiable, though more than one piece of goods was sometimes employed in the making of one hat. Schiff v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 89.

10. Straw laces.—Straw laces sewn with cotton thread are not within the provision in Act 1897, par. 409, for laces "composed wholly" of straw. Schmitz v. U. S. (1906) 146 Fed. 127, 76 C. C. A. 553, affirming judgment Kurtz, Stuboeck & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 136 Fed. 268.

Twisted straw, used for making straw laces, not known in commerce at the time of the passage of the tariff act, held not dutiable as straw manufactures, but as articles not otherwise specially provided for. Rheimer v. Maxwell (C. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 11,738.

11. Untrimmed hats of imitation horsehair.—Untrimmed hats of imitation horsehair, which is a material of vegetable origin, resemble untrimmed hats of straw more than silk wearing apparel, and are accordingly dutiable at the rate provided for the former, under Act 1897, par. 409. R. L. Cochran & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. A. 1910) 180 Fed. 955.

12. Wool knit goods.—Wool knit goods held dutiable as bonnets, hats, etc., composed of chip grass, etc., and "other material." See paragraph 354.

336. Brooms, made of broom corn, straw, wooden fibre, or twigs, 15 per centum ad valorem; brushes and feather dusters of all kinds, and hair pencils in quills or otherwise, 35 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Feather dusters.—Sticks with ends cut so as to resemble a feather duster held not dutiable as brushes. See paragraph 176.

Small feather dusters fall within the terms of paragraph 423, Act 1909, as "feather dusters of all kinds"; and as it does not appear they are adapted to use by children any more than by grown people on gala days, and further, there being no proof of a commercial designation of toys, the importers must be taken to have failed in showing the collector's classification was erroneous. U. S. v. Scheuer & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 37. See, also, Illfelder v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 109.

Powder puffs.—In Act 1897, par. 410, the provision for "brushes" does not include so-called powder puffs, which are composed of flat circular pieces of woolen cloth with a fuzzy surface and are useful in applying toilet powder, and which, though resembling brushes in use, do not resemble them in construction. U. S. v. George Borgfeldt & Co. (C. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 480.

Whisk brooms.—Evidence held to show that articles invoiced as "whisks" were whisk brooms. U. S. v. Swedish Produce Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 331.

337. Bristles, sorted, bunched, or prepared, 7 cents per pound.

Notes of Decisions

Bristles.—In Act 1897, par. 411, relating to "bristles sorted, bunched, or prepared," and in paragraph 509, relating to "bristles, crude, not sorted, bunched, or prepared," the distinction made is between absolute crudeness and advancement one or more steps in preparation for the arts; and bristles that have been tied in separate bundles, with their butt ends together, in preparation for brushmakers, are subject to duty under the former provision. The imported bristles to which this appeal relates had been tied up in small bunches, and had been found, both by the board of general appraisers and the circuit court, to have been "bunched or prepared" in accordance with paragraph 411, Act 1897, and it appeared that the word "bunched" had no special commercial use in this connection, there is no previous legislation which gave any peculiar force to it, and it is plain that the question involved is purely one of fact, depending largely, if not entirely, on personal inspection. Held, that the rule as to the effect to be given to the concurrent decisions of two tribunals applied, and that the classification made by the Circuit Court should be affirmed. J. C. Pushee & Sons v. U. S. (1908) 158 Fed. 968, 86 C. C. A. 172, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 155 Fed. 265.

Bristles, being separately classified, are not included in the general words "the hair of an animal." Von Stade v. Arthur (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 16,-998.

338. Button forms of lastings, mohair or silk cloth, or other manufactures of cloth, woven or made in patterns of such size, shape, or form as to be fit for buttons exclusively, and not exceeding eight inches in any one dimension, 10 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Button forms.—Strips of cotton not fit for buttons exclusively held not dutiable as button forms. See paragraph 266.

339. Buttons of vegetable ivory in sizes thirty-six lines and larger, 35 per centum ad valorem; below thirty-six lines, 45 per centum ad valorem; buttons of shell and pearl in sizes twenty-six lines and larger, 25 per centum ad valorem; below twenty-six lines, 45 per centum ad valorem; agate buttons and shoe buttons, 15 per centum ad valorem; parts of buttons and button molds or blanks, finished or unfinished, and all collar and cuff buttons and studs composed wholly of bone, mother-of-pearl, ivory, or agate, all the foregoing and buttons not specially provided for in this section, 40 per centum ad valorem.

Button shanks.—The provision in Act 1897, par. 414, for "button molds," includes articles commercially known as button shanks, consisting of pairs of metal disks so constructed that when a piece of cloth is placed on top of one of the disks, and they are subjected to pressure, a cloth-covered button is produced. Hormann, Schutte & Co. v. U. S. (1907) 153 Fed. 868, 83 C. C. A. 50.

Buttons in general.—There was no evidence tending to show that the merchandise, buttons of glass and fish scales, was commercially known as buttons of glass, and the evidence did not establish the fact that they were buttons composed of glass in chief value. The present case is no exception to the general rule that merchandise made, composed, or manufactured of a specified article is classified with reference to the component material of chief value, and there is here nothing to show that glass is the predominant material. Blumenthal & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 327.

There has been a legislative recognition that for tariff purposes there is a difference between paste and glass. The buttons here are manufactures of paste, but they are not classifiable as manufactures in view of the more specific and applicable language appearing in paragraph 427, Tariff Act 1909, and they were properly dutiable under that paragraph. U. S. v. Veith (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 304.

Crochet yokes.—So-called "crochet yokes," made by knitting or crocheting, and used in the yoke of women's vests, held not trimmings or lace within the meaning of Act 1897, par. 339. Julius Loewenthal & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 774.

Metal button molds.—Act 1897, par. 414, provides that "buttons * * * and button molds * * * shall pay duty at the following rates," and the schedule of rates then prescribed mentions only "buttons." Held, that this provision for "buttons" should be construed as though reading "buttons and button molds," and that metal button molds should pay the rate assigned to metal buttons. Hormann, Schutte & Co. v. U. S. (1907) 153 Fed. 868, 83 C. C. A. 50, reversing order (C. C. 1906) 144 Fed. 707.

Parts of buttons.—In construing Act 1897, par. 414, which enumerates "buttons or parts of buttons" as being subject to "the following rates," and provides for "buttons" certain rates of duty and "in addition thereto, on all the foregoing articles in this paragraph," a further rate of duty. Held, that parts of buttons are not subject to the rules provided for "buttons," that they are not liable to the additional rate on "all the foregoing articles," and that, no definite rate being attached to them, they are dutiable as manufactures of the component material of chief value. Hormann, Schutte & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 144 Fed. 707, order reversed (1907) 153 Fed. 868, 83 C. C. A. 50.

Pearl buttons.—Mother of pearl buttons held not dutiable as pearl buttons. See paragraph 369.

Articles composed of mother of pearl, which are known in trade and commerce by the specific name of "pearl collar buttons," and sold at a stipulated price per line button measure, held not dutiable as manufactures of mother of pearl, under paragraph 462 of Act 1890, but dutiable as pearl buttons under paragraph 429. In re Rosenthal (C. C. 1893) 56 Fed. 1015.

Rhinestone buttons.—So-called rhinestone buttons, composed of paste, held not embraced within the provision in Act 1897, par. 414, for buttons of "glass," because, though paste is a kind of glass, it is distinguished from glass elsewhere in the tariff under its own peculiar name. B. Blumenthal & Co. v. U. S. (1905) 144 Fed. 384. 75 C. C. A. 322, affirming judgment (C. C. 1904) 135 Fed. 254.

340. Cork bark, cut into squares, cubes, or quarters, 4 cents per pound; manufactured cork stoppers, over three-fourths of an inch in diameter, measured at the larger end, and manufactured cork disks, wafers, or washers, over three-sixteenths of an inch in thickness, 12 cents per pound; manufactured cork stoppers, three-fourths of an inch or less in diameter, measured at the larger end, and manufactured cork disks, wafers, or washers, three-sixteenths of an inch or less in thickness, 15 cents per pound; cork, artificial, or cork substitutes manufactured from cork waste, or granulated corks, and not otherwise provided for in this section, 3 cents per pound; cork insulation, wholly or in chief value of granulated cork, in slabs, boards, planks, or molded forms, ¼ cent per pound; cork paper, 35 per centum ad valorem; manufactures wholly or in chief value of cork or of cork bark, or of artificial cork or bark substitutes, granulated or ground cork, not specially provided for in this section, 30 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Cork floats.—Small, oval-shaped pieces of cork, tapering at one or both ends and with holes lengthwise through them, would seem on examination not to be, and they appear by the uncontradicted testimony not to be, either fishing floats or cork floats for use in fishing. They are not commercially known as fishing tackle or parts thereof, nor are they in fact, as it appears, used as such. They are manufactures of cork, and dutiable as such under paragraph 429, Act 1909. Fenton v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 529.

Manufactures of cork.—Small pieces of cork for use in making linoleum held not dutiable as manufacture of cork. See paragraph 384.

341. Dice, dominoes, draughts, chessmen, chess balls, and billiard, pool, bagatelle balls, and poker chips, of ivory, bone, or other materials, 50 per centum ad valorem.

342. Dolls, and parts of dolls, doll heads, toy marbles of whatever materials composed, and all other toys, and parts of toys, not composed of china, porcelain, parian, bisque, earthen or stone ware, and not specially provided for in this section, 35 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Dolls—Bath babies and position babies.
2. Toys—In general.
3. —— Artificial shamrocks.
4. —— Bracelets.
5. —— Brownie albums or decalcomanie books.
6. —— Celluloid toys.
7. —— Cigar fans.
8. —— Decorated plates and mugs.
9. —— Kindergarten embroidery sets.
10. —— Magic lanterns and slides therefor.
11. —— Mirror puzzles.
12. —— Mouth organs, harmonicas, or metallophones.
13. —— Music boxes.
14. —— Paper articles.
15. —— Papier-maché rabbits.
16. —— Parasols.
17. —— Parts of toys.
18. —— Ping-pong balls.
19. —— Silk flags.
20. —— Small knives.

21. —— Sparklers.
22. —— Stuffed skins of chicks and ducklings.
23. —— Teddy bears.
24. —— Tinsel articles for Christmas tree.

1. Dolls—Bath babies and position babies.—Bath babies and position babies held "dolls," within Act 1897, par. 418, and dutiable as such, rather than as china toys, under Schedule B, par. 95. U. S. v. Butler Bros. (C. C. 1910) 180 Fed. 1005.

2. Toys—In general.—Articles to be worn by children held not dutiable as toys. See paragraph 356.

Artificial shamrocks held not dutiable as toys. See paragraph 347.

Imitation roses of celluloid held not dutiable as toys. See paragraph 347.

India rubber bags held not dutiable as toys. See paragraph 368.

Metal figures of animals held not dutiable as toys. See paragraph 167.

Toys of china and porcelain ware. See paragraph 80.

The word "toys," in Act 1883, is to be taken in its commercial meaning at that date (there being nothing in the act to show a contrary intent), if shown to have any trade meaning different from the popular use. Cadwalader v. Zeh (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 288, 290, 151 U. S. 171, 38 L. Ed. 115, affirming Zeh v. Cadwalader (C. C. 1889) 42 Fed. 525.

Articles do not become dutiable as toys because of the mere fact that they are imported and generally sold by toy dealers, nor because they may be used chiefly by children. Hamburger & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 180 Fed. 632.

An article is not necessarily a toy simply because children can or do play with it. In order to fall within that designation its intended and principal use must be for the amusement of children; or, if capable of other uses, it must nevertheless be commercially known as a "toy." Thanhauser v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 159 Fed. 228.

To warrant a finding that imports, otherwise not toys, are commercially known as such, there must be proof of a usage, definite, uniform, and general, and not partial, local, or personal; and testimony of employés of an importing retail house, whose knowledge is confined to what has been known or done by such house, is not enough. Woolworth v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 113 Fed. 1007.

It cannot be accepted that an article, confessedly a toy within the ordinary or commercial meaning of that term, must always be assessed under a paragraph other than the toy paragraph, because that paragraph describes the merchandise by a name that for some purposes might be applicable. Pacific Mail Steamship Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 102. See, also, R. F. Downing v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 141 Fed. 490; Borgfeldt v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 124 Fed. 473; U. S. v. Borgfeldt (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 370.

3. —— Artificial shamrocks.—Toys are playthings to amuse children, used throughout the year, or in different seasons; and artificial shamrocks, used by Irish of all ages as a national emblem and not commercially known as "toys," are not toys, though usually obtainable in toy shops, not everything in which is a toy. U. S. v. Cattus (1909) 167 Fed. 532, 93 C. C. A. 64.

4. —— Bracelets.—Beaded bracelets held not dutiable as toys. See paragraph 333.

5. —— Brownie albums or decalcomanie books.—"Brownie albums," or decalcomanie books, containing lithographic prints so prepared that they may be transferred to articles by what is known as the "decalcomanie process," were dutiable, under paragraph 436, Act 1890, as toys not otherwise provided for, and not, under paragraph 308, Act 1894, as lithographic prints. U. S. v. Borgfeldt (1898) 86 Fed. 899, 30 C. C. A. 454.

6. —— Celluloid toys.—Toys made of celluloid, a compound of pyroxylin, are less specifically designated in paragraph 17, Act 1897, for "all compounds of pyroxylin, * * * and articles of which * * * any compound of pyroxylin is the component material of chief value," than in that in paragraph 418, for "toys * * * not specially provided for." U. S. v. Schwarz (C. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 302, decree affirmed Thomas v. Same (1906) 140 Fed. 989, 71 C. C. A. 401, which is affirmed U. S. v. Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne (1906) 150 Fed. 610.

7. —— Cigar fans.—The provision in Act 1897, par. 427, for "fans of all kinds," was, notwithstanding its broad language, not intended to include everything which might be called a fan, and to an exceedingly limited extent used as a fan; and so-called cigar fans and firecracker fans, consisting of small folding fans closing into cases representing cigars, etc., are not dutiable under said provision, but under paragraph 418, as "toys." Morimura Bros. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 887.

8. —— Decorated plates and mugs.—Decorated plates and mugs held not toys. See paragraph 79.

9. —— Kindergarten embroidery sets.—These embroidery sets that are used in kindergarten work are essentially toys, useful only for the amusement of children, whether with or without accompanying instruction. U. S. v. Meier & Frank Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 208.

10. —— Magic lanterns and slides therefor.—Certain slightly made magic lanterns, not sufficiently substantial to be used by mature persons, but rather by children as toys, held dutiable as "toys," under paragraph 321, Act 1894, and not as "optical instruments," under paragraph 98. Borgfeldt v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 124 Fed. 457.

Slides designed for use in magic lanterns, for the amusement of children, held dutiable as toys, under Act 1890, par. 436. In re Borgefeldt (C. C. 1894) 65 Fed. 791.

Glass slides for use with toy magic lanterns held not dutiable under paragraph 107, Act 1909, as glass slides for magic lanterns, but dutiable under paragraph 431, as parts of toys. U. S. v. Borgfeldt (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 370.

11. —— Mirror puzzles.—The importation, invoiced as mirror puzzles, was classified by the collector as toys under paragraph 342, Act 1913. A sample of the goods was the only evidence introduced by protestants before the board. Held insufficient to warrant reversal of the collector's decision. U. S. v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 376.

12. —— Mouth organs, harmonicas, or metallophones.—Certain metallophones and mouth organs or harmonicas, having at least one full octave, and capable of playing a musical air, but not so finished as to musical qualities that they would be used by musicians, being fitted rather for the amusement of children, held dutiable as "toys," under paragraph 418, Act 1897, and not as "musical instruments," under paragraph 453. Borgfeldt v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 124 Fed. 473.

Harmonicas made of wood and metal, and harmonica cases of celluloid, imported on the same vessel, but in different boxes and under different invoices, held to have been dutiable as "toys," under paragraph 436, Act 1890, and not under paragraphs 215 and 221, respectively, according to the materials of which they were composed. Blumenthal v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 72 Fed. 48.

13. —— Music boxes.—Small, cheap music boxes, inferior in quality, and easily operated by a child, held dutiable as toys, under Act 1890, par. 436. Jacot v. U. S. (1895) 65 Fed. 415, 12 C. C. A. 666.

14. —— Paper articles.—Cheap, nondurable paper articles, made for the amusement of children, to resemble other and really useful articles, are toys, though they might nominally fall within the provisions of some paragraph other than the toy paragraph of the statute. Davies, Turner & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 110. See, also, U. S. v. Borgfeldt (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 370.

15. —— Papier-maché rabbits.—Hollow papier-maché rabbits for holding candy, not shown to be universally known in commerce as "toys," but chiefly used for the amusement of children, held dutiable as toys, and not as manufactures of papier-maché. U. S. v. Schwartz (C. C. 1896) 76 Fed. 452, judgment affirmed (1897) 89 Fed. 1020, 32 C. C. A. 495.

16. —— Parasols.—Parasols held not dutiable as toys. See paragraph 383.

In this case the board found that the evidence failed to establish that the importation of parasols are commercially known as toys; the burden was on the importer to show this, or that they were toys in fact, and, failing in it, the collector's classification should be affirmed. Pacific Mail Steamship Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 102.

17. —— Parts of toys.—The merchandise consists of cotton cloths in patterns ready to be cut and sewed to make single garments, these to be worn by young children. The decision is limited to the articles, samples of which were produced. These cotton goods can hardly have any utility beyond that of a mere plaything, and they are sufficiently advanced in manufacture to be treated as parts of toys. U. S. v. Wyman & Co. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 483.

That a specific designation in one paragraph ordinarily controls as against a general description in another paragraph, is true; but where such a phrase as "parts of toys" appears for the first time in a paragraph of a tariff act, effect will be given to what seems to have been a plain intention of the congress to embody in the new paragraph, for dutiable purposes, all toys and parts of toys, except certain described kinds there enumerated. U. S. v. Borgfeldt (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 370.

18. —— Ping-pong balls.—Ping-pong balls held not toys. See paragraph 25.

19. —— Silk flags.—The provision for "toys" in Act 1897, par. 418, held not to include small silk flags mounted on slender wooden staffs about 4½ inches long. Tuska v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 162 Fed. 814.

20. —— Small knives.—Whether an article is a toy depends on whether it is a plaything; and small knives, with odd-shaped handles, which could not be effectively used for most of the ordinary purposes of a pocketknife, not in fact used as playthings, are less properly classed as "toys," under Act 1897, par. 418, than as "penknives," under par. 153. A. Kastor & Bros. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 167 Fed. 993.

21. —— Sparklers. — Sparklers or sparklets held not dutiable as toys. See paragraph 167.

22. —— Stuffed skins of chicks and ducklings.—Stuffed chicks and ducklings held not dutiable as toys. See paragraph 347.

In regard to stuffed skins of domestic chicks and ducklings, used by confectioners and dealers in Easter goods and novelties, held, that they are not "toys" within Act 1897, par. 418, but "birds, stuffed," under paragraph 493, § 2, Free List. Morimura Bros. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 141 Fed. 383.

23. —— Teddy bears.—"Teddy bears" have the shape of dolls with heads representing bears. The testimony shows they are sold to and handled by toy dealers almost exclusively; they are not reasonably fit for any use except to amuse children; they are toys and are dutiable as such under paragraph 431, Act 1909. Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 386. See, also, Illfelder v. Same (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 109.

24. —— Tinsel articles for Christmas tree.—The provision for "toys" in Act 1897, par. 418, held not to include fragile, flimsy articles of tinsel, in the shape of rings, stars, etc., which, while they may amuse or entertain children when hung on a Christmas tree, are not suitable to be played with, and, besides being used as Christmas tree ornaments, are employed in shop decorations. Thanhauser v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 159 Fed. 228.

Hollow glass spheres, three-fourths of an inch in diameter (and too large to be described as beads), covered with tinsel and strung for hanging on Christmas trees, etc., held dutiable as toys under paragraph 321, Act 1894, and not under paragraph 99, as "glass beads" strung. Shevill v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 87 Fed. 192.

Metal thread, known as "tinsel," "tinsel thread," and "lametta," but never as a toy, held not dutiable as a toy, under Act 1890, merely because it was used almost exclusively for decorating Christmas trees. Wanamaker v. Cooper (C. C. 1895) 69 Fed. 465.

343. Emery grains and emery, manufactured, ground, pulverized, or refined, 1 cent per pound; emery wheels, emery files, emery paper, and manufactures of which emery or corundum is the component material of chief value, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Ground corundum ore.—Corundum and emery being used for the same purposes, and emery being merely an impure grade of corundum, ground corundum ore is similar to emery and dutiable by similitude under Act 1897, par. 419, relating to "emery, * * * ground," etc. F. W. Myers & Co. v. U. S. (1908) 163 Fed. 53, 89 C. C. A. 284, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 155 Fed. 502; F. W. Myers & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 178 Fed. 462; Myers v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 506. See, also, Hartranft v. Wiegman (1887) 7 Sup. Ct. 1240, 121 U. S. 609, 30 L. Ed. 1012.

344. Firecrackers of all kinds, 6 cents per pound; bombs, rockets, Roman candles, and fireworks of all descriptions, not specially provided for in this section, 10 cents per pound; the weight on all the foregoing to include all coverings, wrappings, and packing material.

345. Matches, friction or lucifer, of all descriptions, per gross of one hundred and forty-four boxes, containing not more than one hundred matches per box, 3 cents per gross; when imported otherwise than in boxes containing not more than one hundred matches each, ⅜ of 1 cent per one thousand matches; wax matches, fusees, wind matches, and all matches in books or folders or having a stained, dyed, or colored stick or stem, and tapers consisting of a wick coated with an inflammable substance, and night lights, 25 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That in accordance with section ten of "An Act to provide for a tax upon white phosphorus matches, and for other purposes," approved April ninth, nineteen hundred and twelve, white phosphorus matches manufactured wholly or in part in any foreign country shall not be entitled to enter at any of the ports of the United States, and the importation thereof is hereby prohibited: Provided further, That nothing in this Act contained shall be held to repeal or modify said Act to provide for a tax upon white phosphorus matches, and for other purposes, approved April ninth, nineteen hundred and twelve.

Notes of Decisions

Fancy matches.—The matches of the importation called "wind flamers" come within the definition of "fancy" matches as fixed by this court. The friction safety matches of the importation are not "fancy" matches. U. S. v. Masson (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 77.

"Fancy" is the antonym of "plain," "common," "ordinary," "staple," and to say that a thing is "fancy" implies that it has a value or has characteristics not found in the article of simpler type. United Cigar Stores v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 66.

Night lights.—In construction and in use "night lights" partake more of the characteristic features of oil lamps than of tapers, and neither in material nor in the use to which they are commonly applied are they similar to tapers. They are dutiable as unenumerated manufactured articles under paragraph 480, Act 1909. U. S. v. Godillot & Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 128.

Safety matches.—No commercial designation is shown. The goods have no quality which is not found in the ordinary safety match of trade, and they have the same common use. The duty imposed on fancy matches was intended to fall on matches that served some purpose not answered by the ordinary article. The importation is dutiable at three-fourths of 1 cent per thousand under paragraph 436, Tariff Act 1909. United Cigar Stores v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 66.

346. Percussion caps, cartridges, and cartridge shells empty, 15 per centum ad valorem; blasting caps, $1 per thousand; mining, blasting, or safety fuses of all kinds, 15 per centum ad valorem.

347. Feathers and downs, on the skin or otherwise, crude or not dressed, colored, or otherwise advanced or manufactured in any manner, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per centum ad valorem; when dressed, colored, or otherwise advanced or manufactured in any manner, and not suitable for use as millinery ornaments, including quilts of down and manufactures of down, 40 per centum ad valorem; artificial or ornamental feathers suitable for use as millinery ornaments, artificial and ornamental fruits, grains, leaves, flowers, and stems or parts thereof, of whatever material composed, not specially provided for in this section, 60 per centum ad valorem; boas, boutonnieres, wreaths, and all articles not specially provided for in this section, composed wholly or in chief value of any of the feathers, flowers, leaves, or other material herein mentioned, 60 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That the importation of aigrettes, egret plumes or so-called osprey plumes, and the feathers, quills, heads, wings, tails, skins, or parts of skins, of wild birds, either raw or manufactured, and not for scientific or educational purposes, is hereby prohibited; but this provision shall not apply to the feathers or plumes of ostriches, or to the feathers or plumes of domestic fowls of any kind.

Notes of Decisions

1. Artificial flowers in general.
2. Artificial leaves.
3. Artificial fruits.
4. Artificial shamrocks.
5. Bird of paradise feathers.
6. Bleached or dyed grasses.
7. Dyed flowers.
8. Downs on the skin, dressed.
9. Eagle and condor quills.
10. Feather boas.
11. Feathers in general.
12. Goose skins.
13. Grass piquets.
14. Imitation roses.
15. Ornamental leaves and grasses.
16. Ostrich feathers.
17. Palm leaves.
18. Parts of artificial flowers.
19. Peacock feathers.
20. Quills and plumage.
21. Quilts.
22. "Whatever material composed."

1. Artificial flowers in general.—Certain grasses held not dutiable as artificial grains, leaves or flowers. See paragraph 368.

Artificial flowers, being specifically enumerated in Act 1864, are dutiable thereunder, and not under Act 1872, § 2, as a manufacture of which cotton is the component part of chief value. Arthur v. Rheims (1877) 96 U. S. 143, 24 L. Ed. 813.

The tariff act contains no specific duty upon artificial flowers as such; but section 2499 provides that "there shall be levied and collected on each and every nonenumerated article which bears similarity either in material, quality, texture, or the use to which it may be applied, to any article enumerated, * * * the same rate of duty which is levied and charged on the enumerated article which it most resembles," etc. A specific duty is imposed on "artificial flowers and parts thereof, of whatever material, for millinery use, and not specially enumerated." Held, that artificial flowers, stuck into a little stand or box, and salable as ornaments, and not good enough for millinery uses, but resembling flowers so used more than any other article, are dutiable under the last clause quoted. Walker v. Seeberger (D. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 724, judgment reversed (1893) 13 S. Ct. 981, 149 U. S. 541, 37 L. Ed. 839.

2. Artificial leaves.—Artificial leaves made from paper held not dutiable as artificial flowers. See paragraph 332.

Artificial leaves of cotton held not dutiable as artificial flowers. See paragraph 266.

Wreaths made of cotton and wire held not dutiable as leaves, flowers, etc. See paragraph 167.

Artificial leaves, made to resemble leaves of oak, ivy, currant, etc., and manufactured of colored cotton cloth, metal, and wax, cotton being the component material of chief value, cannot be classified as "artificial flowers or parts thereof," under Act 1890, par. 443, and Act 1883, par. 429, but must be assessed under Act 1890, pars. 355, 425, and Act 1883, par. 388, Schedule M, and par. 324, Schedule I, as manufactures of cotton and paper. In re Zeimer (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 740.

3. Artificial fruits.—Artificial fruits used in trimming hats held dutiable as trimmings. See paragraph 358.

4. Artificial shamrocks.—Artificial shamrocks held not "toys," within Act 1897, par. 418, but dutiable as "artificial leaves," under paragraph 425. U. S. v. Cattus (1909) 167 Fed. 532, 93 C. C. A. 64; Tuska, Son & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 325.

5. Bird of paradise feathers.—An importation of bird of paradise feathers, being composed of natural feathers which are neither dressed, colored, nor manufactured, is not within paragraph 328 of Act 1894. (1897) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 541.

6. Bleached or dyed grasses.—Bleached or dyed grasses that are intended for ornamental or decorative purposes held dutiable as "ornamental * * * leaves * * * not specially provided for," under Act 1897, par. 425, rather than under paragraph 449, as "manufactures" of grass, or under section 2, Free List, par. 566, relating to "grasses * * * not dressed or manufactured." U. S. v. H. Bayersdorfer & Co. (1909) 175 Fed. 959, 99 C. C. A. 449.

7. Dyed flowers.—The dyeing process to which these flowers were subjected was designed to beautify them with new and sometimes brilliant colorings, thereby improving and advancing rather than preserving their condition. They are not preserved cut flowers, but are ornamental flowers within the meaning of paragraph 438, Act 1909. International Forwarding Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 455. See, also, Bayersdorfer & Co. v. Same (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 446.

8. Downs on the skin, dressed.—The goods are the skins of ducklings or chicks, which skins have been dried and stuffed with cotton medicated with some preservative. There is not sufficient evidence in the record to support the contention that they are toys; nor is there sufficient evidence to warrant a reversal of the finding below that they were dutiable under paragraph 347, Act 1913, as downs on the skin, dressed, not suitable for use as millinery ornaments. Morimura Bros. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 183.

9. Eagle and condor quills.—Held, that certain eagle and condor quills, which are ornamental feathers, but are in a crude state, and require further treatment before becoming suitable for ornamental purposes, are dutiable as crude feathers, and not as ornamental feathers, under paragraph 425, Act 1897. Brodie v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 135 Fed. 914.

10. Feather boas.—Boas, made by stringing dressed feathers on a cord, held dutiable as "feathers * * * dressed," etc., under Act 1897, par. 425, by virtue of section 7, describing that unenumerated articles "shall be assessed at the highest rate at which the same would be chargeable if composed wholly of the component material of chief value." Legg v. U. S. (1908) 163 Fed. 1006, 90 C. C. A. 176, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 858.

Boas made of feathers strung together upon cotton cords differ, of course, from the constituent parts of the boas so made, but avoiding a manifest incongruity if the law were otherwise construed, they must be taken to be like feathers in materials, quality, texture, and the use to which they may be applied, and they were properly held dutiable in similitude as feathers under section 7, Act 1897. American Express Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 39.

11. Feathers in general.—Feathers containing a small quantity of wire and used as millinery ornaments held not dutiable as feathers advanced or manufactured. See paragraph 167.

12. Goose skins.—Paragraph 425, Act 1897, making feathers and downs when dressed, colored, or otherwise advanced or manufactured in any manner dutiable at 50 per cent. does not extend to or include goose skins adapted to and employed for other purposes than those for which down is used. Gross v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 321.

13. Grass piquets.—Grass piquets, used for millinery purposes, consisting of stalks of oats and wheat, cut in the milk, and grasses, some of which are mixed with palm leaf and artificial leaves, bound together in bunches about 15 inches long, and all dyed to imitate the natural color of the plants, held dutiable under paragraph 425, Act 1897, for "artificial or ornamental * * * fruits, grains, leaves, flowers, and stems or parts thereof, of whatever material composed," and not under paragraph 449 of said act, as manufactures of grass. Herman & Guinzburg v. U. S. (1904) 128 Fed. 420, 63 C. C. A. 162, affirming judgment Herman & Guinzeberg v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 121 Fed. 201.

14. Imitation roses.—Imitation roses of celluloid and metal, which are worn as boutonnières, chiefly by children on occasions of frolic and fun, and are also used as gifts in prize packages, held not "toys" within Act 1897, par. 418, but dutiable as "artificial * * * flowers," under paragraph 425. Hamburger & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 180 Fed. 632.

The certainty required in a commercial designation is not here shown, and it appearing that the small imitation flowers of the importation are made of celluloid and attached to metal pins, designed to be worn as boutonnières, and that they are so worn by adults, they cannot be taken to be "toys"; they were dutiable as artificial flowers under paragraph 425, Act 1897. Hamburger v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 234.

15. Ornamental leaves and grasses.—Florists' ornamental supplies, consisting of leaves of various plants arranged in the form of wreaths, crosses, etc., held dutiable as "ornamental leaves" under Act 1897, par. 425. U. S. v. H. Bayersdorfer & Co. (1909) 175 Fed. 959, 99 C. C. A. 449; Bayersdorfer & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 171 Fed. 286.

Act 1897, par. 425, relating to artificial or ornamental leaves, held to include leaves elaborately prepared so as to restore their natural appearance and prevent decomposition; also to include them when made up into wreaths and attached to wire frames. Kreshower v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 152 Fed. 485.

There is no evidence that this merchandise has been embossed and die cut, but even if there were such evidence, these leaves, simulating natural leaves as they do and being ornamental, are more specifically described in paragraph 438, Act 1909, and they were dutiable thereunder. Hirshbach & Smith v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 124.

These ornamental grasses serve the same purposes as the ornamental grains and leaves enumerated in paragraph 481, and they are dutiable thereunder by similitude. Lang v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 85.

16. Ostrich feathers.—Crude ostrich feathers, which in that condition are never used for ornamental purposes, but need to be dressed and otherwise manufactured before becoming suitable for such use, are dutiable as "feathers * * * crude," and not as "ornamental feathers," under paragraph 425, Act 1897. Brodie v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 135 Fed. 914; Spero v. Same (1904) Id. 915.

17. Palm leaves.—Palm leaves that have been subjected to a process of painting, etc., to give them their natural appearance and to prevent decomposition, held dutiable as "ornamental * * * leaves * * * not specially provided for," under Act 1897, par. 425, rather than as "palms, preserved, * * * suitable for decorative purposes," under paragraph 251. U. S. v. H. Bayersdorfer & Co. (1909) 175 Fed. 959, 99 C. C. A. 449.

As to palm leaves which have been subjected to processes that restore their natural appearance and prevent decay, and some of which have been arranged in wreaths on wire frames, held that, as there had been no advance in manufacture that destroyed the original articles or made them useful for other purposes or altered their trade designation, they still remained dutiable as "leaves," under Act 1897, par. 425, rather than as "manufactures" of palm leaf, provided for in paragraph 450. Kreshower v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 152 Fed. 485.

The legislative history of paragraph 251, Act 1897, and paragraph 263, Act 1909, shows there was no intention to make the term "palms" cover palm leaves, preserved. These articles of the importation are ornamental leaves within the meaning of paragraph 438, and therefore dutiable as assessed. Lang v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 85.

18. Parts of artificial flowers.—Tubing of india rubber held not dutiable as parts of artificial flowers. See paragraph 368.

19. Peacock feathers.—Peacock feathers in a crude condition, used in that state for ornamental purposes, held dutiable under paragraph 425, Act 1897, for "ornamental feathers," and not under that in the same paragraph for "feathers * * * crude." George Silva & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 127 Fed. 781.

20. Quills and plumage.—The wings and tails of birds held properly dutiable as feathers. The importation consisted of feathers, technically distinguished as quills and plumage, and they were manufactured as trimmings for women's hats. They might be appropriately described as either quills or feathers. It must, however, be presumed that paragraph 438, Act 1909, was enacted in view of the construction that had been theretofore placed on a like clause in a previous tariff act, and articles such as make up the importation will accordingly be held to be included by intention as feathers under that paragraph and to be dutiable as such; and this the more certainly since the articles enumerated along with quills in paragraph 463 of the law do not point to their probable use in making up women's hats or bonnets. Goodman v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 112, 290.

21. Quilts.—Quilts of cotton and eider down held dutiable as manufactures of cotton. See paragraph 266.

Under Act March 3, 1883, placing eider down on the free list, and levying a duty of 20 per cent. ad valorem on all manufactured articles not enumerated or provided for in the act, quilts composed of cotton and eider down, or silk and eider down, the eider down in each case being the component material of chief value, are dutiable, at 20 per cent. ad valorem, as manufactured articles not enumerated. Hartranft v. Sheppard (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 920, 921, 125 U. S. 337, 31 L. Ed. 763.

22. "Whatever material composed."—Some effect must be given to the words "of whatever material composed" in paragraph 438, Act 1909. The effect of that phrase modifying the phrase "ornamental * * * flowers not specially provided for," extends this to include articles composed in any part of a material not common to the natural or cut flower; and the dye or coloring matter here used is not common to cut flowers. Bayersdorfer & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 446. See, also, U. S. v. Bayersdorfer (1909) 175 Fed. 959, 99 C. C. A. 449.

348. Furs dressed on the skin, not advanced further than dyeing, 30 per centum ad valorem; plates and mats of dog and goat skins, 10 per centum ad valorem; manufactures of furs, further advanced than dressing and dyeing, when prepared for use as material, joined or sewed together, including plates, linings, and crosses, except plates and mats of dog and goat skins, and articles manufactured from fur not specially provided for in this section, 40 per centum ad valorem; articles of wearing apparel of every description partly or wholly manufactured, composed of or of which hides or skins of cattle of the bovine species, or of the dog or goat are the component material of chief value, 15 per centum ad valorem; articles of wearing apparel of every description partly or wholly manufactured, composed of or of which fur is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 50 per centum ad valorem; furs not on the skin, prepared for hatters' use, including fur skins carroted, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Beaver strips.
2. Coney skins.
3. Imitation silver for skin.
4. Dogskin mats.
5. Dressed fur on the skin in general.
6. Furs prepared for material.
7. Goose skins.
8. Hares' combings.
9. Plates, linings and crosses.
10. Pony skins.
11. Sealskins.
12. Sheepskin rugs.

1. Beaver strips.—Held, that so-called beaver strips, in the form of rectangular pieces of felted material measuring 15 to 24 inches wide and 36 to 48 inches long, used in the manufacture of hats and composed in part of wool, but chiefly of rabbit fur, are not within the provision in paragraph 370, Act 1897, for articles of wearing apparel in part of wool, nor within that in paragraph 432, for hats or forms for hats, but are dutiable as manufactures in chief value of fur, under paragraph 450. Herrmann v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 141 Fed. 486; Id. (C. C. 1906) 145 Fed. 843, decree affirmed U. S. v. Herrmann (1907) 154 Fed. 196, 83 C. C. A. 179.

2. Coney skins.—Pulled or plucked coney skins held not dutiable as dressed furs or skins. See paragraph 491.

3. Imitation silver fox skin.—Alaska fox skins that have been dressed and dyed and pointed by the insertion in the fur at intervals of white hairs from the badger, these white hairs being glued to the skin and making them an imitation silver fox skin, since a new article is thereby made, with a new name, character, and use, constitute a manufacture, but not a manufacture of furs prepared for use as material, and the skins were dutiable at 20 per cent. ad valorem, whether taken by similitude as furs dressed on the skin or as nonenumerated manufactured articles. U. S. v. Hartwig (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 267.

4. Dogskin mats.—These dogskin mats have been given a form other than that of the natural skin and have in trade a characteristic name. They are furs, ready to be applied, after incidental cleaning or dyeing to their final use as furs. They are dutiable under paragraph 439, Act 1909. Allum v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 332. See, also, U. S. v. Richter (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 167.

5. Dressed fur on the skin in general.—Thibet furs, dressed on the skin, which had been made up into coats, and afterwards separated into parts for use as furs dressed on the skin, and not as coats, for wearing apparel, were dutiable as furs dressed on the skin, but not made up into articles, under paragraph 444 of Act 1890, and not as manufactures of fur not specially provided for, under paragraph 461. Mavtner v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 155, judgment affirmed U. S. v. E. L. Goodsell Co. (1899) 91 Fed. 519, 33 C. C. A. 661.

Pieces of fur sewn together continuously for convenience or safety, but not intended to be used as articles in that shape, held not "articles made of" fur under Act 1883, § 2502, but dutiable as "dressed furs on the skin," under the same schedule. Fleet v. U. S. (C. C. 1892) 148 Fed. 335.

6. Furs prepared for material.—The fur motifs are not made in imitation of feathers, but are intended to be used as ornaments for ladies' hats and were classifiable as furs prepared for use as material under paragraph 439 of that act. Judkins & McCormick Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 112.

7. Goose skins.—The provision in Act 1897, par. 426, for "furs dressed on the skin," does not include dressed goose skins with the down on. Such articles are dutiable as "bird skins, * * * dressed * * * or manufactured in any manner," under paragraph 425 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1675). Herskovitz & Roth v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 180 Fed. 631.

The evidence showing that the use to which goose skins such as were here imported are ordinarily put is similar to the use of fur and not to that of down, they were dutiable by similitude under paragraph 426 of that act and according thus with a long-continued practice of the Treasury Department. Gross v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 321.

8. Hares' combings. — Hares' combings or fur waste held not dutiable as furs, prepared for hatter's use. See paragraph 384.

9. Plates, linings and crosses.—It was the evident purpose of the Congress by paragraph 439, Act 1909, to distinguish between the completed article and the several grades of materials entering into its composition, and to impose on materials prepared for the use of furriers and other manufacturers of fur an intervening rate of duty, higher than the rate upon dressed skins that had theretofore been construed by the board as proper and applicable, and at the same time lower than the rate provided for manufactures made from such materials. The words "plates, linings, and crosses" are employed in that paragraph as words of extension rather than specification and the furriers' articles of the importation, whether dressed or dyed or not, were properly assessed at 35 per cent. ad valorem under that paragraph. Carlowitz v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 172.

10. Pony skins.—Pony skins are not "furs" or "fur skins" in the common, ordinary meaning of those words, but the evidence seems to make it clear that for several years before the enactment of the Act 1909 pony skins had been dealt in commercially precisely as true fur skins and employed as such in manufacture; they are dutiable as dressed fur skins under paragraph 439, Act 1909. Revillon Freres v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 209. See, also, U. S. v. Bennett (1895) 66 Fed. 299, 13 C. C. A. 446.

11. Sealskins.—Sealskins that have been "repaired" cannot be taken for dutiable purposes to come within the first clause of paragraph 439, Act 1909, and though "repaired" this will not constitute them manufactures of furs designated by the second clause of that paragraph; there is no eo nomine provision applicable and the importation is dutiable under paragraph 480 of the act as an unenumerated article, manufactured in whole or in part. U. S. v. Burkhardt (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 177.

12. Sheepskin rugs.—According to the evidence, the importation was of pieces of dressed natural sheepskin sewed into rugs and known to the trade as rugs. It appears they are used as material for making finer rugs or other articles of fur. They are further advanced than dressing and dyeing and were properly dutiable as manufactures of furs further advanced than dressing and dyeing under paragraph 439, Act 1909. U. S. v. Richter (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 167.

349. Fans of all kinds, except common palm-leaf fans, 50 per centum ad valorem.

Cigar fans.—Cigar fans held not dutiable as fans. See paragraph 342.

Embroidered fans.—Embroidered fans are subject only to the provision in Act 1897, par. 427, for "fans of all kinds," not being within the scope of the proviso in paragraph 339, imposing the embroidery rate on "embroidered wearing apparel or other article or textile fabric." U. S. v. Quong Lee & Co. (C. C. 1909) 173 Fed. 819.

Paper fans.—The provision in Act 1897, par. 427, for "fans of all kinds," does not include so-called fans consisting of unsubstantial paper novelties in the shape of fans, which range from four feet in diameter down to very small sizes, and which are not com-mercially known nor dealt in as fans, nor adapted to practical use as such, but are intended solely for decorative purposes. R. F. Downing & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 141 Fed. 490.

Silk fans.—Fans composed of silk and wood and embroidered with silk held dutiable as fans of all kinds. U. S. v. Harper (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 101.

350. Gun wads of all descriptions, 10 per centum ad valorem.

351. Human hair, raw, 10 per centum ad valorem; if cleaned or commercially known as drawn, but not manufactured, 20 per centum ad valorem; manufactures of human hair, including nets and nettings, or of which human hair is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 35 per centum ad valorem.

352. Hair, curled, suitable for beds or mattresses, 10 per centum ad valorem.

353. Haircloth, known as "crinoline" cloth, 6 cents per square yard; haircloth, known as "hair seating," and hair press cloth, 15 cents per square yard.

Notes of Decisions

Hair press cloth.—Goods composed of 80 per cent. goat's hair and 20 per cent. cotton, such as brilliantines, lustrines, alpacas, and mohairs, which, prior to 1870, had not come to be specifically known in this country as women's dress goods, are assessable under Act 1870, § 21, as amended by Act 1871, providing for duties on haircloth known as "crinoline cloth," and "on all other manufactures of hair not otherwise herein provided for," and not under Act 1867, relating to women's dress goods composed wholly or in part of wool, worsted, hair of the alpaca, goat, or other like animal. Arthur's Ex'rs v. Butterfield (1888) 125 U. S. 70, 8 Sup. Ct. 714, 31 L. Ed. 643.

The provision in paragraph 431, Act 1897, for "hair press cloth" is not limited to fabrics composed of the same material (horsehair) as the other articles enumerated in said paragraph. E. & W. H. Caldwell v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 141 Fed. 487.

Manufactures of hair.—Manufactures of hair in general. See paragraph 308.

354. Hats, bonnets, or hoods, for men's, women's, boys', or children's wear, trimmed or untrimmed, including bodies, hoods, plateaux, forms or shapes, for hats or bonnets, composed wholly or in chief value of fur of the rabbit, beaver, or other animals, 45 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Bonnets for men.—Articles made of wool, made on frames imported from Scotland and used for a covering for the head, held not dutiable as bonnets, hats and hoods for men, women, and children. See paragraph 288.

In an action to recover duties paid under protest the inquiry was whether the goods were dutiable under Schedule K of Act March 3, 1883, as "knit goods, made on knitting frames," as assessed by the collector, or under Schedule N, as "bonnets, hats, and hoods for men, women, and children," etc., as claimed by the importers. Held, that it was proper to admit evidence that the commercial designation of the article in question at the date of the act was "Scotch caps," and not "bonnets for men," for, if no such term as "bonnets" was applicable to head coverings for men, congress could not have intended to apply the term to goods which were elsewhere specifically described as "goods made on knitting frames." Toplitz v. Hedden (1892) 13 Sup. Ct. 70, 71, 146 U. S. 252, 36 L. Ed. 961, affirming judgment (C. C. 1888) 33 Fed. 617.

Composed wholly.—The changes made in this paragraph, from the wording of similar paragraphs in previous tariff acts, particularly the insertion of the word "wholly" after the word "compose," requires the words "compose wholly" to be given their ordinary and natural meaning, and hat materials composed at all of anything besides the enumerated articles are excluded from the paragraph. Schmitz v. U. S. (1906) 146 Fed. 127, 76 C. C. A. 553.

Forms for hats.—Beaver strips held not dutiable as forms for hats. See paragraph 348.

Goods used in ornamenting hats.—Though goods are used chiefly or solely in the manufacture and ornamenting of hats, bonnets, etc., if they are bead ornaments, or are composed of silk or of metal, they are dutiable under the specific clauses relating to such articles. Walker v. Seeberger (D. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 724, judgment reversed (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 981, 149 U. S. 541, 37 L. Ed. 839.

Hats trimmed in chief value of fur.—In applying the provision in Act 1897, par. 432, for "hats * * * trimmed, * * * composed wholly or in chief value of fur," the composition of the hats should be determined by reference to the whole hat, including the trimming, rather than by reference to the body of the hat alone, so that where hats, the bodies of which are fur, are so trimmed that the silk trimming is the chief component of the value of the hats, they are dutiable under Schedule L, paragraph 390. Leon Rheims Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 969, judgment affirmed (1908) 160 Fed. 925, 88 C. C. A. 107.

Wool knit hoods.—Wool knit hoods held to be dutiable at 30 per cent. ad valorem, under Act March 3, 1883, enumerating "bonnets, hats, and hoods for men, women, and children, composed of chip, grass, palm leaf, willow, straw, and other material. Stodder v. Spalding (C. C. 1885) 24 Fed. 89, judgment affirmed Spalding v. Stodder (1891) 12 S. Ct. 988, 145 U. S. 654, 36 L. Ed. 847.

355. Indurated fiber ware and manufactures of pulp, not specially provided for in this section, 25 per centum ad valorem.

356. Jewelry, commonly or commercially so known, valued above 20 cents per dozen pieces, 60 per centum ad valorem; rope, curb, cable, and fancy patterns of chain not exceeding one-half inch in diameter, width, or thickness, valued above 30 cents per yard; and articles valued above 20 cents per dozen pieces designed to be worn on apparel or carried on or about or attached to the person, such as and including buckles, card cases, chains, cigar cases, cigar cutters, cigar holders, cigarette cases, cigarette holders, coin holders, collar, cuff, and dress buttons, combs, match boxes, mesh bags and purses, millinery, military, and hair ornaments, pins, powder cases, stamp cases, vanity cases, and like articles; all the foregoing and parts thereof, finished or partly finished, composed of metal, whether or not enameled, washed, covered, or plated, including rolled gold plate, and whether or not set with precious or semiprecious stones, pearls, cameos, coral, or amber, or with imitation precious stones or imitation pearls, 60 per centum ad valorem. Stampings, galleries, mesh and other materials of metal, whether or not set with glass or paste, finished or partly finished, separate or in strips or sheets, suitable for use in the manufacture of any of the foregoing articles in this paragraph, 50 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Construction of paragraph in general.
2. Articles designed to be worn on the person.
3. Barettes.
4. Brooches.
5. Buckles.
6. Buttons.
7. Chatelaine purses.
8. Composed of silver.
9. Coral.
10. Gold-plated lace pins.
11. Jewelry in general.
12. Metal neck chain.
13. Millinery ornaments.
14. Miniature frames.
15. Pencils.
16. Pins in general.
17. Rhinestones.
18. Silver hand bags.
19. Sterling silver necklets.
20. Watch guards and chains.

1. Construction of paragraph in general.—Paragraph 356, Act 1913, as reported to the House by the committee, was deliberately amended in the House by the insertion of the words "60 per centum ad valorem" in the first clause. No interpretation will give due effect to this amendment except that the jewelry clause was thereby segregated from the three following clauses of the paragraph and converted into a complete and independent provision. It follows that the words "parts thereof" and "composed of metal" in the fourth clause do not refer to "jewelry" in the first. Mamluck & Co. v. U. S. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 556.

2. Articles designed to be worn on the person.—Small compasses held not dutiable as jewelry or as articles designed to be worn about the person. See paragraph 167.

By paragraph 356, Act 1913, a duty is imposed, amongst other articles, upon articles of a certain value composed of metal and designed to be worn on apparel or carried on or about or attached to the person, such as and including buckles, card cases, etc. If the assessed articles are similar to the named exemplars in respect to the manner in which they are worn or carried, then the resemblance meets the terms of the provision. Gallagher & Ascher v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 105.

3. Barettes.—Barettes made of base metal and set with imitation jet held not dutiable as jewelry. See paragraph 95.

4. Brooches.—Brooches of brass set with stones are commonly and commercially known as jewelry. They might be classified under two different provisions of paragraph 448, Act 1909, but they come more precisely under the clause that relates to "all articles commonly or commercially known as jewelry," and they are dutiable as such. Cohn & Rosenberger v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 288. See, also, U. S. v. Goldberg's Sons (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 282; Same v. Cohn & Rosenberger (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 273.

Brooches, though falling descriptively within the language of paragraph 448, Act 1909, "all other articles of every description * * * composed wholly or in chief value of * * * brass * * * and designed to be worn on apparel or carried on or about or attached to the person," held dutiable as jewelry under that paragraph. Guthman, Solomons & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 286. See, also, U. S. v. Goldberg's Sons (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 282; Same v. Vandegrift (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 161.

Reviewing the legislative history of paragraph 448, Act 1909, and its interpretations, brooches that are stipulated to be both commonly and commercially known as jewelry must be taken to come directly under the provisions of that paragraph and to be dutiable under it. They are not dutiable as manufactures of metal. U. S. v. Guthman, Solomons & Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 276. See, also, Hensel v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 117.

5. Buckles.—Ornamented steel buckles held not dutiable as jewelry. See paragraph 167.

6. Buttons.—Buttons made of brass, plated, and studded with imitation precious stones, held dutiable under paragraph 448, Act 1909. Lent v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 542.

7. Chatelaine purses.—Chatelaine purses of metal, gilded or plated in imitation of gold and silver, and set with imitation precious stones, which range in value from 34 marks per gross to 30 marks per dozen, held not within paragraph 434, Act 1897, for "articles commonly known as jewelry." A. Steinhardt & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 148 Fed. 512.

8. Composed of silver.—The words "composed of silver" in paragraph 448, Act 1909, are not to be construed as relating back and modifying "bags, purses, and other articles" in the paragraph; they relate solely to the words "metal mesh," immediately preceding. To hold otherwise would result in absurdity. The importation is dutiable as made in chief value of metal mesh composed of silver. Hensel v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 117. See, also, Cauvigny Brush Co. v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 118.

9. Coral.—Coral cut into form of a cameo, but not set. Act 1846, amended 1857. Bailey v. Schell (C. C. 1863) Fed. Cas. No. 745.

10. Gold-plated lace pins.—Gold-plated lace pins designed to be worn on the person because of their ornamental character are jewelry within the common understanding of the term and dutiable under paragraph 448, Act 1909. U. S. v. Strauss & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 386; Same v. Flory & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 87. See, also, Bader v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 541; Robbins v. Robertson (C. C. 1888) 33 Fed. 709.

These lace pins or shawl pins, with fancy heads and steel shafts, gold plated, according to the testimony, are not known as jewelry and are not used for purposes of adornment. On the authority of cases cited the goods are held not to be jewelry. Altman & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 296.

11. Jewelry in general. — Steel rods tipped with diamond chips and used in an engraving machine held not dutiable as jewelry. See paragraph 167.

Necklace clasps composed of base metal set with imitation precious stones and metal and glass watch-chain compasses, metal being chief value, both articles being conceded to be "parts of jewelry," are dutiable under the last clause of paragraph 356, Act 1913, as "materials of metal, * * * finished or partly finished, * * * suitable for use in the manufacture of any of the foregoing articles in this paragraph," viz., "jewelry, * * * valued above 20 cents per dozen pieces," in the first clause thereof. Mamluck & Co. v. U. S. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 556.

Shoe buckles, galleleth belts, and combs held dutiable under Act 1909 as jewelry, and not as manufactures of metal. U. S. v. Altman & Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 131.

"All articles commonly or commercially known as jewelry, or parts thereof, finished or unfinished," paragraph 448, Act 1909, is more specific in its application than the provision with the proviso in that paragraph, and that this is so is now stare decisis. U. S. v. International Forwarding Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 25.

The contention made here that no article that possesses any degree of utility can be regarded as jewelry cannot be upheld. Jewelry is often an article of utility. Id.

There is nothing in the record to show that the goods of the importation are designed for use as playthings. They are of a size and appearance that leads to the inference they were made to be worn by children as articles of adornment. A commercial designation as toys was not proved. The articles are properly classifiable as jewelry. U.

S. v. Kraemer & Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 294.

Where the importation consists of merchandise in a variety of forms, necklaces, chains, hatpins, etc., made of a variety of materials and some complete, some incomplete, without attempting a comprehensive definition of jewelry or of articles commonly known as jewelry, the appeal here being limited to merchandise represented by enumerated samples, and there being no evidence to controvert the conclusion drawn by the board, the board's decision must be affirmed; the goods were properly assessed, being commonly known as jewelry, under paragraph 434, Act 1897. Wolff v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 11.

12. Metal neck chain.—The testimony showed that these long chains, some ornamented and some unornamented, are commonly and commercially known as jewelry. That incidentally, when worn, they serve a useful purpose does not preclude a proper classification as jewelry under paragraph 448, Act 1909. U. S. v. American Express Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 97.

Jewelry requires work in metal and a metal neck chain with a clasp constitutes jewelry or parts of jewelry. Metal appears here in the clasps designed to constitute the article a necklace when completed. They are sold to jewelers, and are apparently as susceptible of use on necklaces of metal as of beads. Kraemer & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 470.

A commercial designation may not be judicially known and none is here shown. It is, however, within judicial cognizance that a metal neck chain with a clasp constitutes jewelry. Paragraph 448, Act 1909, relating to jewelry is, as to this importation, more specific in its application than paragraph 199, and the goods are dutiable accordingly under paragraph 448. U. S. v. Goldberg's Sons (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 282. See also, Same v. Guthman, Solomons & Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 276.

13. Millinery ornaments.—Black hat ornaments of metal and black glass held not dutiable as jewelry. See paragraphs 95, 167.

In construing paragraph 434, Act 1897, for "articles commonly known as jewelry," held, that it does not include so-called "millinery ornaments," used in trimming hats, which are flimsy articles, intended for ephemeral use, are not made by jewelers, and contain no gems or precious metals, but are made of base metal either wholly or in combination with imitation jet or imitation precious stones. U. S. v. S. Schiff & Co. (1905) 139 Fed. 549, 71 C. C. A. 533.

14. Miniature frames. — Miniature frames set with precious stones held not dutiable as articles of jewelry. See paragraph 167.

15. Pencils. — Prorepel fancy metal pencils are composed in chief value of metal with a substantial minor value of other material, the metal value distinctly preponderating. They fall within the terms of paragraph 356, Act 1913. Hensel, Bruckmann & Lorbacher v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 162; Gallagher & Ascher v. U. S. (1915) Id. 105.

16. Pins in general.—Findings of the board of general appraisers that hat pins, hair pins, breast pins, buckles, and other similar ornaments adapted for personal adornment, and composed of base metal, in imitation of precious metals and otherwise, some being set with imitation precious stones, were "articles commonly known as jewelry," and as such dutiable under paragraph 434, Act 1897, affirmed. A. Bader & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 541.

17. Rhinestones. — Rhinestones composed in chief value of paste held not dutiable as jewelry. See paragraph 95.

18. Silver hand bags.—Women's silver hand bags or purses, used for holding money, articles of wearing apparel, etc., held not within the provision in Act 1897, par. 434, for "articles commonly known as jewelry," but dutiable as articles of silver under paragraph 193. Tiffany v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 398.

19. Sterling silver necklets.—The articles are hand-wrought sterling silver necklets, set with pearls and marquisettes. The words "gold or platinum" in paragraph 448, Act 1909, refer to and qualify the immediately preceding classification only, "chain, mesh, and mesh bags and purses," and not to all articles commonly or commercially known as jewelry. The goods are dutiable at 60 per cent. under that paragraph. U. S. v. Cohn & Rosenberger (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 273.

20. Watch guards and chains.—Leather watch guard held not dutiable as article known as jewelry. See paragraph 360.

Rope chain, not more than one-half of 1 inch in diameter, breadth, or thickness, made of rolled gold plate, valued at 30 cents per yard and imported in long lengths, for use in manufacturing watch chains, is properly classifiable as parts of jewelry under the final clause of paragraph 448, Act 1909, which, by the language "articles commonly known as jewelry or parts thereof * * * including chain, * * *" fixes the classification of such chain as parts of jewelry. U. S. v. Massce & Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 395.

357. Diamonds and other precious stones, rough or uncut, and not advanced in condition or value from their natural state by cleaving, splitting, cutting, or other process, whether in their natural form or broken, and bort; any of the foregoing not set, and diamond dust, 10 per centum ad valorem; pearls and parts thereof, drilled or undrilled, but not set or strung; diamonds, coral, rubies, cameos, and other precious stones and semiprecious stones, cut but not set, and suitable for use in the manufacture of jewelry, 20 per centum ad valorem; imitation precious stones, including pearls and parts thereof, for use in the manufacture of jewelry, doublets, artificial, or so-called synthetic or reconstructed pearls and parts thereof, rubies, or other precious stones, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Agate penholders.
2. Agate settings.
3. Bort.
4. Diamonds.
5. Imitation precious stones in general.
6. "Including."
7. Jade.
8. Loose pearls.
9. Mineralogical specimens.
10. Opals.
11. Paste cameos.
12. Paste pearls.
13. Pearls.
14. Precious stones used as bearings.
15. Rock crystal articles.
16. "Set."

1. Agate penholders.—Agate penholder handles held not dutiable as precious stones. See paragraph 98.

2. Agate settings.—Small pieces of agate, garnet, etc., advanced from their natural state by cutting process, for the purpose of fitting them for use as settings for jewelry, and known commercially as agates, garnets, etc., are more specifically provided for as "precious stones advanced," under Act 1897, par. 435, than as "manufactures of agate, garnet, etc.," under par. 115. U. S. v. Albert Lorsch & Co. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 277.

3. Bort.—Industrial diamonds of the description known as bort, which have been pierced by a process of drilling or cutting, are not dutiable as diamonds advanced by cutting or other process, under Act 1897, par. 435, but are free of duty as "bort," under paragraph 545. U. S. v. American Express Co. (C. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 967.

On the trial for forfeiture of certain diamonds of an inferior quality, and of the variety commonly called "bort," which had been advanced in condition by being drilled, the disposition of the case turned on whether the articles were free of duty under Act 1897, par. 435, relating to "diamonds * * * not advanced in condition," etc., "including * * * bort." Held, that the terms of limitation following the provision for diamonds do not relate to the provision for bort, and that the merchandise was accordingly free of duty. U. S. v. Fifteen Drilled Diamonds (D. C. 1904) 127 Fed. 753.

4. Diamonds.—Diamonds, cut but not set, held dutiable under Act 1894, par. 338, as "precious stones of all kinds, cut but not set," and not free of duty, under paragraph 467. U. S. v. Frankel (C. C. 1895) 68 Fed. 186, judgment affirmed Wertheimer v. U. S. (1896) 73 Fed. 296, 19 C. C. A. 504.

5. Imitation precious stones in general.—Glass beads strung together and colored in imitation of precious stones held not dutiable as imitations of precious stones. See paragraph 95.

Imitations of pearls, consisting of hollow glass beads, held not dutiable as imitations of precious stones composed of paste and glass. See paragraph 95.

Pierced imitation pearls held not dutiable as imitations of precious stones. See paragraph 333.

The provision in Act 1897, par. 435, for imitation precious stones not exceeding an inch in "dimensions" does not exclude stones exceeding an inch in a single dimension. To be excluded they must exceed an inch in more than one direction. Albert Lorsch & Co. v. U. S. (1906) 146 Fed. 379, 76 C. C. A. 651, modifying judgment (C. C. 1904) 135 Fed. 214.

In construing the provision in paragraph 435, Act 1897, for imitation precious stones not "ornamented or decorated," held, as to stones which have been incrusted, but in which the incrustations are a part of the imitation, that they are not ornamented or decorated within the meaning of said provision. U. S. v. R. F. Downing & Co. (C. C. 1905) 139 Fed. 155, judgment affirmed (1906) 144 Fed. 1022, 73 C. C. A. 42.

Glass beads strung, of two kinds, one consisting of small brown beads, which were a poor imitation of the precious stone known as "cat's eye," and the other of larger size, and also an imitation of precious stones, held to have been dutiable as "imitations of precious stones composed of paste or glass, not exceeding one inch in dimensions, not set," under paragraph 454 of Act 1890, and not as manufactures of glass not specially provided for, under paragraph 108. Morrison v. U. S. (1898) 84 Fed. 444, 28 C. C. A. 456.

The provision in Act 1909 for imitation pearl beads is more specific than that for imitation pearls and the several provisions taken together indicate a legislative purpose to include within paragraph 449 of that act only such imitation pearls for use in the manufacture of jewelry as are not also imitation pearl beads. Cohn & Rosenberger v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 339. See, also, Lorsch & Co. v. Same (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 93.

Imitation precious stones, oval, heart-shaped, etc., having a small shoulder pierced through in the process of molding, imitation cameos with two holes pierced in the sides, and other articles not in the form of beads, all suitable for use in the manufacture of jewelry, held dutiable as "imitation precious stones" under paragraph 449, Act 1909. Imitation precious stones in the form of hearts, having a hole in the upper extremity in which is inserted a diminutive brass screw ring, are parts of jewelry and are dutiable as such under the last part of paragraph 448. Imitation precious stones with foil backs, either pierced or not pierced, are dutiable not as beads, but as imitation precious stones under paragraph 449. U. S. v. American Bead Co. (1913) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 509. See, also, Cohn v. Same (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 288.

6. "Including."—In "diamonds * * * not advanced, * * * including miners' diamonds," in Act 1897, Free List, par. 545, "including" is used as a word of addition, rather than of specification. Sullivan Machinery Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 168 Fed. 561.

7. Jade.—Tableware, etc., made from Jade held not dutiable as precious stones. See paragraph 81.

8. Loose pearls.—Loose pearls, unassorted, and of various sizes, colors, and quality, drilled, but not set or strung, held not within the terms of paragraph 434 of Act 1897, covering jewelry * * * including * * * pearls set or strung," nor of paragraph 436, covering "pearls in their natural state, not strung or set," but, by virtue of the similitude provision of section 7 (30 Stat. 205 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1693]), they are dutiable under the latter paragraph. Tiffany v. U. S. (1901) 112 Fed. 672, 50 C. C. A. 419.

9. Mineralogical specimens. — Mineralogical specimens of agates held not dutiable as precious stones. See paragraph 390.

10. Opals.—In construing the provisions in Act 1897, pars. 408, 435, for "beads of all kinds," and "precious stones," respectively, held, that pierced opal balls about one-fourth of an inch in diameter and pierced rock crystal rondelles, or small, flat, faceted disks, are dutiable under the latter provision rather than the former; these articles not being commercially known as beads. U. S. v. American Gem & Pearl Co. (C. C. 1905) 142 Fed. 283.

A single antique opal produced at a period prior to 1700 held not entitled to free entry, under Act 1890, par. 524, as a "collection of antiquities," but dutiable under paragraph 452. Tiffany v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 729.

11. Paste cameos.—Paste cameos, in imitation of shell cameos, which imitate certain descriptions of precious stones, held dutiable as imitation precious stones under paragraph 435, Act 1897. U. S. v. Goldberg (C. C. 1904) 139 Fed. 706.

12. Paste pearls. — Imitations of pearls, made of paste or glass, and mounted on wires, used for jewelry or ornamental purposes, held dutiable at 10 per cent. ad valorem, under paragraph 454 of Act 1890 and paragraph 338 of Act 1894 as "imitations of precious stones not set," and not under paragraph 108 of Act 1890 as "manufactures of glass, not specially provided for," or under paragraph 351 of Act 1894 as "manufactures of paste not specially provided for." Lorsch v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 119 Fed. 476.

13. Pearls.—Pearls which, though they had been tentatively worn as a necklace abroad, were imported loose and were increased by the addition of others after importation for completion into a necklace, held not dutiable as "jewelry" under Act 1897, par. 434, but as "pearls in their natural state," by similitude, under paragraph 436. Citroen v. U. S. (1909) 166 Fed. 693, 92 C. C. A. 365, judgment affirmed U. S. v. Citroen (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 259, 223 U. S. 407, 56 L. Ed. 486.

Certain drilled pearls of exceptionally large size and fine quality were imported together, arranged in collections according to size, the largest in the center. It appeared that these collections had not been selected for a special piece of jewelry, but that the pearls were to be sold separately on their individual merits, and that they had not been advanced to a special value beyond the aggregate amount of their individual values by an assortment and selection that fitted them for immediate transformation into a necklace or string of pearls. Held that, under the similitude clause section 7, Act 1897, they bear a closer resemblance to "pearls in their natural state not strung or set" than to "pearls set or strung," which are enumerated in paragraphs 436 and 434, respectively, of said act. Neresheimer & Co. v. U. S. (1904) 136 Fed. 86, 68 C. C. A. 654, reversing judgment Neresheimer v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 131 Fed. 977.

Drilled pearls, which had been assembled and matched abroad and were ordered to be made into a necklace in New York, but had never been strung as a necklace, except temporarily, for purposes of display, held not "jewelry" under Act 1897, par. 434, but dutiable either directly or by similitude as "pearls in their natural state," under paragraph 436. U. S. v. Tiffany & Co.

(C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 800, judgment affirmed (1910) 178 Fed. 1006, 101 C. C. A. 665.

The provision in Act 1897, par. 435, for imitations of precious stones, held to cover imitation whole and half pearls, including such as have been strung on wire for purposes of manufacture. U. S. v. Weinberg (C. C. 1905) 139 Fed. 1006.

Under section 7, Act 1897, providing that any unenumerated article "shall pay the same rate of duty which is levied on the enumerated article which it most resembles," held that so-called "half pearls," consisting of the better part of the true pearl, from which the flaws or blemishes have been removed by sawing or splitting, and which are not adapted for stringing, but are chiefly useful for jewelry settings, and require labor and expense in completion, held dutiable at the same rate as "pearls in their natural state," under paragraph 436 of said Act which they resemble more than the "pearls, set or strung," enumerated in paragraph 434 of said act. Hahn v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 131 Fed. 1000, judgment affirmed U. S. v. Hahn (1904) 135 Fed. 349, 68 C. C. A. 130.

Pearls which have been drilled or pierced, but have not been strung, held not to fall within paragraph 434, Act 1897. Tiffany v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 103 Fed. 619.

14. Precious stones used as bearings.—Sapphires intended for bearings for electrical instruments held dutiable as precious stones, under Act 1897, par. 435, rather than as articles composed of mineral substances under paragraph 97. U. S. v. American Express Co. (C. C. 1904) 147 Fed. 894.

Small pieces of Ceylon sapphire used as bearings for electrical meters, etc., held not dutiable as precious stone cut, but not set. U. S. v. General Electric Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 287.

15. Rock crystal articles.—Rock crystal intaglios, produced in an expensive manner by engraving, and then painted, held within Act 1897, par. 435, for "precious stones advanced in condition or value * * * by * * * cutting or other process," regardless of their advancement in value by painting. U. S. v. Benedict & Warner (1906) 145 Fed. 914, 76 C. C. A. 446, affirming judgment Benedict & Warner v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 135 Fed. 242.

Rock crystal articles are dutiable under paragraph 435, Act 1897, rather than as manufactures of rock crystal under paragraph 110. U. S. v. American Gem and Pearl Co. (C. C. 1905) 142 Fed. 283.

16. "Set."—In construing the provision in Act 1897, par. 435, for "diamonds and other precious stones advanced in condition or value from their natural state by cleaving, splitting, cutting, or other process, and not set," held, that "set" has a well-known and well-defined trade meaning in connection with precious stones, which would not include the insertion of an agate bearing in a scale, and that the paragraph was intended to cover only precious stones intended for jewelry purposes, and would not cover such as are fitted for use as bearings. Smith v. Computing Scale Co. (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 890.

358. Laces, lace window curtains not specially provided for in this section, coach, carriage, and automobile laces, and all lace articles of whatever yarns, threads, or filaments composed; handkerchiefs, napkins, wearing apparel, and all other articles or fabrics made wholly or in part of lace or of imitation lace of any kind; embroideries, wearing apparel, handkerchiefs, and all articles or fabrics embroidered in any manner by hand or machinery, whether with a plain or fancy initial, monogram, or otherwise, or tamboured, appliquéd, or scalloped by hand or machinery, any of the foregoing by whatever name known; edgings, insertings, galloons, nets, nettings, veils, veilings, neck rufflings, ruchings, tuckings, flouncings, flutings, quillings, ornaments; braids, loom woven and ornamented in the process of weaving, or made by hand, or on any braid machine, knitting machine, or lace machine, and not specially provided for; trimmings not specially provided for; woven fabrics or articles from which threads have been omitted, drawn, punched, or cut, and with threads introduced after weaving, forming figures or designs, not including straight hemstitching; and articles made in whole or in part of any of the foregoing fabrics or articles; all of the foregoing of whatever yarns, threads, or filaments composed, 60 per centum ad valorem.

1. Appliquéd articles.—Colored cotton cloth with polka dots composed of goat hair held not dutiable as a fabric appliquéd composed of cotton. See paragraph 288.

Cotton wearing apparel upon which are sewn strips or bands of goods held not dutiable as appliquéd. See paragraph 256.

There is no definition of "appliqué" in trade and commerce different from the dictionary definition of it as "any ornament laid out and applied on another surface, such as cloth"; and goods within this definition held dutiable under Act 1897, par. 390. Further, it is not necessary that the design should be regular, conventional, or highly ornamental; and the provision includes a fabric to which a gilt cord has been applied in irregular loops of a crude design, being in this form fairly durable, permanent, and salable. U. S. v. A. A. Vantine & Co. (1908) 166 Fed. 735, 92 C. C. A. 397, affirming judgment A. A. Vantine & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 155 Fed. 149.

A collector of customs excluded goods which had been cheaply appliquéd from a tariff provision for "appliquéd" articles, on the ground that the appliqué feature was added to secure a lower rate of duty than would be applicable if they were imported plain. Held, that as the greater portion of the goods were sold in the condition in which imported, and the appliqué work was not done solely as a subterfuge to obtain the lower duty, they should have been classified as "appliquéd." A. A. Vantine & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 155 Fed. 149, judgment affirmed U. S. v. A. A. Vantine & Co. (1908) 166 Fed. 735, 92 C. C. A. 397.

An article is appliquéd within the tariff sense when it is ornamented with a pattern or design independently fabricated. These goods are not appliquéd. Loewenthal & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 209. See, also, U. S. v. Hamburger Levine Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 217.

Articles composed of silk or mainly of silk or of silk and metal, and appliquéd, are not dutiable under paragraph 399, Act 1909, but are dutiable under paragraph 402 of that act. U. S. v. Vietor (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 297.

Appliquéd collarettes, whether in chief value of silk or of cotton, held dutiable, silk collarettes at 60 per cent. ad valorem under paragraph 390, Act 1897, and cotton collarettes at the same rate under paragraph 339 of that act. Krusi v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 168.

Whether collarettes designed to be sewn on women's dresses and intended for wear about the necks of women have been in fact appliquéd or not may be determined by actual inspection, and the court will take judicial notice of the facts in common knowledge and experience that show these articles to have been appliquéd. Id.

2. "Article."—The ordinary use of the word "articles" in tariff acts is a broad one; and there is nothing in Act 1897, par. 390, which would require the restriction of that term to completed articles. It may include woven fabrics in 25-yard pieces. U. S. v. A. A. Vantine & Co. (1908) 166 Fed. 735, 92 C. C. A. 397.

3. Beaded net lace.—Beaded net lace, made of silk, held subject to customs duty under Act 1894, par. 354, as manufactures known commercially as "bead, beaded, or jet trimmings or ornaments," at 35 per cent. ad valorem, and not under paragraph 301, at 50 per cent. ad valorem. Morrison v. U. S. (1901) 107 Fed. 113, 46 C. C. A. 173.

4. Braids.—Articles commonly known as "hat braids," composed of cotton, being specifically enumerated in Act March 2, 1861, as amended July 14, 1862, are subject to the duty therein provided rather than the higher duty provided by Act June 30, 1864, § 6, in which they are embraced in general terms. Arthur v. Zimmerman (1877) 96 U. S. 124, 24 L. Ed. 770.

Cotton braids, intended to be manufactured into shoe laces, though not trimmings, held within Act 1897, par. 339, imposing a duty on certain cotton manufactures, among which are "embroideries, and all trimmings, including braids, edgings, insertings, flouncings, galloons, gorings, and bands"; the intention that the word "including" was used not by way of specification, but by way of addition, being shown by a comparison of the acts of 1897 and 1894, indicating that braids were intentionally taken out of the 45 per cent. paragraph, where they appeared in the act of 1894, and put into the 60 per cent. paragraph of the act of 1897, irrespective of the use to which they may be applied. Hiller v. U. S. (1901) 106 Fed. 73, 45 C. C. A. 229, writ of certiorari denied (1901)

Braids of cotton and india rubber, cotton the more valuable component, held dutiable under the provision in paragraph 339, Act 1897, for "braids * * * composed wholly or in chief value of flax, cotton, or other vegetable fiber, and not elsewhere specially provided for * * * whether composed in part of india-rubber or otherwise." Calhoun v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 122 Fed. 894.

The language "braids, loom woven and ornamented in the process of weaving, or made by hand, or on any braid machine, knitting machine, or lace machine," in paragraph 358, Act 1913, is not intended to narrow the lexicographic definition of the word "braid." It is comprehensive and sufficiently broad to cover the material which was used in the manufacture of the lamp shades at bar, and which appellants' witness stated may be called a braid or tape. Morimura Bros. v. U. S. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 475.

These lamp shades, made in part of braids, are more specifically classified under paragraph 358, Act 1913, as articles made wholly or in part of braids, "of whatever yarns, threads, or filaments composed," than under paragraph 318, as a manufacture in chief value of silk, notwithstanding that silk is their component material of chief value. By the words "of whatever yarns, threads, or filaments composed," in paragraph 358, Congress has excluded the element of component material in determining the dutiability of articles which answer the description of the paragraph. Morimura Bros. v. U. S. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 475. See, also, U. S. v. Snow's United States' Sample Exp. Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 120.

The imitation horsehair braids of the importation were not shown to resemble pyroxylin or its compounds, or any article of which pyroxylin is the component material of chief value. On the contrary, in texture, quality, and use they resemble braids of cotton, and since they were dutiable by similitude, they were dutiable as cotton braids. Isler & Guye v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 229.

After the elimination of the "wool" theory, horsehair braids and hats were always assessed under Act 1897 by similitude with silk braids and hats, except for an interval when this practice was inhibited by an erroneous rule of construction that was subsequently expressly disapproved by this court Zimmermann & Meyer v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 104.

The article which the importation most resembles in material, quality, texture, and use furnishes the basis for comparison in determining a duty by similitude. Here it seems clear that in the respects named artificial horsehair braids more nearly resemble cotton braids than straw braids. Plummer & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 229. See, also, U. S. v. Cochran (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 57; U. S. v. Buss & Warner (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 87; U. S. v. Eckstein (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 315.

5. Chiffon.—The thin silk fabric known as "chiffon," which is suitable for veils, and is also much used for ruching, neckware, and dress trimmings, when imported in widths of 14 inches, with a border on each side, generally known in the trade as "chiffon veiling," held dutiable under Act 1894 as "veilings," under paragraph 301, and not as manufactures of silk, under paragraph 302. U. S. v. Lahey (1897) 83 Fed. 691, 28 C. C. A. 379.

6. Chinese shoes or slippers embroidered.—Chinese shoes or slippers, embroidered either by hand or machinery held dutiable under paragraph 390, Act 1897, and not under paragraph 438 of said act. Lai Ming v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 5.

7. Cord.—In view of former decisions, taken together with subsequent practice and legislation as well, it will be assumed the Congress used the word "cord" in paragraph 349, Act 1909, with the same meaning that had been attached to it by cited adjudications and the executive practice conforming thereto. Ulmann & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 357.

8. Corsets with lace trimmings.—Corsets trimmed with lace held not dutiable as articles in part of lace. See paragraph 256.

Women's corsets made of cotton, as the material of chief value, trimmed around the upper border with cotton lace edging, held dutiable under paragraph 339 of Act 1897, as wearing apparel "made wholly or in part of lace," notwithstanding the small relative value of the lace. Wanamaker v. U. S. (1903) 120 Fed. 16, 57 C. C. A. 36.

Women's corsets made of cotton and other materials, trimmed around the upper border with cotton-lace edgings, whose relative value to the corsets is from 1 to 2 per cent., should be regarded as "wearing apparel * * * made wholly or in part of lace, or in imitation of lace," within Act 1897, par. 339. U. S. v. Altman (1901) 107 Fed. 15, 46 C. C. A. 116.

These goods were cotton corsets trimmed with lace. Since Lever lace was not the component material of chief value, the merchandise was excluded from the provisions of paragraph 350, Act 1909, and they did not fall within the terms of the provisos to paragraph 349. They were properly held dutiable under the principal provision of paragraph 349. U. S. v. Vandiver (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 149.

9. Dotted swisses.—"Dotted swisses," being white, bleached, woven, cotton fabrics in the piece, embroidered after leaving the loom by an additional process of manufacture, though not known in commerce as "embroideries," held dutiable as articles embroidered, under paragraph 276, Act 1894, and not under the countable clauses of the cotton schedule. U. S. v. Einstein (1897) 78 Fed. 797, 24 C. C. A. 346, certiorari denied Einstein v. U. S. (1897) 17 Sup. Ct. 993, 166 U. S. 722, 41 L. Ed. 1188.

10. Drawnwork.—Without proof it will not be held that certain conventional ornaments added to drawn-work articles are covered by the term "embroidered," in Act 1897, par. 339. U. S. v. J. R. Simon & Co. (1909) 169 Fed. 106, 95 C. C. A. 434, writ of certiorari denied (1910) 30 Sup. Ct. 411, 215 U. S. 610, 54 L. Ed. 348.

Held, that certain woven flax articles, in portions of which ornamental effects have been produced by drawing out certain of the threads and interjecting different, independent threads, producing openwork effects, are not "articles * * * in imitation of lace," as enumerated in paragraph 339, Act 1897. U. S. v. B. Ulmann & Co. (1905) 139 Fed. 3, 71 C. C. A. 415.

The provision for articles "embroidered," in Act 1897, par. 339, held to include so-called "drawnwork" goods, consisting of fabrics in which an openwork effect has been produced by drawing out certain of the threads and interjecting different and independent threads, and which have ornamental work and figures in various portions of the goods. Beach v. Sharpe (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 543.

Held, that articles of so-called "drawnwork," composed of flax, made by drawing some of the threads and tying and looping them with other threads to form figures, are not dutiable as articles made in imitation of lace, under Act 1897, par. 339, but as fabrics of flax under paragraph 346 of said act. J. R. Simon & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 649, judgment affirmed U. S. v. B. Ulmann & Co. (1905) 139 Fed. 3, 71 C. C. A. 415.

Cotton bureau covers, and other like articles, ornamented by fancy work, or effects produced in part by drawing out threads of the fabric, and in part by binding the remaining threads into groups, so as to form open spaces,—such work being known as "drawnwork,"—held not embroidered, but dutiable under paragraph 355 of Act 1890, as manufactures of cotton not enumerated, and not under paragraph 373, as manufactures of cotton embroidered. Meyer v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 90 Fed. 803.

The figures on these goods are outlined exclusively by threads introduced after weaving and they are not produced by combining these threads with threads of the fabric. The goods were properly assessed under paragraph 358, tariff Act 1913. Takayama v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 151.

On a review of the judicial decisions affecting the classification of articles similar to those of the importation, and of the legislative action following upon those decisions, it is clear that paragraph 349, Act 1909, was intended to subject ornamental openwork to the same duty imposed by that act on laces, embroideries, and the like. Frank & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 273.

Linen doilies, tray cloths, tidies, and table centers held dutiable under paragraph 349, Act 1909. Frank & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 216.

11. Embroideries in general.—Dresses in part embroidered and in part made of lace held not dutiable as embroideries or articles made in part of lace. See paragraph 256.

Embroidered fans held not dutiable as embroidered wearing apparel. See paragraph 349.

Embroidered woolen dress goods held not dutiable as articles embroidered. See paragraph 290.

Wool dress robes held not dutiable as articles embroidered. See paragraph 290.

Woolen dress patterns held not dutiable as articles embroidered. See paragraph 290.

Slipper cases consisting of cotton canvas embroidered with beads are dutiable as embroidered manufactures of cotton, and not as bead ornaments. Kohlsaat v. Murphy (1877) 96 U. S. 153, 24 L. Ed. 844; Weihenmyer v. Arthur (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 17,-360.

The rate of duty on embroidered goods, as fixed by Act March 2, 1861, § 22, is not reconsidered in Act June 30, 1864, § 22, but remains as provided in the former act. Arthur v. Homer (1877) 96 U. S. 137, 24 L. Ed. 811.

The provision in Act 1897, par. 339, for "embroidery" and articles "embroidered in any manner," does not include articles stitched on the edge merely to prevent raveling. The fundamental idea of embroidery is that it is needlework done upon a previously completed fabric as distinguished from tapestry or lace work in which the design is a part of the original fabric. It is also essential that it should be ornamental, rather than merely useful. U. S. v. Waentig (C. C. 1909) 168 Fed. 570.

Held that testimony that thread used in machine embroidering was not "embroidery cottons" was insufficient, where it appeared that the witnesses had never seen the thread or yarn used in machine embroidery, and had no familiarity with the article in question. Loeb & Schoenfeld v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 143 Fed. 698, decree reversed (1906) 150 Fed. 327, 80 C. C. A. 211.

Where napkins and tablecloths are substantially embroidered, they are properly assessed for duty under Act 1894, par. 276, as articles embroidered by hand or machinery, at 50 per cent. ad valorem. Wells, Fargo & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 99 Fed. 431.

So-called openwork articles, having ornamental designs stitched thereon by hand with a needle and thread, held to be "embroideries," within the meaning of Act 1890, par. 373. Neuss, Hesslein & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 142 Fed. 281.

On the question of whether certain imported openwork articles were "embroideries," within the meaning of a tariff act, the only evidence was the testimony of a clerk of the importers testifying in their behalf, who had never bought or sold embroideries, and whose only knowledge was as to the designation of the goods in the linen trade. Held, that this testimony was insufficient to establish the commercial scope of the expression "embroideries," or to prove that the goods, though embroidered in fact, were not embroidery in a commercial sense. Id.

Articles upon which the only embroidery consisted of a single initial letter were not dutiable as "embroideries," etc., under paragraph 373 of Act 1890. U. S. v. Amster (C. C. 1896) 71 Fed. 958, applying U. S. v. Harden (1895) 15 C. C. A. 358, 68 Fed. 182.

A fabric made on a loom with a Jacquard attachment, and which is not known in the trade as "embroidery," or an "article of wearing apparel embroidered by hand or machine," cannot be classified under Act Oct. 1, 1890, par. 373. In re Fellheimer (C. C. 1894) 66 Fed. 720.

Certain importations were entered at the port of New York in February and March, 1891, consisting of goods invoiced as wool robes with silk embroidery, silk and metal embroidery, and silk and cotton embroidery, which were in fact combination dress patterns, composed of worsted material separated into two parts, one part containing the embroidery and the other part being plain, the value of each robe, consisting of two pieces, as above, being stated on the invoice as an entirety, and the value of each robe being given in francs. Said merchandise was classified for duty by the collector as "manufactures of worsted embroidered," and duty assessed thereon at the rate of 60 cents per pound and 60 per cent. ad valorem, under paragraph 398, Schedule K, and the proviso contained in paragraph 373 of Schedule J of Act October 1, 1890. Protest by the importer, claiming that the merchandise was dutiable under paragraph 395, Schedule K, of said tariff act, at the rate of 44 cents per pound and 50 per cent. ad valorem. Held, that the decision of the board of general appraisers, segregating the values of the robes so as to assess the duty upon the embroidered and plain parts of each robe separately, should be affirmed. In re Crowly (C. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 465, judgment affirmed In re Crowley (1893) 55 Fed. 283, 5 C. C. A. 109.

Cotton canvas, embroidered with worsted, valued at over 80 cents per pound, held properly dutiable at 35 cents per pound and 40 per centum ad valorem, under the provision in Schedule K of Act March 3, 1883, for "all manufactures of every description composed wholly or in part of worsted, not specially enumerated or provided for," and not at 35 per centum ad valorem, under the provision in Schedule I of the same act, for "all manufactures of cotton not specially enumerated or provided for." Ullmann v. Hedden (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 95, distinguishing Kohlsaat v. Murphy (1877) 96 U. S. 153, 24 L. Ed. 844.

Paragraph 349, Act 1909, provides not only for embroidered articles, but for fabrics embroidered in any manner by hand or machinery. The paragraph specifies the embroidered fabrics of the importation and as the completed article is in chief value of such fabric and has added the Lever or Gothrough lace, it comes directly within the terms of the proviso and is subject to the highest rate of duty. Altman & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 170.

Initials embroidered on cotton shirts makes of the shirts embroidered articles, and the importation was dutiable as such under paragraph 339, Act 1897. Woodruff & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 186.

12. Featherstitch braids.—Featherstitch braid prior to Act 1897, which shifted braids from the lower duty of the notion schedule (paragraph 320), to the highest duty of the trimming schedule (paragraph 339), held dutiable at 60 per cent. under the trimming schedule as cotton braids, and not at 45 per cent. under the notions schedule, as bindings or tapes. U. S. v. Baruch (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 306, 223 U. S. 191, 56 L. Ed. 399, reversing decree Baruch v. U. S. (1909) 172 Fed. 342, 97 C. C. A. 40.

Featherstitch braids, so called, which are not produced by braiding, but by a process of weaving, but which are known commercially as braids, held within the provision for "braids" in paragraph 339, Act 1897. Vom Baur v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 141 Fed. 439.

13. Galloons.—In construing paragraph 263, Act 1894, relating to cotton "galloons," held as to certain cotton bands, in widths not less than one inch, with perfectly straight or plain selvedged edges, which are used in trimming hats, that, although such articles, up to an inch in width, may be known as "galloons" in trade and commerce, they are not so known when their width exceeds one inch. U. S. v. Walter H. Graef & Co. (1904) 127 Fed. 688, 62 C. C. A. 414, reversing judgment Walter H. Graef & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 120 Fed. 1015.

The provision in Act 1897, par. 390, for galloons or trimmings, includes narrow strips of silk having interwoven thereon ornamental designs, which are chiefly used to decorate and embellish women's apparel. J. Loewenthal & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 180 Fed. 941.

Certain articles which in a broad sense are trimmings, embroideries, and articles made of lace, but which in a specific sense are galloons, and are known as galloons, held dutiable under Act 1894, pars. 263, 300, for "galloons," and not under the provisions in paragraph 276 or 301, for trimmings, embroideries, articles made of lace, etc., "not specially provided for." Meyer v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 124 Fed. 296.

Narrow metal braid, bearing square beads of glass, used for trimming ladies' garments, and known commercially as "galloon," held dutiable as such under Act 1883, par. 427, and not as "bead ornaments," under paragraph 396, nor, under paragraph 216, as "manufactures of metal not otherwise specifically provided for." Loewenthal v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 91 Fed. 644.

Cotton hat trimmings, of the variety called "galloons," held dutiable as galloons, under paragraph 263 of Act 1894, and not as "trimmings of which cotton is the component material of chief value, not specifically provided for," under paragraph 276. Wotton v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 84 Fed. 954.

14. Handkerchiefs.—Initialed handkerchiefs held not dutiable as embroidered handkerchiefs. See paragraphs 255, 282.

Handkerchiefs composed of linen cambric, and embroidered with cotton, known as "embroidered handkerchiefs," and of which the embroidery is a substantial part, held dutiable at 35 per cent. ad valorem, under paragraph 8, Schedule J, of Act March 3, 1883, which includes "brown and bleached linens, * * * handkerchiefs, lawns, or other manufactures of flax," and not at 30 per cent., under paragraph 11 of the same schedule, which includes "flax or linen laces, and insertings, embroideries, or manufactures of linen, if embroidered, * * * and not specially enumerated or provided for in this act." Robertson v. Glendinning (1889) 10 Sup. Ct. 44, 132 U. S. 158, 33 L. Ed. 298.

Embroidered handkerchiefs, although both hemstitched and embroidered, held dutiable under paragraph 276 of Act 1894, as "embroidered handkerchiefs"; such words being descriptive, and not a trade-name. Field v. U. S. (1898) 90 Fed. 412, 33 C. C. A. 138.

All embroidered handkerchiefs, whether they are hemstitched, imitation hemstitched, scalloped, initialed, plain, reverse, or otherwise, are dutiable as embroidered handkerchiefs, under paragraph 276 of Act 1894; the term "embroidered handkerchiefs," in that paragraph, being descriptive, and not a commercial or trade designation. Carson v. Nixon (1898) 90 Fed. 409, 33 C. C. A. 135.

Under Act 1890, par. 373, the provision for "embroidered and hemstitched handkerchiefs" covers only handkerchiefs which are both embroidered and hemstitched, and these words cannot be taken distributively, so as to include handkerchiefs which are embroidered only, or hemstitched only. In re Gribbon (1893) 55 Fed. 874, 5 C. C. A. 287, affirming (C. C. 1892) 53 Fed. 78.

Act 1897, par. 345, provides for handkerchiefs, hemmed, hemstitched, etc.; the duty being increased for each of these stages of elaboration. And paragraph 339 provides a still higher rate for "handkerchiefs * * * in part of lace * * * not elsewhere specially provided for." Held, that it was the intention of Congress to advance the duty in accordance with the advancement of the goods in condition, and that hemstitched lace-trimmed handkerchiefs are dutiable under the latter rather than the former paragraph. Glendinning, McLeish & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 162 Fed. 910.

Certain handkerchiefs, composed of linen and cotton, imported under Act 1890, consisting—First, of handkerchiefs with a hemstitched border; second, of handkerchiefs embroidered or scalloped on the edge, and not hemstitched; and, third, of handkerchiefs with a hemstitched border, and embroidered either with initial letters or with figures worked by hand or machinery—held dutiable, the hemstitched handkerchiefs, under paragraph 349 of said act, at 50 per centum ad valorem, as "handkerchiefs;" those with embroidered edge as textile fabrics embroidered by hand or machinery, under the proviso in paragraph 373, at 60 per centum ad valorem; and only those handkerchiefs which are embroidered and also hemstitched are dutiable as such under paragraph 373 of said act. In re Gribbon (C. C. 1892) 53 Fed. 78, judgment affirmed (1893) 55 Fed. 874, 5 C. C. A. 287.

The merchandise is composed in chief value of one or more of the materials or goods specified in paragraph 349, Act 1909, and relating to laces and handkerchiefs. By the terms of the first proviso of that paragraph, such articles are made dutiable at a rate not less than the highest imposed by the first section of the act on any of the materials entering into their composition. Conformably to this proviso, the rate of duty is determined by paragraph 350, Act 1909, at 70 per cent. ad valorem. Stein & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 519.

15. Haussegen or wall mottoes.—Certain so-called "Haussegen," or wall mottoes, consisting of pasteboard cards with mottoes sewn thereon, and with various pictures surrounded by wreaths, affixed thereto by some adhesive material, held dutiable under paragraph 339, Act 1897, relating to appliqued or embroidered articles, and not under paragraph 407 of said act as manufactures in chief value of paper. Kaufmann v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 468.

16. Laces in general.—Insertions held not dutiable as lace. See paragraph 318.

Parasol covers held not dutiable as laces. See paragraph 318.

Laces, cigar ribbons, galloons, and braids, made of silk and cotton, but the silk so preponderating that they are substantially silk, held dutiable at 60 per cent. ad valorum as silk laces, ribbons, etc., under section 8 of Act 1864. Swan v. Arthur (1880) 103 U. S. 597, 26 L. Ed. 525.

Lace cannot be held dutiable as embroidery, because Congress has in successive tariff acts distinguished between the two. U. S. v. J. R. Simon & Co. (1909) 169 Fed. 106, 95 C. C. A. 434, writ of certiorari denied (1910) 30 Sup. Ct. 411, 215 U. S. 610, 54 L. Ed. 348.

Act 1897, par. 339, relating to "articles made * * * of lace," includes goods made by sewing together pieces of lace produced in shapes designed to be used in making the articles; the term "lace" not being restricted to articles made up from lace that is bought and sold by the yard. Goldenberg Bros. & Co. v. U. S. (1908) 157 Fed. 1003, 85 C. C. A. 678, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 152 Fed. 658.

Collars and cuffs composed of braids sewn together and ornamented with cords and threads held dutiable as "wearing apparel * * * in imitation of lace," under Act 1897, par. 339. It is not necessary that articles coming within this provision should be imitation lace as known to the trade. U. S. v. D. S. Hesse & Bro. (1907) 158 Fed. 407, 85 C. C. A. 517, reversing judgment D. S. Hesse & Bro. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 171, and writ of certiorari denied D. S. Hesse v. U. S. (1908) 28 Sup. Ct. 762, 210 U. S. 434, 52 L. Ed. 1136.

Lace neckwear is more specifically provided for in paragraph 339, Act 1897, as "wearing apparel * * * made wholly or in part of lace," than in paragraph 314 of said act as "articles of wearing apparel of every description, including neckties or neckwear." Goldenberg Bros. & Co. v. U. S. (1904) 130 Fed. 108, 64 C. C. A. 442, affirming judgment (C. C. 1903) 124 Fed. 1003, and writ of certiorari denied Goldenburg Bros. & Co. v. Same (1904) 25 Sup. Ct. 791, 195 U. S. 634, 49 L. Ed. 354.

The distinction between real lace and imitation lace is that the former is made by hand and the latter upon machines. D. S. Hesse & Bro. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 171, judgment reversed U. S. v. D. S. Hesse & Bro. (1907) 158 Fed. 407, 85 C. C. A. 517, writ of certiorari denied D. S. Hesse & Bro. v. U. S. (1908) 28 Sup. Ct. 762, 210 U. S. 434, 52 L. Ed. 1136.

The names given to articles by retailers puffing their wares, and by the women who buy them, do not control in the classification of merchandise under the tariff laws, and goods are not classifiable as lace simply because they are usually dealt in by the retail trade in this country as "lace" articles. Id.

Tidies made of flax, and known commercially as "Renaissance lace tidies," or "Renaissance tidies," made of tape, thread, and rings, held dutiable under paragraph 276 of Act 1894 as laces or articles made wholly or in part of lace composed of flax, and not under paragraph 277, as manufactures of flax not specially provided for. U. S. v. Van Blankensteyn (C. C. 1898) 91 Fed. 977.

The commercial designations "laces" and "lace" are not confined to lace which is sold by the yard only, but may include articles made of lace. Id.

Laces of which wool or worsted is a component material were dutiable under paragraph 398 of Act 1890, and did not come under paragraph 413, even though silk is the component material of chief value. Levi v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 87 Fed. 193.

Lace aprons are dutiable at 50 per cent. ad valorem as "articles of wearing apparel," under paragraph 349 of Act 1890, and not as "articles made wholly or in part of lace," under paragraph 373 of the same act. In re Boyd (C. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 731, judgment reversed (1893) 55 Fed. 599, 5 C. C. A. 223.

Paragraph 358 provides for laces, articles of lace, and all articles or fabrics made wholly or in part of lace of any kind, of whatever yarns, threads, or filaments such laces, articles, or fabrics may be composed, and as well for nets, nettings, flouncings, edgings, and insertings of whatever yarns, threads, or filaments composed. This furnishes a more specific description of the goods here and controls. Wilson & Son v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 255.

17. —— Cotton laces.—By Schedule D to the act of July 30, 1846, a duty of 25 per cent. ad valorem was imposed on "cotton laces, cotton insertings," and "manufactures composed wholly of cotton, not otherwise provided for." By Act March 3, 1857, § 1, the duties on the articles enumerated in Schedules C and D, Act 1846, were fixed at 24 and 19 per cent., respectively, "with such exceptions as are hereinafter made." By Id. § 2, "all manufactures composed wholly of cotton, which are bleached, printed, painted, or dyed, and delaines," were transferred to Schedule C. Held, that laces and insertings composed wholly of cotton, and bleached or dyed, were dutiable at 24 per cent., under Act 1857. Cochran v. Schell (1883) 107 U. S. 617, 2 Sup. Ct. 301, 27 L. Ed. 490.

In reference to the provision for "cotton laces" in Act 1883, held, that evidence was admissible as to whether it had a commercial meaning differing from its ordinary signification, and as to what articles such meaning included. Mills v. Robertson (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 634.

The provision for "cotton laces" in Act 1883, would, in its ordinary significance, no contrary trade understanding being proved, include not only laces dealt in by the yard but made-up articles which are produced originally as lace only in the process of making the completed article. Id.

Made-up articles of cotton lace, such as collars, cuffs, handkerchiefs, tidies, etc., held dutiable, under Act 1883, as cotton lace. Sidenberg v. Robertson (C. C. 1890) 41 Fed. 763.

In order to take made-up articles of cotton lace, such as collars, cuffs, handkerchiefs, tidies, etc., out of the operation of Act 1883, it must be shown not only that they are always bought and sold by specific names, but also that the term "cotton lace," as used in commerce, has a restricted meaning that would exclude such articles. Id.

18. —— Silk laces.—Silk goods made in the manner of laces held not dutiable as silk laces. See paragraph 318.

Under Act 1864, imposing a duty of 60 per cent. on "silk laces" and a duty of 50 per cent. on "all manufactures of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, not otherwise provided for," an article of silk and cotton, bought and sold as "spotted or dotted net," but which was a lace, in which silk was the component material of chief value, was a "silk lace," and subject to a duty of 60 per cent. Drew v. Grinnell (1885) 6 Sup. Ct. 117, 115 U. S. 477, 29 L. Ed. 453.

Laces made substantially of silk, although cotton forms a part thereof, were subject to a duty of 60 per cent. ad valorem, under 13 Stat. 181. Swan v. Arthur (1880) 103 U. S. 597, 26 L. Ed. 525.

"Silk laces," as used in Act 1864, § 8, embraced all laces made of silk, except such as are specifically known exactly by other terms used in the tariff acts. Jaffray v. Murphy (C. C. 1874) Fed. Cas. No. 7,172.

19. —— Thread laces.—Under R. S. § 2504, Schedule C, laces made by machinery out of linen thread, and known as "torchons," were dutiable at 40 per cent. ad valorem, as "manufactures of flax," and could not be classed under Schedule C, p. 463, as "thread lace," dutiable at 30 per cent. ad valorem, which is always handmade. Meyerheim v. Robertson (1892) 144 U. S. 601, 12 Sup. Ct. 754, 36 L. Ed. 599.

In an action against the collector of customs for the amount of certain duties alleged to have been illegally imposed under this section upon articles invoiced as "white linen torchon laces and insertings," the court properly left it to the jury to determine whether the lace imported by plaintiffs was "thread lace" such as is meant and described in the statute, and properly instructed them that if it did not come under that general designation they should find for defendant, that it made no difference whether the lace was known to commerce at the time the law was enacted, and that, if brought into use afterwards and came under the general designation of "thread lace," the government must accept the duty imposed by the law upon that article. Smith v. Field (1881) 105 U. S. 52, 26 L. Ed. 1007.

A distinction between "silk lace" and "thread lace" ran through former tariff acts for many years. Arthur v. Lahey (1877) 96 U. S. 112, 115, 24 L. Ed. 766.

Thread lace, made wholly by machinery, composed of linen and cotton, introduced since Act July 30, 1846, took effect, held dutiable as "thread laces," in Schedule E. Lottimer v. Lawrence (C. C. 1850) Fed. Cas. No. 8,521.

20. Military ornaments. — Epaulets (military ornaments) composed in chief value of metal threads are more specifically classifiable as "ornaments; * * * of whatever yarns, threads, or filaments composed," under paragraph 358, Act 1913, than as "articles made wholly or in chief value of * * * metal threads, not specially provided for," under the provisions of paragraph 150 of the act. Horstman Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 458.

21. Neck rufflings.—In construing Act 1894, par. 276, which relates to "neck rufflings, * * * and articles made wholly or in part of * * * rufflings," held, that the word "neck" should not be re-read in connection with the word "rufflings," and that cotton curtains made in part of rufflings are dutiable under said paragraph, and not under paragraph 264 of said act as "manufactures of cotton." Brill v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 123 Fed. 845.

22. Net.—The merchandise consists of nettings, all of which are Jacquard figured, and the relevant paragraphs in Act 1913 are 258 and 358. "Jacquard figured upholstery goods" in paragraph 258 restricts the operation of the term to goods whose chief use is as upholstery goods, the precise character of these upholstery goods being there defined, and accordingly the description applies to articles that might otherwise be appropriately designated nets or nettings under paragraph 358. Carter & Son v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 253.

The goods are nets such as are worn by women on the head to keep the hair in place. They are accordingly articles of wearing apparel, but they are the more specifically provided for in paragraph 358, Act 1913, by the eo nomine provision "nets." Proctor Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 119.

Lever and Gothrough machines enumerated in paragraph 197, Act 1909, are machines equipped with a Jacquard attachment. The testimony here is clear and explicit that the hair nets of the importation were not manufactured on a machine of this type nor on a transformed Lever or Gothrough machine, but on plain net machines having their own special names and distinguished by differences of form and mechanical movement. The goods were properly assessable under paragraph 402 of the act. U. S. v. Mills & Duflot (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 534.

23. —— Cotton net.—Cotton net, cut into narrow strips, or small pieces, and known to the trade as "cotton net," "cotton net cut," "hat tips," "hat crowns," or "hat sides," held dutiable as cotton nettings, under Act 1894, par. 276, and not as manufactures of cotton under paragraph 264. Tilge v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 254.

Cotton is a vegetable fiber, and merchandise composed of cotton net, if embroidered with a design in artificial silk, cotton being the component of chief value, falls for dutiable purposes within the last proviso of paragraph 349, Act 1909, namely, that no article or fabric of any description composed of flax or other vegetable fiber, or of which these materials or any of them is the component of chief value, when embroidered shall pay a less duty than the duty there fixed. Shoninger v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 125.

24. —— Silk spot net.—Silk spot nets and dotted nets held dutiable at 60 per cent. ad valorem, and not at 50 per cent. ad valorem, under section 8 of Act 1864. Morrison v. Miller (C. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 82.

25. Proviso under former acts that embroidered, etc., articles shall not be dutiable at a less amount than the material plain.—Act 1897, par. 339, provides "that no wearing apparel, * * * when embroidered, shall pay duty at a less rate than that imposed in any schedule of this act upon any embroideries of the materials of which such embroidery is composed." Held, that under this provision valuable fur garments, to which embroidered silk adornments have been attached are subject to the duty provided for silk embroideries. Hugo Jaeckel & Son v. U. S. (1910) 178 Fed. 260, 101 C. C. A. 620, affirming judgment Jaeckel & Sons v. Same (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 292.

The proviso in paragraph 339, Act 1897, prescribing that no embroidered wearing apparel, etc., "shall pay duty at a less rate than that imposed in any schedule * * * upon any of the embroideries of the materials of which such embroidery is composed," is not restricted to the articles previously enumerated in the same paragraph, but extends to other portions of the act. Silk-embroidered cotton hosiery is therefore dutiable at the rate applicable to silk embroideries, when such rate exceeds that provided for cotton hosiery in paragraph 318. Carter, Webster & Co. v. U. S. (1906) 143 Fed. 256, 74 C. C. A. 394, affirming judgment (C. C. 1905) 137 Fed. 978, and writ of certiorari denied 26 Sup. Ct. 764, 202 U. S. 617, 50 L. Ed. 1173.

The main object of Act 1890, par. 373, providing that embroidered wearing apparel and textile fabrics shall not pay a less rate of duty than that fixed upon embroideries of the materials of which they are composed, was to prevent the classification by their specific names of articles embroidered with some material, which classification would render them dutiable at a lower rate than embroideries of that material; but such articles may be dutiable at a greater rate, because a higher duty may be imposed upon articles of that specific description. In re Schefer (1893) 53 Fed. 1011, 4 C. C. A. 153, affirming decree (C. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 826.

Under the proviso in Act 1897, par. 339, prescribing that embroidered articles shall not pay a less rate of duty than is applicable to "any embroideries of the materials of which such embroidery is composed," held, that silk-embroidered screens, composed of wood and other materials, are liable to the rate provided for silk embroideries in paragraph 390. The rule of "noscitur a sociis" does not operate to exclude such articles by reason of the enumeration in the same paragraph of laces, trimmings, etc. Lichtenstein Millinery Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 736.

In the first proviso to paragraph 349, Act 1909, there was no purpose to use the term "article" in the restricted sense of something completed. Field v. United States (1896) 73 Fed. 808, 20 C. C. A. 19. And the connection in which the term "laces" occurs indicates that laces were regarded and treated as articles—articles composed of material or goods specified in the paragraph—thus differentiating this case from Altman v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 170. The aim was to bring within the higher rate the article which had the more expensive work done upon it. Stiner & Son v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 246.

In the proviso to paragraph 349, Act 1909, "goods" has no broader signification than as stated, and it was not there intended to include a completed article in terms provided for elsewhere. The plain cotton underwear with lace added thereto of the importation does not fall within the named proviso. Altman & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 170.

"Materials" means that from which an article is made up. "Goods" has a broader signification and includes the material upon which some work has been performed, and applies so long as these retain their character of not being manufactured into an article. Id.

The importations consisting of parasols of cotton, linen or silk embroidered or appliquéd were made, some under Act 1897 and the remainder under the act of 1909. The question raised is whether the proviso to paragraph 339 of the first act and the provisos to paragraphs 349 and 402 of the last act may be construed to exclude from their operation, respectively, paragraph 462, Act 1897, and paragraph 478, Act 1909, and so affect the duty on the parasols of the importation. There seems to be nothing in the language of the provisos that would limit their operation, and a fair interpretation requires that they should be held to cover the goods here. They were properly applied in making the assessment. Claflin Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 401. See, also, U. S. v. Harper (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 101.

The proviso to paragraph 402, Act 1909, "That tamboured, embroidered, or appliquéd articles or fabrics shall pay no less rate of duty than that imposed upon the material if not so tamboured, embroidered, or appliquéd," is operative only when it appears that the duty on the articles or fabrics with the appliqué removed would under paragraph 399 of that act exceed the duty at sixty per centum provided by paragraph 402. U. S. v. Vietor (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 297.

26. "Scalloped by hand or machinery." —"Scalloped by hand or machinery for any purpose," as these words appear in paragraph 349, Act 1909, must be taken to provide that if an article in other respects within the provisions of the paragraph has been in fact scalloped by hand or machinery it is dutiable thereunder regardless of the purpose for which the scalloping was done, and it is not necessary that the article should be otherwise ornamented or embroidered. Gardner & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 477.

27. Screens. — Silk-embroidered screens composed of wood and other materials held liable to the rate provided for silk embroideries in paragraph 390, Act 1897. Lichtenstein Millinery Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 736.

The merchandise is screens of embroidered silk panels with wooden frameworks. Silk is concededly the component material of chief value. These screens are not fairly to be considered "screens of wood," but rather as articles in chief value of silk. They are accordingly dutiable as such under paragraph 402, Act 1909. Vantine & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 488.

On a review of the statutes and the decisions founded on the statutes, it is held that screens with panels of cotton, ornamented with embroidered designs or with figures appliquéd thereon, were not dutiable as furniture or as a manufacture of cotton under Act 1897, but were dutiable under paragraph 339 of that act at 60 per cent. as "other articles" embroidered or appliquéd. Morimura Bros. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 181.

28. Tamboured articles.—Tamboured pillow shams, consisting of a fine cotton fabric, ornamented with figures and designs in tambour work, in general appearance very like embroidery, held dutiable under Act 1890, par. 373, as "other similar tamboured articles," and not under paragraph 355. Lahey v. U. S. (1896) 71 Fed. 870, 18 C. C. A. 341, appeal dismissed U. S. v. Lahey (1897) 89 Fed. 1020, 32 C. C. A. 612.

29. Trimmings. — Astrachan trimmings held dutiable as pile fabrics. See paragraph 309.

Bands of cotton woven in widths held not dutiable as trimmings. See paragraph 266.

Garnitures and hussar sets held not dutiable as trimmings. See paragraph 318.

Ribbons held not dutiable as trimmings. See paragraphs 316, 318.

Tunics, motifs, garnitures, and gimps of bead held not dutiable as trimmings. See paragraph 333.

Under Act 1883, ribbons made of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, and which the jury found are commonly and principally used in trimming hats, held dutiable at 20 per cent. ad valorem, as "hat trimmings," under Schedule N, and not at 50 per cent., under Schedule L, as unenumerated silk merchandise. Walker v. Seeberger (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 983, 149 U. S. 541, 37 L. Ed. 839; Robertson v. Edelhoff (1890) 10 Sup. Ct. 186, 132 U. S. 614, 33 L. Ed. 477; Hartranft v. Langfeld (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 732, 125 U. S. 128, 31 L. Ed. 672; Cadwalader v. Wanamaker (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 979, 983, 149 U. S. 532, 37 L. Ed. 837; Hartranft v. Meyer (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 982, 983, 149 U. S. 544, 37 L. Ed. 840.

Under Act 1883, goods composed, some entirely of silk, some chiefly of silk, and some chiefly of metal, and known by the general name of "trimmings," though they have specific names to distinguish one from the other, and some of which are used exclusively, and the others chiefly, for the making and ornamenting of hats, bonnets, and hoods, were dutiable at 20 per cent., under Schedule N, as trimmings for hats, etc., and not at 50 per cent. for the goods composed wholly or chiefly of silk, and 45 per cent. for those composed chiefly of metal, under Schedules L and C, respectively. Walker v. Seeberger (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 981, 982, 149 U. S. 541, 37 L. Ed. 839; Id. (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 983, 149 U. S. 532, 541, 544, 37 L. Ed. 839, reversing Walker v. Seeberger (D. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 724, and following Cadwalader v. Wanamaker (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 979, 149 U. S. 532, 37 L. Ed. 837.

Under Act March 3, 1883, piece goods composed of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, which are bought and sold under the commercial designation of "chinas" and "marcelines," and which the jury finds are "trimmings," chiefly used in making hats and bonnets, were dutiable at 20 per cent., as trimmings used in making or ornamenting hats, bonnets, and hoods, and not at 50 per cent., under Schedule L, as unenumerated silk merchandise. Mr. Justice Brewer and Mr. Justice Brown, dissenting, on the ground that these articles are not "trimmings." Hartranft v. Meyer (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 982, 149 U. S. 544, 37 L. Ed. 840, following Cadwalader v. Wanamaker (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 979, 149 U. S. 532, 37 L. Ed. 837.

Ribbons composed of silk and cotton, silk being the component material of chief value, which are used exclusively for ornamenting hats and bonnets, not being specifically named in Act March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 510), are dutiable as "trimmings" for hats, under Schedule N, "Sundries," of the act, which provides the duty for "hats, and so forth, materials for [naming eight articles, including 'trimmings'], used for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets, and hoods, composed of straw, chip, grass, palm leaf, willow, hair, whalebone, or any other substance or material, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act," as the words, "composed of" and "not specially enumerated," refer to the eight articles previously specified; and such ribbons are not dutiable under Schedule L, "Silk and Silk Goods," of the act, which provides the duty for "all goods, wares, and merchandise not specially enumerated or provided for in this act, made of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value." Robertson v. Edelhoff (1890) 10 Sup. Ct. 186, 132 U. S. 614, 33 L. Ed. 477.

A charge to the jury, where all the evidence showed that the goods were "trimmings," that it is the use to which articles are chiefly adapted, and for which they are used, which determines their character within the meaning of the act; that they will therefore determine to which use the articles are chiefly devoted; if they are hat trimmings, and used for making and ornamenting hats, then the rate of duty imposed was excessive, and the plaintiff is entitled to recover; if they are chiefly used for other purposes, the defendants must recover—fairly presents the question, under 22 St. 512, which provides for a duty on trimmings used for making or ornamenting hats. Hartranft v. Langfeld (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 732, 733, 125 U. S. 128, 31 L. Ed. 672.

Ornaments, loops, etc., manufactured separately, but temporarily stitched together in six-yard lengths for convenience and economy in handling and carding, and used singly in decorating garments, held not "trimmings or galloons," within the meaning of Act 1897, par. 390. U. S. v. Hilbert (1909) 171 Fed. 69, 96 C. C. A. 173.

In Act 1897, par. 390, the term "trimmings" is used in a commercial, rather than a descriptive sense. Naday & Fleischer v. U. S. (1908) 164 Fed. 44, 90 C. C. A. 462, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 155 Fed. 303.

Certain woven cotton articles, from 1 to 2½ inches wide, chiefly used as hat bands for trimming men's hats, held to be dutiable as "trimmings" of cotton, under paragraph 276, Act 1894, and not as "galloons," under paragraph 263 of said act, nor as "manufactures of cotton * * * not specially provided for," under paragraph 264 of said act. U. S. v. Walter H. Graef & Co. (1904) 127 Fed. 688, 62 C. C. A. 414, reversing judgment Walter H. Graef & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 120 Fed. 1015.

Silk and cotton trimmings, silk chief value, and cotton more than 25 per cent. in value, used for making or ornamenting hats, and commercially known as hat bands, hat trimmings, bands, and bindings, held dutiable under R. S. § 2504, schedule M (Heyl, par. 1300), as hat trimmings not otherwise provided for, and not under schedule H (Heyl, par. 1113), as manufactures of which silk is the component of chief value, not otherwise provided for; the former paragraph being the more specific. Robertson v. Edelhoff (1899) 91 Fed. 642, 34 C. C. A. 34.

While ribbons that must be made up into bows, rosettes, and the like before being used for purposes of trimming or ornamentation held not dutiable as "trimmings," under Act 1897, par. 390, goods are so dutiable which are manufactured with ornamentation and characteristic design to be used as a trimming, and intended to be so used without anything further being done to them. Naday & Fleischer v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 155 Fed. 303, judgment affirmed (1908) 164 Fed. 44, 90 C. C. A. 462.

So-called mourning crapes, consisting of all silk fabrics in the piece, of the width known as "4/4," held not dutiable as "woven fabrics in the piece not specially provided for," under paragraph 387 of Act 1897, but as "trimmings * * * made of silk, * * * not specially provided for," under paragraph 390 of said act. Robinson v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 122 Fed. 970.

When the use of an article is the criterion of its classification, as in the case of "trimmings * * * used for making or ornamenting hats" (Act March 3, 1883, § 7), it is its chief use which is controlling. Meyer v. Cadwalader (C. C. 1891) 49 Fed. 26.

In assumpsit to recover an excess of duty alleged to have been paid on imported goods, which plaintiffs claim should have been classified under the clause of Act 1883 providing for a duty of 20 per cent. ad valorem on "braids, plats, flats, laces, trimmings, tissues, willow sheets, and squares used for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets, and hoods, composed of straw," etc., when the goods are acknowledged to be "trimmings," it must be further shown by plaintiffs that they are chiefly used for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets, and hoods. Id.

The fact that the articles are imported by the piece, and must be cut up before they are actually applied to use in making or ornamenting hats, does not exclude them from the class of trimmings, if they are distinctly adapted and chiefly used for trimming hats, bonnets, and hoods, and are not specially enumerated or provided for in the act. Meyer v. Cadwalader (C. C. 1891) 49 Fed. 19.

Hat trimmings held dutiable under the hat-trimming clause of Act 1883, and not under the silk Act Feb. 8, 1875, notwithstanding that silk is their component material of chief value, and that they contain less than 25 per cent. in value of cotton. Id.

The mere fact that chinas and marcelines are bought and sold by those particular names, and are called "linings," does not necessarily exclude them from the class of trimmings if they are in fact trimmings chiefly used either for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets, and hoods. Id.

Clause 448 of Heyl's Index of the New Tariff does not require that trimmings for hats, in order to be strictly dutiable at 20 per cent. ad valorem, shall be composed of any particular material. It is the use for which they are intended, and to which they are applied, that furnishes the criterion by which the duty is to be assessed. Marsh v. Seeberger (C. C. 1887) 30 Fed. 422.

Artificial fruits, with artificial stems and leaves, used only for trimming and ornamenting ladies' hats and bonnets, are "trimmings for hats, bonnets, and hoods," within clause 448 of Heyl's Index of the New Tariff, and subject to duty at 20 per cent. ad valorem. Id.

Though goods are made expressly to be used by milliners in making and ornamenting hats, bonnets, etc., yet, if they have become adapted to other uses to such an extent that the jury can say their chief and principal use is not in the making and ornamenting of hats, etc., there is a failure to show that they ought to have been classed as hat ornaments merely. Fisk v. Seeberger (D. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 718.

Ornaments, known variously to the trade as "drop ornaments," "trimmings," "tassels," "cords and tassels," and "silk tassels," which are composed chiefly of silk cords and threads but partly of other materials, including soutache braid and wood or pasteboard molds, and which are fashioned by knotting the cords into designs so elaborate that they lose their continuity and identity as cords, are not dutiable under paragraph 316, Act 1913, as "cords," or as "cords and tassels." They are tassels, but there being no provision in paragraph 316 for "tassels" as such, they are dutiable as ornaments or trimmings, within those provisions of paragraph 358. Willenborg & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 451.

Trimmings were provided for eo nomine, in paragraph 390, Act 1897. The testimony shows that silk fabrics such as those imported, ½ to 1¼ inches in width, with original designs thereon, are known commercially as trimmings; and they fell within the eo nomine description, although the term is a comprehensive one and may include articles that are sometimes designated by a name more restricted in meaning. The importation was dutiable under paragraph 390, Act 1897. Loewenthal v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 43. See, also, Sidenberg v. Robertson (C. C. 1890) 41 Fed. 763.

30. Veils.—Crape veils held not dutiable as silk veils, but as manufactures of silk. See paragraph 318.

Veils are within Act 1890, par. 349, relating to "articles of wearing apparel of every description." In re Spielman (C. C. 1894) 66 Fed. 724.

Crape veils, made of silk, are presumptively embraced within the term "silk veils," unless commercially known as distinctive articles. Morrison v. Arthur (C. C. 1875) Fed. Cas. No. 9,842.

31. White frilled muslins.—Cotton muslin, in pieces 30 yards by 30 inches, known to the trade as "white frilled muslins," and not as "ruffled flouncings or embroideries," held dutiable under Act 1890, par. 373, as "articles embroidered by hand or machinery," and not under paragraph 355, as "manufactures of cotton not especially provided for." Field v. U. S. (1896) 73 Fed. 808, 20 C. C. A. 19.

359. Chamois skins, 15 per centum ad valorem; pianoforte, pianoforte action, enameled upholstery leather, and glove leathers, 10 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Chamois skins.—These pieces of chamois or chamois skin, the terms being interchangeable, have not become manufactures of leather by being cut into particular sizes and by having their edges scalloped. They remain chamois or chamois skin and were dutiable as such under paragraph 451, Act 1909. U. S. v. American Express Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 125.

Glove leathers.—Dressed lamb and kid skins finished so as to be suitable for making gloves might be designated as either "lambskins dressed and finished" or as "glove leather"; but as the last is the more specific designation it must prevail, and the more certainly since otherwise it would be to deny any significance to "glove leather" in the law. The importation is not dutiable as sheep and goat skins (including lamb and kid skins) dressed and finished under paragraph 451, Act 1909, nor as grain, split, or buff leather under paragraph 450 of that act, but is dutiable as glove leather under paragraph 451. Stiner & Son v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 545.

360. Bags, baskets, belts, satchels, card cases, pocketbooks, jewel boxes, portfolios, and other boxes and cases, made wholly of or in chief value of leather or parchment, not jewelry, and manufactures of leather or parchment, or of which leather or parchment is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 30 per centum ad valorem; any of the foregoing permanently fitted and furnished with traveling, bottle, drinking, dining, luncheon and similar sets, 35 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Belting.
2. Book backs.
3. Chamois skin.
4. Cigar and cigarette cases.
5. Cordovan leather.
6. Furniture nails.
7. Hand bags.
8. Hat sweats.
9. Leather watch guards.
10. Patent leather.
11. State and parchment books.
12. Traveling sets.

1. Belting.—Strips of leather belting, made by gluing together pieces of leather cut to lengths of about 4 feet and so beveled as to give to the strips a uniform thickness when the several pieces have been permanently joined together, are not belting leather cut to form and dutiable under paragraph 451, Act 1909. They are a manufacture of leather and dutiable as such under paragraph 452. Belting leather is a particular kind of leather from which belting is made; leather cut to form is leather cut to shape, but not so far advanced as to constitute a finished, completed manufacture ready for use. The merchandise at bar is belting leather, cut to form and so far advanced as to form belting, a finished product. U. S. v. Kundtz (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 501.

2. Book backs.—These book backs are not mere leather but new articles evolved from leather, bearing a distinctive name, and so processed that they are not only definitely and finally committed to a specific purpose, but they are expressly found to be fitted for no other. They were properly assessed as manufactures of leather under paragraph 452, Act 1909. Devoy v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 444. See, also, Tilge & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 97.

3. Chamois skin.—Pieces of chamois skins by being cut into particular sizes and by having their edges scalloped held not manufactures of leather. See paragraph 359.

4. Cigar and cigarette cases.—Leather-covered cigar and cigarette cases held not dutiable as manufactures of leather. See paragraph 381.

5. Cordovan leather.—Cordovan leather for shoe vamps held not dutiable as manufacture of leather. See paragraph 530.

6. Furniture nails.—Furniture nails of leather and metal held dutiable under paragraph 452, Act 1909. Richard & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 252.

7. Hand bags.—Ladies' hand bags in chief value of leather and ornamented with beads are dutiable as "articles * * * in part of beads," rather than as "manufactures of leather, finished or unfinished, * * * or of which [leather] is the component material of chief value," under Act 1897, pars. 408, 450. U. S. v. Guthman, Solomons & Co. (1907) 159 Fed. 273.

8. Hat sweats.—If it were an original proposition for consideration here there would be some difficulty in holding that by the proviso to paragraph 451, Act 1909, it was the legislative intention to exclude from the operation of that proviso all forms cut from leather which were finished manufactured articles. However, the kindred clause in previous legislation having received a settled construction, the recent enactment must be taken as an enactment in view of that construction; and leather sweat bands or "hat sweats" are dutiable as manufactures of leather under paragraph 452 of that act. Tilge & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 97.

9. Leather watch guards.—Leather watch guards, mounted with cheap miniature bits, stirrups, etc., intended to be worn by horsemen, held not "articles commonly known as jewelry," within paragraph 434, Act 1897, but dutiable as manufactures of leather, under paragraph 450. Veil Bros. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 471.

10. Patent leather.—Patent leather held not dutiable as manufacture of leather. See paragraph 530.

11. State and parchment books.—State and parchment books held not dutiable as card cases and "similar articles." See paragraph 332.

12. Traveling sets.—The included penholder, lead pencil, and lead pencil holder of the importation when put up or assembled in a form which permits of their being conveniently carried by a traveler as a part of the baggage to which he has daily access, may be, and properly are, designated as traveling sets. They were dutiable as such under paragraph 452, Tariff Act 1909. U. S. v. Bartley Bros. & Hall (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 249.

Any combination of toilet articles comes within the definition of "traveling set," provided they are made up to be carried by the traveler and are designed for the toilet or for the care of his person or clothing while traveling. Articles not so designed are not traveling sets. U. S. v. Mark Cross Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 274.

The term "set" as used in paragraph 452, Act 1909, is employed there in its popular rather than in its strict etymological sense, and it is properly to be taken as meaning two or more articles. Id.

There is no evidence here to overcome the presumption in favor of the collector's classification and assessment. It is not made to appear that no manicure sets whatever, together with the leather cases or holders thereof, mentioned in paragraph 452, Act 1909, could constitute a traveling or other similar set within the meaning of the last clause of that paragraph; and this could not be assumed as a matter of law. U. S. v. Arnold & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 49.

361. Gloves, not specially provided for in this section, made wholly or in chief value of leather, whether wholly or partly manufactured, shall pay duty at the following rates, the lengths stated in each case being the extreme length when stretched to their full extent, namely:

Notes of Decisions

Length.—In Act 1897, par. 439, it is prescribed that in determining the length of gloves for duty purposes "the lengths stated in each case" shall be "the extreme length when stretched to their full extent." Held, that slight accidental excesses over the lengths mentioned in the law may be disregarded. U. S. v. Max Mayer & Co. (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 905, judgment affirmed (1909) 175 Fed. 963, 99 C. C. A. 636.

Embroidered kid gloves.—Act 1897, par. 445, relating to gloves "stitched or embroidered with more than three single strands or cords," held not to cover gloves having three rows of embroidery, each of which presents on the back of the gloves the appearance of three-plait crochet work, but is produced by the needle with only one cord or strand of thread. U. S. v. Trefousse, Goguenheim & Co. (1907) 154 Fed. 1005, 83 C. C. A. 679, affirming decree Trefousse, Goguenheim & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 144 Fed. 708.

The provision in paragraph 458 of Act 1890 for "all embroidered gloves with more than three single strands or cords" includes all gloves embroidered on the back with three decorations, each of which is composed of more than a single strand or cord. Wertheimer v. U. S. (1896) 73 Fed. 296, 19 C. C. A. 504, affirming (C. C. 1895) 68 Fed. 186.

Act 1897, par. 445, relating to gloves stitched with more than "three single strands or cords," does not include gloves having but three points each, each point having three distinct rows of stitching, though the stitching shows nine chains of embroidery on the outside of the backs of the gloves and nine single rows of stitching on the inside. U. S. v. La Fetra (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 297, judgment affirmed (1910) 178 Fed. 1006, 101 C. C. A. 665.

Certain embroidered leather gloves, the embroidery being in three rows, each of which presents the appearance of three-plait crochet-work, this effect being produced by the needle with only one cord or strand of thread, are held not to be gloves, "stitched or embroidered with more than three single strands or cords," as provided for in Act 1897, par. 445. U. S. v. Robinson (C. C. 1900) 124 Fed. 1013.

Ladies' kid gloves, embroidered with more than three single strands or cords, are liable to duty under Act 1890, par. 458, in addition to other applicable rates therein specified, though they may be commercially known as "three row embroidered" gloves. Wertheimer v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 68 Fed. 186.

These gloves with so-called arrow-point embroidery are made with a machine carrying a single needle but two threads, stitching up and down the back, and the arrow points are produced by handwork. Whether they were subject to the additional duty provided for by paragraph 459, Act 1909, is to be determined not by the number of rolls or lines of stitching or embroidery but by the number of strands or threads employed in producing the effect; and here, owing to the fact that only two threads were employed, the provision for additional duty cannot apply. The uniform course of opinion with the courts is that these words were, as used in this connection, namely, "strands," "cords," and "threads," equivalent in meaning. Field v. U. S. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 477.

The second class of gloves bore three-point embroideries that were hand stitched. Each of the three points was stitched by the use of only two separate threads, but in each point the two threads are continued so as to form three or four rows or lines. As to these, U. S. v. Wertheimer (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 338, rules, and the doctrine of stare decisis applies. Altman & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 412.

"Stitched or embroidered with not more than three single strands or cords" means the number of threads employed in stitching or embroidering the decoration on the backs of the gloves and not the lines or rows of decoration produced. The Paris point gloves of the importation are not stitched with more than three single strands and are not subject to the additional duty prescribed by paragraph 459, Act 1909. U. S. v. Wertheimer & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 338.

Record held not to show that "strands" and "cords" as applied to gloves have a recognized commercial meaning. Id.

The board found in effect that the testimony and the samples failed to show that the gloves of this importation were not stitched or embroidered with more than three single strands or cords and that they were accordingly subject to the accumulated duties provided for in paragraph 459, Act 1909. To warrant a reversal of this finding it must appear to be wholly without evidence to support it, or that it is clearly contrary to the weight of evidence as offered. Applying this rule, irrespective of any opinion proper on the merits or on a review of the authorities, the testimony and exhibits afford no such warrant, and the board is affirmed. Carson v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 105.

362. Men's, women's, or children's "glacé" finish, Schmaschen (of sheep origin), not over fourteen inches in length, $1 per dozen pairs; over fourteen inches in length, 25 cents additional per dozen pairs for each inch in excess of fourteen inches.

Notes of Decisions

Ladies and children's gloves.—Under paragraph 458 of Act 1890, all gloves which are not men's gloves are to be classed together, as ladies' or children's gloves. Wertheimer v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 71 Fed. 949.

Schmaschen gloves.—Ladies' gloves, 14 inches or less in extreme length, manufactured from the skins of immature kids, imported from Germany, described on the invoice as "schmaschen, low quality," costing from 14.50 to 15.25 marks per dozen, are dutiable as "schmaschen" gloves, under Act Oct. 1, 1890, par. 458, and not as "ladies' kid." In re Holzmaister (C. C. 1894) 61 Fed. 645.

363. All other women's or children's gloves wholly or in chief value of leather, not over fourteen inches in length, $2 per dozen pairs; over fourteen inches in length, 25 cents additional per dozen pairs for each inch in excess of fourteen inches; all men's leather gloves not specially provided for in this section, $2.50 per dozen pairs.

364. In addition to the foregoing rates there shall be paid the following cumulative duties: On all leather gloves when lined with cotton or other vegetable fiber, 25 cents per dozen pairs; when lined with a knitted glove or when lined with silk, leather, or wool, 50 cents per dozen pairs; when lined with fur, $2 per dozen pairs; on all piqué and prixseam gloves, 25 cents per dozen pairs.

Notes of Decisions

Cumulative duties.—Act 1890, par. 458, imposes a duty of 50 per cent. ad valorem on men's leather gloves, and then provides that, in addition to the above rates, there shall be paid on all men's gloves, $1.00 per dozen; on all lined gloves, $1.00 per dozen; on all pique or prick-seam gloves, $.50 per dozen," etc. Held, that these additional rates were alternative, and not cumulative, and that, if the same article was included in two or more classes, it need only pay the rate applicable to the highest of those classes. In re Wertheimer (1893) 55 Fed. 281, 5 C. C. A. 107, affirming (C. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 67.

The provision relative to leather gloves in paragraph 445, Act 1897, that "in addition to the foregoing rates there shall be paid the following cumulative duties," justifies the imposition of more than one of said "cumulative duties" in addition to the rates applicable by virtue of the preceding provisions for gloves. Douillet v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 133 Fed. 1007.

Reviewing the history of the legislation and of the decisions, and having these in mind, it does not appear affirmatively that the finding of fact as made by the board in this case was either contrary to or clearly against the weight of evidence. The gloves were not subject to a cumulative duty under paragraph 445, Act 1897. U. S. v. Germain (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 321.

Prixseam gloves.—"Men's leather gloves, prick-seam and embroidered," held dutiable, under Act 1890, at $1 per dozen and 50 per cent. ad valorem. Wanamaker v. Cooper (C. C. 1895) 69 Fed. 465.

365. Glove tranks, with or without the usual accompanying pieces, shall pay 75 per centum of the duty provided for the gloves in the fabrication of which they are suitable.

366. Manufactures of catgut, or whip gut, or worm gut, including strings for musical instruments; any of the foregoing or of which these substances or any of them is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Catgut.—Catgut and wormgut held not dutiable as manufactures of catgut and wromgut. See paragraph 443.

The coloring here is not a process occurring after the manufacture of the catgut, but pending the manufacture. Whatever the object of the coloring, the articles are manufactured in precisely the same form as the white article, and the colored article is not a manufacture of catgut. U. S. v. American Express Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 36.

This merchandise consists of various strands of gut twisted in the form of a rope or cable and then apparently coated with a light varnish-like material. It clearly falls within the description of a manufacture of catgut. U. S. v. Sheldon & Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 421. See, also, Fischer v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 301.

367. Manufactures of amber, asbestos, bladders, or wax, or of which these substances or any of them is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 10 per centum ad valorem; yarn and woven fabrics composed wholly or in chief value of asbestos, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Albolene.—The article known as "albolene," consisting of a mechanical combination of paraffin, a petroleum product, and ceresia, a fossil wax, the paraffin constituting 80 per cent. of the article by weight, but only four-elevenths of its value, held not a product of petroleum, within paragraph 626, Free List, Act 1897, but dutiable under paragraph 448, as a manufacture of wax. Wm. Ropes & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 123 Fed. 990.

Asbestos.—The merchandise is a plain, loose, open weave of thick asbestos cords. The change in the language of Act 1909 clearly manifests a legislative intention separately to provide for woven asbestos. The goods here are woven fabrics and fell properly under the last clause of paragraph 462 of that act. U. S. v. Grasselli Chemical Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 320.

Wax in general.—"Wax" is not restricted in its meaning by lexicographers, by the courts, or by Congress to substances of animal origin only, but they have included under that name all substances of kindred nature derived from mineral or vegetable sources. U. S. v. Coccaro (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 506.

The paraffin in certain articles held to be wax, which constitutes their value in chief bringing them within paragraph 462 as manufactures of wax, a more specific designation than "articles in part of metal." Id.

The merchandise consists of small articles, resembling in shape and color, but not in size, various fruits or vegetables, and they are designed for use alone in waxing sewing thread. These articles do not substantially simulate artificial fruits and can not be held to be "artificial fruits" within the meaning of paragraph 438, Act 1909. They were properly held dutiable as manufactures of wax under paragraph 462 of that act. U. S. v. Dieckerhoff, Raffloer & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 384.

368. Manufactures of bone, chip, grass, horn, india rubber or gutta-percha, palm leaf, quills, straw, weeds, or whalebone, or of which any of them is the component material of chief value not otherwise specially provided for in this section, shall be subject to the following rates: Manufactures of india rubber or gutta-percha, commonly known as druggists' sundries, 15 per centum ad valorem; manufactures of india rubber or gutta-percha, not specially provided for in this section, 10 per centum ad valorem; palm leaf, 15 per centum ad valorem; bone, chip, horn, quills, and whalebone, 20 per centum ad valorem; grass, straw, and weeds, 25 per centum ad valorem; combs composed wholly of horn or of horn and metal, 25 per centum ad valorem. The terms "grass" and "straw" shall be understood to mean these substances in their natural state, and not the separated fibers thereof.

Notes of Decisions

1. Bags or pouches of rubber.
2. Balata.
3. Baskets.
4. Bone.
5. Braids.
6. Combs.
7. Dental rubber.
8. Dress shields.
9. Elastic goring.
10. Grasses.
11. Mats of straw.
12. Quills.
13. Rubber recoil pads.
14. Shoes.
15. Sponges of rubber.
16. Suspenders.
17. Tennis balls.
18. Tubing of India rubber.
19. Waterproof cloth.
20. Webbing.
21. Wood fiber in strips plaited into sheets.

1. Bags or pouches of rubber.—Small india rubber bags, with a small neck or inlet, which are intended to be inflated with gas, and closed, so as to make them buoyant, and then sold as a child's plaything, are "articles composed of India rubber not specially enumerated or provided for," and assessable under Act March 3, 1883 (Heyl, 454), and not under clause 425 as "toys," as they do not become "toys" until they are inflated by the addition of another material. Paturel v. Robertson (C. C. 1889) 41 Fed. 329 (writ of error dismissed Robertson v. Paturel [1891] 11 Sup. Ct. 1027, 140 U. S. 695, 35 L. Ed. 603); Vanacker v. Seeberger (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 57; Same v. Spalding (C. C. 1885) 24 Fed. 88.

2. Balata.—Without determining balata to be india rubber in the commercial sense, balata is in similitude, india rubber, and was dutiable under paragraph 449, Act of 1897. Robins v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 252.

3. Baskets.—Baskets of wood stained, dyed or painted held not dutiable as manufacture of chip. See paragraph 175.

Baskets made of twisted hinoki wood shavings held dutiable as "manufactures of chip," under Act 1897, par. 449. Morimura Bros. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 167 Fed. 687.

Certain baskets held not to be manufactures of "chip," within the meaning of Act 1897, par. 449. Theodore Ollesheimer & Bros. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 167, judgment affirmed Theodore Ollesheimer & Bro. v. U. S. (1907) 158 Fed. 977, 86 C. C. A. 181.

Baskets made of flat-looking narrow strips of split bamboo and so thin as to be flexible and capable of being woven into a desired form are manufactures of chip and were dutiable under paragraph 449, Act 1897. Tuska v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 535.

4. Bone.—Bones which have been submitted to a process of crushing or grinding, producing an article known commercially as crushed or ground bone, which is fit for other than fertilizing purposes, were dutiable as "manufactures of bone," under paragraph 460 of Act 1890, and were not free under paragraph 511, as "bones crude, or not burned, calcined, ground, steamed, or otherwise manufactured, * * * fit only for fertilizing purposes." Gardiner v. Wise (1898) 84 Fed. 337, 28 C. C. A. 148.

Bones which have been crushed and screened must be regarded as "otherwise manufactured," within Act 1890, par. 511, and therefore are not admissible free, but are subject to duty as "manufactures of bone," under par. 460. In re Gardner (C. C. 1895) 72 Fed. 494.

5. Braids.—Elastic cords and braids held not dutiable as manufactures of india rubber. See paragraph 318.

In Act 1897, par. 339, the provision for braids "wholly or in chief value of * * * cotton, * * * whether composed in part of india rubber or otherwise," applies only to braids in which cotton is the chief or only component. Braids in part of cotton and in chief value of rubber are dutiable under paragraph 449, as "manufactures in chief value of india rubber." Horrax v. U. S. (1909) 167 Fed. 526, 93 C. C. A. 22.

6. Combs.—Since they most nearly resemble combs made of horn, in accordance with the terms of paragraph 481, Act 1909, combs made of gallilith are dutiable under paragraph 463 of that act. Strauss & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 203.

7. Dental rubber.—Dental rubber, although composed of a mixture of rubber with sulphur and coloring matter, is dutiable as an "article composed of india rubber," at 25 per cent. ad valorem, under Schedule N. The word "article" includes things partly or not at all manufactured, as well as those completely manufactured. Junge v. Hedden (1892) 13 Sup. Ct. 88, 89, 146 U. S. 233, 36 L. Ed. 953.

8. Dress shields.—Held, that certain wearing apparel, consisting of dress shields, and composed in chief value of rubber, and in part of cotton, held dutiable as manufactures in chief value of india rubber, under paragraph 460, Act 1890, and not under paragraph 349, relating to wearing apparel composed of cotton, or in chief value thereof, and to such wearing apparel "having india rubber as a component material." Darlington, Runk & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 136 Fed. 716.

Dress shields, made of cotton and India rubber, the latter being the component material of chief value, held dutiable as manufactures of India rubber, under Act 1890, par. 460, and not under the proviso of paragraph 349, which is confined to clothing and wearing apparel of which cotton is the component part of chief value. Riley v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 741.

9. Elastic goring.—Elastic goods used to insert in the upper part of shoes or gaiters held not dutiable as fabrics in part of india rubber. See paragraph 292.

10. Grasses.—Bleached or dyed grasses held not dutiable as manufactures of grass. See paragraph 347.

Shida baskets, composed of vegetable fiber derived from ferns, held not dutiable by similitude, as manufactures of grass, etc., under Act 1897, par. 449. Butler Bros. v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 181 Fed. 402.

Certain grasses are held to be more specifically provided for as manufactures of grass under Act 1897, par. 449, than as "artificial grains, leaves, or flowers," under paragraph 425. Bayersdorfer & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 171 Fed. 286.

"Straw" and "grass" in popular usage have never been applied to fibers taken from the bark of trees, but even if bark fiber were regarded as vegetable fiber of like kind with ordinary grass and straw, paragraph 463, Act 1909, would not apply. That paragraph is expressly limited to manufactures of grass and straw in their natural form and structure. Brown & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 396.

11. Mats of straw.—Paragraph 272, Act 1913, provides clearly and without ambiguity for mats and rugs having a warp of cotton, etc., and nothing appears which would warrant the court in rejecting the plain meaning of the language used and making search for some other signification. The mats here were not woven and had no warp, but were made of braids of straw sewn together with cotton. Held, that they did not fall within the provisions of paragraph 272, but were properly assessed at 25 per cent. ad valorem under paragraph 368. Akawo, Morimura & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 379.

12. Quills.—Toothpicks held not dutiable as quills. See paragraph 174.

The wings and tails of birds held dutiable as feathers, and not quills. See paragraph 347.

Quills, black and white, from turkeys' wings and tails, only changed from their original condition by cleaning, and by dyeing the black ones, were free of duty, as "quills, prepared or unprepared, but not made up into complete articles," under paragraph 689 of Act 1890, and were not dutiable as "ornamental feathers," under paragraph 443. U. S. v. Stearns (1897) 79 Fed. 953, 25 C. C. A. 256, affirming decree (C. C. 1896) 75 Fed. 833.

13. Rubber recoil pads.—Rubber recoil pads, intended for reducing the shock from the discharge of a gun, but which are not a necessary attachment, their use being optional, held, in the absence of satisfactory evidence of a commercial understanding in support of such classification, not to be dutiable as parts or fittings of guns, under Act 1897, par. 158, but as manufactures of india rubber, under paragraph 449. Schoverling, Daly & Gales v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 142 Fed. 302.

14. Shoes.—Under Act Aug. 30, 1842, shoes made of india rubber in Brazil are subject to a duty of 30 per cent., although they are made by the same process as bottles or sheets, provided they are imported in a condition to be worn without further material labor on them here, and are actually worn in this form, and provided they are called, in the language of commerce, "India rubber shoes," of which facts the jury ought to judge. Lawrence v. Allen (1849) 48 U. S. (7 How.) 785, 12 L. Ed. 914.

15. Sponges of rubber.—Act 1897, par. 82, relating to "sponges," does not include rubber sponges, which are dutiable under paragraph 449. Alfred H. Smith Co. v. U. S. (1906) 149 Fed.

1022, 79 C. C. A. 531, affirming judgment (C. C. 1906) 143 Fed. 691.

16. Suspenders.—Merchandise which is technically and commercially known as braces and suspenders composed in part of india rubber takes its dutiable character from that source, and not from the fact that it would otherwise fall under a general designation applicable to other subjects. Arthur v. Davies (1877) 96 U. S. 135, 136, 24 L. Ed. 810.

17. Tennis balls.—Act 1897, par. 391, providing that all manufactures of which wool is a component material shall be classified and assessed as manufactures of wool, does not apply to merchandise of which silk is not a component material; and tennis balls of wool and rubber (rubber being the component material of chief value) are not dutiable under the provision for "all manufactures of every description made wholly or in part of wool, not specially provided for" in paragraph 366 of that act, but as manufactures of india rubber, or of which india rubber is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for under paragraph 449. U. S. v. Slazenger (C. C. 1900) 113 Fed. 524.

Tennis balls of india rubber, covered with light felt of wool, the rubber being the component material of chief value, held dutiable under paragraph 352 of Act 1894. Slazenger v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 517.

18. Tubing of India rubber.—India rubber tubing, in meter lengths, colored, chiefly used in making stems of artificial flowers, was dutiable as manufactures of india rubber, under paragraph 460 of Act 1890, and not as parts of artificial flowers, under paragraph 443, not being any finished part of an artificial flower. U. S. v. Simon (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 154.

19. Waterproof cloth.—Waterproof cloth held excluded from the terms of paragraph 347, Act 1909, and dutiable under paragraph 463. Kenyon Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 344. See, also, U. S. v. Vandegrift (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 161; Same v. Zinn (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 419.

Waterproof cloth held not dutiable as manufacture of india rubber. See paragraph 288.

20. Webbing.—Webbing made of cotton, silk, and india rubber, the cotton predominating in quantity, and the rubber in value, cannot, in the absence of any finding as to its commercial or common designation, be classified as cotton webbing, under Schedule I, par. 354, of Act 1890, but should be placed under paragraph 460, as a manufacture of which india rubber is the component material of chief value. U. S. v. Shattuck (1894) 59 Fed. 454, 8 C. C. A. 176; In re Shattuck (C. C. 1893) 54 Fed. 365.

Under act 1883 webbing made of india rubber, wool, and cotton, and known as "wool elastic webbing" to distinguish it from "union elastic webbing" and "cotton elastic webbing," is dutiable as "webbing * * * composed wholly or in part of india rubber not otherwise provided for" at 35 per cent. ad valorem, and not as "webbing * * * made of wool or of which wool * * * is a component material" at 50 cents per pound and 50 per cent. ad valorem. Beard v. Nichols (1887) 7 Sup. Ct. 548, 120 U. S. 260, 30 L. Ed. 652.

Webbing made of india rubber, silk, and cotton held taxable as a manufacture of India rubber, silk, and other articles. Act July 14, 1866, § 8. Faxon v. Russell (C. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 4,707.

21. Wood fiber in strips plaited into sheets.—Thin narrow strips of wood fiber, plaited into sheets of about 24x18 inches, held dutiable under Act 1890, par. 460, and were not entitled to free entry as "Sparterre," under paragraph 711. Zinn v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 71 Fed. 952.

369. Ivory tusks in their natural state, or cut vertically across the grain only, with the bark left intact, 20 per centum ad valorem; manufactures of ivory or vegetable ivory, or of which either of these substances is the component material of chief value, not specifically provided for in this section, 35 per centum ad valorem; manufactures of mother-of-pearl and shell, plaster of Paris, papier-mâché, and vulcanized india rubber known as "hard rubber," or of which these substances or any of them is the component material of chief value, not specifically provided for in this section, 25 per centum ad valorem; shells engraved, cut, ornamented, or otherwise manufactured, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Billiard ball blocks.
2. Cut ivory.
3. Figures representing religious subjects.
4. Fountain pens.
5. Mother of pearl for knife handles.
6. Opera glasses.
7. Papier-mâché.
8. Pearl buttons.
9. Piano keys.
10. Shells.
11. Statuettes of plaster of paris.

1. Billiard ball blocks.—Cross sections, 2–2½ inches long, sawed from the solid portion of ivory tusks, with the outer covering or bark left on, and generally known in trade as "billiard ball blocks" and "logs," were free of duty, under paragraph 519 of Act 1894, as "ivory sawed or cut into logs, but not otherwise manufactured," and were not subject to a duty of 35 per cent., under paragraph 354 of the same act, as "manufactures of ivory not otherwise provided for." Arbib v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 86 Fed. 121.

2. Cut ivory.—Where an importer of ivory called the attention of the ways and means committee to the fact that a certain provision relating to cut ivory in a tariff bill then in preparation would make a tusk once sawed dutiable, but the bill was not changed, it should be presumed that congress intended that the provision should have that effect. In re Gerdau (C. C. 1893) 54 Fed. 143.

Act 1890, par. 618, admitting, free of duty, ivory not sawed, cut, or otherwise manufactured, does not apply to elephants' tusks sawed into pieces of various lengths, when such sawing requires skill and judgment, and is done, not for convenience in transportation, but to separate the ivory into different grades, adapted to different uses. Id.

3. Figures representing religious subjects.—Certain figures five feet six inches in height, representing religious subjects, and scenes in the life of the Saviour, composed of pulverized stone, cement, plaster of paris, and other materials and colored and otherwise decorated, were properly assessed for duty under Act 1897, par. 97, and paragraph 450, as manufactures of plaster of paris not specially provided for, or as articles and wares composed wholly or in chief value of earthy or mineral substances not specially provided for, and were not exempt from duty, under paragraph 649 as casts of sculpture. Benziger v. U. S. (1902) 113 Fed. 1016, 51 C. C. A. 587, affirming opinion (C. C. 1900) 107 Fed. 257, and judgment reversed (1904) 24 Sup. Ct. 189, 192 U. S. 38, 48 L. Ed. 331.

4. Fountain pens.—Parts of fountain pens held under Act 1909 dutiable as manufactures of hard rubber. Schrader & Ehlers v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 100.

There is no question of commercial designation, and "penholder" as employed in the statute cannot reasonably be held to include the rubber article of the importation. The language of paragraph 187, Act 1909, clearly contemplates that fountain pens for tariff purposes should be distinguished as they are in fact and in common understanding from the ordinary penholder, and should be subject to a different rate of duty. The importations were dutiable as manufactures of hard rubber under paragraphs 450, Act 1897, and 464, Act 1909, respectively. Schrader & Ehlers v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 410.

5. Mother of pearl for knife handles.—Act 1897, par. 450, covering "manufactures" of mother of pearl held to include mother of pearl made into slabs by cutting or grinding, which are designed for use in the manufacture of knife handles and similar articles. Morris European & American Express Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 150 Fed. 608.

Strips of pearl, commonly called "pearl scales" or "stock pearl," chiefly used for knife handles, but also used on fans, opera glasses, button hooks, and for inlaid work, are dutiable under paragraph 450 of Act 1897, as "manufactures of mother of pearl, not specially provided for," and not under paragraph 153, as "parts of knives, wholly or partly manufactured." U. S. v. United States Exp. Co. (C. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 642.

Mother of pearl, cut into slabs, and designed for use in the manufacture of knife handles, held dutiable under paragraph 462 of Act 1890, as a manufacture of "mother of pearl," and not under section 4 of said act, as a nonenumerated unmanufactured article. In re John Russell Cutlery Co. (C. C. 1893) 56 Fed. 221.

6. Opera glasses. — Opera glasses, composed of metal, glass, and pearl or shell, in which the pearl or shell is the component of chief value, held dutiable under Act 1883 at 25 per cent. ad valorem; but, when the metal and pearl or shell are of equal value, they are dutiable at 45 per cent. ad valorem, as a manufacture of copper not otherwise provided for (Heyl's Dig. pt. 2, p. 13, cl. 216). Young v. Spalding (C. C. 1885) 24 Fed. 87.

7. Papier-mâché.—Toy papier-mâché rabbits held not dutiable as manufactures of papier-maché. See paragraph 342.

8. Pearl buttons.—Pearl collar buttons held not dutiable as manufactures of mother of pearl. See paragraph 339.

Small, highly polished disks of pearl, which are plain on the back, with grooved rings, or hollowed out in front, with rounded edges, and with small cavities in their centers, and which, except that they are not pierced with holes or shanked through their centers, exactly correspond in appearance with the ordinary superfine pearl buttons of commerce, held not dutiable as pearl buttons, under the provision for such buttons contained in paragraph 429 of Act 1890, but dutiable as manufactures of mother of pearl, under paragraph 462. In re Blumenthal (C. C. 1892) 51 Fed. 76.

9. Piano keys.—Pieces of ivory for keys of pianos and organs, and made into the proper shapes and sizes for certain octaves of those instruments, and sold for that purpose, are not dutiable as "musical instruments," but as manufactures of ivory, under Rev. St.

§ 2504, and Rev. St. § 2502. Robertson v. Gerdan (1889) 10 Sup. Ct. 119, 132 U. S. 454, 33 L. Ed. 403.

10. Shells.—Shells imported into the United States which before their importation had their outer layers cleaned off by acid and their second layers ground off by an emery wheel, and which were sold for ornaments without any new or distinctive name after such treatment, are not manufactures of shell, but fall under R. S. § 2505. Hartranft v. Winters (1887) 7 Sup. Ct. 1244, 121 U. S. 616, 30 L. Ed. 1015; Same v. Wiegmann (1887) 7 Sup. Ct. 1240, 1242, 121 U. S. 609, 30 L. Ed. 1012.

Mussel shells prepared by cutting and boring holes and used for ornamental purposes, having been advanced in value and adapted to a definite use, are not entitled to free entry under paragraph 635, Act 1897, but were dutiable as "shells engraved, cut, ornamented, or otherwise manufactured," under paragraph 450 of that act. U. S. v. Reed & Keller (1913) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 504. See, also, Hartranft v. Wiegmann (1887) 7 Sup. Ct. 1240, 121 U. S. 609, 30 L. Ed. 1012.

11. Statuettes of plaster of paris.—Decorated and ornamented statuettes, made from plaster of paris—sulphuric acid, lime, and water—held not taxable under Act 1897, par. 95, as china, porcelain, or crockery ware, including statuettes ornamented, etc., but taxable under paragraph 450, as manufactures of plaster of paris, or of which such substance is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in the act. T. Bing & Co.'s Successors v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 121 Fed. 194.

370. Masks, of whatever material composed, 25 per centum ad valorem.

371. Matting made of cocoa fiber or rattan, 5 cents per square yard; mats made of cocoa fiber or rattan, 3 cents per square foot.

372. Moss and sea grass, eelgrass, and seaweeds, if manufactured or dyed, 10 per centum ad valorem.

373. Musical instruments or parts thereof, pianoforte actions and parts thereof, cases for musical instruments, pitch pipes, tuning forks, tuning hammers, and metronomes; strings for musical instruments, composed wholly or in part of steel or other metal, all the foregoing, 35 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Drumheads.—The articles are called drumheads by the importers and the appraiser alike. They appear to be completely prepared and adapted for use as drumheads, and by their size and shape they would seem to have been finally appropriated to that use, and that use alone. They were properly dutiable as parts of musical instruments under paragraph 467, Act 1909. U. S. v. Lyon & Healy (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 84.

Mouth organs.—Mouth organs held not dutiable as musical instruments. See paragraph 342.

Mouthpieces of wood and ivory.—The appearance of hollow cylindrical pieces of wood and ivory which might be used for mouthpieces for flutes, etc., held not to indicate that they are confined in their possible uses, nor does the evidence justify the conclusion that they are intended for use as parts of musical instruments. U. S. v. Lyon & Healy (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 438.

Music rolls for self-playing instruments.—These music rolls are made for a player piano known as the Welte Mignon. This instrument can be used as an ordinary piano and it is equipped for the mechanical production of music. These rolls are essential to the use of the instrument as a player piano and are therefore parts of the instrument. Welte & Sons v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 164.

Piano keys.—Pieces of ivory for piano keys held not dutiable as musical instruments. See paragraph 369.

Strings.—Strings for musical instruments composed of catgut wound with silk held not dutiable as parts of musical instruments. See paragraph 318.

"Strings for musical instruments" refers to strings used for the production of musical sounds; and the tailpiece gut of one of the two classes of importations are not so employed. As to the catgut of the other class of importations there is no dispute that when used as a part of an instrument they are used for the purpose of producing musical sounds. They are "strings for musical instruments" and were dutiable as such. Fischer v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 301.

The merchandise, as appears from the testimony, is ready for immediate use as strings for musical instruments. It falls eo nomine under paragraph 467, Act 1909. Richard & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 306. See, also, Davies, Turner & Co. v. Same (C. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 232.

Violin and cello necks, finger boards, bridges, etc.—Violin finger boards, necks, pegs, and bridges of wood held to have each been given such form and shape that not only has its utility for any other purpose been destroyed but each article bears evidence of the use to which it is to be devoted and its adaptation to that use. They were dutiable, as assessed, as parts of musical instruments under paragraph 467, Act 1909. Richard & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 470.

The physical construction of violin and cello necks held such as to render them plainly unserviceable for any other purpose than for use as parts of musical instruments. U. S. v. Lyon & Healy (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 438. See, also, Id. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 84; Richard & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 306; Athenia Steel & Wire Co. v. Same (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 494.

374. Phonographs, gramophones, graphophones, and similar articles, or parts thereof, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Disks.—The history of paragraph 468, Act 1909, makes it clear that the parts of phonographs therein provided for must be taken to include phonograph disks. American Express Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 279. See, also, American Graphophone Co. v. Amet (C. C. 1896) 74 Fed. 789.

Needles.—Whether equipped with records of one kind or another, a phonograph without a needle capable of being fitted to it and of following the cuts or undulations of the records would not serve the purpose for which it was made and would not be a complete machine. The needles stand for tariff purposes on a footing with the records themselves. Landay Bros. v. U. S. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 498.

375. Violin rosin, in boxes or cases or otherwise, 10 per centum ad valorem.

376. Works of art, including paintings in oil or water-colors, pastels, pen and ink drawings, or copies, replicas or reproductions of any of the same, statuary, sculptures, or copies, replicas or reproductions thereof, and etchings and engravings, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Paintings in oil and water colors.—See, also, notes under paragraph 652.

Glazed tiles held not dutiable as paintings, etc. See paragraph 72.

Plaques painted held not classifiable as paintings, etc. See paragraph 80.

Certain pictures hand-painted on porcelain held dutiable under Rev. St. § 2504, as paintings and not as paint china or porcelain ware. Arthur v. Jacoby (1880) 103 U. S. 677, 678, 26 L. Ed. 454.

A painting produced before the year 1700 held dutiable under Act 1890, par. 465, imposing 15 per cent. ad valorem on paintings in oil or water colors, and is not exempt from duty, as a part of a collection of antiquities, under paragraph 524 of the free list. U. S. v. Gunther (1896) 71 Fed. 499, 18 C. C. A. 219.

Japanese wall decorations, made of paper, or of paper and cotton, or of narrow strips of bamboo joined together with cotton cord, and upon which representations of flowers, of birds, or of human figures are painted in water colors, the large bodies of colors being applied by stenciling while the features of the work which are delicate and ornamental and give character to the article are by hand, are dutiable, under paragraph 465 of Act Oct. 1, 1890, at 15 per cent. ad valorem, as "paintings in oil or water colors." U. S. v. China & Japan Trading Co. (1893) 58 Fed. 690, 7 C. C. A. 433.

The provision in Act 1897, par. 454, for "paintings" in oil or water colors does not include articles consisting of lithographic prints pasted on wood, and painted to a slight extent, and varnished. Steinhardt & Bro. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 168.

In Act 1897, par. 454, the expression "paintings in oil or water colors" is not a commercial term, but is used descriptively. Id.

The term "paintings," in Act 1897, par. 454, includes handpainted panels having a small calendar affixed, which is a trifling part of the entire article. A. A. Vantine & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 168 Fed. 562.

Splash mats or screens, which have been crudely decorated at an expense of about 2½ cents apiece by stenciling and by hand painting, which are worth about 4 cents apiece, and which primarily are articles of utility rather than for decoration, held not dutiable as "paintings in oil or water colors" under Act 1897, par. 454. F. W. Woolworth & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 152 Fed. 483.

Articles composed of several tiles put together in rows, their faces forming a surface on which a picture is sketched by free-hand with brown mineral paint prepared with oil or water, which is then fired, and by vitrification made blue, the whole being then framed, were not dutiable as "tiles," under paragraph 94 of Act 1890, but were included in the description "paintings, in oils or water colors," contained in paragraph 465. Richard v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 517.

Paintings in oil on panels of papier-mâché, to go into the frames of a false door, held dutiable under Act 1890, par. 465, as "paintings in oil," and not as manufactures of wood, under paragraph 230. Godwin v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 71 Fed. 950.

Fans, composed of silk and bone, on which are executed artistic paintings in water colors, which are displayed as ornaments, and not used as fans ordinarily are, held not dutiable as manufactures of silk, under Act Oct. 1, 1890, par. 414, but under paragraph 465, as "paintings in oil or water colors." Tiffany v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 736.

Professional production of a sculptor. —See, also, notes under paragraph 652.

In providing a low rate of duty on works of art in Act 1897, par. 454, Congress evidently intended to welcome the works of meritorious artists and sculptors, and to exclude from the low rate the productions of artisans and empirics. The definition of statuary as "the professional production of a statuary or sculptor only" was aimed against such articles as are made by machinery or unskilled labor, or are cast in large numbers from molds by ordinary workmen. Such a paragraph should be construed liberally. U. S. v. Tiffany & Co. (1908) 160 Fed. 408, 87 C. C. A. 360.

In Act 1897, par. 454, relating to "such statuary as is cut, carved, or otherwise wrought by hand * * * and as is the professional production of a statuary or sculptor only," it is not necessary that the entire work on a statue shall be "by hand," nor that the entire handiwork must be that of the statuary or sculptor personally. Id.

Neither Act 1913 nor paragraph 376 thereof limits the definition of the word "sculptures" as used in said paragraph, and the word must be given the meaning ascribed to it in common understanding. Sculpture is the production of a professional sculptor; it embodies professional skill, taste, touch, and artistic conception, appealing not only to the eye but to the emotions as well. A copy, replica, or reproduction under this paragraph must possess the same qualities or characteristics, and must be made by a professional sculptor or under his supervision. The history of this legislation shows that Congress did not intend, by enacting paragraph 376 as new legislation in Act 1913, to lower the standard of work necessary to constitute sculpture or to dispense with the requirement that such work must be produced by, or under the supervision of, a sculptor, thereby admitting at a low rate of duty the commercial productions of artisans because of characteristics rendering them attractive, ornamental, or beautiful. If these parts are not sculpture, it follows that they are not works of art under paragraph 376. Having denied classification as works of art to the parts of this temple, the court refuses to classify the whole temple as a work of art. U. S. v. Downing & Co. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 545.

A work in marble, said to be a copy of a mantel in the Doge's Palace, at Florence, Italy, neither copy nor original being shown to be the production of a professional sculptor, is not sculpture or a work of art under paragraph 376, Tariff Act 1913. U. S. v. Halle Bros. Co. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 543. See, also, Same v. Downing & Co. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 545.

No typical exhibits of the merchandise were produced, and the testimony as offered in behalf of the importers was based on photographs. The burden of showing the goods to be sculptures rested on the importer. The board found the importers had failed to make out their case, and there is nothing in the record to warrant a reversal of that finding. Marshall Field & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 191.

To constitute "sculptures" under Act 1909 the evidence must show the articles were cut, carved, or otherwise wrought by hand from solid blocks or masses of marble and that they were severally the professional productions of a sculptor. Hayden Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 35; Downing & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 473.

Articles, though carved representations in marble of artistic subjects, held under Act 1909 not dutiable as sculptures, where there was no showing that they were the production of a sculptor, but dutiable as manufactures of marble. Warren & Wetmore v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 461.

A sculpture must be the work of a sculptor and such a production as to be stamped with some of the individuality of the artist himself. The burden of showing the importation here to be sculptures was on the importer, and the evidence goes to prove the maker was not a sculptor proper, but an ornamentalist, rather, with a specialty in the decoration of stonework. Consmiller v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 298.

The articles were bronze knockers fashioned after the human figure and bronze busts and statuettes, together with bases made expressly for these. The uncontradicted testimony of the maker of the articles is to the effect his work on them was that of an artist rather than as an artisan; that he employed his professional skill, in their production. The importations are du-tiable under paragraph 454, Act 1897. U. S. v. Godwin's Sons (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 226.

Jardinières and vases held within the provisions of the law relating to sculptures, and dutiable under paragraph 470, Act 1909. Stern v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 124.

Without determining whether the importations rise to the dignity of "sculptures" in the arts, the character of their production by wholesale would exclude them from the terms of paragraph 470, Act 1909. Under that paragraph the sculptures designated must be made by hand from solid blocks of alabaster and be, too, the professional production of a sculptor only. Lazarus, Rosenfeld & Lehmann v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 508.

A carved marble vase, made by a sculptor as a copy of an original in the Borghese collection, is not to be deemed a manufactured article. The evidence shows that artistic skill was employed in its production, and it was properly held to be dutiable as a "sculpture" under paragraph 470, Act 1909. U. S. v. Baumgarten & Co. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 321.

Marble parts of garden temple.—Marble parts of a garden temple held not dutiable as works of art. See paragraph 98.

377. Peat moss, 50 cents per ton.

378. Pencils of paper or wood, or other material not metal, filled with lead or other material, pencils of lead, 36 cents per gross, but in no case shall any of the foregoing pay less than 25 per centum ad valorem; slate pencils, 25 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

School crayons.—Pencils of wood from four to seven inches in length, filled with material of various colors, and known in trade and commerce as "colored pencils," and often, especially since March 3, 1883, as "school crayons," held dutiable under Act 1883 as "pencils of wood filled with lead or other material," and not as "crayons of all kinds." In re Blumenthal (C. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 226.

Soap pencils.—Soap pencils for cleaning spectacles held not dutiable as pencils. See paragraph 385.

379. Pencil leads not in wood or other material, 10 per centum ad valorem.

380. Photographic cameras, and parts thereof, not specially provided for in this section, photographic dry plates, not specially provided for in his section, 15 per centum ad valorem; photographic-film negatives, imported in any form, for use in any way in connection with moving-picture exhibits, or for making or reproducing pictures for such exhibits, exposed but not developed, 2 cents per linear or running foot; if exposed and developed, 3 cents per linear or running foot; photographic-film positives, imported in any form, for use in any way in connection with moving-picture exhibits, including herein all moving, motion, motophotography or cinematography film pictures, prints, positives or duplicates of every kind and nature, and of whatever substance made, 1 cent per linear or running foot: Provided, however, That all photographic-films imported under this section shall be subject to such censorship as may be imposed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Notes of Decisions

Moving picture films.—Cinematograph, or moving picture, films are photographs and were dutiable under paragraph 403, Act 1897. U. S. v. Berst (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 121; Same v. Sussfeld (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 51.

381. Pipes and smokers' articles: Common tobacco pipes and pipe bowls made wholly of clay, 25 per centum ad valorem; other pipes and pipe bowls of whatever material composed, and all smokers' articles whatsoever, not specially provided for in this section, including cigarette books, cigarette-book covers, pouches for smoking or chewing tobacco, and cigarette paper in all forms, except cork paper, 50 per centum ad valorem; meerschaum, crude or unmanufactured, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Construction of paragraph in general.
2. Acetylene lamp lighter.
3. Cedar boxes.
4. Cigarette paper.
5. Cigar lighters.
6. Lamps for dealers.
7. Leather covered cases.
8. Mouthpieces for pipes.
9. Pyroxylin articles.
10. Tables.
11. Tin boxes.

1. Construction of paragraph in general.—Act 1897, par. 459, under the heading "pipes and smokers' articles," enumerated "tobacco pipes and pipe bowls, * * * and all smokers' articles whatsoever, * * * including cigarette books, cigarette book covers, pouches for smoking or chewing tobacco, and cigarette paper in all forms." Held that, in view. of the broad language employed, the doctrine of ejusdem generis has no application in construing the paragraph. A. Steinhardt & Bro. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 443.

It is sufficient to bring a commodity within the classification "smokers' articles" if it is shown the article must have passed with its first use into the hands of a consumer for use as a smokers' article. Knauth v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 334.

2. Acetylene lamp lighter.—Acetylene lamp lighter held not dutiable as smoker's article. See paragraph 167.

3. Cedar boxes.—Cedar boxes of suitable size, plain and decorated, marked "Cigars" or "Cigarettes," are smokers' articles, and a finding by the board of general appraisers that other cedar boxes also of suitable size, of the same importation and similar in all essential respects to the boxes marked "Cigars" or "Cigarettes," though unmarked and possibly fitted for uses other than by smokers, are smokers' articles, will be sustained. Vandiver v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 194.

4. Cigarette paper.—Cigarette papers and covers for same, though imported separately, held dutiable as smokers' articles, and not as manufactures of paper, under Act 1883. Isaacs v. Jonas (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 677, 148 U. S. 648, 37 L. Ed. 596.

There is a presumption in favor of a collector's classification and assessment which must be overcome by proof, and it being possible to show by chemical analysis alone that the importation of hygeia paper contained less magnesia than cigarette paper contains, and the results of no such analysis being shown, and it appearing the dominant use of paper such as this in question is for the manufacture of cigarettes, the assessment of the collector must stand, as proper, under paragraph 459, Act 1897. Hygeia Antiseptic Toothpick Co. v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 497.

5. Cigar lighters.—Cigar lighters held properly assessed as smokers' articles. Bernhardt v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 36. See, also, Dale v. Same (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 384; Knauth v. Same (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 334.

6. Lamps for dealers.—Small lamps, such as are mainly used for lighting pipes and cigars, and are usually carried in stock by those who deal in pipes and other articles of that sort, are "smokers' articles," within Act 1883. Wedemeyer v. Lancaster (C. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 446.

7. Leather covered cases.—Leather covered cigar and cigarette cases held, under Act 1909, dutiable not as manufactures of leather, but as "all smokers' articles whatsoever." Dale v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 384; Mark Cross Co. v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 377. See, also, Knauth v. Same (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 334; Vandiver v. Same (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 194.

8. Mouthpieces for pipes.—These mouthpieces for pipes are finished. They are not, it is true, designed to be used in any particular pipe or pipestem, but are made to be inserted in any pipe or stem so constructed as to receive the same, and seem to be of a size and shape commonly in use. They clearly fall within the description of "all smokers' articles whatsoever" in paragraph 475, Act 1909. U. S. v. Hanover Vulcanite Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 503. See, also, Same v. Eytinge & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 266.

9. Pyroxylin articles.—Act 1897, par. 459, covering "all smokers' articles whatsoever, not specially provided for," enumerates pyroxylin smokers' articles more specifically than does paragraph 17, Schedule A, covering "all compounds of pyroxylin * * * if in finished or partly finished articles." U. S. v. Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne (C. C. A. 1906) 150 Fed. 610.

10. Tables.—Articles used chiefly for the convenience of smokers, consisting of tables on the top of which are affixed smokers' accessories, and of an ornamental miniature automobile for the use of smokers, held dutiable as "smokers' articles," under Act 1897, par. 459, and not as "house or cabinet furniture of wood," under paragraph 208. A. Steinhardt & Bro. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 443.

11. Tin boxes.—Use in chief controls in classification, and the consignment of tin boxes here, being in shape, size, and markings plainly designed for use by smokers, could not properly be classed as manufactures of metal, and the boxes were properly held dutiable as smokers' articles under paragraph 459, Act 1897. Knauth v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 334. See, also, Steinhardt v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 443.

382. Plush, black, known commercially as hatters' plush, composed of silk, or of silk and cotton, such as is used for making men's hats, 10 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Construction of paragraph.—Goods imported by a manufacturer of women's hats held not dutiable as plush for making men's hats. See paragraph 314.

Construing paragraphs 315 and 342 of Act 1897 together, "plushes, velvets, velveteens, corduroys and all pile fabrics, cut or uncut," "composed of cotton or other vegetable fibre," are dutiable under paragraph 315, except "pile fabrics of which flax is the component material of chief value," which are dutiable under paragraph 342; and, under such construction, colored flax and cotton plush, flax chief value, held dutiable under paragraph 342. Stern v. U. S. (1899) 98 Fed. 417, 39 C. C. A. 119, affirming judgment U. S. v. Stern (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 521.

It is clear that paragraph 477, Act 1909, must be taken to refer specifically to material used exclusively for making men's hats. The intention was to encourage the domestic production of men's hats. Comey & Johnson Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 532.

383. Umbrellas, parasols, and sunshades covered with material other than paper or lace, not embroidered or appliquéd, 35 per centum ad valorem. Sticks for umbrellas, parasols, or sunshades, and walking canes, finished or unfinished, 30 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

Paper umbrellas.—Paper umbrellas held not dutiable as umbrellas. See paragraph 332.

Small parasols.—Small parasols of flimsy make covered with material other than paper held properly assessed as parasols covered with other material than paper, under paragraph 462, Act 1897, and the corresponding paragraph in Tariff Act 1909, and not as toys. Cattus v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 9. See, also, Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Same (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 102.

Umbrella sticks with celluloid handles.—Umbrella sticks of wood, having celluloid handles, that constitute the chief element of value in the articles, held more specifically provided for as "sticks for umbrellas," in paragraph 462, Act 1897, than as "articles of which * * * any compound of pyroxylin is the component material of chief value," in paragraph 17. U. S. v. Borgfeldt (C. C. 1900) 124 Fed. 304.

384. Waste, not specially provided for in this section, 10 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Camphor oil.
2. Candle tar or palm pitch.
3. Flax noils.
4. Fur waste.
5. Granito or terrazo.
6. Hog hair waste.
7. Lead shavings.
8. Mica.
9. Polishing stones.
10. Powdered glass.
11. Secondhand jute or cotton bagging.
12. Small pieces of cork for use in making linoleum.
13. Tin disks.
14. Tin parings.
15. Tobacco sweepings.

1. Camphor oil.—Camphor oil held not dutiable as waste. See paragraph 385.

2. Candle tar or palm pitch.—Candle tar or palm pitch held not dutiable as waste. See paragraph 385.

3. Flax noils.—Flax noils held dutiable as waste. See paragraph 485.

4. Fur waste.—Undressed clippings or waste fur held not dutiable as waste. See paragraph 491.

As to combings of loose or dead hair obtained in preparing rabbit or hare skins, which are commercially known as "hares' combings" or "fur waste," and which, after further treatment, are used as an adulterant in cheap hats, held, that they are dutiable as waste under Act 1897, par. 463, and not as furs prepared for hatters' use under paragraph 426, nor free of duty as "furs, undressed," under section 2, Free List, par. 561. U. S. v. Hatters' Fur Exchange (C. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 595.

Articles of merchandise and known to trade and commerce, respectively, as "fur waste," "hares' combings," "hares' waste,' "hares dags," and "coneys' dags," were not dutiable under the provision for "hatters' fur, not on the skin," contained in paragraph 450, Act 1883, but were dutiable under the provision for "waste, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act," contained in paragraph 493. Wimpfheimer v. Erhardt (C. C. 1893) 59 Fed. 451.

5. Granito or terrazo.—Granito or terrazo held not dutiable as waste. See paragraph 385.

6. Hog hair waste.—Waste of hog hair used in the manufacture of artificial fertilizers held not dutiable as waste. See paragraph 499.

7. Lead shavings.—Lead shavings held not dutiable as waste. See paragraph 167.

8. Mica.—Mica in small pieces held not dutiable as waste. See paragraph 77.

9. Polishing stones. — Tam O'Shanter polishing stones held not dutiable as waste. See paragraph 95.

10. Powdered glass.—Powdered glass held not dutiable as waste. See paragraph 95.

11. Secondhand jute or cotton bagging.—Selected pieces of secondhand jute bagging, intended for patching the covering of cotton bales, held not "bagging for cotton, gunny cloth, and similar fabrics, suitable for covering cotton," under Act 1897, par. 344, nor "rags," under section 2, Free List, par. 648 but dutiable as "waste" under paragraph 463. U. S. v. Davies (1908) 160 Fed. 456, 87 C. C. A. 672.

Old gunny cloth or cotton bagging, formerly used for covering cotton bales in ragged, dirty, and partly rotten pieces, to be used chiefly as paper stock for making manila paper only, held dutiable under Act 1897, par. 463, as waste. Train v. U. S. (1902) 113 Fed. 1020, 51 C. C. A. 623, affirming judgment (C. C. 1900) 107 Fed. 261.

12. Small pieces of cork for use in making linoleum.—Small pieces of cork, which have been produced by grinding the refuse of cork bark for convenience in handling, and which need further preparation before becoming fit for its ultimate use in the manufacture of linoleum, etc., held dutiable as waste under Act 1897, par. 463, and not as a manufacture of cork under paragraph 448. Gudewill & Bucknall v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 142 Fed. 214.

13. Tin disks.—Small disks produced in the manufacture of tin cans held not dutiable as waste. See paragraph 167.

14. Tin parings.—Tin parings held not dutiable as waste. See paragraph 167.

15. Tobacco sweepings.—Tobacco sweepings and scraps held not dutiable as waste. See paragraph 183.

385. That there shall be levied, collected, and paid on the importation of all raw or unmanufactured articles not enumerated or provided for in this section, a duty of 10 per centum ad valorem, and on all articles manufactured, in whole or in part, not provided for in this section, a duty of 15 per centum ad valorem.

Notes of Decisions

1. Agate penholders.
2. Artificial horsehair.
3. Bass fiber.
4. Bassine or palmyra fiber.
5. Beef and mushrooms.
6. Bichromate of soda.
7. Birch bark.
8. Bisque rings.
9. Bleach containing ferrocyanide of iron.
10. Bone size.
11. Bouillon cubes.
12. Caffeine.
13. Camphor oil.
14. Candle tar or palm pitch.
15. Capers.
16. Carbon points.
17. Catheters.
18. Cherries in maraschino.
19. Chlorophyll.
20. Crocus.
21. Crude coco fibers processed.
22. Crude ore mechanically ground.
23. Crude sulphide of antimony.
24. Dressed lava stone.
25. Dry egg yolk.
26. Edible snails.
27. Edible wafers.
28. Effect of similitude clause.
29. Ferrochrome.
30. Finings.
31. Floral waters.
32. Granito or terrazo.
33. Grasses dressed.
34. Grenadine.
35. Ground talc.
36. Hay.
37. Herbs immersed in alcohol.
38. Hone stone.
39. Honey cakes.
40. Hulled millet seeds.
41. Jade tableware.
42. Japanese granite lanterns.
43. Kittul.
44. Liquid extract of coffee bean.
45. Lubricating oil.
46. Marasque water.
47. Marble chips.
48. Melon seeds roasted.
49. Metal polish.
50. Mineralogical specimens.
51. Modeling clay.
52. Moss dyed.
53. Mother of pearl knife handles.
54. Needlecases.
55. Nonenumerated in general.
56. Nonenumerated manufactured articles in general.
57. Nucoa butter.
58. Olive pits.
59. Orchid and Persian berry extracts.

60. Papaw melon powder.
61. Pineapple juice.
62. Plastilina.
63. Polish.
64. Prune wine.
65. Ramie silver.
66. Rape meal.
67. Sago flour.
68. Sake.
69. Soap pencils.
70. Soapstone gas tips.
71. Soluble grease.
72. Sugar wafers.
73. Tennis balls.
74. Thick soy.
75. Tungsten ore or wolfram.
76. Viscose caps.
77. Walnuts pickled.
78. Wheat foodstuff.
79. Wheat injured by frost.
80. White hard enamel.

1. Agate penholders.—Agate penholder handles, etc., held dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles. See paragraph 98.

2. Artificial horsehair.—Artificial horsehair held dutiable as an unenumerated manufactured article. See paragraph 319.

3. Bass fiber.—This bass fiber has been subjected to a process that fits it for a definite use and has been advanced, accordingly, from a crude state to that of a manufactured article. It was not entitled to free entry under the Act 1909. U. S. v. Osborn Mfg. Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 276.

4. Bassine or palmyra fiber.—These goods, bassine or palmyra fiber, are not sufficiently similar in material, quality, texture, or the use to which they may be applied to the istle or tampico, dressed, dyed, or combed, of paragraph 285, Act 1913, to be dutiable thereunder by similitude, nor is their quality such as to warrant such an assessment. They are dressed goods, and are dutiable as an unenumerated manufactured article under paragraph 385 of the act. Cone v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 263.

5. Beef and mushrooms.—Mushrooms and beef mixed together held dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article, and not free of duty as meat preserved. U. S. v. Furuya Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 207.

6. Bichromate of soda.—Bichromate of soda held not dutiable as a nonenumerated article. See paragraph 67.

7. Birch bark.—While the rule of ejusdem generis must be applied with some liberality in construing paragraph 630, Act 1909, it would be going too far to hold birch bark to be such a vegetable substance as is there named, and the importation was properly assessed as a nonenumerated unmanufactured article under paragraph 480. Reed & Keller v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 95.

8. Bisque rings.—Bisque rings, insusceptible to decoration and designed for incandescent burners, held not dutiable as bisque under section 96, Act 1897, but under section 6 of that act, as an unenumerated manufacture. Fensterer & Ruhe v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 93. See, also, Schoenmann v. Same (1903) 119 Fed. 584, 56 C. C. A. 104.

9. Bleach containing ferrocyanide of iron.—An article containing ferrocyanide of iron that is used exclusively for bleaching purposes held not dutiable as a "color" under paragraph 45, Act 1897, but dutiable under section 6 of that act. De Ronde v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 104.

10. Bone size.—So-called bone size, used for filling and softening corduroys, held dutiable as an unenumerated manufactured article, under Act 1897, and not as "glue," under paragraph 23, as resembling glue in material, quality, texture, or use, within the meaning of the similitude clause. G. W. Sheldon & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 127 Fed. 494.

11. Bouillon cubes.—Vegetable extractive matter with a small amount of meat extract held a nonenumerated manufacture under paragraph 480, Act 1909, and not a meat extract. Lang v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 129.

12. Caffeine.—A compound used to make caffeine held not dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article. See paragraph 477.

13. Camphor oil.—Camphor oil obtained in a crude state from the same tree as crude gum camphor, the two being united without chemical connection, and separated merely by drainage, held not dutiable as "essential oil," within Act 1894 and Act 1897, nor should it be classified as "waste," but the same is dutiable as a nonenumerated unmanufactured article. U. S. v. Dodge (1901) 107 Fed. 106, 46 C. C. A. 166.

14. Candle tar or palm pitch.—The article known in trade as "candle tar" or "palm pitch" held not dutiable as "waste," under paragraph 472, but properly assessed as a nonenumerated manufactured article under section 4 of Act 1890. Standard Varnish Works v. U. S. (1894) 59 Fed. 456, 8 C. C. A. 178; In re Standard Varnish Works (C. C. 1893) 53 Fed. 786.

15. Capers.—A review of tariff legislation from 1790 and of the pertinent decisions of courts fails to disclose any legislative purpose or uniform customs practice indicating an intent to classify capers as either pickles or as vegetables prepared or preserved; and capers being a condiment used to flavor vegetables and meats rather than an edible vegetable, they were not dutiable under paragraph 241, Act 1897, but were dutiable as an unenumerated article in whole or in part manufactured, under the provisions of section 6 of that act.

Pierce v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 171.

16. Carbon points.—Carbon points held, under Act 1894, dutiable as a manufactured article not provided for. See paragraph 82.

17. Catheters.—Catheters composed of a fabric of silk or cotton covered with a varnish made of linseed oil and copal, which varnish was the ingredient of chief value, should be assessed under Act 1897 as nonenumerated manufactured articles. Kraemer v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 146 Fed. 148.

18. Cherries in maraschino.—Cherries in maraschino held dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article. See paragraph 217.

19. Chlorophyll.—Chlorophyll, a coloring matter used in staining oils and foodstuffs, held not a "color," within Act 1897, par. 58, but dutiable as an unenumerated manufactured article under section 6. U. S. v. Magnus & Lauer (C. C. 1908) 159 Fed. 751.

20. Crocus.—Crocus held not dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article. See paragraph 63.

21. Crude coco fibers processed.—The appraiser found the merchandise to be partly manufactured coco fibers and there is nothing in the record to contradict his finding. The fibers of the importation had been subjected to a certain process that fitted them as materials for use in the manufacture of brushes. They were not entitled to free entry. U. S. v. Flatt & Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 210.

22. Crude ore mechanically ground.—Mechanically ground crude ore, being advanced in condition, it is not entitled to free entry. It falls within paragraph 480, Act 1909, as a nonenumerated partly manufactured article. U. S. v. Davies, Turner & Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 196.

23. Crude sulphide of antimony.—Crude sulphide of antimony held not dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article. See paragraph 396.

24. Dressed lava stone.—Dressed lava stones used as a part of drums in wood pulp machines held dutiable as unenumerated manufactured articles at 20 per cent. ad valorem, under section 6, Act 1897, and not under paragraph 118 as building stone. Manufacturers' Paper Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 72. See, also, A. A. Vantine & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 159 Fed. 289; U. S. v. Tamm (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 425.

25. Dry egg yolk.—Dry egg yolk held dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article. See paragraph 204.

26. Edible snails.—Escargots or edible snails cannot be deemed shellfish and entitled to free entry. They are to be classified as a raw article designed to be converted into a food not enumerated or provided for. They were dutiable under paragraph 480, Act 1909. De Jonghe v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 134.

27. Edible wafers. — Edible wafers, raised in the making by the use of baking powder or bicarbonate of soda, are "leavened," although such agents do not produce fermentation, and dutiable under section 6, Act 1897, as nonenumerated manufactured articles, and not entitled to free entry under paragraph 696 in the free list, covering "wafers, unleavened or not edible." F. H. Leggett & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 817.

28. Effect of similitude clause.—In a case in which the similitude clause in Act 1897, is applicable, the rate determined thereby is to be preferred to that fixed by section 6, relating to unenumerated articles. F. B. Vandegrift & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 65, judgment affirmed (1909) 173 Fed. 609, 97 C. C. A. 469.

29. Ferrochrome.—Ferrochrome held not dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article. See paragraph 102.

30. Finings.—Finings held not dutiable as an unenumerated manufactured article. See paragraph 34.

31. Floral waters.—Floral waters held dutiable as unenumerated manufactured articles. See paragraph 48.

32. Granito or terrazo. — So-called granito or terrazo, produced by crushing the waste of marble quarries and sifting or sorting it into various sizes, is subject to classification as an unenumerated manufactured article, under Act 1897, § 6, rather than as "waste," under section 1, Schedule N, par. 463, or as minerals "crude," under section 2, Free List, par. 614. U. S. v. Graser-Rothe (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 205.

It is true administrative usage furnishes some support for the contention of appellants, that granito was free of duty under paragraph 614, Act 1897, yet, it hardly appears there was such a long, uniform, and well-settled construction of the statute by the Treasury Department that the Congress can be presumed to have intended by that paragraph to declare granito, among other articles, free of duty. It was not entitled to free entry and was dutiable under section 6, Tariff Act 1897. Rossman v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 280.

33. Grasses dressed.—Grasses dressed and prepared for a definite use in the manufacture of brushes held properly assessed under paragraph 480, Act 1909. Cone v. U. S. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 491. See, also, Schoenemann v. Same (1903) 119 Fed. 584, 56 C. C. A. 104; U. S. v. Danker & Marston (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 522; Same v. Continental Color & Chemical Co. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 165.

34. Grenadine.—The testimony of the witnesses in the case was to the effect that grenadine is an article manufactured in accordance with a fixed formula, which, for 100 liters, is 80 kilograms of sugar, 50 liters of water, and 3 per cent. of coloring matter and citric acid. Held, that such an article is not a fruit sirup under the provisions of paragraph 310, Act 1909, but is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article. U. S. v. Wakem & McLaughlin (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 385.

35. Ground talc.—Ground talc held dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article. See paragraph 69.

36. Hay.—Hay dutiable as a raw or unmanufactured article. See paragraph 205.

37. Herbs immersed in alcohol.—Herbs immersed in alcohol held dutiable as a nonenumerated unmanufactured article. U. S. v. Stone & Downer Co. (C. C. 1909) 171 Fed. 293, judgment reversed (1909) 175 Fed. 33, 99 C. C. A. 49.

Herbs, imported in kegs, immersed in their natural condition in alcohol for preservation, held not dutiable as "alcoholic compounds," under paragraph 2, Act 1897, nor as "drugs * * * advanced in value or condition," under paragraph 20, but under the provision in section 6 of said act for "all raw or unmanufactured articles, not enumerated or provided for." Boericke & Runyon Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 120 Fed. 1018.

38. Hone stone.—Held, that certain articles of hone stone, which are used in polishing marble and lithographic stones, and which are not shown to be known commercially as "hones," are not free of duty as "hones" under paragraph 574, Act 1897, but are dutiable as unenumerated manufactured articles under section 6 of said act. R. J. Waddell & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 135 Fed. 211.

39. Honey cakes.—Honey cakes, or so-called ginger bread, held not dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article. See paragraph 194.

40. Hulled millet seeds.—Hulled millet seed, which is adapted for use as food, and in which the germinating power has been destroyed, held dutiable, under section 3 of Act 1894, as an article "manufactured, in whole or in part, not provided for in this act," and not as "seeds," under paragraph 206½. U. S. v. Kaufmann (1898) 84 Fed. 446, 28 C. C. A. 150, reversing Kaufmann v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 78 Fed. 804.

41. Jade tableware.—Tableware, etc., made from jade held not dutiable, as an unenumerated manufactured article. See paragraph 81.

42. Japanese granite lanterns.—Japanese garden lanterns of granite, completed manufactured articles imported in separate pieces merely for convenience, held not dutiable as "building or monumental stone, * * * hewn, dressed," in Act 1897, par. 118, but as unenumerated manufactured articles, under section 6. U. S. v. A. A. Vantine & Co. (1908) 166 Fed. 751, 92 C. C. A. 431, affirming judgment A. A. Vantine & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 159 Fed. 289.

43. Kittul.—Kittul, being the fiber of the leaf stocks of the jaggery palm of East India, which has been combed between steel brushes with a little oil to soften it, and also slightly colored, and made straight for bunching by lengths for brushes, held dutiable, under section 4, Act 1890, as an article "manufactured in whole or in part," and not as "unmanufactured articles," nor under paragraph 597, as a "fibrous vegetable substance not specially provided for," nor under paragraph 653, as "vegetable substances," unmanufactured, not otherwise specially provided for. Wilkens v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 152.

44. Liquid extract of coffee bean.—Liquid extract of coffee bean held not dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article. See paragraph 233.

45. Lubricating oil.—As to this merchandise, lubricating oil, one of its constituents, petroleum, is an oil, but the other constituent differs physically, chemically, and commercially from the vegetable oil out of which it is made. It has become a sulphonated saponification of the original vegetable oil and a dissolution of petroleum in this does not constitute a combination of oils. It is a nonenumerated manufactured article and was dutiable as such at 20 per cent. under paragraph 480, Act 1909. U. S. v. Schrock & Squires (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 444.

46. Marasque water.—Marasque water held dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured water. See paragraph 48.

47. Marble chips.—Marble chips, known as marble waste, that have been crushed and screened, being thereby advanced in value and taking another name as well, are not crude mineral but manufactured articles. Rossman v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 280.

48. Melon seeds roasted.—Melon seed which have been reduced in size by peeling, that have been roasted and salted for food, their germinating quality disappearing in these processes, are not to be deemed vegetables proper or as unmanufactured, but come within the category of manufactured articles and are dutiable as a nonenumerated manufacture under paragraph 480, Act 1909. U. S. v. Shing Shun & Co. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 388. See, also, Same v. Kauffman (1898) 84 Fed. 446, 28 C. C. A. 150.

49. Metal polish.—The amorphous viscous substance of the importation called amor's metal polish, without any determinate shape or form, does not come within the provisions of paragraph 95, Act 1909, as an article composed wholly or in chief value of earthy or mineral substance. There is no evidence of similitude in the record, but it is clear the substance is a manufacture not expressly provided for by any paragraph of the law in question. It was classifiable as a nonenumerated manufacture under paragraph 480. Rosenheim v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 100.

50. Mineralogical specimens.—Mineralogical specimens of agates held not dutiable as a nonenumerated article. See paragraph 390.

51. Modeling clay.—The merchandise here, modeling clay, does not fall within the terms of paragraph 81, Act 1913, but manufactured and composed as it is of earthy or mineral substances and a substance which is neither earthy nor mineral, namely, saponifiable matter in percentage 31.12, it is dutiable as an unenumerated manufactured article under paragraph 385 of the act. U. S. v. Strohmeyer & Arpe Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 246.

52. Moss dyed.—Dyed moss held not dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article. See paragraph 27.

53. Mother of pearl knife handles.—Mother of pearl cut for knife handles held not an unenumerated article. See paragraph 369.

54. Needlecases.—Needlebooks held dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles. See paragraph 135.

55. Nonenumerated in general.—When not described either "specifically" or "generally," they are "nonenumerated." (1889) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 272.

56. Nonenumerated manufactured articles in general.—Held, that an article which has been advanced through one or more processes into a completed commercial article, known and recognized in trade by a specific and distinctive name other than the name of the material from which it is made, and is put into a completed shape, designed and adapted for a particular use to which the material in its original form is not adapted, is to be deemed a manufacture, although its component materials are unchanged. U. S. v. George Meier & Co. (1905) 136 Fed. 764, 69 C. C. A. 421, reversing judgment Geo. Meier & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 472.

An article is "enumerated," so as to be without the provision that on manufactured articles not "enumerated" the duty shall be assessed at the highest rate at which the same would be chargeable if composed wholly of the component material of chief value, not only when the article is mentioned by its specific trade name, but also when it may be fairly included within some generic clause contained in the tariff schedule, so as to be distinguished from other articles. Wolff v. U. S. (1895) 71 Fed. 291, 18 C. C. A. 41.

Articles produced incidentally to the manufacture of other articles, and which are themselves ready to be used for various purposes without further treatment, are under the tariff laws subject to classification as "manufactured," rather than as "waste." Shallus v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 155 Fed. 213, decree reversed (1908) 162 Fed. 653, 89 C. C. A. 445.

If a nonenumerated manufactured article bears no substantial similitude to an enumerated article, or no substantial resemblance to two or more enumerated articles, chargeable with duty, and is not provided for under any of the other catch-all clauses of the tariff act, it is dutiable under the general provision for nonenumerated manufactured articles. Sykes v. Magone (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 494.

57. Nucoa butter.—Nucoa butter held not dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article. See paragraph 232.

58. Olive pits.—Olive pits held not dutiable as a nonenumerated article. See paragraph 27.

59. Orchil and Persian berry extracts.—Orchil and Persian berry extracts held dutiable as unenumerated manufactured articles. See paragraph 30.

60. Papaw melon powder.—Powder from the juice of the papaw melon held not dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article. See paragraph 27.

61. Pineapple juice.—Pineapple juice held not dutiable as a nonenumerated manufacturing article. See paragraph 247.

62. Plastilina.—Plastilina, or modeling clay, an article not containing clay, held not dutiable as "clay," but as an "unenumerated manufacture." Bancel v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 176 Fed. 132.

63. Polish.—This polish appears to be composed of pulverized silica, alumina, and lime saturated and mixed with petroleum oil and fat. This combination of materials is not fairly to be described as a chemical compound or mixture. It was properly held dutiable as an unenumerated manufacture under paragraph 480, Act 1909. U. S. v. Holland-American Trading Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 336.

64. Prune wine.—Thompson's patent prune wine held not dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article. See paragraph 16.

65. Ramie silver.—Ramie silver held not dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article. See paragraph 250.

66. Rape meal.—The rape meal of the importation was assessed as a non-enumerated manufactured article under paragraph 480, Act 1909. It was claimed to be a substance used only for manure and to be dutiable accordingly. The evidence strongly tends to show that rape meal is used in this country as suitable for feeding stock, but it is sufficient to support the collector's finding that the importers failed to show the merchandise is of a class that has no common, practicable, or profitable use other than use as manure. Taylor v. U. S. (1913) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 498.

67. Sago flour.—Sago flour held not dutiable as a raw article not otherwise provided for. See paragraph 590.

68. Sake.—Sake held dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article. See paragraph 244.

69. Soap pencils.—So-called soap pencils, for cleaning spectacle and eyeglass lenses, in which soap is the material of chief value, held dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles under section 6, Act 1897, and not as pencils under paragraph 456. U. S. v. American Express Co. (1905) 136 Fed. 594, 69 C. C. A. 368, affirming judgment (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 656.

70. Soapstone gas tips.—Small pieces of soapstone, cut in regular sizes for gas tips and burners, have been "manufactured," and were dutiable as unenumerated "manufactured" articles, under Act 1897, § 6. M. Kirschberger & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 166 Fed. 1012.

71. Soluble grease.—Soluble grease, a preparation of tallow used in the process of dyeing cotton cloth for softening the fabric after the application of the dye, held not dutiable under Act 1897, par. 32 as an alizarin assistant, but under section 6 as an unenumerated manufactured article. Abram De Ronde & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 92; De Ronde v. Same (C. C. 1902) 113 Fed. 858.

72. Sugar wafers.—Sugar wafers held not dutiable as nonenumerated articles. See paragraph 417.

Sweetened biscuit known as "sugar wafers," held dutiable as nonenumerated articles, under Act 1894, § 3, rather than admissible free, under paragraph 667, as "wafers, unmedicated, and not edible." Stemmler v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 72 Fed. 47.

73. Tennis balls.—Tennis balls held not an unenumerated article. See paragraph 368.

74. Thick soy.—Thick soy held not dutiable as a sauce under paragraph 241, Act 1897, but dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article under section 6. U. S. v. Wo On & Co. (1909) 167 Fed. 314, 92 C. C. A. 626.

75. Tungsten ore or wolfram.—Tungsten ore or wolfram held not dutiable as a nonenumerated unmanufactured article. See paragraph 102.

76. Viscose caps.—Viscose caps to form an air-tight and air-sealed cap, whether for bottles or tubes, were not dutiable by similitude as metal caps, but were dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article. Nevin v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 423.

77. Walnuts pickled.—Pickled walnuts held dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles. See paragraph 201.

78. Wheat foodstuff.—It would seem this commodity has no commercial designation, but it is manifestly a foodstuff manufactured from wheat, and as such was dutiable under section 6, Act 1897. Malouf v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 437.

79. Wheat injured by frost.—Wheat injured by frost held not dutiable as a nonenumerated unmanufactured article. See paragraph 644.

80. White hard enamel.—White hard enamel, used for various purposes, including watch dials, which in the condition imported cannot be used for any practical purpose, held dutiable under R. S. § 2513, as an article partly manufactured, and not provided for, and not under section 2502, reading "watches, watch cases, watch movements, parts of watches, and watch materials, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act," though the particular importation is intended for use in the watch business. Worthington v. Robbins (1891) 11 Sup. Ct. 581, 139 U. S. 337, 35 L. Ed. 181.

386. That each and every imported article, not enumerated in this section, which is similar, either in material, quality, texture, or the use to which it may be applied, to any article enumerated in this section as chargeable with duty, shall pay the same rate of duty which is levied on the enumerated article which it most resembles in any of the particulars before mentioned; and if any nonenumerated article equally resembles two or more enumerated articles on which different rates of duty are chargeable, there shall be levied on such nonenumerated article the same rate of duty as is chargeable on the article which it resembles paying the highest rate of duty; and on articles not enumerated, manufactured of two or more materials, the duty shall be assessed at the highest rate at which the same would be chargeable if composed wholly of the component material thereof of chief value; and the words "component material of chief value," wherever used in this section, shall be held to mean that component material which shall exceed in value any other single component material of the article; and the value of each component material shall be determined by the ascertained value of such material in its condition as found in the article. If two or more rates of duty shall be applicable to any imported article, it shall pay duty at the highest of such rates.

Notes of Decisions

Construction of similitude clause in general.—Articles held similar to enumerated articles, see the various enumerated articles.

—— What constitutes similarity.—The similarity required by the general similitude clause is one either of quality, material, texture, or use to which the article may be applied, but there may be similarity in other respects, such as in the manner of production or composition. Anderson & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 108.

The similarity required by the similitude clause is a real or substantial similarity. U. S. v. Komada & Co. (1908) 162 Fed. 465, 89 C. C. A. 385; Same v. Roesseler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. (1905) 137 Fed. 770, 70 C. C. A. 346 (affirming judgment [C. C. 1904] 131 Fed. 576); Sykes v. Magone (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 494; Weilbacher v. Merritt (C. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 85.

The similitude clause of Act Aug. 30, 1842, does not contemplate that the nonenumerated articles shall in every particular bear a similitude to an enumerated article. Boker v. Redfield (C. C. 1859) Fed. Cas. No. 1,606a.

In Act 1897, relating to articles "similar" to other articles, to term quoted is used in the sense of nearly corresponding, resembling in many respects, somewhat like, or having a general resemblance. U. S. v. Komada & Co. (1908) 162 Fed. 465, 89 C. C. A. 385.

The similitude clause can be invoked for unenumerated articles only; that is to say, when no other paragraph than the one providing for nonenumerated unmanufactured or manufactured articles properly applies. U. S. v. Stouffer Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 67.

The assessment of an unenumerated article by similitude properly depends on its resemblance to some enumerated dutiable article and not upon the manner in which the enumerated article is itself named in the law; the unenumerated article is subject to the same duty that is levied on that enumerated article it most resembles in material, quality, texture, or use. U. S. v. Cochran & Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 57.

In a case in which the similitude clause in Act 1897, is applicable, the rate determined thereby is to be preferred to that fixed by section 6, relating to unenumerated articles. F. B. Vandegrift & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 65, judgment affirmed (1909) 173 Fed. 609, 97 C. C. A. 469.

The amount of duty is not one of the tests prescribed for the application of the similitude clause in Act 1897. U. S. v. Behrend (1909) 167 Fed. 317, 92 C. C. A. 629.

To apply the similitude clause in Act 1897, it is not necessary that all the particulars of resemblance mentioned should exist; but the presence of one of the qualities is sufficient. John A. Paterson & Co. v. U. S. (1908) 166 Fed. 733, 92 C. C. A. 524.

Where an unenumerated article has a very vague and questionable resemblance to some enumerated article, and is exactly identical with another enumerated article, its status under the similitude clause in Act 1897 is fixed by the latter condition; the former being disregarded. Id.

Act 1897 does not require that similitude should exist in all four of the respects specified. One of these resemblances will suffice. U. S. v. Komada & Co. (1908) 162 Fed. 465, 89 C. C. A. 385.

In Act 1897, "texture" does not relate to liquids, but only to the structure of woven fabrics. Stratton v. Komanda & Co. (C. C. 1906) 148 Fed. 125, judgment reversed U. S. v. Komada & Co. (1908) 162 Fed. 465, 89 C. C. A. 385.

In applying the similitude clause in Act 1897, relative to articles similar to other articles in "material," difference in the original materials from which the articles compared is not controlling. The law concerns itself only with the condition of the articles at the time of importation. U. S. v. Komada & Co. (1908) 162 Fed. 465, 89 C. C. A. 385.

The similitude described by that portion of R. S. § 2499, as amended by Act March 3, 1883, which provides that "nonenumerated articles, similar in material and quality and texture, and the use to which they may be applied, to articles on the free list, and in the manufacture of which no dutiable materials are used, shall be free," is a similitude in all four of the particulars mentioned therein. Lazard v. Magone (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 662.

The similitude either in material, quality, texture, or the use to which it may be applied, that a nonenumerated manufactured article must bear to an enumerated article chargeable with duty, in order to subject the former article to the same rate of duty which is levied and charged on the latter article, under Act 1883, must be a substantial similitude, not merely an adaptability to sale as a substitute for the latter article, but representing either its employment, or its effects in producing a result. Sykes v. Magone (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 494; Weilbacher v. Merritt (C. C. 1888) 37 Fed. 85.

To constitute similarity in use, within the meaning of the similitude clause of Act 1894, which will require a nonenumerated article to be classified with one enumerated, the uses of the two need not be identical or interchangeable. U. S. v. Dana (1900) 99 Fed. 433, 39 C. C. A. 590.

The phrase "of similar description" in the tariff act of 1862 is not a commercial term, and the statute does not contemplate that goods classed under it shall be in all respects the same. Greenleaf v. Goodrich (1879) 101 U. S. 278, 283, 284, 25 L. Ed. 845.

An article not named in Act 1846 does not come under the clause providing for nonenumerated articles, where it so resembles some enumerated article, in quality, material, or use, as to be governed by the similitude clause of Act 1842. Ross v. Peaslee (C. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 12,077.

The words "similar description" are to be understood in their popular and generally received meaning—goods similar in product, and adapted to similar uses, and not necessarily produced by similar processes or methods of manufacture. Greenleaf v. Goodrich (C. C. 1875) Fed. Cas. No. 5,778.

A nonenumerated article is to be classified for duty under the similitude clause of a tariff act, where the required similitude exists, rather than under the general residuary clause. Hahn v. U. S. (1900) 100 Fed. 635, 40 C. C. A. 622, reversing judgment U. S. v. Hahn (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 755.

If an article is found not enumerated in the tariff laws, the first inquiry is whether it bears similitude, either in material, quality, texture, or use to which it may be applied, to any article enumerated as chargeable with duty. If it does, and the similitude is substantial, it is to be deemed the same and to be charged accordingly. If nothing is found to which it bears the requisite similitude, then an inquiry is to be instituted as to its component materials, and a duty assessed at the highest rates chargeable on any of the materials. Arthur v. Fox (1883) 2 Sup. Ct. 371, 108 U. S. 125, 27 L. Ed. 675.

The question of similitude is one of fact. Herrman v. Miller (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 1090, 1091, 127 U. S. 363, 32 L. Ed. 186; Same v. Arthur's Ex'rs (1887) 127 U. S. 363, 8 Sup. Ct. 1090, 32 L. Ed. 186; U. S. v. Komada & Co. (1908) 162 Fed. 465, 89 C. C. A. 385 (reversing judgment Stratton v. Komada & Co. [C. C. 1906] 148 Fed. 125); Greenleaf v. Goodrich (C. C. 1875) Fed. Cas. No. 5,778; Gamble v. Mason (C. C. 1858) Fed. Cas. No. 5,209; U. S. v. Buss & Warner (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 87. See, also, Robins v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 252.

—— Not enumerated.—To place an article among those designated as "enumerated," so that it does not come within the operation of the similitude clause of a customs law, it is not necessary that it should be specifically mentioned. In re Wise (C. C. 1898) 93 Fed. 443.

In order to remove an imported article from the operation of a tariff provision for merchandise, not "enumerated," it is not necessary to show that there is an enumeration of the article according to its chief use. It is enough if there is an enumeration describing any minor use. Dodge & Olcott v. U. S. (C. C. 1891) 130 Fed. 624.

Before the nonenumerated provision can be resorted to it must be found that the article is not fairly included within any of the enumerating clauses of the act. General Electric Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 398.

Where an article is designated eo nomine, whether for duty or to be free of duty, such designation must prevail over words of a general description. U. S. v. Hatters' Fur Exchange (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 198.

Component of chief value.—In determining what is the component material of chief value in a manufactured article, under R. S. § 2499, as amended by Act 1883 (22 Stat. 491), the value of the materials should be taken at the time they were put together in the completed article, and not in their raw state, as received by the manufacturer. The express provision to this effect in Act 1890 was merely declaratory of the law. Seeberger v. Hardy (1893) 14 Sup. Ct. 170, 171, 150 U. S. 420, 37 L. Ed. 1129.

Act 1897, providing that the component material of chief value in imported merchandise shall be determined with reference to the value of the components in their condition as found in the article, means the state which the materials are in when put together, without regard to their value after being advanced to completion. U. S. v. Johnson & Johnson (1907) 154 Fed. 39, 83 C. C. A. 151, reversing judgment Kraemer v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 146 Fed. 148, and writ of certiorari denied Johnson & Johnson v. U. S. (1907) 28 S. Ct. 261, 207 U. S. 595, 52 L. Ed. 356.

Under section 7, Act 1897, providing that the component material of chief value in imported merchandise "shall be determined by the ascertained value of such material in its condition as found in the article," held that, as to woven fabrics, the ascertainment should be made with reference to the time the process of weaving commences; that the operation of warping is not a part of such process; and that the cost of such operation should be included wholly in the value of the material constituting the warp of the fabrics, and not distributed between the warp and the weft. U. S. v. Hoeninghaus & Curtiss (1905) 137 Fed. 478, 69 C. C. A. 626, affirming judgment Hoeninghaus & Curtis v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 570.

Held, that the provision in Act 1897, that "the value of each component material shall be determined by the ascertained value of such material in its condition as found in the article," does not mean the value of the materials as they go into the hands of the manufacturer, but when in the condition that nothing remains to be done to them by the manufacturer, except to put them together to make the completed product. Hoeninghaus & Curtis v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 570, judgment affirmed U. S. v. Hoeninghaus & Curtiss (1905) 137 Fed. 478, 69 C. C. A. 626.

Where a tariff enumeration is descriptive of the use of imported merchandise, the chief or predominant use of an article should control in determining whether or not it comes within that enumeration. U. S. v. Lehn (C. C. 1901) 124 Fed. 87.

In manufacturing certain braids composed of cotton and india rubber, nine-tenths of the labor was employed on the cotton. Held that, under Act 1897, it was proper to add this cost of labor to the original cost of the cotton, in finding the component material of chief value, rather than to apply the value of the labor equally between the cotton and the rubber. Calhoun v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 122 Fed. 894.

That component material of chief value means a component material which shall exceed in value any other single component material of the article is the signification prescribed for that phrase by paragraph 481, Act 1909. Hawley & Letzerich v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 45.

To ascertain the material of chief value in any manufacture the value of the materials should be determined as of the time when they have reached such condition that nothing remains to be done by the manufacturer except to put them together. Bing & Co.'s Successors v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 211. See, also, U. S. v. Meadows (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 143.

To bring a manufacturing material within a particular designation in a tariff law that covers one of the ultimate uses of that material, it should be found to be so far advanced by the processes applied to it in fitting it for that ultimate use that either on an examination per se its ultimate use is clear or it is found so far advanced that its utility for another possible use has been destroyed. Athenia Steel & Wire Co. v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 494.

Where no proper conclusion can be drawn from the evidence as to what in fact was the component of chief value in an article, no attempt to classify the article according to its component of value in chief will be made, and the finding of the board of general appraisers will be affirmed. Strakosh v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 360.

Dutiable goods imported mixed with other goods subject to another rate of duty or none at all, if practicably separable or if determinable in quantity may, on a levy of duties, be segregated for that purpose. U. S. v. Waterhouse (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 353. See, also, Same v. Ranlett (1898) 19 Sup. Ct. 114, 172 U. S. 133, 43 L. Ed. 393.

Rate of duty.—The provision in Act 1897, that merchandise to which "two or more rates of duty shall be applicable * * * shall pay duty at the highest of such rates" held not to apply in a case where one paragraph provides an ad valorem and the other a specific rate. Loggie v. U. S. (1905) 137 Fed. 813, 70 C. C. A. 433.

In the classification of imported articles it is immaterial that they were put in an unfinished condition to escape a higher rate of duty. Hunter v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 143 Fed. 914.

R. S. § 2499, as amended by Act March 3, 1883, providing that "if two or more rates of duty should be applicable to any imported article, it shall be classified for duty under the highest of such rates," applies to a manufactured article composed partly of metal and partly of paper, the latter being the material of chief value. Hohenstein v. Hedden (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 94, judgment reversed (1893) 13 S. Ct. 1047, 149 U. S. 776, 37 L. Ed. 963.

Where two provisions of the tariff act apply to an imported article, the first of which provisions is qualified by the phrase, "not otherwise provided for," while the second contains no such qualifying phrase, the article is properly dutiable under the second provision, and must be held to be therein "otherwise provided for," so as to take it out of the operation of the first provision. Zucker & Levett Chemical Co. v. Magone (C. C. 1889) 37 Fed. 776.

Act Aug. 30, 1842, § 20, providing that on all articles manufactured from two or more materials the duty shall be assessed at the highest rates at which any of its component parts may be chargeable, though not repealed by Act June 30, 1846, applies only in cases where an article has not been specially provided for by the later act. Lottimer v. Lawrence (C. C. 1850) Fed. Cas. No. 8,521.

The present merchandise before and at the time of the passage of Act 1909 was known commercially as beads and known also commercially as agate button blanks, and under the testimony it cannot be well said that either designation is the more specific. Accordingly, the articles fall within the final clause of paragraph 481 of the act in question, by which they must take the higher rate of duty assessed upon the two classifications. American Bead Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 459.

An article imported may not be confined in use exclusively to the purpose for which it is imported, and, if sold to persons who use it for other purposes, its classification is not thereby changed and the rate of duty should be assessed for its general and commonly known use. Vandiver v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 194.

Paragraph 481, Act 1909, providing that if two or more rates of duty shall be applicable to any imported article, it is dutiable at the highest of such rates, will be construed in case of ambiguity in favor of the importer. Woolworth v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 120.

All doubts arising under the act are presumptively to be resolved in favor of the lower rate of duty, save where the act mentions or describes the same article in two different places, when the higher rate governs. (1894) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 66.

Where certain merchandise, consisting of a fabric composed of silk, cotton, and worsted, met all the requirements of Schedule L of Act March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 510), and also fulfilled all the conditions imposed by Schedule K of the same act for classification for duty thereunder, held that, under section 2499, R. S. it should be classified for duty under Schedule L, which imposes the higher rate. (1889) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 367.

FREE LIST

That on and after the day following the passage of this Act, except as otherwise specially provided for in this Act, the articles mentioned in the following paragraphs shall, when imported into the United States or into any of its possessions (except the Philippine Islands and the islands of Guam and Tutuila), be exempt from duty:

Notes of Decisions

Construction of free list.—Where an item in the free list has been continued without change as it was in Act 1846, it will be held to have the same meaning now that it had at the time of the passage of Act July 30, 1846 (9 Stat. 42). Sixty-Five Terra Cotta Vases (D. C. 1882) 10 Fed. 880.

Section 2 of Act Oct. 1, 1890 (26 Stat. 602), is exhaustive upon the subject of free entry of goods, so that an article not mentioned in said section cannot be held to be nondutiable because of any previous law granting it exemption from duty. (1893) 20 Op. Atty. Gen. 630.

387. Acids: Acetic or pyroligneous, arsenic or arsenious, [carbolic,] chromic, fluoric, hydrofluoric, hydrochloric or muriatic, nitric, phosphoric, [phthalic] prussic, silicic, sulphuric or oil of vitriol, and valerianic.

The words "carbolic" and "phthalic" in this paragraph, inclosed in brackets, were repealed by Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, § 502, post, § 5291c, and certain duties imposed upon said articles by §§ 500, 501, of said Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, post, §§ 5291a, 5291b.

Notes of Decisions

Crude carbolic acid.—Crude carbolic acid, although not chemically an acid, held entitled to free entry under paragraph 473 of Act 1890 as an "acid used for manufacturing purposes," and is not dutiable under paragraph 19 as a preparation of coal tar. Schoellkopf, Hartford & Maclagan v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 640.

Crystal carbolic acid.—A coal tar preparation from which crystal carbolic acid is made by "refining" held admissible free from duty, as an acid, within Act 1890, par. 473, and not dutiable under paragraph 19, which relates to "all preparations of coal tar, not colors or dyes, not specially provided for." Appeal of Schultz (C. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 820.

Loretin.—Loretin, a medicinal preparation, the medicinal action of which as an antiseptic and otherwise is chiefly due to its acid properties, held free, under paragraph 363 of Act 1894, as an "acid used for medicinal purposes," and not dutiable, under paragraph 59, as a medicinal preparation. Koechl v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 84 Fed. 954.

388. Aconite.

389. Acorns, raw, dried or undried, but unground.

390. Agates, unmanufactured.

Notes of Decisions

Agates.—Mineralogical specimens of agates in rectangular pieces, faced and polished, were free, under Rev. St. § 2503, as "agates, unmanufactured," and were not dutiable under section 2513, or, either directly or by assimilation, under the provision in section 2502 for "precious stones of all kinds." U. S. v. Hahn (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 755.

391. Agricultural implements: Plows, tooth and disk harrows, headers, harvesters, reapers, agricultural drills and planters, mowers, horserakes, cultivators, thrashing machines, cotton gins, machinery for use in the manufacture of sugar, wagons and carts, and all other agricultural implements of any kind and description, whether specifically mentioned herein or not, whether in whole or in parts, including repair parts.

Notes of Decisions

Agricultural implements. — Knives with folding blades held not free of duty as agricultural implements. See paragraph 128.

Lawn rakes held not dutiable as agricultural implements. See paragraph 167.

An agricultural implement serves some purpose in the production of food from the soil or in the raising of domestic animals thereon. U. S. v. Tower (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 562.

That some of the articles dutiable under paragraph 128 may be put to agricultural uses, and that paragraph 391 exempts from duty all agricultural implements, creates no irreconcilable conflict. Quirk v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 444.

Agricultural implements are such as are employed in pursuits that minister to human and, incidentally, animal subsistence; to the requirements of life (food) and possibly men's comfort (raiment), and not merely pleasurable or ornamental ends. U. S. v. Boker & Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 243.

"All other agricultural implements" includes, it is true, all implements devoted to agriculture proper, but the chief use here, as always, determines the classification, and these shears, suited for pruning trees and shrubbery, were not dutiable as agricultural implements under paragraph 391, Act 1913. Id.

Fraises.—"Fraises"—the abrading parts of machines which sharpen the knives of beet-cutting machines—being shown to be indispensable to the operation of the sharpening machines and used exclusively for that purpose, the cutting machines being shown to be indispensable to the operation of a beet-sugar factory, are entitled to free entry under paragraph 391, Tariff Act 1913, as "machinery for use in the manufacture of sugar * * * and all other agricultural implements of any kind and description, whether specially mentioned herein or not, whether in whole or in parts, including repair parts." U. S. v. American Express Co. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 494.

Whether in whole or in parts.—The phrase "whether in whole or in parts" relates not only to "all other agricultural implements" but also to the articles, appliances, or machines antecedently enumerated. U. S. v. American Express Co. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 494.

392. Albumen, not specially provided for in this section.

Notes of Decisions

Albumen.—An article which is not an albumen in the technical language of chemists, though one in common speech, held not within Act 1897, par. 245, putting a duty on "albumen, egg or blood," but within paragraph 468 putting on the free list "albumen not specially provided for." Merchants' Despatch Transp. Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 121 Fed. 443.

It is not a matter of common knowledge that a substance obtained as this was is albumen within paragraph 392, Act 1913, the chemical analysis relied on by the importers showing the substance to be 77.90 per cent. protein, 10 per cent. starch, and 12.10 per cent. moisture and fat. U. S. v. Kuyper & Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 142.

393. Alcohol, methyl or wood.

394. (Repealed.)

This paragraph was repealed by Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, § 502, post, § 5291c, and certain duties imposed upon the articles enumerated therein by §§ 500, 501, of said Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, post, §§ 5291a, 5291b. Said paragraph read as follows:

"394. Alizarin, natural or synthetic, and dyes obtained from alizarin, anthracene, and carbazol."

Notes of Decisions

Artificial alizarin.—The term "artificial alizarin," as used in tariff acts, has acquired a definite meaning, by which it is limited to such dyestuffs as are derived from anthracin; and colors known as alizarin blacks and browns, which are not so derived, although they respond fully to the alizarin tests, are not within paragraph 469 of the free list of Act 1897, but are dutiable under paragraph 15, as coal tar dyes or colors not specially provided for. Farbenfabriken of Elberfeld & Co. v. U. S. (1900) 102 Fed. 603, 42 C. C. A. 525; Farbenfabriken of Elberfeld Co. v. Same (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 553.

Alizarin black.—Alizarin black is properly classified under Act 1890, par. 478, of the free list, and not under paragraph 18, as a coal tar color not specially provided for. Wm. J. Matheson & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 99 Fed. 430; Id. (C. C. 1896) 90 Fed. 276.

Alizarin blues.—Alizarin blue, of a new form, not known at the time of the passage of Act 1890, was nevertheless to be classed as such, under paragraph 478, and not as a coal tar color, under paragraph 18. U. S. v. Sehlbach (1898) 90 Fed. 798, 33 C. C. A. 277; Sehlbach v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 157.

Alizarin brown.—The dyes known as "alizarin brown" and "coerulein" are not shown to be "derived from anthracin," so as to be free from duty, under Act 1897, par. 469, by the facts that the presence of anthracin in the colors has been determined by chemical tests, that no chemical examination of the article will satisfactorily disclose the raw materials from which the dye is made, and that the only other sources of information accessible to the government are the statement of the maker or importer, if he chooses to make one, or of the specification in the patent, if there be one, since not conclusive that the word "derived" should be used in its technical or chemical sense of having anthracin as a base, or responding to the chemical tests for anthracin, as distinguished from its ordinary sense. Pickhardt v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 719.

Alizarin violet.—Alizarin violet, known as "alizarin cyanine R," was entitled to free entry as an alizarin color or dye, under paragraph 368 of Act 1894, and was not dutiable as a coal-tar product, under paragraph 14 of said act. Klipstein v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 356.

Alizarin yellow.—A substance which responds to the alizarin tests, and which is commercially known and dealt in as "alizarin," or "alizarin yellow," is free, under paragraph 595 of Act 1883, though not chemically alizarin. Selbach v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 78 Fed. 803, decree modified U. S. v. Sehlbach (1898) 90 Fed. 798, 33 C. C. A. 277.

Carbazol.—Carbazol is a chemical compound distinct from anthracin, having a different chemical formula, and it is used to produce different dyes from those derived from anthracin. The fact that carbazol is found in association with anthracin does not leave it open to say that a product derived solely from carbazol, not including anthracin, is derived from anthracin. The dyes here are a product of coal tar, some elements being eliminated, but none added, to produce carbazol. They were dutiable at 30 per cent. ad valorem under paragraph 15, Act 1909. Cassella Color Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 113.

Lake pigment.—A lake pigment, classed by the government chemist as an "alizarin color" comes within Act 1894, par. 368, providing for the free entry of alizarin colors, and is not subject to duty under section 48, providing for a duty on all paints, lakes, etc., not specially provided for in the act. Keppelmann v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 77.

395. Ammonia, sulphate of, perchlorate of, and nitrate of.

Notes of Decisions

Sulphate of ammonia.—Sulphate of ammonia, though made exclusively from bone, held dutiable under Act 1890, par. 10, and cannot be admitted free of duty, under paragraph 600, as a substance "expressly used for manure," even when imported and actually used for the manufacture of fertilizers. Marine v. George E. Bartol & Co. (C. C. 1894) 60 Fed. 601, following Magone v. Heller (1893) 14 Sup. Ct. 18, 150 U. S. 70, 37 L. Ed. 1001.

396. Antimony ore and stibnite containing antimony, but only as to the antimony content.

Notes of Decisions

Crude sulphide of antimony.—Crude sulphide of antimony held classifiable under Act 1897, Free List, par. 476, covering "antimony ore, crude sulphite of," and not assessable under section 6 as a "nonenumerated article manufactured in whole or in part," the word "sulphite" being regarded as a misprint for "sulphide." McKesson v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 113 Fed. 996.

397. Any animal imported by a citizen of the United States, specially for breeding purposes, shall be admitted free, whether intended to be used by the importer himself or for sale for such purposes: Provided, That no such animal shall be admitted free unless pure bred of a recognized breed, and duly registered in a book of record recognized by the Secretary of Agriculture for that breed: And provided further, That the certificate of such record and pedigree of such animal shall be produced and submitted to the Department of Agriculture, duly authenticated by the proper custodian of such book of record, together with an affidavit of the owner, agent, or importer that the animal imported is the identical animal described in said certificate of record and pedigree. The Secretary of Agriculture may prescribe such regulations as may be required for determining the purity of breeding and the identity of such animal: And provided further, That the collectors of customs shall require a certificate from the Department of Agriculture stating that such animal is pure bred of a recognized breed and duly registered in a book of record recognized by the Secretary of Agriculture for that breed.

The Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe such additional regulations as may be required for the strict enforcement of this provision.

Horses, mules, and asses straying across the boundary line into any foreign country, or driven across such boundary line by the owner for temporary pasturage purposes only, together with their offspring, shall be dutiable unless brought back to the United States within six months, in which case they shall be free of duty, under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury: And provided further, That the provisions of this Act shall apply to all such animals as have been imported and are in quarantine or otherwise in the custody of customs or other officers of the United States at the date of the taking effect of this Act.

Notes of Decisions

Pasturage.—Paragraph 373 of Act 1894, providing that cattle driven across the boundary line into a foreign country for pasturage purposes may, together with their increase, be brought back free of duty, does not apply to the increase of animals transported by railroad far into the interior of a foreign country for the stocking of a ranch. U. S. v. Cloete (1897) 81 Fed. 399, 26 C. C. A. 452.

Where cattle were owned in Mexican territory and regularly imported into the United States, the owner was liable for duties thereon, though they previously had been in this country. De Celis's Adm'r v. U. S. (1877) 13 Ct. Cl. 117.

Proof of pedigree.—In order that a horse of pure breed, imported specially for breeding purposes, should be entitled to free entry, under paragraph 482 of Act 1890, it was requisite that proofs of pedigree and identity, as prescribed by the second proviso to that paragraph, should be furnished to the customs officers; and, if this were not done, it was proper to assess the appropriate duty, and such assessment could not thereafter be disturbed by the court on proofs of pedigree, etc., produced before it. Beck v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 150.

Regulations of Secretary of Treasury.—Under the revenue law (R. S. § 2505) providing that "all animals alive, specially imported for breeding purposes from beyond the seas, shall be admitted free [of duty] upon proof thereof satisfactory to the secretary of the treasury, and under such regulations as he may prescribe," the secretary cannot by regulations confine the operation of the statute to animals of "superior stock," nor put into the body of the statute a limitation which Congress did not think it necessary to prescribe. Morrill v. Jones (1882) 1 Sup. Ct. 423, 424, 106 U. S. 466, 27 L. Ed. 267.

The requirement in the regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury that proof should be produced of the registry of the grandsires and grandams of animals imported for breeding purposes is not in contravention of the statute. Borden v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 132 Fed. 205.

Restrictions on importation.—Paragraph 473 of Act 1897 does not limit such right of free importation to citizens of the United States, nor restrict it to animals imported for the personal use of the importer, and not for sale; and, in view of the manifest policy of the provision to encourage improvement in the breeds of live stock by farmers and stock raisers, neither the administrative officers nor the courts are authorized to read such restriction into the law. In re Page (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 317.

Act 1883 limits free importation of animals to such as are imported for the particular purpose of breeding; and it is a sufficient compliance with the statute that the importer, in good faith, intends them for that purpose, and it does not prevent his otherwise disposing of them if he afterwards finds it necessary or desirable to do so. U. S. v. One Hundred and Ninety-Six Mares (C. C. 1886) 29 Fed. 139.

398. Animals brought into the United States temporarily for a period not exceeding six months, for the purpose of breeding, exhibition or competition for prizes offered by any agricultural, polo, or racing association; but a bond shall be given in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; also teams of animals, including their harness and tackle, and the wagons or other vehicles actually owned by persons emigrating from foreign countries to the United States with their families, and in actual use for the purpose of such emigration under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; and wild animals intended for exhibition in zoological collections for scientific and educational purposes, and not for sale or profit.

399. Annatto, roucou, rocoa, or orleans, and all extracts of.

Notes of Decisions

Rocoa.—Rocoa, having a distinct commercial name, held not dutiable as anhatto, nor entitled to entry free as a berry or vegetable. Act Aug. 30, 1842. Schneider v. Lawrence (C. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 12,470.

400. Antitoxins, vaccine virus, and all other serums derived from animals and used for therapeutic purposes.

Notes of Decisions

Anthrax vaccine or blackleg.—A preparation known as "anthrax vaccine," or "blackleg," which is used for the prevention of anthrax or blackleg, a disease of cattle, held included within paragraph 692, Free List, Act 1897, relating to "vaccine virus," and is thereby taken out of the provision in paragraph 68, for "medicinal preparations not specially provided for." Pasteur Vaccine Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 123 Fed. 846.

Antitoxine.—Antitoxine, used by inoculation for the prevention and cure of diphtheria, held dutiable as a "medicinal preparation," under paragraph 59 of Act 1894, and not free, under paragraph 664, as "vaccine virus." Koechl v. U. S. (1898) 84 Fed. 448, 28 C. C. A. 458; U. S. v. Schulze (C. C. 1896) 77 Fed. 607.

401. Apatite.

402. Arrowroot in its natural state and not manufactured.

Notes of Decisions

Arrowroot.—Arrowroot held dutiable as starch. See paragraph 234.

Held, that the provision in paragraph 478, Act 1897, for "arrowroot in its natural state and not manufactured," relates to the tubers or root of the arrowroot plant, though no importations are ever made in that form. Leaycraft & Co. v. U. S. (1904) 130 Fed. 106, 64 C. C. A. 440, affirming judgment (C. C. 1903) 124 Fed. 999.

403. Arsenic and sulphide of arsenic, or orpiment.

404. Articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United States, when returned after having been exported, without having been advanced in value or improved in condition by any process of manufacture or other means; steel boxes, casks, barrels, carboys, bags, and other containers or coverings of American manufacture exported filled with American products, or exported empty and returned filled with foreign products, including shooks and staves when returned as barrels or boxes; also quicksilver flasks or bottles, iron or steel drums of either domestic or foreign manufacture, used for the shipment of acids, or other chemicals, which shall have been actually exported from the United States; but proof of the identity of such articles shall be made, under general regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the exemption of bags from duty shall apply only to such domestic bags as may be imported by the exporter thereof, and if any such articles are subject to internal-revenue tax at the time of exportation, such tax shall be proved to have been paid before exportation and not refunded; photographic dry plates or films of American manufacture (except moving-picture films), exposed abroad, whether developed or not, and films from moving-picture machines, light struck or otherwise damaged, or worn out, so as to be unsuitable for any other purpose than the recovery of the constituent materials, provided the basic films are of American manufacture, but proof of the identity of such articles shall be made under general regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; articles exported from the United States for repairs may be returned upon payment of a duty upon the value of the repairs at the rate at which the article itself would be subject if imported under conditions and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That this paragraph shall not apply to any article upon which an allowance of drawback has been made, the reimportation of which is hereby prohibited except upon payment of duties equal to the drawbacks allowed; or to any article manufactured in bonded warehouse and exported under any provision of law: And provided further, That when manufactured tobacco which has been exported without payment of internal-revenue tax shall be reimported it shall be retained in the custody of the collector of customs until internal-revenue stamps in payment of the legal duties shall be placed thereon: And provided further, That the provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to animals made dutiable under the provisions of paragraph 397.

1. In general.—See, also, notes under § 5,313, post.

2. Barrels.—Barrels manufactured in this country, sent to Cuba, and reimported filled with molasses, are liable to duty. Knight v. Schell (C. C. 1860) Fed. Cas. No. 7,887.

3. Cattle.—Paragraph 387 of Act 1894, permitting entry free of duty of "articles the growth, produce, and manufacture of the United States, when returned after having been exported, without having been advanced in value or improved in condition by any process of manufacture or other means," does not apply to cattle which are exported as young and immature animals, and returned long after fully matured and suitable for market. U. S. v. Cloete (1897) 81 Fed. 399, 26 C. C. A. 452.

Where hides have been removed abroad from American cattle exported alive and the hides returned as imports, they are not to be deemed articles of the growth, produce, and manufacture of the United States. Buschoff v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 1; Id. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 336.

4. Change of condition.—A dredge boat, which, having been exported from the United States, is reimported immediately after having been extensively repaired, and new and heavier machinery substituted, is not entitled to free entry under R. S. § 2505, as being returned "in the same condition as exported," though some of the work was done by American labor, and part of the material used was American material. U. S. v. Dunbar (1895) 67 Fed. 783, 14 C. C. A. 639.

Where property from being shipwrecked and submerged in salt water is greatly changed in appearance, the fact that the articles were the products or manufactures of the United States, and not the subject of duty, must be established in the manner provided by the regulations of the treasury department, so far as circumstances will permit, and not by ordinary testimony. Cargo from the Wreck of the Edwards (D. C. 1882) 12 Fed. 508.

Such damage as results to property from being shipwrecked and submerged in salt water, with breaking and loss of boxes and cases, held not to so change its condition as to exclude it from free entry, if shown to be products or manufactures of the United States, under provisions of Rev. St. § 2505. Id.

5. Drawback.—Schedule N of Act 1883, allowing, as amended by Act June 19, 1886 (24 Stat. 81), a drawback of 75 cents per ton on imported coal afterwards used by steam vessels of the United States engaged in foreign commerce or the coasting trade, was not repealed by Schedule N of Act 1890, which merely imposes a duty of 75 cents per ton on imported coal; but the drawback, less 1 per cent. thereof, is continued in force by the proviso to section 25 of said act, relating to drawbacks "allowable under existing law." U. S. v. Allen (1893) 58 Fed. 864, 7 C. C. A. 547, affirming Allen v. U. S. (D. C. 1892) 52 Fed. 575.

In paragraph 493 of Act 1890, providing for the free reimportation of certain American goods, among which are casks, bags, etc., the proviso that "this paragraph shall not apply to any article upon which an allowance of drawback has been made, the reimportation of which is hereby prohibited except upon payment of duties equal to the drawbacks allowed," applies to bags of jute burlap upon which drawbacks were allowed, notwithstanding that they are reimported filled with nondutiable merchandise, such as canary seed. In re Schallenberger (C. C. 1895) 72 Fed. 491.

Act Feb. 8, 1875, provides that "grain bags, the manufacture of the United States, when exported filled with American products, may be returned to the United States free of duty, under such rules and regulations as shall be prescribed by the secretary of the treasury." Grain bags manufactured in this country from imported materials were exported full of California wheat. The exporter demanded and received according to law, out of the public treasury, the drawback due him on account of the duty formerly collected upon the materials of which the bags were made. Upon the return of the grain bags, held, that they were entitled to pass free of duty. The power of the secretary to prescribe rules and regulations does not authorize him to impose a duty, not provided for by congress, in repayment of the drawback. Balfour v. Sullivan (C. C. 1884) 19 Fed. 578.

Refined sugar manufactured in this country from raw sugar imported under Act 1883 and exported before April 1, 1891, with a drawback of the duties collected on the importation, and again imported after April 1, 1891, is subject to duty to the full amount of the drawback allowed on the sugar on its exportation. (1891) 20 Op. Atty. Gen. 77.

Where meat of American production, cured with foreign salt, was exported to Europe (the duty upon the salt being refunded), and subsequently brought back to this country, advised that, on the duties upon the salt being re-refunded, the meat may be admitted duty free under Act March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 514). (1885) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 139.

6. Dredge boat.—A dredge boat, having no power of propulsion, and capable of use as a dredging machine only, is a "manufacture or machine," within the meaning of Rev. St. § 2505, and, as such, is not dutiable if, after being exported from the United States, it is returned in the same condition as exported. U. S. v. Dunbar (1895) 67 Fed. 783, 14 C. C. A. 639.

7. Internal revenue tax.—Tobacco grown in Porto Rico after the cession of that island to the United States and brought into this country for warehousing, and afterwards exported to Canada and thence returned to the United States, is within the benefits of paragraph 483 of Act 1897, but subject to the internal revenue tax provisions of section 3 of Act April 12, 1900 (31 Stat. 77). (1903) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 612.

8. Proof of identity.—Where bags of American manufacture, on being exported to be returned, were marked for identification as required by article 336 of the treasury regulations, but on their attempted reimportation an examination of sample packages disclosed but 8 per cent. having the same marks, they were not entitled to free entry under paragraph 493 of Act 1890, on other proof that they were of American manufacture. U. S. v. Brewer (1899) 92 Fed. 343, 34 C. C. A. 390.

Under paragraph 493 of Act Oct. 1, 1890, which permits the free reimportation of certain articles of American manufacture, including bags which have been exported filled with American products, or exported empty and returned filled with foreign products, but requires proof of identity to be "made under general regulations to be prescribed by the secretary of the treasury," the provision as to the manner of proof is of the essence of the exemption; and, the secretary having promulgated such general regulations, reasonable in their requirements, an importer cannot ignore them, and obtain the exemption by substituting other evidence satisfactory to the customs officers. Bags claimed to have been exported filled from another port, but of which fact no certificate of the collector is furnished, as required by article 331 of the treasury regulations, are properly dutiable. U. S. v. Brewer (1899) 92 Fed. 341, 34 C. C. A. 380.

The regulations for the proof of identity of American goods, prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury under the authority of Act 1897, par. 483, must be complied with. Congress having provided this mode of proof, no other can be permitted; this express provision being of the very essence of the exemption permitted by the law. Roberts v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 178 Fed. 607.

Flour bags, shown by proof according to the treasury regulations to have been made in this country, were entitled to free entry, under paragraph 387 of Act 1894, though the marks on some of the bags did not correspond to those in the invoices. Brewer v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 149.

The regulations for making proof, under paragraph 387 of Act 1894, of the identity of articles of American manufacture, imported without change, after exportation, must be prescribed after the passage of the act, and those in force before its passage are not applicable. Bartram v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 77 Fed. 604, appeal dismissed (1897) 96 Fed. 1006, 37 C. C. A. 666.

Failure to file the certificate required on the reimportation of exported American machines, immediately upon the entry of the goods, does not deprive the importer of the right to re-enter them free, if such certificate is filed in a short time. Hensel v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 72 Fed. 52.

Upon the reimportation of exported American manufactures, the mere failure to state, in the certificate presented on the entry, that the goods had not been advanced in value or improved in condition since they left this country, as required by the former treasury regulations, did not justify the collector in requiring payment of duties, if the fact that they had not been advanced in value or improved in condition otherwise appeared. Id.

There is no regulation made by the secretary of the treasury in relation to the proof of identity of reimported American goods, which is applicable to barrels exported in the form of "shooks"; and even if there be such a regulation the method prescribed by it is not exclusive, and if the identity appear by other evidence the goods are entitled to free entry. Dominici v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 72 Fed. 46.

The oath as to the American manufacture of an article sought to be reimported may be waived by the collector when he admits its American character but claims duty on another ground. Knight v. Schell (C. C. 1860) Fed. Cas. No. 7,887.

Waiver of such oath by a deputy collector estops the collector from setting up the omission to give it. Id.

One claiming to reimport American goods free of duty under Act 1799, § 47, has the burden of showing that the goods are American goods in the same condition as exported. Kidd v. Swartwout (C. C. 1843) Fed. Cas. No. 7,756.

Article 570 of the customs regulations requires as to American goods returned the filing of the declaration by the foreign exporter with the entry and as well the filing therewith of the oath or declaration of the owner, importer, consignee, or agent. The collector has no authority to waive the filing of the oath or declaration of the owner with the entry and a subsequent filing was not a compliance with the law. U. S. v. Saunders (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 86. See, also, Same v. Rettig (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 537.

The regulations of the Treasury are explicit and they are reasonable and lawful in requiring that when free entry is claimed for goods under paragraph 500, Act 1909, the importer must furnish a certificate of prior exportation of the goods, made by the collector and naval officer, if any, at the place of export; or failing in this, the production of them must be waived by the collector and naval officer, if any, at the port of entry. Neither the certificate nor the fact of waiver is here shown, and the goods were not entitled to free entry. U. S. v. Goldberg (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 394.

Where goods have been exported from one port of the United States and later are returned here for entry at another port, and when free entry of these goods as of domestic growth, produce, or manufacture is claimed, it is a reasonable exercise of the power vested in the Secretary of the Treasury for him to require a certificate showing the fact of original exportation; and it appearing the collector at the port of entry did not waive the production of such a certificate, and such a certificate not having been produced, an appeal will not lie against the collector's decision holding the goods dutiable. Lunham v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 220.

9. Repeal.—The provision of section 7 of Act Feb. 8, 1875 (18 Stat. 307, 308), which permitted the return to the United States free of duty of foreign-made bags in which grain had been exported, was repealed by Act 1883, which was a complete revision of the subject, and from which such provision was omitted. U. S. v. Ranlett (1898) 19 Sup. Ct. 114, 116, 172 U. S. 133, 43 L. Ed. 393.

Act Feb. 8, 1875, § 7, amending the tariff laws so as to admit free, on their return to the United States, foreign-made bags in which American grain has been exported, was superseded by Acts 1883 and 1890, from which this provision was omitted; and under the latter act (paragraph 365) such foreign bags were dutiable. Kent v. U. S. (1896) 73 Fed. 680, 19 C. C. A. 642, affirming (C. C. 1895) 68 Fed. 536.

Certain animals, American products, were exported while the Tariff Act 1897 permitting the free entry of these on return to the United States was in force; these animals were returned to the United States subsequent to the enactment of Act 1909, by which free entry was denied an importation of this kind. Held, a tariff law creates no vested rights to import free or at any particular rate of duty goods, wares, merchandise, or products of any kind; no contractual obligation had been incurred by the taxing power incapable of being impaired by a subsequent modification or repeal of the provision in question; the law in force at the date reentry was sought applies and the importation of animals was properly held dutiable under paragraphs 225 and 227, Act 1909. Bragg v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 22. See, also, Campbell v.

10. Scrap iron.—Importers claimed, first, that old scrap iron imported from Cuba was entitled to admission free of duty as "articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United States;" and, second, that the scrap iron was a product of the soil or industry of Cuba and therefore entitled to a reduction of 20 per cent. from the regular rate by virtue of the commercial convention with that country. U. S. v. Morton B. Smith Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 500.

As to the first claim, held that it was incumbent on the importers to show not only that this scrap iron was goods the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United States, but to show as well in the manner prescribed by the Treasury regulations that they were the articles originally exported from this country, and, further, they had not been advanced in value or improved in condition. They failed to do this and the goods were not entitled to free entry. Id.

11. Shooks.—The circular letter of the secretary of the treasury of October 20, 1890, continuing in force articles 381–383 of the treasury regulations of 1884, prescribed the regulations under which proof should be made of the identity of American articles reimported, under paragraph 493 of Act 1890. Such regulations apply to boxes imported filled with fruit, which have been exported from the United States in the form of shooks, and proof of their identity with the shooks in any other form than that prescribed will not entitle the boxes to free entry. U. S. v. Dominici (1897) 78 Fed. 334, 24 C. C. A. 116, reversing judgment Dominici v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 72 Fed. 46.

In view of a long, practical departmental construction of language that does not essentially differ from the language of paragraph 500, Act 1909, boxes or barrels made from American staves or shooks are entitled to free entry under that paragraph. This right is not limited to the value of the shooks and staves constituting a part of the barrels or boxes. Kraemer & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 91.

12. Wheels and axles.—These wheels and axles of American manufacture, with tires made in Germany, were shipped into Mexico to have certain alterations made there and were then returned to the United States. The goods were not dutiable as entireties. The wheels and axles should have been admitted free under paragraph 500, Act 1909, as articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United States. The tires, made in Germany, were dutiable at 1¼ cents per pound. Denike v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 364.

405. Asafetida.

406. Asbestos, unmanufactured.

407. Ashes, wood and lye of, and beet-root ashes.

408. Bagging for cotton, gunny cloth, and similar fabrics, suitable for covering cotton, composed of single yarns made of jute, jute butts, seg, Russian seg, New Zealand tow, Norwegian tow, aloe, mill waste, cotton tares, or other material not bleached, dyed, colored, stained, painted, or printed, not exceeding sixteen threads to the square inch, counting the warp and filling, and weighing not less than fifteen ounces per square yard; plain woven fabrics of single jute yarns by whatever name known, not bleached, dyed, colored, stained, printed, or rendered noninflammable by any process; and waste of any of the above articles suitable for the manufacture of paper.

Notes of Decisions

Cotton bagging.—The duty imposed by Act July 14, 1832, upon cotton bagging, cannot properly be levied upon an article which was not known in the market as cotton bagging in 1832, although subsequently so called. Curtis v. Martin (1845) 44 U. S. (3 How.) 106, 11 L. Ed. 516, affirming Martin v. Curtis (C. C. 1842) Fed. Cas. No. 9,160. CONTRA, Lee v. Lincoln (C. C. 1841) Fed. Cas. No. 8,195.

In the merchandise here jute is the component material of chief value; it constitutes from 70 to 80 per cent. of the weight of the materials used in making the goods, while the flax waste and seg employed are used as adulterants. The bagging so made is accordingly of jute and jute butts, substantially, and comes within the meaning and intent of paragraph 355. Act 1909. Hawley & Letzerich v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 45.

Gunny bagging.—Gunny cloth, known in commerce by that name, held dutiable as a manufacture of jute, and not as an article "suitable for the uses to which cotton bagging is applied," not otherwise provided for. Troost v. Barney (C. C. 1863) Fed. Cas. No. 14,185.

Plaintiffs entered second-hand gunny bags as paper stock. The appraiser returned some of the bags as gunny bagging suitable for the uses to which cotton bagging may be applied. Held, if the bagging was commercially valuable only to be, and could only profitably be, converted into paper, and was of no other commercial value, it was admissible as paper stock, and that the purpose for which it was imported or used after importation was irrelevant. Jessup & Moore Paper Co. v. Cooper (D. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 186.

Jute bagging.—Jute bagging, commercially fit for bagging cotton, held dutiable under Act 1890, par. 366, and not under paragraph 374, as a manufacture of jute not specially provided for. White v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 69 Fed. 93.

Jute butts.—The terms "jute" and "jute butts" are not used without qualification by the trade in the buying and selling of jute; and, consequently, those terms, standing by themselves, cannot have been given by the trade a special commercial signification that excluded jute waste or any class of jute fiber available for textile uses. Overton & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 183.

Goods more than 98 per cent. jute are to be regarded as articles composed of jute, and an insignificant percentage of material other than jute found to be present on analysis of bagging did not exclude the goods from the operation of paragraph 355, Act 1909. Id.

Paddings, canvas, or burlaps.—Second-hand jute bagging held not classifiable as bagging for cotton, gunny cloth, etc. See paragraph 384.

Under Act June 6, 1872, providing for an import duty of 30 per cent. ad valorem on all burlaps, the fact that they are suitable and can be used for oil cloth foundations, or for any purpose except bagging for cotton, is immaterial, and does not subject them to an ad valorem duty of 40 per cent. Arthur v. Cumming (1875) 91 U. S. 362, 23 L. Ed. 438.

The provision for "burlaps," in Act 1894, Free List, par. 424½, held not to include so-called double-warp Dundee bagging. Corbitt & Macleay Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 648.

Canvas woven with double warp and single filling, each of single jute yarn, held a plain woven fabric, dutiable under Act 1897, par. 341, rather than a manufacture of vegetable fiber, not otherwise provided for, under paragraph 347. U. S. v. Lamb (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 262.

Manufactures of jute, having the single warp and single weft characteristic of burlaps, and which are known as black burlaps, black paddings, Hessians, parcelines, etc., are dutiable, under paragraph 277 of Act 1894, as manufactures of flax not otherwise provided for, and are not free as "burlaps," under paragraph 424½. McLeod v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 75 Fed. 927.

Articles woven of flax, and of jute and flax, less than 60 inches in width, used chiefly in the manufacture of clothing, for stiffening, and known commercially as "canvas," "paddings," "ducks," "coatings," etc., are dutiable as manufactures of flax, under Act 1890, par. 317, and as manufactures of jute and flax, under paragraph 374, and not as burlaps, not exceeding 60 inches in width, under paragraph 364. White v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 65 Fed. 788, affirmed (1896) 72 Fed. 251, 18 C. C. A. 541.

Paddings or canvas, from 18 to 24 inches in width, and used chiefly in the clothing trade, and for making small bags, and for similar purposes, are dutiable, under Act 1890, as "burlaps," at 1⅝ cents per pound, under paragraph 364, and not as "manufactures of jute," at 40 per centum ad valorem, under paragraph 374 of said act. In re White (C. C. 1893) 53 Fed. 787.

Act March 3, 1883, provided specially for a duty upon "paddings" and "canvas" (paragraph 334) different from "burlaps," (paragraph 338,) but Act Oct. 1, 1890, omitted any special mention of paddings or canvas in any paragraph. Held that, as jute paddings or canvas are a species of "burlaps," they are now dutiable, as such, under the latter act. Id.

Crash or canvas 15 and 17 inches in width, respectively, made of flax tow, and of from 1 to 2 per cent. of cotton, and containing less than 100 threads to the square inch, counting both warp and filling, held not dutiable at 40 per cent. ad valorem, as manufactures of other vegetable fiber except flax, or of which other vegetable fiber except flax is the component material of chief value, under the provision for such manufactures contained in paragraph 374, Act 1890. In re Wilmerding (C. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 824.

Manufactures of jute, less than 40 inches in width, sized, and having a patent selvedge, are "paddings" or "canvas," and not "burlaps," as known in the trade at and prior to March 3, 1883, and are dutiable at 35 per cent. ad valorem, under Act March 3, 1883 (T. I. 334). Lamb v. Robertson (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 716.

Waste.—Waste under this paragraph must be a waste of bagging, gunny cloth, or similar woven fabric. The waste here is the short broken warp ends of the jute thread used in the manufacture of burlap cloth, and is in fact a thread waste. It falls under the provisions of paragraph 384, Act 1913, as waste not specially provided for. U. S. v. Crompton & Son (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 197.

409. Balm of Gilead.

410. Barks, cinchona or other, from which quinine may be extracted.

411. Bauxite or beauxite, crude, not refined or otherwise advanced in condition from its natural state.

Notes of Decisions

Refined beauxite.—Refined beauxite held not dutiable as beauxite. See paragraph 6.

412. Beeswax.

413. Bells, broken, and bell metal, broken and fit only to be remanufactured.

414. Bibles, comprising the books of the Old or New Testament, or both, bound or unbound.

415. All binding twine manufactured from New Zealand hemp, manila, istle or Tampico fiber, sisal grass, or sunn, or a mixture of any two or more of them, of single ply and measuring not exceeding seven hundred and fifty feet to the pound.

416. Birds and land and water fowls, not specially provided for in this section.

Notes of Decisions

Guinea fowl and turkeys.—Guinea fowl and turkeys held not dutiable as birds and land fowls. See paragraph 229.

Singing birds.—Singing birds held not dutiable as live animals. See paragraph 416.

417. Biscuits, bread, and wafers, not specially provided for in this section.

Notes of Decisions

Sugar wafers.—Sugar wafers which are made by biscuit makers of flour, sugar, milk, and eggs, flavored with vanilla, and are used exclusively as articles of table food, held not dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles, under Act 1890, but were free of duty, as "wafers unmedicated," under the provision for such wafers contained in paragraph 750. In re Duncan (C. C. 1893) 57 Fed. 197.

418. Bismuth.

419. Bladders, and all integuments, tendons and intestines of animals and fish sounds, crude, dried or salted for preservation only, and unmanufactured, not specially provided for in this section.

420. Blood, dried, not specially provided for in this section.

421. Blue vitriol, or sulphate of copper; acetate and subacetate of copper, or verdigris.

Notes of Decisions

Acetate of copper.—Acetate of copper held not dutiable as subacetate of copper. See paragraph 5.

Verdigris.—The kind of verdigris known as subacetate of copper held not dutiable under Act 1897, par. 3, as a chemical compound not specifically provided for, being specifically placed on the free list by paragraph 694. U. S. v. Petry (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 929.

422. Bolting cloths composed of silk, imported expressly for milling purposes, and so permanently marked as not to be available for any other use. Press cloths composed of camel's hair, imported expressly for oil milling purposes, and marked so as to indicate that it is for such purposes, and cut into lengths not to exceed seventy-two inches and woven in widths not under ten inches nor to exceed fifteen inches and weighing not less than one-half pound per square foot.

Notes of Decisions

Bolting cloth.—Bolting cloth, made of silk and cotton, silk chief value, used for other than milling purposes, held not dutiable as a manufacture of silk, under paragraph 383 of Act 1883, but free of duty, under paragraph 657 of the free list. In re Van Blankensteyn (1892) 56 Fed. 474, 5 C. C. A. 579; Id. (C. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 220.

Held, that the provision in Act 1894, par. 407, for "bolting cloths, especially for milling purposes, but not suitable for the manufacture of wearing apparel," is not limited to bolting cloth composed of silk, but includes also bolting cloth made of fine copper-wire gauze, U. S. v. Markt (C. C. 1899) 124 Fed. 1012.

423. Bones, crude, burned, calcined, ground, steamed, but not otherwise manufactured, and bone dust or animal carbon, bone meal, and bone ash.

Notes of Decisions

Boneblack.—Boneblack is not included in the clause, "bones crude, and not manufactured, burned, calcined, ground, or steamed," in the free list of Rev. St. § 2504. Harrison v. Merritt (C. C. 1885) 23 Fed. 653, judgment affirmed (1885) 6 S. Ct. 191, 115 U. S. 577, 29 L. Ed. 494.

Burnt bones.—Distinction between the expression in Schedule M (R. S. p. 473) "black of bone or ivory drop black," and the expression (Free List, Id. 483), "bones crude and not manufactured; burned, calcined, ground, or steamed," pointed out; and held that burnt bones intended and fitted for other uses in the arts than that of imparting color are duty free, although in fact they are black. (1884) 17 Op. Atty. Gen. 676.

Crushed bone.—Crushed bone held not entitled to free entry as bone crude, etc. See paragraph 368.

424. Books, engravings, photographs, etchings, bound or unbound, maps and charts imported by authority or for the use of the United States or for the use of the Library of Congress.

425. Books, maps, music, engravings, photographs, etchings, lithographic prints, bound or unbound, and charts, which shall have been printed more than twenty years at the date of importation, and all hydrographic charts, and publications issued for their subscribers or exchanges by scientific and literary associations or academies, or publications of individuals for gratuitous private circulation, not advertising matter, and public documents issued by foreign governments.

Notes of Decisions

Books for private circulation.—Books published by an individual for gratuitous private circulation were entitled to free entry, under paragraph 410 of Act 1894, though such distribution was intended to promote the sale of an article manufactured by the publisher. Schieffelin v. U. S. (1898) 84 Fed. 880, 28 C. C. A. 554.

Small samples of cloth goods, arranged on cardboards, and folded into book form for gratuitous distribution, are not free of duty, as publications of individuals for gratuitous private circulation, under Act 1897, par. 501. Matheson v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 261.

These catalogues were trade publications used for advertising purposes and they were distributed gratuitously and generally to the public. They did not come within the provision for free entry contained in paragraph 517, Act 1909. Smith & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 523.

The term "publications" in paragraph 517, Act 1909, must be held to apply to importations of the same general class or type as those mentioned in the preceding provisions of the paragraph. Roger & Gallet v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 443.

To admit purely advertising matter under that paragraph would extend the meaning beyond the fair import of the language employed. Id.

These books appear to have been printed by the Brusse Publishing House, of Rotterdam, for the Holland-American Line. This shipping company circulates the books gratuitously to excite interest in foreign travel and so secure patronage for its steamers. The mere size of the circulation of these books, an edition of 40,000 being printed, does not negative the importer's contention that they were gratuitously privately circulated. U. S. v. Gips (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 458.

It is reasonably clear that the term "individuals," as employed in paragraph 517, Act 1909, was intended to differentiate between the publications of those other than literary associations or academies and foreign governments and to include under "individuals" all others. U. S. v. Badische & Co. (1913) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 528.

The publishers of the books imported were dealers in dyes and chemicals; were sellers of the dyestuffs listed in the publication. The testimony showed that these books were intended to be, and were, circulated gratuitously. They were entitled to free entry under paragraph 517, Act 1909. Id.

Rebound books.—Under Act 1890, par. 512, books printed and bound more than 20 years ago are entitled to entry free, notwithstanding that they have been recently rebound. In re Boston Book Co. (C. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 914.

Scientific books under Act 1894.—Act 1894, par. 410, exempts from import duties books devoted to original scientific research. Paragraph 311 makes dutiable all printed matter not specially provided for. Held, that printed sheets of a literary work of original scientific research constituted a "book," within paragraph 410, and so were not dutiable under paragraph 311, though imported without being bound or stitched together. Read v. Certain Merchandise Imported by O. G. Hempstead & Son (1900) 103 Fed. 197, 43 C. C. A. 178.

Printed sheets of an English work on anatomy, imported unbound, and comprising all of the book except the first few pages, which had been printed in this country by the American publisher, were admissible free of duty, under paragraph 410 of the free list in Tariff Act 1894, as a "scientific book." Macmillan Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 1018.

The word "books," as used in the provision of the free list of Act 1894, par. 410, permitting the free entry of "scientific books and periodicals devoted to original scientific research," cannot be given such a narrow construction as to exclude the unbound sheets of a scientific book. In re Hempstead (C. C. 1899) 95 Fed. 967.

The fact that the author of a medical work quotes largely from the writings of others, and deals with the results of investigations made by others, does not deprive his book of its character as one of "original scientific research," entitled to free entry, under paragraph 410 of Act 1894. Id.

Unbound books.—Where certain law reports, printed in the year 1840–41, were imported into the United States in an unbound condition, the printed sheets not being even stitched together, held, that they came within the provision of Act 1883, exempting from duty "books * * * bound or unbound * * * which shall have been printed and manufactured more than twenty years at the date of importation," and were therefore not dutiable. (1889) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 461.

426. Books and pamphlets printed wholly or chiefly in languages other than English; also books and music, in raised print, used exclusively by the blind, and all textbooks used in schools and other educational institutions; Braille tablets, cubarithmes, special apparatus and objects serving to teach the blind, including printing apparatus, machines, presses, and types for the use and benefit of the blind exclusively.

Notes of Decisions

Books printed in foreign languages.—German books containing lithographic prints held not dutiable as books printed in other than English. See paragraph 325.

The provision in paragraph 502, Act 1897, for "books * * * printed exclusively in languages other than English," includes architectural portfolios containing 18 or 20 pages of illustrations and a preface of 15 lines in German. R. F. Downing & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 92.

Held, that the provision in paragraph 502, Act 1897, for "books and pamphlets printed exclusively in languages other than English," includes certain portfolios of two kinds, made up of loose sheets not intended to be bound together in book form, and containing, respectively, 19 and 24 sheets of pictures and prints, and accompanied, respectively, with 4 and 12 loose pages printed in foreign languages; each portfolio having a loose outside covering, bearing the title of the work. Downing v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 130 Fed. 393.

Music books, with exclusively German words, are on the free list, under Act 1894, par. 411, putting on such list "books and pamphlets printed exclusively in language other than English." Fisher v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 260.

Photomechanic reproductions of paintings.—Unbound photomechanic reproductions of paintings held not entitled to free entry. See paragraph 329.

Textbooks.—Volumes of a series planned to embrace 1,000 titles, being reprints of the world's classical literature in fiction, poetry, history, biography, economics, essays, children's books, etc., do not become textbooks because, on account of their compactness, cheapness, and convenient form, they are largely used by teachers and students as supplementary or illustrative reading or in classrooms. Dutton & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 460.

The term "textbook" carries with it the idea of special preparation for classroom use, such as exceptional title page, introduction, glossary, notes, spacing, and other features. Books which appeal as readily to the general reader as to the student are not fairly to be regarded as textbooks. Id.

427. Books, maps, music, engravings, photographs, etchings, lithographic prints, and charts, specially imported, not more than two copies in any one invoice, in good faith, for the use and by order of any society or institution incorporated or established solely for religious, philosophical, educational, scientific, or literary purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for the use and by order of any college, academy, school, or seminary of learning in the United States, or any State or public library, and not for sale, subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe.

Notes of Decisions

Books imported to take place of books sold to library.—Books imported for the purpose of sale are not free of duty under paragraph 413 of Act 1894, even though imported to take the place of books which had been previously imported by the same person, and upon which duties had been paid by him, and which he had afterwards sold to a state library. (1896) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 301.

Clubs.—The charter of a club provided that it was formed "as a permanent social club, for the promotion of literary, artistic and antiquarian tastes among the citizens of P., and such kindred purposes as the club may from time to time determine, by establishing and maintaining a library and reading room, and a collection of works of art and antiquities, either by loan or otherwise." It appeared that while the club maintained a well selected and valuable library, etc., its social side was fully as prominent as its literary or artistic side. Held, that books for the club were not admissible free of duty. U. S. v. Vandiver (C. C. 1903) 122 Fed. 740.

Law library.—County law library associations organized and maintained under Rev. Laws Me. c. 55, which provides for the organization of such associations, and that their libraries shall be kept in rooms in the court houses provided by the counties, and shall be open to all the people of such counties, and to the support of which that and subsequent statutes devote certain fees and fines collected, are state institutions, and the library of each is a "state library," within paragraph 503 of Act 1897, which places on the free list books imported solely for the use of state and public libraries. Little v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 104 Fed. 540.

428. Books, libraries, usual and reasonable furniture, and similar household effects of persons or families from foreign countries, all the foregoing if actually used abroad by them not less than one year, and not intended for any other person or persons, nor for sale.

Notes of Decisions

Household effects.—That term "household effects" includes not only those things necessarily kept within the house, but comprises everything that contributes to the use or convenience of a householder. (1900) 23 Op. Atty. Gen. 310.

—— Automobiles.—Act 1897, par. 504, relating to books, libraries, furniture, and "similar household effects," does not include automobiles, because they are not "similar" to libraries, furniture, etc. U. S. v. W. R. Grace & Co. (1909) 166 Fed. 748, 92 C. C. A. 596.

Held that an automobile should not be excluded from importation free of duty as household effects used abroad more than one year, under Act 1897, par. 504, by reason of having been extensively repaired shortly before importation. So much of the machine as is a new manufacture may be assessed with duty; but the rest, including the cost of overhauling, oiling, cleaning, readjusting, and regulating, is free under said paragraph. Hillhouse v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 163, 81 C. C. A. 415, reversing judgment (C. C. 1906) 142 Fed. 303, and writ of certiorari denied U. S. v. Hillhouse (1908) 28 Sup. Ct. 568, 208 U. S. 615, 52 L. Ed. 646.

The provision for "household effects" in Act 1897, par. 504, includes automobiles. Id.

—— Carriage.—A carriage in use abroad for a year by its owner, who brings it to this country for his own use here, and not for another person, nor for sale, is "household effects," under Rev. St. § 2505, and free from duty. Arthur v. Morgan (1884) 5 Sup. Ct. 241, 112 U. S. 495, 28 L. Ed. 825.

—— Cows.—"Cows," when kept for household use, are to be considered "household effects" as that term is used in paragraph 504 of Act 1897. (1900) 23 Op. Atty. Gen. 310.

—— Family carriage horses.—Family carriage horses used as such abroad were entitled to free entry under paragraph 516 of Act 1890 as "household effects." Sandow v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 146.

—— Period of use abroad.—The provision for household effects "used abroad * * * not less than one year," in Act 1897, par. 504, is satisfied if the periods of such use aggregate one year, even though not continuous. Hillhouse v. U. S. (1907) 152 Fed. 163, 81 C. C. A. 415, writ of certiorari denied U. S. v. Hillhouse (1908) 28 Sup. Ct. 568, 208 U. S. 615, 52 L. Ed. 646.

429. Borax, crude and unmanufactured, and borate of lime, soda, and other borate material, crude and unmanufactured, not otherwise provided for in this section.

Notes of Decisions

Borate material.—An antiseptic preservative held not borax or borate material. See paragraph 1.

Borate of manganese held not dutiable as borate material. See paragraph 5.

Perborate of sodium not dutiable as borate material. See paragraph 5.

430. Brass, old brass, clippings from brass or Dutch metal, all the foregoing, fit only for remanufacture.

Notes of Decisions

Old cannon.—Old cannon made of composition metal held not free of duty as old brass. See paragraph 167.

431. Brazilian pebble, unwrought or unmanufactured.
432. Bristles, crude, not sorted, bunched, or prepared.

Notes of Decisions

Bristles.—Distinction between bristles crude and prepared. See paragraph 337.

433. Bromin.
434. Broom corn.
435. Buckwheat and buckwheat flour.
436. Bullion, gold or silver.
437. Burgundy pitch.
438. Burrstones, manufactured or bound up into millstones.
439. Cadmium.
440. Calcium, acetate of, brown and gray, and chloride of, crude; calcium carbide and calcium nitrate.
441. Cash registers, linotype and all typesetting machines, sewing machines, typewriters, shoe machinery, cream separators valued at not exceeding $75, sand-blast machines, sludge machines, and tar and oil spreading machines used in the construction and maintenance of roads and in improving them by the use of road preservatives, all the foregoing whether imported in whole or in parts, including repair parts.
442. Castor or castoreum.
443. Catgut, whip gut, or worm gut, unmanufactured.

Notes of Decisions

Catgut and worm gut.—Catgut and worm gut are free from duty under Act 1897, par. 517, as "unmanufactured," and are not classifiable for duty under paragraph 448, as "manufactures of catgut and worm gut, not specially provided for." Davies, Turner & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 232.

Paragraph 509, Act 1909, of the free list provides for "catgut, whip gut, or worm gut, unmanufactured." The terms "catgut" and "whip gut" are often used interchangeably. Whip gut or whipcord is the result of the process of the manufacture of gut into a twisted article, which clearly falls within paragraph 509. U. S. v. American Express Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 36.

The fact that whip gut, the result of such manufacture, is of a length suitable for use in the manufacture of tennis rackets, does not remove it from the free list provision, as the record discloses that this is the length in which whipcord so manufactured is produced in the first instance. Id.

444. Cement, Roman, Portland, and other hydraulic.
445. Cerium, cerite, or cerium ore.
446. Chalk, crude, not ground, bolted, precipitated, or otherwise manufactured.

447. Charcoal, blood char, bone char, or bone black, not suitable for use as a pigment.

Notes of Decisions

Blood charcoal.—Blood charcoal a substance which, like bone char, is composed chiefly of carbon, and is used for decolorizing sugar, held not dutiable under Act 1897, par. 97, as an article composed of carbon, but either under paragraph 10, as bone char by similitude, or at the similar rate provided in section 6 for unenumerated manufactured articles. U. S. v. George Lueders & Co. (C. C. 1906) 148 Fed. 398.

Boneblack.—Boneback is not included in the clause "bones crude, and not manufactured, burned, calcined, ground or steamed" in the free list of Rev. St. § 2504, but is liable to a duty of 25 per cent. ad valorem, under Schedule M of that section. Harrison v. Merritt (1885) 115 U. S. 577, 6 Sup. Ct. 191, 29 L. Ed. 494, reversing (C. C. 1885) 23 Fed. 653; Peters v. Robertson (C. C. 1884) 20 Fed. 818.

448. Chromate of iron or chromic ore.

449. Chromium, hydroxide of, crude.

450. Common blue clay and Gross-Almerode glass-pot clay, in cases or casks, suitable for the manufacture of crucibles and glass melting pots or tank blocks.

451. Coal, anthracite, bituminous, culm, slack, and shale; coke; compositions used for fuel in which coal or coal dust is the component material of chief value, whether in briquets or other form.

Notes of Decisions

Anthracite coal.—Decisions under Act 1897 placing a duty on anthracite coal containing less than 92 per cent. pure carbon, see Evans v. Collector of Customs of Port of San Francisco (1901) 107 Fed. 110, 46 C. C. A. 170; Coles v. Same (C. C. A. 1900) 100 Fed. 442; Perkins Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 180 Fed. 935; In re Coles (C. C. 1899) 93 Fed. 954.

Bituminous coal.—Bituminous coal, imported for the use of the government, held dutiable under paragraph 432 of Act 1890. (1892) 20 Op. Atty. Gen. 314.

Coal slack or culm.—The term "coal slack or culm," appearing in paragraph 415, Act 1897, may not be taken as employed there in a commercial sense limiting the words to coal screened at the mines, but applies as well to coal screened on entry at a port of entry; and coal having been so screened here, the coal slack or culm resulting from the process was dutiable under the act named at 15 cents per ton of 28 bushels, 80 pounds to the bushel. U. S. v. Waterhouse (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 353.

Coke.—In order to ascertain whether "coke" is within the designation of "coal" in the tariff act, the intention of congress, as well as the commercial meaning of the word, will be inquired into. Cochrane v. Swartout (D. C. 1834) Fed. Cas. No. 2,928.

452. (Repealed.)

This paragraph was repealed by Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, § 502, post, § 5291c, and certain duties imposed upon the articles enumerated therein by §§ 500. 501, of said Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, post, §§ 5291a, 5291b. Said paragraph read as follows:

"452. Coal tar, crude, pitch of coal tar, wood or other tar, dead or creosote oil, and products of coal tar known as anthracene and anthracene oil, naphthalin, phenol, and cresol."

Notes of Decisions

Dead oil.—Carbolineum or carbolineum avenarius held not creosote or dead oil. See paragraph 21.

The merchandise known as "coal tar product," or "dead oil," is not dutiable under the provision for "products known as distilled oils" in paragraph 60 of Act 1894, but is entitled to free entry under paragraph 443, as a product of coal tar not a color or dye, and not specially provided for. U. S. v. Warren Chemical & Manufacturing Co. (1898) 84 Fed. 638, 28 C. C. A. 500; Warren Chemical Mfg. Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 81 Fed. 375.

It was contended by the importers of an article known as "dead oil" that it should have been assessed with duty at the rate held in various court decisions to be applicable to so-called dead oil. Held, that it cannot be assumed that dead oil is always and everywhere, either actually or commercially, the same article, nor, in the absence of evidence, that the article in question was the same as that covered by the decisions referred to. Schoellkopf, Hartford & Maclagan v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 855.

In paragraph 536, Act 1909, it was the evident intention to restrict the grade of oil admissible free of duty under that paragraph to that known as dead oil. It is not shown here that the importation is in any sense dead oil; the record shows, on the contrary, that the importation was not at the date of the enactment of Act 1909 known as creosote oil, but was in fact an oil of much greater value. Hawley & Letzerich v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 268.

Products of coal tar.—In paragraph 443 of Act 1894, the words "products of coal tar" are not within the excepting clause, but are part of the enumeration of articles entitled to free entry. U. S. v. Warren Chemical & Manufacturing Co. (1898) 84 Fed. 638, 28 C. C. A. 500.

Soluble creosote.—The liquid creosote of commerce is not a "distilled oil," subject to duty, under Act 1894, par. 60, but is a "product of coal tar" not specially provided for in said act, and entitled to free entry, under paragraph 443 thereof. Wise v. Southern Pac. Co. (1898) 87 Fed. 863, 31 C. C. A. 263, affirming In re Southern Pac. Co. (C. C. 1897) 82 Fed. 311.

Soluble creosote, an article prepared from coal tar dead oil, is less specifically provided for as a "chemical compound" than under a provision for "products or preparations of coal tar," and is properly classified for duty under the latter head, in paragraph 443, Act 1894, or paragraph 15. Schoellkopf v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 124 Fed. 89.

453. Cobalt and cobalt ore.
454. Cocculus indicus.
455. Cochineal.
456. Cocoa, or cacao, crude, and fiber, leaves, and shells of.

Notes of Decisions

Crude cocoa fibers.—Crude cocoa fibers processed held not free of duty. See paragraph 385.

457. Coffee.
458. Coins of gold, silver, copper, or other metal.

Notes of Decisions

Austrian florins.—Austrian florins are to be received by the custom house at the rate fixed by the United States mint. Meyer v. Cooper (C. C. 1890) 44 Fed. 55.

Chinese coin.—Chinese coin composed of copper and an alloy is not free of duty as "coins, gold, silver, and copper," unless imported to be used as currency. Crocker v. Redfield (C. C. 1859) Fed. Cas. No. 3,400.

Coin swords.—Coin swords held not free of duty as coins. See paragraph 167.

459. Coir, and coir yarn.
460. Composition metal of which copper is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section.

Notes of Decisions

Composition metal.—Flitters held not dutiable as composition metal. See paragraph 146.

Composition metal of which copper is the component material of chief value, in sheets which require to be reworked before the metal is available for use, held not dutiable under paragraph 177 of Act 1894, as a partly manufactured article composed wholly or in part of any metal, but is entitled to free entry under paragraph 452. Grempler v. U. S. (1901) 107 Fed. 687, 46 C. C. A. 557.

Sheets of composition metal, of which copper is the component material of chief value, are free under Act 1894, par. 452, putting on free list "old copper, fit only for manufacture, clipping from new copper, and all composition metal of which copper is a component material of chief value, not specially provided for," and not under paragraph 177. Benedix v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 258.

461. Copper ore; regulus of, and black or coarse copper, and copper cement; old copper, fit only for remanufacture, copper scale, clippings from new copper, and copper in plates, bars, ingots, or pigs, not manufactured or specially provided for in this section.

Notes of Decisions

Bronze ornaments.—Bronze ornaments held not dutiable as old copper. See paragraph 167.

Copper in plates.—Round copper bars and round copper plates are not subject to duty upon importation, within the meaning of Act July 20, 1789, and Act Aug. 10, 1790 (1 Stat. 180). U. S. v. Kid (1807) 8 U. S. (4 Cranch) 1, 2 L. Ed. 531.

"Round copper bottoms, turned up at the edge," are not liable to duties, although imported under the denomination of raised bottoms." Id.; U. S. v. Potts (1809) 9 U. S. (5 Cranch) 284, 3 L. Ed. 102.

Plates that have been ground, polished, and planished are not copper in "plates * * * not manufactured," within Act 1897, par. 532. U. S. v. B. F. Drakenfeld & Co. (1910) 178 Fed. 258, 101 C. C. A. 618, reversing judgment B. F. Drakenfeld & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 296.

Copper matte.—Copper matte, an article containing lead and copper, and produced in smelting ores, which is not strictly an ore itself, and which is shown to be known commercially and scientifically as copper regulus, is not dutiable under Act 1897, par. 181, for "lead-bearing ore of all kinds," but is free of duty as "copper, regulus of," under Free List, par. 534. Spencer v. Philadelphia Smelting & Refining Co. (C. C. 1899) 124 Fed. 1002.

The merchandise copper matte is produced by smelting metalliferous rock containing sulphides of lead, copper, and iron. It was stipulated that the importations were mattes, and that "matte" and "regulus" are interchangeable terms. Now the uncontradicted testimony shows that mattes containing the percentages of copper, lead, iron, and sulphur found in these importations were known to the wholesale trade before and after the passage of tariff act of 1909 as copper mattes. They must be accepted to be copper mattes, and as such being regulus of copper they were entitled to free entry. U. S. v. American Smelting & Refining Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 398.

462. Copperas, or sulphate of iron.
463. Coral, marine, uncut, and unmanufactured.
464. Cork wood, or cork bark, unmanufactured, and cork waste, shavings, and cork refuse of all kinds.

Notes of Decisions

Cork clippings.—It is immaterial whether the clippings or shavings of cork bark here be deemed waste or not. A review of the legislation affecting the subject matter, of the practice at the customs, and of pertinent judicial decisions makes it clear these cork clippings and shavings were meant to be, and were, included within the provisions of paragraph 547, Act 1909, and so were entitled to free entry. U. S. v. Johns-Manville Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 404.

Cork unmanufactured. — "Cork squares" are free from duty, under Act 1870 as "cork unmanufactured." King v. Smith (C. C. 1872) Fed. Cas. No. 7,806.

In order that cork wood or bark should be classed as "manufactured," under Act of 1864, it should be in a state capable of being used, and designed for use, without further manufacture. Id.

465. Corn or maize.
466. Corn meal.
467. Cotton, and cotton waste or flocks.

Notes of Decisions

Cotton waste.—The provision in Act 1897, par. 537, for "cotton waste," includes a mixture of cotton waste and jute threads in about equal proportions, which is commercially known as "cotton waste." Wood v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 160 Fed. 990.

Cotton waste recovered from mill sweepings or used cotton waste is not "advanced in value" by processes of combing, washing, and bleaching in the sense implied by "advanced in value" appearing in section 313, Act 1909. It is entitled to free entry under that act. Simpson v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 222.

Linters.—Short bits of lint that adhere to the seed of cotton in the ordinary process of ginning and are later stripped from the seed by a specially constructed gin, becoming then what are commonly known as "linters," are not waste, but cotton, and under paragraph 548, Act 1909, are free of duty; and this, irrespective of a cleansing process to which the linters may have been subjected before importation. U. S. v. Salomon (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 246.

468. Cryolite, or kryolith.
469. Cudbear.
470. Curling stones, or quoits, and curling-stone handles.
471. Curry, and curry powder.

472. Cuttlefish bone.
473. Dandelion roots, raw, dried or undried, but unground.
474. Glaziers' and engravers' diamonds, unset, miners' diamonds.

Notes of Decisions

Diamonds.—Act 1894, par. 467, which reads as follows: "Diamonds; miners', glaziers', and engravers' diamonds not set, and diamond dust or bort, and jewels to be used in the manufacture of watches or clocks"—does not exempt from duty diamonds except of the classes enumerated, precious stones of all kinds being made dutiable by paragraph 338. The word "diamonds," beginning the paragraph quoted, is designated merely as a heading, and should be read as though followed by a colon. Keck v. U. S. (1899) 19 Sup. Ct. 254, 255, 172 U. S. 434, 43 L. Ed. 505.

Act 1897, List, par. 545, provides for "diamonds * * * not advanced from their natural state by cleaving, splitting, * * * including miners' * * * diamonds not set." Held, that the provision for miners' diamonds is not qualified by what precedes, and that such diamonds, split, but unset, are within the paragraph. Sullivan Machinery Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 168 Fed. 561.

475. Divi-divi.
476. Dragon's blood.
477. Drugs, such as barks, beans, berries, buds, bulbs, bulbous roots, excrescences, fruits, flowers, dried fibers, dried insects, grains, gums, gum resin, herbs, leaves, lichens, mosses, logs, roots, stems, vegetables, seeds (aromatic, not garden seeds), seeds of morbid growth, weeds; any of the foregoing which are natural and uncompounded drugs and not edible and not specially provided for in this section, and are in a crude state, not advanced in value or condition by shredding, grinding, chipping, crushing, or any other process or treatment whatever beyond that essential to the proper packing of the drugs and the prevention of decay or deterioration pending manufacture: Provided, That no article containing alcohol shall be admitted free of duty under this paragraph.

Notes of Decisions

1. Balsam capsules.
2. Compound to make caffeine.
3. Dandelion root.
4. Dried lizards.
5. Dyes.
6. "Edible."
7. Elaterium in cakes.
8. Guarana.
9. Powder from juice of papaw melon.
10. Resin.
11. Sierra Leone chillies or bird peppers.
12. Young fustic dyewood.

1. Balsam capsules.—Where the process of placing crude balsam in gelatin capsules has resulted in an article with a greater value and an improved condition, the combination held not classible as "crude drugs not advanced in value or condition," within Act 1897, par. 548. U. S. v. Lehn & Fink (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 171.

2. Compound to make caffeine.—A compound used exclusively to make caffeine, held not dutiable under section 6, Act 1897, as a nonenumerated manufactured article, nor under paragraph 20 as a drug advanced in value or condition, but entitled to free entry as a crude drug. U. S. v. Hensel (C. C. 1901) 107 Fed. 260.

3. Dandelion root.—Dandelion root, imported while Act March 3, 1883, was in force, which was not edible, and was in a crude state, and not advanced in value or condition by refining or grinding, or by other process of manufacture, and which was not used or intended to be used as coffee or as a substitute therefor, but was used for medicine, and in medicinal preparations, was not dutiable under the provision for "acorns and dandelion root, raw or prepared, and all other articles used or intended to be used as coffee or as substitutes therefor," contained in paragraph 290 of the act, but was free of duty. Clay v. Erhardt (C. C. 1891) 48 Fed. 293.

4. Dried lizards.—Dried lizards, used by the Chinese in compounding a medicine, are drugs within the meaning of Act 1897, par. 548. Wing On Wo v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 148 Fed. 334.

5. Dyes.—Articles used in dyeing or tanning held not drugs. Leber & Meyer v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 135 Fed. 243.

6. "Edible."—"Edible" is to be taken in its common meaning. Cruikshank v. U. S. (1894) 59 Fed. 446, 8 C. C. A. 171, reversing In re Cruikshank (C. C. 1893) 54 Fed. 676.

7. Elaterium in cakes.—Elaterium in cakes, prepared from the juice of the fruit of "echallium elaterium" by evaporation and drying, and containing a medicinal drug known as "elaterine," which is extracted from the cakes before it is used, is exempt from duty under Act 1890, par. 560, as a drug "in a crude state," and cannot be classified as a "medicinal preparation," within paragraph 75, nor as a "drug which has been advanced in value or condition," within paragraph 560. U. S. v. Merck (1895) 66 Fed. 251, 13 C. C. A. 432, certiorari denied (1895) 15 Sup. Ct. 1043, 159 U. S. 272, 40 L. Ed. 147.

8. Guarana.—Guarana, a medicinal drug, consisting of a dried paste in the form of sausage-shaped rolls, this being the crudest state in which it is ever imported, and which, before being used as a medicine, must be further prepared, held not dutiable as a "medicinal preparation," under paragraph 68, Act 1897, but free of duty under paragraph 548. Cowl v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 124 Fed. 475.

9. Powder from juice of papaw melon.—Powder from the juice of the papaw melon held not dutiable as a crude drug. See paragraph 27.

A powder made from the juice of the papaw melon, caught in pans, dried in the sun, sifted to remove foreign substances, and packed in tins, held free, under paragraph 470 of Act 1894, as "drugs * * * not edible, and which have not been advanced in condition by refining and grinding, or by other process of manufacture," and was not dutiable, under paragraph 59, as a medicinal preparation. U. S. v. Godwin (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 753.

10. Resin.—Resin held entitled to free entry. Lange Soap Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 440.

Gum resin or rosin is the product of the ordinary treatment that oleoresin or crude turpentine is subjected to in order to separate its two contents. They merely serve to get the article by itself. The terms "in a crude state" are broad enough to include as "crude" all the grades of resin shown by the record in this case. U. S. v. Sheldon & Co. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 485. See, also, Schoenemann v. U. S. (1903) 119 Fed. 584, 56 C. C. A. 104; Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. v. Same (C. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 822; U. S. v. Godwin (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 753.

11. Sierra Leone chillies or bird peppers.—Sierra Leone "chillies" or "bird peppers," whole, but in a dried state, held exempt from duty, as spices not edible, under paragraph 560 of Act 1890, and not dutiable as Cayenne pepper unground, under paragraph 326. In re Cruikshank (C. C. 1893) 54 Fed. 676, reversed Cruikshank v. U. S. (1894) 59 Fed. 446, 8 C. C. A. 171.

12. Young fustic dyewood.—Young fustic dyewood cut or shredded into pieces held advanced in condition. See paragraph 27.

478. Eggs of poultry, birds, fish, and insects (except fish roe preserved for food purposes): Provided, however, That the importation of eggs of game birds or eggs of birds not used for food, except specimens for scientific collections, is prohibited: Provided further, That the importation of eggs of game birds for purposes of propagation is hereby authorized, under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Notes of Decisions

Duck eggs.—Act 1897, par. 549, relating to "eggs of birds," does not include eggs of the domesticated duck, which are dutiable under paragraph 244 as "eggs, not specially provided for." Sun Kwong On v. U. S. (1906) 143 Fed. 115, 74 C. C. A. 309.

Fish roe.—Fish roe, or caviar, which was necessarily put into brine before importation, because otherwise it would not be suitable for food after importation, held "preserved for food purposes," within Act 1897, par. 549. Hansen & Dieckmann v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 892.

Fresh roe of the sturgeon rubbed through a sieve, dropping thence into a solution of brine, the brine drawn off and the roe packed for shipment in tins and transported in a refrigerated state, does not constitute "fish roe preserved for food purposes," as excepted by paragraph 549, Act 1897, and was not dutiable under paragraphs 258 and 261 of said act. Hansen v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 1.

479. Emery ore and corundum, and crude artificial abrasives, not specially provided for.

Notes of Decisions

Artificial abrasives.—The term "artificial abrasives" implies an abrasive product resulting from processing or treatment, and the word "crude" implies that such artificial product must be in a crude condition. Harrison Supply Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 72.

The true, final, and distinctive purpose of an abrasive is to create new surfaces by rubbing or grinding away older ones, and not to produce friction or heat. The use of powdered glass on match heads or the sides of match boxes is not as an abrasive. Chrystal v. U. S. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 489.

480. Fans, common palm-leaf, plain and not ornamented or decorated in any manner, and palm leaf in its natural state, not colored, dyed, or otherwise advanced or manufactured.

481. Felt, adhesive, for sheathing vessels.

Notes of Decisions

Adhesive felt.—"Felt, adhesive, for sheathing vessels," is among the articles enumerated in "the free list" of Act 1883. This description is held to cover adhesive felt such as was used at the date of the act for sheathing vessels, although such felt may be imported for other uses. The use of an article does not necessarily control its classification for tariff purposes. U. S. v. Nichols (C. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 359.

482. Fibrin, in all forms.

483. Fresh-water fish, and all other fish not otherwise specially provided for in this section.

Notes of Decisions

Fish pickled or salted.—The processes to which the fish of the importation had been subjected put them in a class apart from "fish in tin packages," as provided for in paragraph 270, Act 1909. The evidence sustains the finding that the merchandise here consisted of herring or mackerel, pickled or salted, and these were dutiable as such under the eo nomine provisions of paragraphs 272 and 273, respectively. U. S. v. Smith & Nessle Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 70.

Fresh fish.—In Act 1894, the free list (paragraph 481) enumerates "fish, frozen or packed in ice fresh." The schedule relating to dutiable fish enumerates (paragraph 210) "herrings, pickled, frozen, or salted, and salt water fish frozen or packed in ice, one-half of one cent per pound." Held that, under the rule of construction requiring each part of a law to be made effective if possible, the paragraph in the free list must be held as generic, and paragraph 210 as exceptional or specific; consequently salt water fish, fresh and packed in ice, are dutiable under paragraph 210. De Long v. U. S. (1896) 76 Fed. 453, 22 C. C. A. 474, affirming In re De Long (C. C. 1895) 70 Fed. 775.

Under Act 1897, par. 261, relating (1) to "fish, fresh, * * * frozen, packed in ice, or otherwise prepared for preservation, not specially provided for," and (2) to "salmon, fresh," salmon packed in ice for preservation are dutiable under the first provision; for Congress by enumerating fish packed in ice separately from fish fresh, indicated an intention to exclude the former class from the provision for the latter. U. S. v. Perry (C. C. 1909) 171 Fed. 303.

Fresh fish (that is, unsalted or uncured fish), imported in bulk, or otherwise than in barrels or half barrels, in a frozen condition, to be sold for immediate use, are to be admitted free, upon the importer furnishing to the collector reasonable or proper proof or assurances of an honest intention to put them on the market for immediate use. Clause 699, New Tariff Index. Cross v. Seeberger (C. C. 1887) 30 Fed. 427.

Fresh fish imported frozen together in barrels or large cakes are not exempt from duty as "fish, fresh for immediate consumption." Rev. St. § 2505. Gauthier v. Bell (C. C. 1877) Fed. Cas. No. 5,277.

Salmon from which the larger part of the backbone had been removed, leaving the side bones and other bones in the fish, and which had been treated with a solution of salt or brine for the purpose of preserving them during transportation and not sufficient to affect their acceptability to the consuming public as fresh fish, were not boned within the meaning of paragraph 216, Act 1913, but were entitled to free entry under the provision for "fresh water fish, and all other fish not otherwise specially provided for" in paragraph 483 of said act. Woodward & Son v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 372.

Smoked herring.—Smoked herring, though salted before being smoked, held not dutiable as "herrings, pickled or salted," under Act 1897, par. 260, being a commodity distinct therefrom both commercially and in common speech. Mattlage v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 139 Fed. 704.

484. Fish skins.

485. Flax straw, flax, not hackled or dressed; flax hackled, known as "dressed line," tow of flax and flax noils; hemp, and tow of hemp; hemp hackled, known as "line of hemp."

Notes of Decisions

East India Bombay hemp.—An article known in the trade as "East India Bombay hemp," invoiced and entered as such in the custom house, will be held dutiable as hemp; and testimony that it is in effect a species of Sisal grass will not cause it to be dutiable at the rate of that article. Bailey v. Cadwalader (C. C. 1890) 43 Fed. 294.

Flax noils.—Flax noils held dutiable as waste, under Act 1897, par. 463, and not under paragraph 326 as "tow of flax," by similitude. G. B. Ritchie & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 141 Fed. 664.

New Zealand flax.—New Zealand flax held covered by provision for sunn, sisal grass, etc. See paragraph 494.

486. Flint, flints, and flint stones, unground.
487. Fossils.
488. Fruits or berries, green, ripe, or dried, and fruits in brine, not specially provided for in this section.

Notes of Decisions

1. In general.
2. Fruits dried—Citron.
3. —— Currants.
4. —— Lychee.
5. Fruits in brine.
6. —— Cherries.
7. —— Lemons.
8. —— Limes.
9. —— Ripe olives.
10. —— Umeboshi.

1. In general.—Cherries preserved by a sulphur treatment held not dutiable as fruits green, ripe, or dried. See paragraph 217.

Fox berries held not dutiable as berries green, ripe, or dried. See paragraph 217.

Ripe cherries held not free of duty, as fruits green, ripe, or dried. See paragraph 217.

Tomatoes held dutiable as vegetables. See paragraph 215.

2. Fruits dried — Citron.—Candied citron held not dutiable as fruits green or dried. See paragraph 217.

Leghorn citron is not dutiable under Act 1883, par. 302, as a comfit, sweetmeat, or fruit preserved in sugar, but is entitled to free entry as a dried fruit. Nordlinger v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 69 Fed. 92.

3. —— Currants.—"Dried currants," so called, from the Levantine, which are known to the trade by some 30 different names, indicating the islands or localities where grown, and which, although in fact raisins, made from a small grape, constitute the only currants known commercially or imported, are, except those grown on the island of Zante, entitled to free entry, under paragraph 489 of Act 1894, as "fruits, * * * dried, not specially provided for," and are not dutiable under paragraph 217, which covers "plums, prunes, figs, raisins and other dried grapes, including Zante currants." Hills Bros. Co. v. U. S. (1900) 99 Fed. 264, 39 C. C. A. 500.

4. —— Lychee.—Dried lychee held not entitled to free entry. See paragraph 217.

5. Fruits in brine.—Olives in brine held not dutiable as fruit in brine. See paragraph 218.

Orange and lemon peel in brine held not dutiable as preserved peel. See paragraph 221.

A saline solution used in packing fruit is used as a preservative simply and fruit of the kind is "in brine" in the language of paragraph 559. Act 1909. Without undertaking to fix what percentage of salt in a solution will make that solution brine, the evidence here does not warrant the conclusion that the fruit of this importation was "in brine." Mihalovitch, Fletcher & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 98.

6. —— Cherries.—Cherries immersed in a solution containing not more than .402 per cent. of salt are not fruits in "brine," within Act 1897, par. 559. Causse Mfg. Co. v. U. S. (1906) 151 Fed. 4, 80 C. C. A. 461, modifying judgment A. L. Causse Mfg. Co. v. Same (C. C. 1906) 143 Fed. 690.

7. —— Lemons.—Halved lemons in brine are "fruits in brine," within paragraph 559, Act 1897, and not dutiable as lemon peel preserved, under paragraph 267, notwithstanding the brine renders the pulp inedible, and the only value is in the peel. Hills Bros. Co. v. U. S. (1903) 123 Fed. 477, 59 C. C. A. 412, reversing judgment (C. C. 1902) 113 Fed. 857.

8. —— Limes.—Pickled limes held not dutiable as fruit in brine. See paragraph 220.

Limes in brine held not to be dutiable as "limes" under Act 1897, par. 266, but to be free of duty under paragraph 559 of said act. Brennan v. U. S. (1905) 136 Fed. 743, 69 C. C. A. 395, reversing judgment (C. C. 1904) 120 Fed. 837.

9. —— Ripe olives.—Ripe olives, sometimes called "black olives," are free of duty under Act 1897, par. 559, as "fruits in brine." U. S. v. Zucca & Co. (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 578.

10. —— Umeboshi.—The evidence does not warrant the conclusion that the merchandise is fruit packed in its own juice. It does justify the contention of the importers that the umeboshi imported should be classified as fruits in brine. They were entitled to free entry under Act 1909. Sakai v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 159.

489. Fruit plants, tropical and semitropical, for the purpose of propagation or cultivation.

490. Fulminates, fulminating powder, and other like articles not specially provided for in this section.

491. Furs and fur skins, undressed.

Notes of Decisions

Angora goatskins.—Raw Angora goat skins, with the hair on, being for all commercial purposes undressed fur skins, it being unprofitable to separate the hair from the skin and to use the hair as wool, cannot be classified as "wools on the skin," under Act 1890, par. 387, but are free of duty, under paragraph 588, as fur skins "not dressed in any manner." U. S. v. Bennet (1895) 66 Fed. 299, 13 C. C. A. 446.

Pulled or plucked coney skins.—"Pulled" or "plucked" coney skins—that is, such as have had the hair removed from them—held not dutiable as "dressed furs or skins," within Act 1890, par. 444, but entitled to entry free, under paragraph 588, as "fur skins, not dressed in any manner." U. S. v. Wotten (1892) 53 Fed. 344, 3 C. C. A. 553; Id. (C. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 693.

Sheepskins.—Sheepskins, purchased indiscriminately and imported unsorted, without regard to any particular use to which they might be adapted, and not shown to be used as furs, are not classifiable as "furs," or "fur skins," under Act 1897, pars. 561, 562. International Hide & Skin Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 177 Fed. 602.

Buenos Ayres sheepskins, imported with the wool on and dried, but not dressed, do not fall within the head of "raw hides and skins of all kinds." etc., and are subject to a duty of 20 per cent. ad valorem. Act July 30, 1846, § 3. Coggill v. Lawrence (C. C. 1850) Fed. Cas. No. 2,956.

Undressed clippings or waste.—Hares' combings or fur waste held not dutiable as fur undressed. See paragraph 384.

Act 1897, par. 561, providing for "furs, undressed," includes undressed clippings and detached portions of fur, used for the same purpose as the skin from which derived; and such material is therefore removed from the provision for "waste, not specially provided for," in paragraph 463. Hatters' Fur Exchange v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 588.

Fur gathered as scraps or waste from the first treatment of skins is not waste in the strict sense of refuse, but is undressed fur and as such was free of duty under section 561, Act 1897. U. S. v. Hatters' Fur Exchange (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 198.

492. Gambier.

493. Glass enamel, white, for watch and clock dials.

Notes of Decisions

Watch enamel.—The substance known as "watch enamel" held dutiable as "watch material," at 25 per cent. ad valorem, and not as "manufactures of glass, or of which glass shall be a component material." Elgin Watch Co. v. Spaulding (C. C. 1884) 19 Fed. 411.

494. Glass plates or disks, rough-cut or unwrought, for use in the manufacture of optical instruments, spectacles, and eyeglasses, and suitable only for such use: Provided, however, That such disks exceeding eight inches in diameter may be polished sufficiently to enable the character of the glass to be determined.

Notes of Decisions

Goggles.—Glass disks, rough cut or unwrought, made from crown or cylinder glass, bent, known to the trade as mi-coquille glasses, which are chiefly used in the manufacture of automobile goggles to protect the eyes from dust or wind, which do not in any manner transform the rays of light which pass through them or affect the focus of the eyes in any way and which are not capable of being ground into lenses for any such purpose, are not admissible free under paragraph 577, Act 1909, as being "for use in the manufacture of optical instruments, spectacles, and eyeglasses, and suitable only for such use." Bache & Co. v. U. S. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 507.

From the use of the words "spectacles, eyeglasses, and goggles" in Act 1909, par. 105, and "spectacles and eyeglass," only goggles being omitted, in paragraph 577, it may be reasonably inferred that Congress understood goggles to be different things from spectacles and eyeglasses, and deliberately refrained from making material for them dutiable under paragraph 577. Id.

Polished discs.—In construing the provision in Act 1897, par. 565, for "glass plates or discs, rough cut or un-wrought," with the proviso that "discs exceeding eight inches in diameter may be polished sufficiently to enable the character of the glass to be determined," held, that the proviso does not require the exclusion from said paragraph of polished square plates less than eight inches across, where the polishing is done simply to determine the character of the articles, is of no other use, and is taken off in their manufacture. Hensel, Bruckmann & Lorbacher v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 139 Fed. 95.

Spectacle lenses rough.—Spectacle lenses ground or polished held not exempt from duty, see paragraph 84.

Spectacle lenses manufactured from Brazil or Scotch pebbles, imported with rough or unfinished edges, and commercially known as "pebbles for spectacles, rough," held free under Act 1883, and not dutiable as manufacture of glass. Young v. Spalding (C. C. 1885) 24 Fed. 22.

495. Gloves, made wholly or in chief value of leather made from horsehides, pigskins, and cattle hides of cattle of the bovine species, excepting calfskins, whether wholly or partly manufactured.

496. Goldbeaters' molds and goldbeaters' skins.

497. Grasses and fibers: Istle or Tampico fiber, jute, jute butts, manila, sisal grass, sunn, and all other textile grasses or fibrous vegetable substances, not dressed or manufactured in any manner, and not specially provided for in this section.

Notes of Decisions

1. Bass fiber.
2. Birch bark.
3. Bleached wheat stems.
4. Broken fibers of jute.
5. Grasses cut into lengths.
6. Grass, sun bleached.
7. Kittul.
8. New Zealand flax.
9. Rush.
10. Sisal grass.

1. Bass fiber.—Bass fiber subjected to a process that fits it for a definite use held not dutiable as fiber not manufactured. See paragraph 385.

2. Birch bark.—Act 1897, pars. 566, 617, relating to "fibrous vegetable substances" and to "moss, seaweeds, and vegetable substances," does not include birch bark. Reed & Keller v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 453; Reed & Keller v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 95.

3. Bleached wheat stems.—Bleached wheat stems or wheat heads are entitled to admission free from duty, under Act 1897, par. 566, including textile grasses or fibrous vegetable substances not dressed or manufactured in any manner, and are not dutiable, under paragraph 251, and the similitude clause of the act, as "natural flowers, preserved or fresh, suitable for decorative purposes." Bayersdorfer & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 122 Fed. 968, decree reversed U. S. v. H. Bayersdorfer & Co. (1903) 126 Fed. 732, 62 C. C. A. 16.

4. Broken fibers of jute.—The merchandise consists of broken fibers of undressed raw jute rejected by the carding machine in the first process of manufacture. These broken fibers had been later subjected to a carding process of their own. The product is more accurately described as jute, unmanufactured, than as waste not specially provided for and was entitled to free entry under both Acts 1897 and 1909. Salomon Bros. & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 431. See, also, U. S. v. Hatters' Fur Exchange (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 198.

5. Grasses cut into lengths.—Grasses cut into lengths to be used in manufacture of brushes held not dutiable under this paragraph. See paragraph 385.

6. Grass, sun bleached.—Bleached or dyed grasses held not dutiable as grasses not dressed or manufactured. See paragraph 347.

Natural grass, sun bleached, used for emblems, is not a manufactured article, and is put on the free list, under Act 1897, par. 566, as textile grasses "not manufactured in any manner, and not specially provided for." U. S. v. Richard (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 262.

There might be some difficulty in holding that the sun-dried grasses of the importation are textile grasses, or fibers, or other vegetable substances within the meaning of paragraphs 578 and 630, Act 1909, here relied on by the importer; but the rulings of the board of general appraisers and those of the courts, acquiesced in, as these apparently have been by Congress, establish a construction that may not now be departed from. U. S. v. Post & Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 260.

7. Kittul.—Kittul held not dutiable as a fibrous vegetable substance. See paragraph 385.

8. New Zealand flax.—The decision of the Treasury Department of April, 1871, holding that the article known as New Zealand flax is dutiable as flax not hackled or dressed, should, under Schedule J of Act March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 507), be modified so as to classify the article for duty under the provision for sunn, sisal grass, and other vegetable substances not specially enumerated or provided for. (1889) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 334.

9. Rush.—Unmanufactured rush, imported from China, cured, but not split or dyed, is "straw," within the common acceptation and definition of that word, and is therefore free of duty, under Act 1883, as "straw unmanufactured." Blydenburgh v. Magone (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 573, writ of error dismissed Magone v. Blydenburgh (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 984, 145 U. S. 645, 36 L. Ed. 858.

10. Sisal grass.—East India Bombay hemp held not dutiable as sisal grass. See paragraph 485.

498. Grease, fats, vegetable tallow, and oils (excepting fish oils), not chemically compounded, such as are commonly used in soap making or in wire drawing, or for stuffing or dressing leather, not specially provided for in this section.

Notes of Decisions

In general.—The legal effect of paragraph 580, Act 1909, is to cast upon importers the burden of establishing not only that the oil imported is fit for the uses therein enumerated, but that it has no practical commercial fitness for other uses than those named. There is here a clear preponderance of proof of the government's contention that the grease of the importation was not so limited in its use. U. S. v. Klipstein & Co. (1913) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 28. See, also, Stone & Downer Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 47.

Birch tar oil.—It appearing from the evidence that the article imported was birch tar oil distilled from the wood and used in dressing russia leather, to give an odor to the leather, the mere possible but undisclosed use of this oil for other purposes did not remove it from the operation of paragraph 568, Act 1897, and it was nondutiable under that paragraph. Klipstein v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 122.

Cod oil.—Cod oil held not dutiable as an oil for dressing leather. See paragraph 44.

Hard yellow grease.—Hard yellow grease held not free as grease. See paragraph 44.

Japanese fish oil.—"Japanese fish oil," fit only for use in soap making, wire drawing, or stuffing or dressing leather, is entitled to free entry, under paragraph 599 of Act 1890, and not classifiable, under paragraph 46, as "whale and other fish oil." U. S. v. Wells (1896) 77 Fed. 411, 23 C. C. A. 210.

Niger seed oil.—Niger seed oil, which, while used in soap making, can be used for other purposes, though without the proper qualities for such purposes, is within Act 1897, par. 568, for oils "commonly used in soap making, * * * fit only for such use." U. S. v. Colby & Co. (1907) 153 Fed. 883, 82 C. C. A. 629.

Oleic acid.—Act 1897, par. 568, relating to oils commonly used in soap making and "fit only for such uses," does not include so-called "oleic acid," or red oil, which is fit for other uses, although commonly used as soap stock. Edward Hill's Sons & Co. v. U. S. (1906) 151 Fed. 475, 81 C. C. A. 13, affirming judgment (C. C. 1906) 143 Fed. 361.

Olein.—Olein a distillate from wool grease held not dutiable as wool grease. See paragraph 46.

Vegetable tallow.—Conceding for the purposes of this case only that the merchandise is a vegetable tallow or that it is commercially known as such, it is not the vegetable tallow described in paragraph 580, Act 1909, and it cannot, therefore, be admitted free of duty. U. S. v. Davies, Turner & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 81.

499. Guano, manures, and all substances used only for manure, including basic slag, ground or unground, and calcium cyanamid or lime nitrogen.

Notes of Decisions

"Expressly used for manure."—By the use of the expression "manure and all substances expressly used for manure," found in the free list of Tariff Act 1883, Congress signified that any article coming within this description should be exempt from duty, although it might be a chemical product scientifically classifiable by name under "Schedule A—Chemical Products." Magone v. Heller (1893) 14 Sup. Ct. 18, 19, 150 U. S. 70, 37 L. Ed. 1001, reversing judgment Heller v. Magone (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 908.

The phrase "expressly used for manure" means used "especially" or "particularly" for manure; and when there is testimony that an import invoiced as "manure salts," and containing 90 to 95 per cent. of sulphate of potash, and more than 40 per cent. of pure potash, is used as a fertilizer, or in the manufacture of fertilizers, but there is also other testimony that it is used for other purposes, it is a question for the jury whether or not it is used "expressly for manure," as above defined. Id.

Rape meal.—Rape meal held not free of duty as manure. See paragraph 385.

Substances to enrich the soil.—All imported substances, whether especially provided for eo nomine, or covered by any language descriptive of their origin or qualities, which subserve the purpose of enriching the soil, are free, under paragraph 505 of the free-list. Schultz v. Cadwalader (C. C. 1890) 43 Fed. 290, judgment reversed Cadwalader v. Shultz (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 1143, 154 U. S. 496, 38 L. Ed. 1082.

Sulphate of ammonia.—Sulphate of ammonia held not covered by provision for manure. See paragraph 395.

Waste of hog hair.—Certain waste of hog hair, consisting of sweepings in factories, which is used solely in the manufacture of artificial fertilizers, although not suitable in its imported condition for use as fertilizer, held subject to classification under Act 1897, par. 569, providing for "substances used only for manure," and not as "waste, not specially provided for," under paragraph 463 of said act. Shallus v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 129 Fed. 845.

500. Gum: Amber in chips valued at not more than 50 cents per pound, copal, damar, and kauri.

501. Gunpowder, and all explosive substances, not specially provided for in this section, used for mining, blasting, and artillery purposes.

502. Gutta-percha, crude.

503. Hair of horse, cattle, and other animals, cleaned or uncleaned, drawn or undrawn, but unmanufactured, not specially provided for in this section.

Notes of Decisions

Bristles.—Bristles held not dutiable as hair of animals. See paragraph 337.

Goat's hair.—The question for determination is almost entirely one of fact, and on a review of the testimony it is held the merchandise is China goat hair, not wool, and as such was entitled to free entry under paragraph 583, Act 1909. U. S. v. Fearon Daniel Co. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 500.

Hair of the common goat, which is unfit for combing purposes, should be admitted free of duty under the provisions in the free list for hair of horses and cattle, and hair of all kinds not specifically enumerated, Act March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 519). (1890) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 527.

504. Hide cuttings, raw, with or without hair, and all other glue stock.

505. Hide rope.

506. Hides of cattle, raw or uncured, or dry, salted, or pickled.

Notes of Decisions

Hides in general.—Hides not specially provided for. See paragraph 604.

Where hides have been removed abroad from American cattle exported alive and these hides so removed returned here as imports, they are not to be deemed articles of the growth, produce, and manufacture of the United States and as such free of duty, but as hides of cattle as described in paragraph 437, Act 1897, and were dutiable under that paragraph. Buschoff v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 336.

507. Hones and whetstones.

Notes of Decisions

Hones and whetstones.—Articles of hone stone held not free of duty as hones. See paragraph 385.

The provision for "hones and whetstones," in paragraph 574, Act 1897, includes only articles used in sharpening edged instruments. R. J. Waddell & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 135 Fed. 211.

508. Hoofs, unmanufactured.

509. Hoop or band iron, or hoop or band steel, cut to lengths, or wholly or partly manufactured into hoops or ties, coated or not coated with paint or any other preparation, with or without buckles or fastenings, for baling cotton or any other commodity.

Notes of Decisions

Cotton ties.—Cotton ties, each consisting of iron strips and an iron buckle, imported in bundles, each bundle consisting of 30 strips and 30 buckles, each strip 11 feet long, the whole blackened, were held to be subject to an ad valorem duty as "manufactures of iron, not otherwise provided for" under R. S. § 2504, Schedule E, and not dutiable under such schedule as "band, hoop, and scroll iron." Badger v. Ranlett (1882) 1 Sup. Ct. 346, 106 U. S. 255, 27 L. Ed. 194.

Hoop iron.—The words "all hoop iron," as used in R. S. § 2504, include not only hoop iron in strips of from 30 to 60 feet in length as it comes from the rolls, in which form it is usually bought and sold, but also all lengths of hoop iron not changed by manufacture into a new and distinct article. Kennedy v. Hartranft (C. C. 1881) 9 Fed. 18.

510. Hop roots for cultivation.

511. Horns and parts of, including horn strips and tips, unmanufactured.

Notes of Decisions

Polished horn strips.—Polished horn strips, ready and completed for use as bones or stays for ladies' corsets or dresses, are free of duty, under R. S. § 2503, par. 513, placing upon the free list "horns and parts of horns, unmanufactured, and horn strips and tips." Borgfeldt v. Erhardt (C. C. 1890) 41 Fed. 102.

512. Ice.

513. India rubber, crude, and milk of, and scrap or refuse india rubber, fit only for remanufacture.

Notes of Decisions

Crude balata.—The term "india rubber," in Act 1897, par. 579, has a commercial meaning that includes nearly a hundred varieties of inspissated vegetable gums, among them balata, which are used in the manufacture of what are commonly known as "rubber goods." Earle Bros. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 773.

Crude rubber.—Dental rubber held not entitled to free entry as crude rubber. See paragraph 368.

Old india rubber shoes, purchased and imported for the same purposes as crude rubber, the commercial value of which is due solely to the rubber which they contain, and not the preparation or manufacture which they have undergone, were exempt from duty under Act March 3, 1883, as "similar in material and quality" to crude rubber. Cadwalader v. Jessup & Moore Paper Co. (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 875, 876, 149 U. S. 350, 37 L. Ed. 764, affirming Jessup & Moore Paper Co. v. Cadwalader (C. C. 1890) 43 Fed. 288.

Scrap rubber.—Old india rubber shoes, purchased and imported for the same purposes as crude rubber, is old scrap or refuse India rubber within Act 1890, c. 1234, p. 613. Cadwalader v. Jessup & Moore Paper Co. (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 875, 876, 149 U. S. 350, 37 L. Ed. 764.

Rubber boots and shoes, worn out by use, and fit only for remanufacture, held to be dutiable at 10 per centum ad valorem as "rags" or "waste," under paragraphs 481 and 493 of Schedule N of Act March 3, 1883, and not dutiable at 25 per centum ad valorem, as "articles composed of India rubber," under paragraph 454 of said schedule. In re Salomon (C. C. 1891) 47 Fed. 711.

There is no basis in the record for segregating the worn and the new scrap rubber of the importation. The new scrap rubber here is not a manufactured article with a changed texture; it is still rubber and "rubber, crude." Since 1890 rubber of this description had been entitled to free entry, and the act of 1909, which still relates the scrap there dealt with to the articles of which it had once been composed, does not withdraw from the term "rubber, crude" anything that had theretofore fallen within the clause. The merchandise was entitled to free entry. Magee & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 443.

Chopping old scrap or crude rubber, separating therefrom particles of iron, such as rivets, valves, etc., grinding the rubber into smaller particles, chemically treating, washing, riffling, and blowing these, are all done to separate the rubber from the other component materials of the scrap or refuse—in short, to recover or reclaim the rubber in a shape suitable for transportation and marketing; and it has not thus been manufactured, in whole or in part, becoming a particular manufactured article; it has rather been made fit as a single material to be manufactured anew. U. S. v. Michelin Tire Co. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 518.

Paragraph 579, Act 1897, to be given its due and proper effect, must be taken to have placed on the free list all india rubber, whatever its condition, imported as a material for manufacturing india-rubber articles; and it applied to old scrap and refuse rubber, whether imported after separation or as the content of, or associated with, other materials as a part of articles formerly useful. Id.

514. (Repealed.)

This paragraph was repealed by Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, § 502, post, § 5291c, and certain duties imposed upon the articles enumerated therein by §§

500, 501, of said Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, post, §§ 5291a, 5291b. Said paragraph read as follows:

"514. Indigo, natural or synthetic, dry or suspended in water, and dyes obtained from indigo."

Notes of Decisions

Sulphonated and brominated indigo.—Sulphonated indigo and brominated indigo are alike pastes in point of consistency and are alike extracts of the same parent substance. Klipstein & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 510.

515. Iodine, crude, or resublimed.

516. Ipecac.

517. Iridium, osmium, palladium, rhodium, and ruthenium and native combinations thereof with one another or with platinum.

518. Iron ore, including manganiferous iron ore, and the dross or residuum from burnt pyrites; iron in pigs, iron kentledge, spiegeleisen, wrought iron and scrap and scrap steel; but nothing shall be deemed scrap iron or scrap steel except second-hand or waste or refuse iron or steel fit only to be remanufactured; ferromanganese; iron in slabs, blooms, loops or other forms less finished than iron bars, and more advanced than pig iron, except castings, not specially provided for in this section.

Notes of Decisions

Crude hematite ore.—Hematite iron ore in a form in which it cannot be used as a pigment is not dutiable as "pigments," under Act 1897, par. 58, but as "iron ore," under paragraph 121. Hill v. Francklyn & Ferguson (1908) 162 Fed. 880, 89 C. C. A. 570.

Crude hematite ore, which in its present state cannot be used as a pigment or color, is assessable at 40 cents per ton as "iron ore," within paragraph 121, Act 1897, and not at 30 per cent. ad valorem, as "color," under paragraph 58. Francklyn v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 119 Fed. 470.

Ferro-chrome.—Ferro-chrome, ferro-molybdenum, ferro-tungsten, and ferro-vanadium, which, like ferro-manganese, are employed as alloys in making steel, which so resemble ferro-manganese that even experts are unable to tell them apart, and which are similar in quality and use to ferro-manganese, though they produce different results, and are not applied at the same stage in the process of making steel, are, by virtue of the similitude clause, dutiable at the rate applicable to ferro-manganese under paragraph 122, Act 1897. U. S. v. Roesseler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. (1905) 137 Fed. 770, 70 C. C. A. 346, affirming judgment (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 576.

Ferro-chrome was dutiable under Act 1894 at four dollars per ton, as being an article similar to ferro-manganese, provided for in paragraph 110. Dana v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 522.

Ferro-manganese.—Alloys experimentally wrought held dutiable as ferro-manganese. See paragraph 102.

An alloy held not dutiable as ferro-manganese. See paragraph 154.

An alloy in the form of pigs which alloy is mixed with other metals held not dutiable as ferro-manganese. See paragraph 102.

Iron ore.—Collin's oxide held not subject to classification as iron ore. See paragraph 63.

Presence of water in iron ore, see Earnshaw v. Cadwalader (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 851, 145 U. S. 247, 36 L. Ed. 693.

Under the tariff act of 1874, importations of iron ore are subject to a duty of 20 per cent. ad valorem under section 2504, Schedule M, R. S., as a mineral substance in a crude state not otherwise provided for, and not to 10 per cent. ad valorem under section 2516 as an unmanufactured article not herein enumerated or provided for. Marvel v. Merritt (1885) 6 Sup. Ct. 207, 208, 116 U. S. 11, 29 L. Ed. 550.

The term "iron ore," as used in the act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 497), is generic, embracing all the different species of iron ore, regardless of their price, value, or accidental component chemical ingredients. It is the iron ore of commerce. (1887) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 530.

In determining the meaning of "iron ore," as used in the provision of the act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 497), which imposes a duty thereon, regard should be had to the commercial signification of the term, as Congress must be understood to have used the same in its commercial sense. (1886) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 466.

Iron sand.—In construing the provision in Act 1897, par. 124, for "all iron in * * * forms less finished than iron in bars, and more advanced than pig iron," held, that the test is the degree of advancement in manufacture, rather than in refinement or quality, and that iron sand, a finished manufactured article, is not within said provision, but is dutiable as "manufactures of iron," under paragraph 193. Harrison Supply Co. v. U. S. (1909) 171 Fed. 406, 96 C. C. A. 362.

Muck bars.—Muck bars held not within the provision for iron in forms less finished than iron bars and more advanced than pig iron. See paragraph 103.

Scrap iron or steel.—Under R. S. § 2504, Schedule E, imposing a duty of eight dollars per ton on "wrought scrap iron of every description," and providing, further, that "nothing shall be deemed scrap iron except waste or refuse iron that has been in actual use, and is fit only to be remanufactured," it was held, that iron rails that have never been in use are not dutiable as scrap iron, though they are old and rusty, and are in fact intended by the importer to be remanufactured. Dwight v. Merritt (1891) 11 Sup. Ct. 768, 140 U. S. 213, 35 L. Ed. 450.

Punchings and clippings of wrought iron boiler plates and wrought sheet iron left after the process of the manufacture of the boiler plates into boilers is completed, and the ends of bridge rods and beams of wrought iron cut off to bring the rods and beams to the required length, are iron that has been in "actual use" within the meaning of that term as used in this section and dutiable as wrought scrap iron under this section. Schlesinger v. Beard (1887) 7 Sup. Ct. 546, 547, 120 U. S. 264, 30 L. Ed. 656.

Act 1897, par. 122, which provides for "scrap iron," and defines it as "waste or refuse iron * * * fit only to be remanufactured," refers not only to pieces or scraps thrown off or discarded in the course of manufacture, but to completed articles worn out by use, such as old chains, in small pieces, fit only for remanufacture. G. W. Sheldon & Co. v. U. S. (1907) 159 Fed. 105, 86 C. C. A. 295, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 152 Fed. 318.

The provision for "scrap iron" in Act 1897, par. 122, is more specific than that for "junk, old," in paragraph 588, as the latter includes an infinite variety of things, of which one kind is "scrap iron." Id.

Old fishplates, which are so worn as to have lost their usefulness for railway purposes and are suitable for use only as scrap steel, held not dutiable under Act 1897, par. 130, as "railway fishplates," but under paragraph 122, as "scrap steel." R. L. Ginsburg & Sons v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 531.

Strips of steel cut from the sides of boiler plates after their first trimming, to remove holes or other defects, or to obtain the exact size of plate desired, having two cut edges, but generally untrue, and of varying length, breadth, and thickness, and which after importation are separately rolled into long thin plates, and used for the manufacture of tacks, trunk irons, and other small articles, are "waste or refuse steel fit only to be remanufactured," and dutiable as "scrap steel," under paragraph 122, Act 1897, and not under paragraph 135, covering steel in all forms or shapes not specially provided for. U. S. v. Milne (C. C. 1902) 117 Fed. 352.

The importation was of irregularly broken pieces of old sugar mills, originally iron and steel shafting. The testimony shows that the greater part of the goods could be remanufactured only by melting and so they came within the very terms of paragraph 118, Act 1909. U. S. v. Strauss & Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 180.

To bring old steel rails within the provisions of paragraph 118, Act 1909, the burden is on the importer to show that the importation is not only of scrap steel, but that it is such scrap steel as to constitute "waste or refuse iron or steel fit only to be remanufactured by melting." The evidence in the record falls short of showing the shipment was of this character; it was properly held dutiable under paragraph 126. Benjamin Iron & Steel Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 159.

Iron bar ends, consisting of the crop ends, from 1 to 4 inches long, cut off from Swedish bar iron in the process of manufacturing the bars, have not been "in actual use" so as to justify their classification as scrap iron under Schedule C of the act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 497). (1888) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 103.

Steel in slabs.—Metal imported from Sweden, being in the form of cakes or slabs from 24 to 30 inches in length by 12 to 14 inches in width, and from an inch to an inch and a half thick, with the upper surface nicked into rectangular or oblique angular "caramels," about an inch and a quarter square, invoiced as "remelting steel in cakes," held dutiable as "steel in slabs" under Act 1883. Farris v. Magone (C. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 845.

519. Jalap.
520. Jet, unmanufactured.
521. Joss stick or joss light.

Notes of Decisions

Joss sticks or joss light.—A dried paste of sandalwood dust and clay, in the form of sticks, cones and coils, which, when lighted, yields a fragrant odor and is burnt at the altars and shrines of joss houses and temples in China and Japan, is "joss light," within Act 1897, par. 587. Yamanaka & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 249.

Articles which are in truth and fact joss sticks or joss lights are subject to classification as such under Act 1897, par. 587, notwithstanding that they may have no commercial designation as such. Id.

The provision in Act 1897, par. 587, for "joss stick," held to include articles used in setting off fireworks, other than those well known as joss sticks and used for incense. Champion & Staudinger v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 150 Fed. 239.

522. Junk, old.

Notes of Decisions

Scrap iron.—Scrap iron held not classifiable as junk, old. See paragraph 518.

Secondhand bottles.—Secondhand bottles held not junk. See paragraph 83.

523. Kelp.
524. Kieserite.
525. Kyanite, or cyanite, and kainite.
526. Lac dye, crude, seed, button, stick, and shell.

Notes of Decisions

Tetrachloride of tin.—Tetrachloride of tin, while admittedly a chemical compound, was not dutiable as such under Act 1897, and being, as appears from a preponderance of the testimony in this case, lac spirits, it was, as such, free of duty under that act. Consolidated Color & Chemical Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 192.

527. Lactarene or casein.

Notes of Decisions

Casein.—Casein is "lactarene," as enumerated in Act 1897, par. 594. U. S. v. Brownell (1908) 166 Fed. 1022, 92 C. C. A. 668, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 159 Fed. 219.

So-called casein industrielle, which is produced by drying the substance left after drawing off the whey from skimmed milk that has been allowed to sour, held to be "lactarene," under Act 1897, par. 594. B. P. Ducas Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 143 Fed. 362.

Plasmon.—A gritty, yellowish powder, with the trade name of "plasmon," but invoiced as lactarene, and known to the trade as lactarene, casein, or milk albumen, is not milk preserved. The importation was free of duty as lactarene under paragraph 594, Act 1909. U. S. v. Corsi, Zumsteg & Co. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 292.

528. Lard, lard compounds, and lard substitutes.
529. Lava, unmanufactured.
530. All leather not specially provided for in this section and leather board or compressed leather; leather cut into shoe uppers or vamps or other forms suitable for conversion into boots or shoes; boots and shoes made wholly or in chief value of leather; leather shoe laces, finished or unfinished; harness, saddles, and saddlery, in sets or in parts, finished or unfinished.

Notes of Decisions

1. Band or belting leather.
2. Chinese shoes.
3. Cordovan leather.
4. Gauffre.
5. Grain leather.
6. Japanned skins.
7. Leather for dress trimmings.
8. Patent leather.
9. Rough leather.
10. Saddlery.
11. Sealskin.
12. Skins for morocco.
13. Split leather.

1. Band or belting leather.—The leather strips here had been given a form and a size specially and definitely adapting them for conversion into automobile treads of different lengths and widths, and they were dutiable as assessed at 15 per cent. ad valorem under paragraph 451, Act 1909. Michelin Tire Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 91.

The merchandise consisted of strips or bands of chrome leather beveled on the edges and cut into suitable lengths for the manufacture of automobile treads. To adapt these to their special use further labor upon them was necessary. The goods are band or belting leather. They were dutiable as determined by the board under paragraph 451, Act 1909, and were likewise subject to the additional duty imposed by the proviso of that paragraph. U. S.

v. Dubied Machinery Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 442.

The merchandise is cut from leather of the bovine species in a form suitable to be shaped and fitted upon a particular roller, and so adapted to its final use. It is governed accordingly by U. S. v. Ringk & Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 353, and is dutiable under paragraph 451, Act 1909. U. S. v. Crabb & Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 373.

There is no uniform general trade meaning attached to the words "leather belting" confining it to that class of leather suitable in making belts for the transmission of power. U. S. v. Richards (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 537.

The importation here of leather to be used in the manufacture of appliances in textile machinery, namely, picker strap and apron leather, falls properly within the description "belting leather" as used in Act 1909; it includes equally leather suited to transmit power from wheel to wheel and leather suited simply to convey materials, and is dutiable as belting leather under paragraph 451 of that act. Id.

2. Chinese shoes.—Chinese shoes or slippers embroidered held not dutiable as shoes of leather. See paragraph 358.

Paragraph 456, Act 1890, is applicable to all shoes made of leather, notwithstanding the fact that other materials are used in greater quantity; and Chinese shoes manufactured from various materials, including leather, cotton, silk, thread, and felt, but of which leather is the component material of chief value, are dutiable under such paragraph, and not under paragraph 461, as articles, of which leather is the component part of chief value, not specially provided for. In re Wise (C. C. 1898) 93 Fed. 443.

3. Cordovan leather.—Cordovan leather, cut during the process of dressing into a shape suitable for recutting into shoe-vamps, was, under the tariff act of March 3, 1883, properly dutiable as "dressed upper leather," under paragraph 461, and not as a "manufacture or article of leather," under paragraph 463, at 30 per cent. ad valorem. In re Salomon (C. C. 1891) 48 Fed. 287.

4. Gauffre.—"Gauffre leather," in pieces 28 inches wide, and from 32 to 36 inches long, plain on one side. and covered with designs in silver and various colors on the other, was dutiable under Act 1894, as "leather not specially provided for," under paragraph 340, and not as manufactures of leather not otherwise provided for, under paragraph 353, or as skins not otherwise provided for under paragraph 341. U. S. v. Naday (C. C. 1898) 92 Fed. 140, judgment affirmed (1899) 98 Fed. 421, 39 C. C. A. 124.

The leather of the importation dressed leather ornamented on its grain side with a diced effect does not present the appearance of raised figures in relief upon its surface, nor has it been subjected to processes aimed to produce such a result. The article is not embossed or gauffre, but diced leather. U. S. v. Brown & Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 212.

There is no commercial designation shown, but the artificially embossed surface of the goods makes them aptly described as "gauffre leather" in the common and ordinary acceptation of the term. The importation was dutiable as calfskins tanned and dressed, under paragraph 451, Act 1909, and was subject to the cumulative duty imposed in the proviso of that paragraph upon gauffre leather. Louis Dejonge & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 463.

"Gauffre" is a word of French derivation and is variously spelled gauffre, gauffree, gouffre, goffer, gauffer, gaufre, and gauffrer. It accords in meaning with embossed. U. S. v. White (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 80.

The fact that "gauffre" had no fixed uniform trade meaning as applied to leather when the tariff law of 1909 was enacted cannot be taken to shift the burden of proof on the government in determining whether the skins imported were gauffre leather; there is necessary simply an inquiry as to what was intended by the Congress in using "gauffre leather" in that act, and to give effect, it may be, to the actual language employed. The word "cut" there appearing, it would seem was used to impress the customary features of gauffre leather, definite sizes and shapes, but in any view cannot be taken to defeat the plain intention as to the dutiable status of the goods. The rate of duty was clearly ascertainable and the importation is dutiable as gauffre leather under paragraph 451, Act 1909. Id.

5. Grain leather.—The merchandise was invoiced as "dull black lining calf leather." Of the two competing provisions, "grain leather" as used in paragraph 450, Act 1909, and "calfskins tanned or tanned and dressed" in paragraph 451, the latter phrase is the more specific and controls here. Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 58. See, also, Worsdell & Co. v. Same (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 270; Tilge v. Same (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 129.

It would appear that the proviso to paragraph 451, Act 1909, was intended to be limited in its application to the articles described in that paragraph, and it would be to force the construction to extend it to cover the merchandise here. The leather of the importation, with a natural and an artificial grain, is properly dutiable under paragraph 450, Act 1909. Spalding & Bros.

and Worsdell & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 356.

6. Japanned skins.—Japanned skins used for uppers are within Act 1890, par. 456, for "dressed upper leather, including * * * japanned leather," rather than under the provision in the same paragraph for "japanned calfskins," the latter provision being limited to japanned skins which are not upper leather. U. S. v. Bittel, Tepel & Eilers (C. C. 1892) 155 Fed. 554, judgment affirmed In re Collector of Customs (1893) 4 C. C. A. 680.

7. Polishing stones—Tam O'Shanter Pieces of leather, cut uniform, 28 inches in width and from 32 to 36 inches in length, having on one side an embossed pattern in silver and other colors, and designed to be cut and used in making dress trimmings, pocketbooks, and other fancy articles, are dutiable under paragraph 340, Act 1894, as leather not specially provided for, and not under paragraph 341, as "skins," or under paragraph 342, as leather cut into forms suitable for conversion into manufactured articles. U. S. v. Naday (1899) 98 Fed. 421, 39 C. C. A. 124, affirming judgment (C. C. 1898) 92 Fed. 140.

8. Patent leather.—"Patent leather" was dutiable under the act of July 30, 1846, at 20 per cent. ad valorem as "leather, upper, of all kinds," and not as a manufacture of leather. Keutgen v. Lawrence (C. C. 1850) Fed. Cas. No. 7,745.

9. Rough leather.—In determining whether rough leather includes both skins and hides a distinction between "hides" and "skins" will be recognized; hides pertaining to animals of a larger size and skins to smaller animals. Kaufmann & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 117.

The provision for "rough leather" in paragraph 451, Act 1909, was not intended to comprehend the tanned but unfinished skins of small animals. Id.

The importation, while not entirely finished for its intended use, is nevertheless raised above classification as rough leather, using that term as it appears in the paragraph that controls (paragraph 451, Act 1909). It was properly assessed as dressed leather. Sherrard v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 377.

"Rough leather" as used in paragraph 451, Act 1909, had such a well-established and definite trade meaning before and at the time of that enactment that no change or modification of the meaning by interpretation is permissible. U. S. v. Robertson (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 379.

Where the hides of the importation had been tanned by prolonged soaking in a running stream, chosen for the purpose because of a peculiar effect that particular water had upon the hides and where the hair of these hides had then been scraped off with knives, and the hides with oil upon them trodden down in barrels, replaced again in the running stream, later to be removed, tightly stretched and pegged on the ground to dry and bleach in the sun, and so made water tight, held, this leather, as shown by the evidence, being now ready for immediate use in manufacture, is not rough leather, but leather, rather, not specially provided for, tanned and curried in effect, and as such dutiable at 15 per cent ad valorem under paragraph 451, Act 1909. Id.

10. Saddlery.—Woolen bands for use of veterinary surgeons held not classifiable as harness saddles and saddlery. See paragraph 292.

The word "saddlery," in the provision in Act 1883, for "coach and harness furniture of all kinds, saddlery, coach, and harness hardware," etc., is to be taken as a noun, and not as an adjective qualifying "hardware." McCoy v. Hedden (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 89.

In view of the construction by the administrative departments, by the board, and by the courts, and in the absence of clear proof of a commercial designation, the word "saddlery" occuring in paragraphs 450 and 461, Act 1909, cannot be taken to apply to articles used in the care of horses or for horsestable equipment. Stone v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 46.

Currycombs, hoof picks, horse clippers, whip thongs, and the like are not "saddlery," and these are dutiable according to the component of chief value as manufactures of metal or the manufactures of leather. Id.

11. Sealskin.—The provision for "rough leather" not applying to unsplit sealskins, tanned, but not dressed or finished, they fall appropriately under the provision in the paragraph for "all other leather." Kaufmann & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 117.

12. Skins for morocco.—The provision in Act 1897, par. 438, for "skins for morocco," is not limited to goatskins, but includes also certain sheepskins known as "New Zealand basils," or "Cape sheepskins." Helmrath v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 125 Fed. 634.

13. Split leather.—Paragraph 450, Act 1909, does not cover leathers made from the hides or skins of animals that are not cattle of the bovine species, and as seal splits or seal split leathers are made from animals not of the bovine species, they do not fall within the provisions of that paragraph. Worsdell & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 270.

It not having been shown that the terms "grain leather" and "split leather," as used in paragraph 450, Act 1909, are applicable in the trade only to leathers which are unfinished, finished leathers of these kinds made from the hides of cattle of the bovine species are dutiable under said paragraph. Id.

Reviewing the legislative history of the proviso to paragraph 450, Act 1909, it cannot be held the Congress meant to extend its provisions to still other paragraphs—to paragraph 451, for example—and so "split leather," as employed in that proviso, does not include articles such as the skivers of the importation. These were properly held to be dutiable under paragraph 451; and as the duty would be the same it is unnecessary to determine their classification as between either "sheepskins dressed and finished" or as "other leather." Tilge v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 129.

531. Leeches.

532. Lemon juice, lime juice, and sour orange juice, all the foregoing containing not more than 2 per centum of alcohol.

533. Lifeboats and life-saving apparatus specially imported by societies and institutions incorporated or established to encourage the saving of human life.

534. Limestone-rock asphalt; asphaltum, and bitumen.

Notes of Decisions

Asphaltum.—Asphalt mastic in cakes weighing about 55 pounds each, which were produced by subjecting limestone rock asphalt to a crushing process and mixing it with bitumen and certain crude oils, held dutiable under paragraph 93, Act 1897, for "asphaltum and bitumen, not specially provided for, * * * if dried or otherwise advanced in any manner," and not under the provision in section 6 of said act for "all articles manufactured, in whole or in part, not provided for." Gabriel v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 122 Fed. 896; Saacke v. Same, Id. 895.

Asphaltum, from an asphalt lake, holding water mechanically, and so tenaciously that intense heat, with stirring, is necessary for drying it. and which has accordingly been exposed in a vessel to heat from steam pipes, and from steam jets which stirred it, thereby expelling the water, and, incidentally and necessarily, some volatile oils also, is entitled to free entry as "asphaltum * * * dried but not otherwise manipulated or treated," under paragraph 390 of the act of 1894. U. S. v. Trinidad Asphalt Co. (C. C. 1896) 77 Fed. 609.

In the composition of the merchandise, it appears from the record that the original substances employed in the making are different kinds of asphalt or bitumen and that certain chemicals and water are added solely for the purpose of combining the different kinds of asphalt and bitumen and so to perfect the material resulting for use as paving material. Held, the material is not to be classified as a chemical compound or mixture, but rather as asphaltum or bitumen advanced in condition, and as such dutiable under paragraph 90, Act 1909. U. S. v. Central Westrumite Co. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 400.

535. Lithographic stones, not engraved.

536. Litmus, prepared or not prepared.

537. Loadstones.

538. Madder and munjeet, or Indian madder, ground or prepared, and all extracts of.

539. Magnesite, crude or calcined, not purified.

540. Manganese, oxide and ore of.

541. Manna.

542. Manuscripts.

543. Marrow, crude.

544. Marshmallow or althea root, leaves or flowers, natural or unmanufactured.

545. Meats: Fresh beef, veal, mutton, lamb, and pork; bacon and hams; meats of all kinds, prepared or preserved, not specially provided for in this section: Provided, however, That none of the foregoing meats shall be admitted into the United States unless the same is healthful, wholesome and fit for human food and contains no dye, chemical, preservative, or ingredient which renders the same unhealthful, unwholesome or unfit for human food, and unless the same also complies with the rules and regulations made by the Secretary of Agriculture, and that, after entry into the United States in compliance with said rules and regulations, said imported meats shall be deemed and treated as domestic meats within the meaning of and shall be subject to the provisions of the Act of June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and six (Thirty-fourth Statutes at Large, page six hundred and seventy-four), commonly called the Meat Inspection Amendment, and the Act of June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and six, (Thirty-fourth Statutes at Large, page seven hundred and sixty-eight), commonly called the Food and Drugs Act, and that the Secretary of Agriculture be and hereby is authorized to make rules and regulations to carry out the purposes of this paragraph, and that in such rules and regulations the Secretary of Agriculture may prescribe the terms and conditions for the destruction for food purposes of all such meats offered for entry and refused admission into the United States unless the same be exported by the consignee within the time fixed therefor in such rules and regulations.

The provisions of the Meat Inspection Amendment of Act June 30, 1906, c. 3913, 34 Stat. 674, mentioned in this paragraph, were re-enacted and included in the provisions of the similar act of the next following year, Act March 4, 1907, c. 2907, post, § 8681.

The Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, c. 3915, also mentioned in this section is set forth post, §§ 8717-8728.

Notes of Decisions

Beef and mushrooms mixed.—Beef and mushrooms mixed together held not dutiable as meats preserved. See paragraph 385.

Chinese sausages in casing.—The provision for "sausages, Bologna," in Act 1897, par. 655, does not include all sausages in casings; and Chinese sausages in casings, which are not shown to be commercially known as "Bologna sausages," are not classifiable as such. Wing Sing Lung v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 171 Fed. 906, judgment affirmed Wing Sing Lung & Co. v. Same (1910) 180 Fed. 392, 103 C. C. A. 538.

Cooked poultry and game in tins.—Duck meat in tins, some salted and dried, and some packed in oil, is not "poultry * * * dressed," within the meaning of Act 1897, par. 278, but is rather classifiable as "meats of all kinds, prepared or preserved," under paragraph 275. Kwong Yuen Shing v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 177 Fed. 605.

In Act 1897, par. 275, the provision for "meats of all kinds prepared or preserved," includes cooked poultry and game, in tins, and also goose livers prepared as pâté de foie gras. James P. Smith & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 168 Fed. 462.

The meat of ducks, salted, dried, and packed in tins, with or without peanut oil, is dutiable not as poultry dressed, nor as a nonenumerated raw or unmanufactured article, but under paragraph 275, Act 1897, as meats prepared or preserved, and not specially provided for. Kwong Yuen Shing v. U. S. (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 16.

Hams.—These hams have not lost their name or their character by reason of any process to which they were subjected before importation; and the eo nomine provision for hams in paragraph 284, Act 1909, being more specific than that for prepared or preserved meats in paragraph 286, paragraph 284 controls. Neuman & Schwiers Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 64.

Sausages made of blood pudding.—Sausages made of blood pudding, being composed of material closely related to meat in every way, similar in appearance and being prepared for a similar use and being so used, were properly classified for duty, respectively, under paragraph 275, Act 1897, and paragraph 286, Act 1909. Strohmeyer & Arpe Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 399.

546. Medals of gold, silver, or copper, and other articles actually bestowed as trophies or prizes, and received and accepted as honorary distinctions.

Notes of Decisions

Cups.—The "Foxhall" gold and silver cup, having similitude in "material, quality, and texture, and the use to which it may be applied" to a "medal" made of those materials, is free of duty under sections 2499 and 2502, R. S. (1884) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 62.

Necessity of delivery abroad.—Actual manual delivery abroad of an article awarded as an honorary distinction is not a condition precedent to the free admission of that article. American Express Co. v. U. S. (1913) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 490.

Prizes.—Copper medals washed with silver, used for distribution as prizes, but which have not been awarded as trophies, are not entitled to free entry, under Act 1890, as "medals of gold, silver or copper, such as trophies or prizes." U. S. v. McSorley (1895) 65 Fed. 492, 13 C. C. A. 15.

Shotgun.—The provision in paragraph 624, Act 1909, for free entry of "other metallic articles usually bestowed as trophies or prizes" is not limited to such as are ejusdem generis with medals, and a shotgun won in a prize shooting tournament is a trophy or prize within the meaning of the law. American Express Co. v. U. S. (1913) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 490.

547. Milk and cream, including milk or cream preserved or condensed, or sterilized by heating or other processes, and sugar of milk.

548. Mineral salts obtained by evaporation from mineral waters, when accompanied by a duly authenticated certificate and satisfactory proof showing that they are in no way artificially prepared and are only the product of a designated mineral spring.

549. Minerals, crude, or not advanced in value or condition by refining or grinding, or by other process of manufacture, not specially provided for in this section.

Notes of Decisions

1. In general.
2. Granito or terrazo.
3. Marble chips.
4. Mexican onyx.
5. Molybdenite.
6. Natural gas.
7. Polishing stones.
8. Talc sawed into cubes.
9. Tungsten ore.
10. Whetstone blocks.

1. In general.—Crude ore mechanically ground held not free of duty as minerals crude. See paragraph 385.

It has been uniformly held in customs interpretation that the application of processes necessary to produce an article from its native condition and to bring it into a condition that it may be imported, without affecting its per se character, is not regarded either as a manufacturing process or as a process advancing it in value or condition. Hampton, Jr., & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 392.

To exclude minerals from the provisions of paragraph 614, Act 1897, covering "minerals crude and not advanced in value or condition by refining, grinding, or other process of manufacture," it is not essential that the product of such process be given a new name. Myers v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 506.

2. Granito or terrazo.—Granito or terrazo held not free of duty as minerals crude. See paragraph 385.

3. Marble chips.—Marble chips held not dutiable as minerals crude. See paragraph 385.

4. Mexican onyx.—Mexican onyx held not a crude mineral. See paragraph 97.

5. Molybdenite.—Molybdenite, a mineral substance imported in its natural state as freed from the rock or gangue formation in which it is found by crushing the rock or gangue without crushing or changing the condition or formation of the mineral itself and then placing the whole in water when the mineral rises to the surface and is skimmed off, is not dutiable under paragraph 81, Act 1913, as a mineral substance partially manufactured, but is free of duty under paragraph 549 as a mineral not advanced in value or condition, etc. Hampton, Jr., & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 392. See, also, Myers v. Same (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 506.

6. Natural gas.—Natural gas was exempt from duty under paragraph 496, Act 1890, as a "crude bitumen," or paragraph 651, as a "crude mineral, not advanced in value by manufacture," and was not dutiable under section 4 as a raw or unmanufactured article not enumerated. U. S. v. Buffalo Natural Gas Fuel Co. (1899) 19 Sup. Ct. 200, 201, 172 U. S. 339, 43 L. Ed. 469.

7. Polishing stones.—Tam O'Shanter polishing stones held not free of duty as minerals crude. See paragraph 81.

8. Talc sawed into cubes.—Talc sawed into cubes for use in making gas burners and insulators, the sawing being not merely to remove foreign matter and to put the material in shape for transportation, but to give it certain desired dimensions, has been "advanced in value or condition" within the meaning of Act 1897, par. 614. Kraemer & Foster v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 180 Fed. 638.

9. Tungsten ore.—Tungsten ore, the primary extracted product of which is used as a mordant in dyeing cloth and for various other commercial purposes, and another to make high-grade steel, imparting thereto extreme hardness, density, weight, and durability, held free from duty, under section 614, Act 1897, and not dutiable under section 183, which covers "metallic mineral substances in a crude state." O. G. Hempstead & Son v. Thomas (1903) 122 Fed. 538, 59 C. C. A. 342.

10. Whetstone blocks.—Whetstone blocks, of an approximately rectangular shape, which after being quarried have had their projections removed by a process of rough dressing, and which are used in that state, held within the provision for "minerals, crude, or not advanced in value or condition by refining or grinding, or by other process of manufacture," under Act 1897, par. 614. Charles A. Johnson & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 152 Fed. 656.

550. Miners' rescue appliances, designed for emergency use in mines where artificial breathing is necessary in the presence of poisonous gases, to aid in the saving of human life, and miners' safety lamps, and parts, accessories, and appliances for cleaning, repairing, and operating all the foregoing.

551. Models of inventions and of other improvements in the arts, to be used exclusively as models and incapable of any other use.

Notes of Decisions

Models of steamships.—Exact models of steamships of improved design, showing the details of the vessels valued at about $1,000 each, and intended for exhibition in steamship offices, are models of improvements in the art of shipbuilding, and are free of duty, under paragraph 616, Act 1897. Boas v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 470.

Molders' patterns.—The provision in Act 1897, par. 616, for "models of inventions and of other improvements in the arts, including patterns for machinery," is not limited to the class of patterns known as "model patterns," intended to show the working of the thing illustrated, but includes also molders' patterns, which are used as models about which to form sand molds in which castings may be made, and which are fitted for successive use in that way. U. S. v. R. Hoe & Co. (1906) 147 Fed. 201, 77 C. C. A. 427, affirming judgment R. Hoe & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 141 Fed. 488, and writ of certiorari denied (1906) 27 Sup. Ct. 784, 203 U. S. 595, 51 L. Ed. 333.

552. Moss, seaweeds, and vegetable substances, crude or unmanufactured, not otherwise specially provided for in this section.

Notes of Decisions

Birch bark.—Birch bark held not dutiable as a vegetable substance. See paragraph 385.

Crude horseradish roots. — Crude horseradish roots held entitled to free entry as a vegetable substance, unmanufactured, under paragraph 630, Act 1909. U. S. v. Nix & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 145.

A review of the decisions shows that the word "vegetables" has not been employed in tariff acts in a strictly botanical sense, but rather has been applied to vegetables commonly used as food. Horseradish is botanically a vegetable. Its use, however, is not as a food, but as a condiment. It is free of duty under paragraph 630, Act 1909, as a vegetable substance, unmanufactured, not otherwise specially provided for. U. S. v. Wallace (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 142.

Lily buds.—Lily buds held not dutiable as vegetable substances crude. See paragraph 210.

Lily of the valley roots.—Lily of the valley roots are not covered by Act 1894, par. 558, relating to "moss, seaweeds, and vegetable substances," not being vegetable substances in the class of moss and seaweeds. McAllister v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 773.

Nori.—Nori, a seaweed gathered from the ocean and sun-dried, without the addition of any other substance and without being subjected to any other process than spreading it on mats to facilitate drying, is "seaweeds * * * crude or unmanufactured," within the meaning of Act 1897, par. 617. U. S. v. M. Furuya & Co. (C. C. 1910) 176 Fed. 480.

"Not otherwise provided."—In construing provisions of the tariff laws, such as paragraph 558, Act 1894, which provides for "moss, seaweeds, and vegetable substances, crude or unmanufactured, not otherwise specially provided for in this act," the principle of "noscitur a sociis" is to be applied, so as to confine the concluding general words to vegetable substances of the same kind with those specifically enumerated. Dodge v. U. S. (1898) 84 Fed. 449, 28 C. C. A. 152, affirming (C. C. 1896) 77 Fed. 602, and distinguishing Ingersoll v. Magone (1893) 53 Fed. 1008, 4 C. C. A. 150.

Sea grass.—Sea grass, used for making mattresses and unholstery purposes, and which is an entirely different article from sea moss, which is used for food and for medical purposes, and is not known commercially, as sea moss, held not dutiable as such under Act 1897, par. 81, but entitled to free entry under paragraph 617, which covers "moss, seaweeds and vegetable substances, crude, or unmanufactured, not otherwise specially provided for in this act." In re F. W. Myers & Co. (C. C. 1903) 123 Fed. 952.

Sliced beets, kiln-dried.—Sliced beets kiln-dried held not vegetable substances. See paragraph 200.

Vegetable substances in general.—The term "vegetable substances" in paragraph 630, Act 1909, cannot be limited to articles that are strictly ejusdem generis with moss and seaweeds. Reed & Keller v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 95.

553. Myrobolans fruit.

554. Cut nails and cut spikes of iron or steel, horseshoe nails, horseshoe nail rods, hobnails, and all other wrought-iron or steel nails not specially provided for in this section; wire staples, wire nails made of wrought iron or steel, spikes, and horse, mule, or ox shoes, of iron or steel, and cut tacks, brads, or sprigs.

Notes of Decisions

Staples.—Wire in U forms of heavy wire held not dutiable as staples. See paragraph 114.

555. Needles, hand sewing and darning, and needles for shoe machines.

Notes of Decisions

Needlecases.—Paper folders of such a flimsy nature that, unless most carefully handled, their use cannot be long continued without crumpling or breaking, are not of the permanent character ordinarily and commonly associated with the terms "needlebooks" and "needlecases." Merchandise consisting of such folders, containing packages of needles of various sizes, is classifiable on the free list, paragraph 555, Act 1913, as needles, and is not dutiable under paragraph 135 as "needlecases or needlebooks furnished with assortments of needles. * * *" U. S. v. Strauss Bros. & Co. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 498.

Surgical needles.—The provision in Act 1897, par. 620, for "hand sewing" needles, relates to such as are used by persons generally who use needles, and does not include surgical needles. A. J. Woodruff & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 138 Fed. 946.

556. Newspapers and periodicals; but the term "periodicals" as herein used shall be understood to embrace only unbound or paper-covered publications issued within six months of the time of entry, devoted to current literature of the day, or containing current literature as a predominant feature, and issued regularly at stated periods, as weekly, monthly, or quarterly, and bearing the date of issue.

Notes of Decisions

Periodicals.—German novels translated into English and issued in pamphlet form at stated intervals held not free of duty as periodicals. See paragraph 329.

Illustrations for magazine imported separately held not free as periodicals. See paragraph 324.

A pictorial paper, wholly printed in Germany, and imported to be used as a supplement to a paper in New York, is exempt from duty as a periodical, under Act 1890, par. 657. New York Daily News v. U. S. (1895) 65 Fed. 493, 13 C. C. A. 16, reversing judgment In re New York Daily News (C. C. 1894) 61 Fed. 647.

Lithographic fashion prints, forming part of a monthly fashion periodical published abroad, and having a literary part, consisting of notes upon, and a letter concerning, ladies' current fashions, were excepted from duty under the excepting clause of paragraph 562, Act 1894. Richards v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 91 Fed. 516.

The provision for "periodicals" in Act 1883, held to include a periodical publication not devoted at all to current events, but made up of serial stories supplemented by a small quantity of miscellaneous matter. Schmidt v. U. S. (C. C. 1892) 150 Fed. 238.

Periodical publications bound in stiff covers in regular book form (each volume containing several numbers of any such publication) lose their character as periodicals and become dutiable as books under Act 1883. (1885) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 315.

557. Nuts: Marrons, crude; coconuts in the shell and broken coconut meat or copra, not shredded, desiccated, or prepared in any manner; palm nuts and palm-nut kernels.

558. Nux vomica.

559. Oakum.

560. Oil cake.

561. Oils: Birch tar, cajeput, coconut, cod, cod liver, cottonseed, croton, ichthyol, juglandium, palm, palm-kernel, perilla, soya-bean, and olive oil rendered unfit for use as food or for any but mechanical or manufacturing purposes, by such means as shall be satisfactory to the Secretary of the Treasury and under regulations to be prescribed by him; Chinese nut oil, nut oil or oil of nuts not specially provided for in this section; petroleum, crude or refined, and all products obtained from petroleum, including kerosene, benzine, naphtha, gasoline, paraffin, and paraffin oil; and also spermaceti, whale, and other fish oils of American fisheries, and all fish and other products of such fisheries.

Notes of Decisions

1. Albolene.
2. Cocoanut oil.
3. Ichthyol sodium.
4. Isarol.
5. Nucoa butter.
6. Nut oil.
7. Olive oil.
8. Products of American fisheries.
9. Products of petroleum.
10. Sesame oil.

1. Albolene.—Albolene held not a product of petroleum. See paragraph 367.

2. Cocoanut oil.—In Act 1897, par. 626, the provision for "cocoanut oil" includes refined as well as unrefined oil. Fuerst Bros. & Co. v. U. S. (1909) 176 Fed. 95, 100 C. C. A. 25, reversing judgment (C. C. 1908) 166 Fed. 1014.

"Cocoanut oil," in Act 1897, par. 626, is a more specific term than "cocoa butterine," in paragraph 282. Id.

As to certain cocoanut oil of the melting point of 70° to 75° F., which has been purified and rendered suitable for culinary purposes and the manufacture of high-grade soaps, and which is not susceptible of the same uses as cocoabutter, held, that the article is not subject to duty as "cocoa-butterine," under paragraph 282, Act 1897, but free of duty under paragraph 626. U. S. v. Oriental Amer. Co. (C. C. 1904) 129 Fed. 249.

3. Ichthyol sodium.—Inasmuch as, technically and commercially, the term "ichthyol" includes no other ichthyol compounds than ichthyol ammonium, the unqualified enumeration of "ichthyol" in Act 1897, par. 626, should not, in the absence of words indicating an intention to include such compounds, be held to include ichthyol sodium. Merck & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 177 Fed. 482.

4. Isarol.—The importation is a compound obtained by treating crude ichthyol oil with sulphuric acid and neutralizing this with ammonium carbonate. Paragraph 626, Act 1897, is confined to oils, and, so far as it relates to ichthyol, may properly be read, "oils, namely, ichthyol," etc. The particular name by which an ichthyol preparation is known cannot determine the question of fact as to whether it is dutiable under that paragraph as ichthyol oil; whether, in truth, it is such a preparation as retains sufficient characteristics of the ichthyol oil to be within the intent and meaning of Congress in enacting paragraph 626. Is the commodity ichthyol oil, must be the true inquiry, for the paragraph covers all ichthyol oils. The importation here is a product of ichthyol, called isarol. Equally with Merck's ichthyol, it is an ammonium sulphoichthyolate, and as such is an oil within the meaning of paragraph 626. It was entitled to free entry as "oil, ichthyol." Cassett v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 465.

5. Nucoa butter.—Nucoa butter made from cocoanut oil held not exempt as cocoanut oil. See paragraph 232.

6. Nut oil.—So-called nut oil, derived from the fruit of aleurites vernica, of China, is properly subject to classification under paragraph 626, Act 1897, and not under that in paragraph 3 of said act, for "essential oils." Edward Hills, Sons & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 127 Fed. 970.

7. Olive oil.—Certain olive oil found to be edible, and held, therefore, to be excluded from Act 1897, par. 626, relating to olive oil "fit only" for manufacturing or mechanical purposes. Holbrook Mfg. Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 174 Fed. 736.

Where witnesses called for the government were Italians, who testified that the olive oil imported was fit for food, but was of a poor quality, and that it burned the throat, and that it was bought by the poorer class of Italians, and it had a strong, offensive, and rancid odor, and a witness for the importer testified that it was a nonedible oil, unsafe for human consumption, and that it was not manufactured, imported, or adapted for food consumption, it was free, under Act 1897, par. 626, as olive oil for manufacturing or mechanical purposes, "fit only for such use," and not dutiable as olive oil not specially provided for, under paragraph 40 of the act. Oil Seeds Pressing Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 114 Fed. 793.

The result of chemical tests as here shown is inconclusive, and in view of the greater number and experience of the witnesses for the importers as to the appearance, taste, and smell of the oils, and further in view of the fact that the oils here were actually imported and sold as mechanical oils and for use as mechanical oils, the importation must be deemed olive oil for manufacturing or mechanical purposes, worth not more than 60 cents per gallon, and as such it was free of duty under paragraph 626, Act 1897. Sheldon & Co. v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 275.

This importation, it seems, by a marked preponderance of the evidence, consisted of olive oil made of decayed fruit and shipped in a variety of containers, such as petroleum barrels or fresh goatskins; that it was ill smelling and rancid to the taste and was used generally for manufacturing purposes. Held, the oil was not edible, was fit only for manufacturing or mechanical purposes, and was so free of duty under paragraph 626, Act 1897. Holbrook v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 263.

8. Products of American fisheries.—An American corporation imported fish caught in Canadian fresh waters by a Canadian corporation, which in catching the fish used nets which were bought by the former corporation, and leased to the latter for a period covering the life of the nets, and for a sum much less than their value. Held, that the importing corporation "owned" these nets, within paragraph 571, Act 1890, providing for the free entry of "fresh or frozen fish (except salmon), caught in fresh waters * * * with nets or other devices owned by citizens of the United States," and that the fish thus caught were free of duty under said paragraph. Detroit Fish Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 125 Fed. 801.

A corporation consisting of American citizens fitted out a registered American vessel, which was manned with an American crew, and engaged in the business of catching turtles in Central American waters, and canning them aboard the vessel. Held, that this constitutes an American fishery, within Act 1894, par. 568. Downing v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 124 Fed. 107.

Fish caught in a bay on Lake Ontario, in Canadian waters, by citizens of Canada, notwithstanding such citizens were employed by a corporation of New York, are not within Act 1897, par. 555, placing on the free list fish caught in the Great Lakes by citizens of the United States. Lake Ontario Fish Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 551.

Act 1897, par. 626, relating to oils, and putting on the free list, after enumerating a large number of oils, "spermaceti, whale and other fish oils of American fisheries, and all fish and other products of such fisheries," will not be construed to admit free of duty "all fish and other products of American fisheries," since paragraphs 258–261 provide specifically for the duty on such fish. Id.

Though originally caught in American waters, and frozen in Canada, they are still subject to duty, unless identity be regularly proved. Gauthier v. Bell (C. C. 1877) Fed. Cas. No. 5,277.

Whale oil, manufactured by the crew of an American whaler, is not dutiable as the product of "foreign fishing," though purchased and brought into port by persons in a foreign service. U. S. v. Burdett (C. C. 1801) Fed. Cas. No. 14,684.

In all essentials the equipment put in place by the importer in the Canadian waters of Lake Erie, or put in place by the importers' orders, constituted an American fishery, and all the fish there taken were the sole property of the importer and the products of an American fishery. There was no requirement of law as to the showing necessary to be made to entitle these fish to free entry other than that they should be the products of American fisheries. This showing could be made before the board after protest had been filed in due form and in due time. U. S. v. Post Fish Co. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 130.

The American fishing vessel took no part in the fishing operations in question here except to convey from the United States to Newfoundland certain fishing supplies. A portion of the fishing tackle so conveyed was used under the supervision and by employees of an American citizen temporarily at Bonne Bay, Newfoundland; but the fishermen engaged there for service apparently used their own boats and presumably obtained there their supplies. The fish so caught were cured on British soil and shipped to the United States in a British vessel. Held, the importation was not entitled to free entry as the product of American fisheries under paragraph 567, Act 1909. U. S. v. Reading (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 515.

9. Products of petroleum.—Act 1897, par. 626, provides a countervailing duty on "the products of crude petroleum produced in any country which imposes a duty on petroleum or its products exported from the United States." Held, that this is not applicable where the product is manufactured in a country imposing no duty on such products imported from the United States, though the petroleum used originated in a country imposing a duty on American petroleum. U. S. v. Swan & Finch Co. (1909) 169 Fed. 108, 95 C. C. A. 669.

In accordance with the practice in the First Circuit, the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in U. S. v. R. F. Downing & Co. (1906) 146 Fed. 56, 76 C. C. A. 376, with reference to Act 1897, par. 626, as applied to the products of petroleum, followed. U. S. v. F. A. Marsily & Co. (1908) 165 Fed. 186, 91 C. C. A. 220.

The proviso in paragraph 626, Act 1897, providing a countervailing duty on "crude petroleum, or the products of crude petroleum," is not limited to the articles enumerated in the preceding portion of that paragraph, but should be read into every section of the tariff which enumerates a product of petroleum. The special enumeration of "paraffin" in paragraph 633, does not remove that substance from the scope of the proviso. U. S. v. R. F. Downing & Co. (1906) 146 Fed. 56, 76 C. C. A. 376, reversing judgments (C. C. 1904) 135 Fed. 250, and Schoellkopf, Hartford & Hanna Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 139 Fed. 58.

The provision in paragraph 626, Act 1897, for "products of crude petroleum" does not include articles not composed in chief value of petroleum, even though the petroleum predominates in quantity. Id.

Paragraph 626, Act 1897, providing a countervailing duty on "crude petroleum, or the products of crude petroleum, produced in any country which imposes a duty on petroleum or its products exported from the United States," is intended to provide that, when crude petroleum or any of its products is imported from a country which imposes a duty thereon when imported from the United States, it shall pay duty at the rate so imposed by such country on merchandise in the same condition. A product of petroleum is subject to the duty so imposed by the country of manufacture on such product when coming from the United States, rather than to that so imposed on crude petroleum by the country in which the petroleum was produced. If no duty is so imposed on such product by the country in which it is manufactured, it is not liable to the countervailing duty, even though produced from petroleum originating in a country which does impose such a duty thereon. Id.

The clear oily liquid described in the German Pharmacopœia as "Parafinum Liq. Ph.: G.," and consisting of a mixture of the higher fluid members of the paraffine series of hydrocarbons, was entitled to free admission under paragraph 671 of the act of October 1, 1890, as "paraffine," and was not dutiable under the designation, "Products or preparations known as alkalies * * *, distilled oils, * * * and all combinations of the foregoing," contained in paragraph 76. Shoellkopf, Hartford & MacLagan v. U. S. (1896) 71 Fed. 694, 18 C. C. A. 301.

In the interpretation of a statute, whenever possible, effect will be given to all parts of the act, even though to do this enlarges or limits the stricter meaning of some provision in the act, and though paraffin is free of duty, according to one paragraph of the Act of 1897, paraffin oil produced from petroleum must be taken to have been included by intent in paragraph 626 of that act, the proviso to which makes crude petroleum or its products subject to a countervailing duty and to be dutiable under said paragraph 626. Sonneborn Sons v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 443.

10. Sesame oil.—The provision for sesame oil in paragraph 626, Act 1897, held to include ground sesame seed in the form of pulp, from which the oil has not been removed, the article being known commercially as sesame oil. It is immaterial that there is another and more refined product known and dealt in under the same name. F. Zaloom & Sons v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 31.

562. Oleo stearin.
563. Orange and lemon peel, not preserved, candied, or dried.
564. Orchil, or orchil liquid.

Notes of Decisions

Orchil extract.—Orchil extract held not included in Act 1897, par. 628, relating to "orchil, or orchil liquid," because it is a manufactured article. G. Siegle & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 166 Fed. 1015.

565. Ores of gold, silver, or nickel, and nickel matte; ores of the platinum metals; sweepings of gold and silver.

Notes of Decisions

Silver ore, ground.—Silver ore, ground, is not dutiable under the tariff act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 488). (1885) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 148.

Sweepings.—The merchandise is sweepings of silver contained in sawdust, and it is imported so that the silver content may be reclaimed. It falls clearly within paragraph 643, Act 1909, providing free entry for "sweepings of gold and silver." U. S. v. Henderson (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 62.

566. Paper stock, crude, of every description, including all grasses, fibers, rags, waste, including jute, hemp and flax waste, shavings, clippings, old paper, rope ends, waste rope, and waste bagging, and all other waste not specially provided for in this section, including old gunny cloth and old gunny bags, used chiefly for paper making.

Notes of Decisions

Gunny bagging.—Gunny bagging as paper stock. See paragraph 408.

Mill sweepings.—Certain waste of an inferior quality, fit only for paper stock, consisting of mill sweepings, which contain not more than 1 per cent. of wool, that is not of sufficient fiber for commercial purposes, and is not separable from the material with which it is mixed, held not dutiable as waste in part of wool, under Act 1897, par. 362, but within the provision for "paper stock * * * fit only to be converted into paper," in paragraph 632. In re R. F. Downing & Co. (C. C. 1905) 139 Fed. 590.

567. Printing paper (other than paper commercially known as handmade or machine handmade paper, japan paper, and imitation japan paper by whatever name known), unsized, sized, or glued, suitable for the printing of books and newspapers, but not for covers or bindings, not specially provided for in this section, valued at not above 5 cents per pound, decalcomania paper not printed.

This paragraph was amended by Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, § 600, 39 Stat., to read as set forth above. The amendment consisted in changing the figures 2½ to 5.

568. Parchment and vellum.

Notes of Decisions

Cutch.—The importation in question, being an extract of the bark of the mangrove, used for tanning, is classifiable as "cutch," under paragraph 542, Act 1897. U. S. v. Marden (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 153.

569. Paris green and London purple.

570. Pearl, mother of, and shells, not sawed, cut, flaked, polished, or otherwise manufactured, or advanced in value from the natural state.

Notes of Decisions

Shells.—Shells not entitled to free entry as uncut, etc., see paragraph 369.

Shells were imported into the United States, which, before their importation, had their outer layers cleaned off by acid, and their second layers ground off by an emery wheel so as to expose the brilliant interior. They were sold for ornaments, and also used for buttons, handles to pen-knives, etc., without, however, any new or distinctive name or use after such treatment. Held, that such shells were not within the sense of section 2504 of the Revised Statutes, which imposes a duty on manufactures of shells, but that they fell under section 2505, which exempts from duty "shells of every description not manufactured." Hartranft v. Wiegmann (1887) 7 Sup. Ct. 1240, 121 U. C. 609, 30 L. Ed. 1012; Same v. Winters (1887) 7 Sup. Ct. 1244, 121 U. S. 616, 30 L. Ed. 1015.

Shells which have been treated with chloride of lime and washed with water to cleanse them from animal or vegetable matter are entitled to free entry under paragraph 635, Act 1897. While the cleansing may add slightly to their value, they cannot be said to have been advanced in value from their natural state so as to exclude them from such paragraph. Schoenemann v. U. S. (1903) 119 Fed. 584, 56 C. C. A. 104, reversing decree (C. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 842.

571. Personal effects, not merchandise, of citizens of the United States dying in foreign countries.

572. Pewter and britannia metal, old, and fit only to be remanufactured.

573. Philosophical and scientific apparatus, utensils, instruments, and preparations, including bottles and boxes containing the same, specially imported in good faith for the use and by order of any society or institution incorporated or established solely for religious, philosophical, educational, scientific, or literary purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for the use and by order of any college, academy, school, or seminary of learning in the United States, or any State or public library, and not for sale, and articles solely for experimental purposes, when imported by any society or institution of the character herein described, subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe.

Notes of Decisions

Construction in general.—The history of paragraph 650, Act 1909, shows a purpose to regard less the character of the article imported than its intended use. The object was to admit the articles described free of duty when imported by designated institutions in the furtherance of education. U. S. v. Kastor & Bros. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 52.

Absolute alcohol.—So-called "absolute alcohol," manufactured in Germany, showing 198 degrees of proof, imported for the laboratory use of certain colleges, held duty free as a scientific preparation imported in good faith for the use of institutions incorporated for educational and scientific purposes, not intended for sale, under paragraph 677, Act 1890, and not dutiable as alcohol. under paragraphs 329 and 333. In re Kny (C. C. 1893) 57 Fed. 190.

Affidavit.—To entitle an importer to the benefit of paragraph 585, Act 1894, authorizing the free entry of "philosophical and scientific instruments imported for the use of a society incorporated for scientific purposes," the affidavit required by the regulations prescribed by the secretary of the treasury in such cases must be filed before the arrival of the articles, showing that they were imported by order of such institution, and not for sale or distribution; otherwise, the collector is justified in requiring payment of the prescribed duty. Eimer v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 87 Fed. 202.

Certificate of delivery.—Certain scientific apparatus, etc., imported for educational institutions, was claimed to be subject to paragraph 638, Act 1897, exempting such articles from duty when imported in compliance with regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury; but the importers had not filed a certificate of delivery to the institutions within 90 days after entry, as required by such regulations. Held, that that requirement is a reasonable one, and that, the collector, in default of a compliance therewith, properly exacted duty on the apparatus. Eimer & Amend v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 146 Fed. 144.

Educational institutions in general.—A review of the decisions makes clear that in fixing the dutiable or nondutiable status of articles imported by institutions to further educational objects regard should be had not so much to intrinsic character or to use in chief but rather to the actual use for which the particular goods were in fact brought in. This judicial interpretation stands approved by subsequent congressional enactments. The scissors of the importation, marked "Board of Education," and destined to be used in the teaching of sewing in New York City schools, were entitled to free entry under paragraph 650, Act 1909. U. S. v. Kastor & Bros. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 52.

Straw-sewing machines imported for the use of the Boston Trade School for Girls held ruled by U. S. v. Kastor & Bros. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 52, and were entitled to free entry. U. S. v. Durbrow & Hearne Mfg. Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 65.

Hospitals.—A hospital, with incidental educational features, such as the training of nurses and the instruction of medical students, is not an "institution incorporated or established solely for * * * educational * * * purposes," nor a "college, academy, school, or seminary of learning," within paragraph 638, Act 1897; and surgical instruments or appliances imported by such a hospital for its use are not entitled to admission free of duty under said paragraph. Massachusetts General Hospital v. U. S. (1901) 112 Fed. 670, 50 C. C. A. 417.

It is immaterial that the act of incorporation of such hospital did not specifically recognize or provide for its educational features, but that the same were of subsequent growth. U. S. v. Massachusetts General Hospital (C. C. A. 1900) 100 Fed. 932, affirming decree In re Massachusetts General Hospital (C. C. 1899) 95 Fed. 973.

This institution was established for the sole purpose of providing a post graduate course in medicine and surgery for practicing physicians. The hospital was established as an adjunct to the school, no cases being received for treatment except for purposes of instruction. The institution is an educational one. U. S. v. Rheinboldt (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 66.

It being an educational institution, scientific instruments imported for use in the New York Postgraduate Medical School and Hospital were entitled to free entry under paragraph 650, Act 1909. Id.

Medical schools.—The College of Physicians and Surgeons, which is known as the "Medical School of Columbia College," is an "institution" for whose use philosophical and scientific apparatus may be entered free of duty, under paragraph 677, Act 1890. U. S. v. Hensel (C. C. 1896) 72 Fed. 41.

Philosophical and scientific apparatus.—Surveyors' compasses held not philosophical instruments. See paragraph 94.

Whether certain articles shall be classed as "philosophical apparatus" or as "manufactured articles or wares not specially enumerated or provided for in this act," and composed wholly or in part of any metal, is to be determined by ascertaining whether they are used wholly or mainly in carrying on observations and experiments of a philosophical character, or wholly or mainly in the practice of the arts and professions, and, where an instrument is much used for both purposes, it is a question for the jury to determine by the preponderance of use. Robertson v. Oelschlaeger (1890) 11 Sup. Ct. 148, 137 U. S. 436, 34 L. Ed. 744.

Paragraph 585 of the tariff act of 1894, which permits the free importation of "philosophical and scientific apparatus, utensils, instruments, and preparations" for certain uses, among others for the use of institutions incorporated or established for educational or scientific purposes, is entitled to a liberal construction, the exemption having in view the highest interests of the public, and being one which has been made, in some terms, in every customs act. The addition in the later statutes of the word "scientific" to the word "philosophical," which was used alone in the earlier enactments, must also be held, under general rules of construction, to have broadened the exemption. Surgical instruments, designed and adapted for use in practical surgery, are scientific instruments, and within the exemption, when specially imported in good faith by a general hospital, maintained, among others, for educational purposes, for use in its clinics and training school for nurses. U. S. v. Massachusetts General Hospital (1900) 100 Fed. 932, 41 C. C. A. 114, affirming decree In re Massachusetts General Hospital (C. C. 1899) 95 Fed. 973.

The mere fact that imported articles were designed for use by physicians and surgeons was not sufficient to bring them within the category of "scientific instruments," admissible free under Act 1890. U. S. v. Presbyterian Hospital (1896) 71 Fed. 866, 18 C. C. A. 338.

Museum or preparation jars held admissible free of duty. O. G. Hempstead & Son v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 122 Fed. 752.

Surgical scissors held admissible free of duty. Id.

Microscopes and a movable object table held to be "philosophical and scientific apparatus," within the meaning of paragraph 677, Act 1890. CONTRA, however, as to a microscope case imported without a microscope. U. S. v. Hensel (C. C. 1896) 72 Fed. 41.

A microscope imported by a physician or surgeon who swears that it is for use in his laboratory, of which he is the instructor (being evidently a laboratory for clinical purposes), is to be regarded as imported for the use of an "institution," within paragraph 677, Act 1890. But a microscope imported by one who swears that he is to be instructor of a class of histology at Greenville, in the state of South Carolina, is not to be so regarded, in the absence of evidence to show that such a class is in existence. Id.

Where descriptive words used in the tariff acts are commercial terms, they are to be construed in the sense in which they are used in commerce; and since at the time of the passage of Act of 1883 there was a class of articles defined and known in the branch of commerce to which they belonged as philosophical instruments, all articles within that class are dutiable under the trade name, as used in said act. Fox v. Cadwalader (C. C. 1889) 42 Fed. 209.

Anemometers, hygrometers, Ruhmkorf coils, barometers, stereopticons, galvanometers, Geissler tubes, Grenat batteries, and radiometers, held to be dutiable, as "philosophical apparatus and instruments," at the rate of 35 per cent. ad valorem. Manasse v. Spalding (C. C. 1885) 24 Fed. 86.

An iron cylinder containing sulphurous acid indispensable in keeping its contents in the safe and proper way to make contents available for scientific instruction held scientific apparatus, and as such free of duty. U. S. v. Wyman & Co. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 440.

An instrument designed for the reproduction of artists' models, statuary, and decorative architecture, imported for the purpose of being temporarily exhibited as a philosophical or scientific apparatus for the promotion of industry in the United States, and to be exported within six months after its importation, may fairly be regarded as a "philosophical or scientific apparatus" within the meaning of paragraph 701 of the tariff act of July 24, 1897 (30 Stat. 203), and is entitled to be admitted free of duty. (1902) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 28.

574. Phosphates, crude.

575. Phosphorus.

576. Photographic and moving-picture films, sensitized but not exposed or developed.

577. Plants, trees, shrubs, roots, seed cane, and seeds, imported by the Department of Agriculture or the United States Botanic Garden.

578. Platinum, unmanufactured or in ingots, bars, plates, sheets, wire, sponge, or scrap, and vases, retorts, and other apparatus, vessels, and parts thereof, composed of platinum, for chemical uses.

Notes of Decisions

Substitute for platinum wire.—Substitute for platinum wire held not platinum in wire. General Electric Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 398.

579. Plumbago.

580. Potash: Crude, or "black salts"; carbonate of; cyanide of; sulphate of; hydrate of, when not containing more than 15 per centum of caustic soda; nitrate of, or saltpeter, crude; and muriate of.

Notes of Decisions

Refined carbonate of potash.—Refined carbonate of potash was entitled to free entry as "potash, * * * carbonate of," under paragraph 595, Act 1894, and was not subject to duty under paragraph 60, as within the description "all chemical compounds and salts not specially provided for in this act." U. S. v. Giese (1897) 83 Fed. 692, 28 C. C. A. 380, affirming decree (C. C. 1897) 78 Fed. 805.

The enumeration, in paragraph 595, Act 1894, of "potash, crude, carbonate of, or black salts," includes the three articles, crude potash, carbonate of potash, and black salts; and carbonate of potash, from which impurities have been removed by leeching, is accordingly entitled to free entry. U. S. v. Giese (C. C. 1897) 78 Fed. 805, judgment reversed (1897) 83 Fed. 692, 28 C. C. A. 380.

Saltpeter.—Saltpeter, known in commerce as "crude saltpeter," held entitled to free entry as such, though partly manufactured. Act 1832. Farnham v. Bancroft (C. C. 1840) Fed. Cas. No. 4,671.

Sulphate of potash.—In relation to each other, paragraph 70, Act 1883, is general, and paragraph 505 is specific, as differentiating from the larger class of articles, denominated "sulphate of potash," the smaller portion "expressly used as manure." Schultz v. Cadwalader (C. C. 1890) 43 Fed. 290, judgment reversed Cadwalader v. Shultz (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 1143, 154 U. S. 496, 38 L. Ed. 1082.

581. Potatoes, and potatoes dried, desiccated, or otherwise prepared, not specially provided for in this section: Provided, That any of the foregoing specified articles shall be subject to a duty of 10 per centum ad valorem when imported directly or indirectly from a country, dependency, or other subdivision of government which imposes a duty on such articles imported from the United States.

Notes of Decisions

Potatoes.—Potato ground meal or flour is produced from potatoes only, and contains the entire and chemically unaltered elements of which the constituent potatoes themselves were composed. It has not acquired a new name, use, or character, and serves such culinary purposes as potatoes themselves. It is potatoes, prepared, and falls within the provisions of paragraph 581, Act 1913. Stein, Hirsch & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 154.

582. Professional books, implements, instruments, and tools of trade, occupation, or employment in the actual possession of persons emigrating to the United States owned and used by them abroad; but this exemption shall not be construed to include machinery or other articles imported for use in any manufacturing establishment, or for any other person or persons, or for sale, nor shall it be construed to include theatrical scenery, properties, and apparel; but such articles brought by proprietors or managers of theatrical exhibitions arriving from abroad, for temporary use by them in such exhibitions, and not for any other person, and not for sale, and which have been used by them abroad, shall be admitted free of duty under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; but bonds shall be given for the payment to the United States of such duties as may be imposed by law upon any and all such articles as shall not be exported within six months after such importation: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, extend such period for a further term of six months in case application shall be made therefor.

Notes of Decisions

Actual possession.—Articles that do not arrive in the United States at the same time or in the same vessel with the importer are not in his "actual possession." Rosenfeld v. U. S. (1895) 66 Fed. 303, 13 C. C. A. 450.

Decision of the board of general appraisers sustaining the collector in refusing to admit performing horses and dogs free, under paragraph 686, Act 1890, as "tools of trade," must be affirmed, where the only evidence that the animals were in the actual possession of the importer at the time of importation consists of a vague statement of the broker's clerk that the importer came directly to the broker's office on the arrival of the vessel, though he did not know whether he came on the same vessel with the animals or not, and the importer fails to produce further evidence, though given an opportunity to do so by the board. Barrett v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 206.

Articles properly classifiable as implements of occupation, which arrived some time after the owner by a different ship, because the ship in which he came refused to carry them, were not entitled to free entry, under paragraph 686, Act 1890, which provides for free admission of implements of occupation "in the actual possession at the time of persons arriving in the United States." Sandow v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 84 Fed. 146.

Failure to export articles admitted for temporary purposes.—Theatrical costumes admitted free, under bond, for temporary use, pursuant to paragraph 596 of the act of 1894, are subject, if not re-exported at the end of the bonded period, to the duties prevailing at the time of importation, though a new law, imposing different rates, has gone into effect in the meantime. U. S. v. Russell (1898) 84 Fed. 878, 28 C. C. A. 552, reversing Russell v. U. S. (C. C. 1897) 78 Fed. 808.

Glove machines.—A glove manufacturer imported four machines used in the manufacture of gloves, which he himself, his father, and his two brothers had worked in Germany, intending to transplant his business to the United States, and to manufacture gloves in the same way. Held, that all the machines were entitled to entry free of duty as "tools of trade," under Act 1890, par. 686. In re Lindner (C. C. 1894) 66 Fed. 723.

Persons emigrating.—A citizen of the United States after residence in another country is not, upon returning, within the meaning of paragraph 582, Act 1913. Newton v. U. S. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 503.

By changing the language of this paragraph from "persons arriving," in earlier tariff laws, to "persons emigrating," in later ones, Congress evidently intended to narrow the class of persons who might claim under it. Id.

Snakes.—Snakes brought into the country by a snake charmer purely for use in exhibitions, and not for sale, held not dutiable as "live animals not specially provided for," but are free of duty, under Act 1890, par. 686, as instruments of her trade. U. S. v. Magnon (1895) 71 Fed. 293, 18 C. C. A. 43, affirming judgment Magnon v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 151.

Steam pump and boring apparatus.—A steam pump and boring apparatus, used in deep prospecting for oil and coal, with connecting iron tubes, etc., brought into this country by a coal and petroleum seeker for the purpose of pursuing his profession here, do not come within the meaning and intent of the clause in the act of 1883, exempting from duty "implements, instruments, and tools of trade, occupation, or employment of persons arriving in the United States," and should not be admitted free. (1887) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 538.

583. Pulu.

584. Quinia, sulphate of, and all alkaloids or salts of cinchona bark.

Notes of Decisions

Euquinine.—In Act 1897, par. 647, the provision for "salts of cinchona bark" includes derivatives of cinchona bark which preserved its essential medicinal element; and euquinine, which is such a preparation, though not chemically a salt, is within said provision. U. S. v. Merck & Co. (1909) 168 Fed. 244, 94 C. C. A. 74.

585. Radium and salts of, radioactive substitutes, selenium and salts of.

586. Rags, not otherwise specially provided for in this section.

Notes of Decisions

Rags.—Secondhand jute bagging held not classifiable as rags. See paragraph 384.

Held, that the provision for "rags" in paragraph 648, Act 1897, includes coarse pieces of jute bagging which are in their condition as torn from cotton bales, and are not sufficiently large and otherwise suitable for other use than as mere rags in stuffing and as paper stock. Train-Smith Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 113.

The importation consisted of small pieces of gunny bagging packed in bales, and appropriate samples of the merchandise were exhibited. The proper classification of these goods could be ascertained without expert knowledge on an inspection of them; and the collector's classification should not be taken as conclusive. The goods were rags and as such entitled to free entry under the tariff act of 1897. Shallus v. U. S. (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 456. See, also, Krauth v. Same (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 178; Krusi v. Same (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 168.

587. Railway bars, made of iron or steel, and railway bars made in part of steel, T rails, and punched iron or steel flat rails.

Notes of Decisions

Steel rails.—Steel rails, which are new, but by reason of defects are depreciated in value, but which have not lost their character or identity as rails, held not within the provision in paragraph 122, Act 1897, for "scrap steel * * * fit only to be remanufactured," but dutiable as "rails," under paragraph 130, even though they may be intended to be used as scrap iron. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. McCall (C. C. 1904) 147 Fed. 925.

588. Rennets, raw or prepared.
589. Rye and rye flour.
590. Sago, crude, and sago flour.

Notes of Decisions

Sago flour.—Sago flour held entitled to free entry under paragraph 652, Act 1897, as "sago, crude," and not dutiable under paragraph 285 as "starch," or under paragraph 20 as a drug, or under section 6, covering raw or unmanufactured articles not otherwise provided for. Littlejohn v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 119 Fed. 483.

591. Salicin.
592. Salep, or salop.
593. Salt.
594. Santonin, and its combinations with acids not subject to duty under this section.
595. Seeds: Cardamom, cauliflower, celery, coriander, cotton, cummin, fennel, fenugreek, hemp, hoarhound, mangelwurzel, mustard, rape, Saint John's bread or bean, sorghum, sugar beet, and sugar cane for seed; bulbs and bulbous roots, not edible and not otherwise provided for in this section; all flower and grass seeds; coniferous evergreen seedlings; all the foregoing not specially provided for in this section.

All mature mother flowering bulbs imported exclusively for propagating purposes were to be admitted free of duty by a proviso annexed to paragraph 210 of Schedule G of this section, ante.

Notes of Decisions

Beans and lentils.—Beans and lentils in a dry state held not dutiable as seeds. See paragraph 197.

Canary seed.—Canary seed held not dutiable as grass seed. See paragraph 212.

Coriander seed. — Coriander seed should be classified under Act 1883 as "seeds, aromatic, which are not edible," etc. (1887) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 75.

Garden seed.—Beet and cabbage seed are "garden seed," and subject to a 20 per cent. ad valorem duty under R. S. § 2502, and turnip and mangel-wurzel seed are field seed, and not garden seed, and are exempt from duty under the "free list" in Id. § 2503. Ferry v. Livingston (1885) 6 Sup. Ct. 175, 115 U. S. 542, 29 L. Ed. 489.

Since Act 1883 such variety of celery seed as is not intended to be sown or planted to raise celery to be consumed by man is not medicinal seed, but an aromatic seed, is not edible, is in a crude state, and not advanced in value or condition by refining or grinding, or by other process of manufacture, is not dutiable at 20 per centum ad valorem as "garden seed," under the provision for "garden seeds, except seed of the sugar beet" in Schedule N, but is free as "seed," under the provision for "seeds" in the free list. Clay v. Magone (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 230.

Mustard, caraway, cardamon, and fenugreek held dutiable under provision for "garden seed and all other seeds not otherwise provided for." Boving v. Lawrence (C. C. 1850) Fed. Cas. No. 1,712.

The evidence here, while not ample, is sufficient to support the finding that the importation was not garden celery seed, but celery seed of the aromatic kind, used commonly in the drug trade and as such was free of duty. U. S. v. Squibb & Sons (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 353.

Millet seed.—Millet seed, not in its natural state, but peeled, having the outer hull removed, and which will not germinate, used for making soup, and also for bird food, is not a "seed" within Act 1883, exempting "seeds of all kinds, except medicinal seeds, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act." Nordlinger v. Robertson (C. C. 1887) 33 Fed. 241.

St. John's bread.—The locust pods had been chopped into coarse pieces, the pith and seed being indiscriminately mixed together, but relatively few of the seed being broken in the process and nothing being taken away. The importation is accordingly not to be deemed a manufacture, but rather as by its collective name it is designated "St. John's bread." It was entitled to free entry. U. S. v. Winter & Smillie (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 392.

596. Sheep dip.

Notes of Decisions

Sheep dip.—In Act 1897, par. 657, providing for sheep dips, except "compounds or preparations that can be used for other purposes," the application of this exception is not to be determined by the rule of chief or predominant use of an article as sheep dip; and Cannon's dip, a preparation advertised as fit for various other purposes, and presumably having commercial value for such purposes, is not covered by the paragraph. Moody v. Patterson (C. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 830.

Thymo-cresol, a sheep dip which is used also as a disinfectant and otherwise, is, by reason of such other uses, excluded from the provision for "sheep dip, not including compounds or preparations that can be used for other purposes," in Act 1897, par. 657. Shallus v. Stone (C. C. 1906) 150 Fed. 605.

Act 1897, par. 657, which places on the free list "sheep dip not including compounds that can be used for other purposes," permits the free entry of any preparation for sheep dipping, which is in a commercial sense adapted to, and usually and generally employed for, that purpose only; but not of a compound which may be used, and is in fact extensively used, for other purposes. Wyman v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 118 Fed. 202.

The article known as "Cooper's sheep dipping powder" held dutiable at 50 per cent. ad valorem, under the act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 494). (1887) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 552.

597. Shotgun barrels, in single tubes, forged, rough bored.

Notes of Decisions

Gun barrels.—Certain gun barrels, made under the Whitworth patent process, and shown to have been subjected to a hammering process, are held to be "forged," and to be free of duty as "shotgun barrels, forged, rough bored," under Act 1894, par. 614. U. S. v. Baldwin (C. C. 1899) 125 Fed. 156.

598. Shrimps, lobsters, and other shellfish.

Notes of Decisions

Escargots or edible snails.—Escargots or edible snails held not free of duty as shell fish. See paragraph 385.

Oysters.—Shellfish, such as oysters, Chinese abelones, etc., when prepared by drying or pickling, are entitled to free entry under the free list, sundries, in the act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 521). (1889) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 401.

599. Silk cocoons and silk waste.

Notes of Decisions

Cocoons.—Paragraph 661, Act 1897, enumerating "silk cocoons and silk waste," includes those articles only when not manufactured at all. Fawcett v. U. S. (1907) 154 Fed. 1003, 83 C. C. A. 197, affirming judgment (C. C. 1906) 116 Fed. 83.

Silk waste.—Combed silk that has been caught in the machines held not free of duty as silk waste. See paragraph 311.

Silk organzine held not free of duty as silk waste. See paragraph 313.

600. Silk, raw, in skeins reeled from the cocoon, or rereeled, but not wound, doubled, twisted, or advanced in manufacture in any way.

Notes of Decisions

Raw tussah silk.—Raw tussah silk, in the same condition as when reeled from cocoons, except that it has been transferred from the large reels on which it was taken from the cocoons to smaller reels, the result of this process not being any change in the condition of the silk other than to adapt the skeins thus produced to American spinning machines, held not dutiable as "silk partially manufactured from cocoons," under paragraph 384, Act 1897, but to be free of duty under paragraph 660, as "silk raw, or as reeled from the cocoon, but not * * * advanced in any way." U. S. v. Stewart (C. C. 1904) 133 Fed. 811.

Singles.—In construing the provision in Act 1897, par. 660, held: (1) That the provision does not cover any form of raw silk advanced beyond the condition of skeins; (2) that silk known as "singles" or "silk on tubes," which has been wound from the skeins onto tubes, the effect of this process being to advance the silk a stage in preparation for its ultimate use, has been "advanced in manufacture"; (3) that silk in this form is not free of duty under this provision. Klots v. U. S. (1905) 139 Fed. 606, 71 C. C. A. 590, affirming judgment U. S. v. Klotz (C. C. 1904) 133 Fed. 808.

601. Silkworm eggs.

602. Skeletons and other preparations of anatomy.

603. Skins of hares, rabbits, dogs, goats, and sheep, undressed.

Notes of Decisions

Cabretta skins.—Cabretta skins are "sheepskins" within Act 1897, par. 664, relating to raw skins "except sheepskins with the wool on," and the growth thereon is subject to duty, as provided in paragraph 360, for "wools on the skin." Lawrence Johnson & Co. v. U. S. (1906) 145 Fed. 1022, 74 C. C. A. 322, affirming judgment (C. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 116.

Mocha whitehead sheepskins.—Mocha whitehead sheepskins held not dutiable as skins. See paragraph 650.

604. Skins of all kinds, raw, and hides not specially provided for in this section.

Notes of Decisions

Angora goatskins.—Skins from Cape of Good Hope, taken from goats which are a cross between Cape of Good Hope and Angora goats, and commercially known as "Cape Angoras," imported with the hair attached, which hair is only used for mixing with mortar and is comparatively valueless, are improperly assessed under Act 1890, as class 2 mohair, but are free, under paragraph 605 of said act, as skins. Keen Sutterle Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 107 Fed. 263.

East India buffalo.—The term "hides of cattle," in Act 1897, par. 437, is not used in a commercial sense, but according to the ordinary dictionary meaning of the words, and refers to the hides of domesticated animals of the bovine species, including those of the East Indian buffalo. Schmoll v. U. S. (1907) 157 Fed. 1005, 85 C. C. A. 679, affirming judgment U. S. v. Schmoll (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 734, and writ of certiorari denied (1908) 28 Sup. Ct. 758, 209 U. S. 548, 52 L. Ed. 920.

Lambskins.—Lambskins cannot be deemed sheepskins, and the merchandise was entitled to free entry whether classified under either paragraph 574 or 676, Act 1909. Goat & Sheepskin Import Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 178.

Mocha sheepskins.—A growth on skins of Mocha sheep imported from Arabia, which is commercially known, designated, and dealt in as Mocha hair, having none of the characteristics of wool, and which would not be accepted by dealers therein as a good delivery of wool, held not dutiable under Act 1897, par. 360, as wool on the skin, but entitled to free entry under paragraph 664, placing on the free list "skins of all kinds, raw (except sheepskins with the wool on), and hides not specially provided for in this act." Goat & Sheepskin Import Co. v. U. S. (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 634, 635, 206 U. S. 194, 51 L. Ed. 1022, reversing judgment (1906) 145 Fed. 1022, 74 C. C. A. 82.

Mud buffalo.—The hide of the mud buffalo of the Straits Settlements, an animal killed in the chase, held not within the provision for "hides of cattle" in Act 1897, par. 437, but free of duty under paragraph 664, covering "hides not specially provided for." U. S. v. Winter & Smillie (1904) 134 Fed. 841, 67 C. C. A. 437.

Singapore buffaloes are not "cattle," because they are not domesticated, and their hides are therefore not within the provision for hides of "cattle," in Act 1897, par. 437. U. S. v. Wadleigh (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 169, judgment affirmed (1910) 178 Fed. 1007, 101 C. C. A. 666.

605. Soda, arseniate of, cyanide of, sulphate of, crude, or salt cake and niter cake, soda ash, silicate of, nitrate of, or cubic nitrate.

606. Soya beans.

Notes of Decisions

Soya beans.—Soya beans, cooked and salted, but not enough to so change them as to prevent their identification as soya beans, and packed in tins, jars, bottles, or similar packages, do not thereby lose their status as soya beans, and are more specifically classified on the free list, paragraph 606, Act 1913, as "soya beans" than under paragraph 199 as "beans, * * * prepared or preserved, or contained in tins, jars, bottles, or similar packages." Brown & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 415.

607. Specimens of natural history, botany, and mineralogy, when imported for scientific public collections, and not for sale.

608. Spunk.

609. Spurs and stilts used in the manufacture of earthen, porcelain, and stone ware.

610. Stamps: Foreign postage or revenue stamps, canceled or uncanceled, and foreign government stamped post cards bearing no other printing than the official imprint thereon.

611. Statuary and casts of sculpture for use as models or for art educational purposes only; regalia and gems, where specially imported in good faith for the use and by order of any society incorporated or established solely for religious, philosophical, educational, scientific, or literary purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for the use and by order of any college, academy, school, seminary of learning, orphan asylum, or public hospital in the United States, or any State or public library, and not for sale, subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe; but the term "regalia" as herein used shall be held to embrace only such insignia of rank or office or emblems as may be worn upon the person or borne in the hand during public exercises of the society or institution, and shall not include articles of furniture or fixtures, or of regular wearing apparel, nor personal property of individuals.

Notes of Decisions

Casts of sculpture.—Figures representing religious subjects held not free of duty as casts of sculpture. See paragraph 369.

The omission from Act 1897, par. 638, of the provisions of prior tariff acts for the free entry of casts, was not intended to prevent the free entry of such casts as also come within the designation of "casts of sculpture," under paragraph 649. Benziger v. U. S. (1904) 24 Sup. Ct. 189, 192 U. S. 38, 48 L. Ed. 331, reversing judgment (1902) 113 Fed. 1016, 51 C. C. A. 587.

Plaster casts of clay models, though painted and gilded and produced in unlimited quantities, are "casts of sculpture," which, under Act 1897, par. 649, are entitled to free entry where specially imported, in good faith, for the use and by the order of any society incorporated or established solely for religious, philosophical, scientific, educational, or literary purposes. Id.

A marble statute is a specimen of sculpture, within the meaning of paragraph 649, Act 1897, covering "specimens or casts of sculpture." Sibbel v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 124 Fed. 105.

Regulations as to regalia.—The Secretary of the Treasury is not empowered to abridge the right of free entry of the articles covered by Act 1897, par. 649, relating to regalia, etc. Siegman & Weil v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 141 Fed. 491.

Proof that certain imported regalia was entitled to admission under Act 1897, par. 649, was not produced at the time of entry as required by the customs regulations, but was offered the collector before he had liquidated the entry. Held, that free entry should have been allowed by the collector. Id.

Stained glass windows.—Stained glass windows held not to come within the terms of this paragraph. See paragraph 95.

612. Steel engraved forms for bonds, debentures, stock certificates, negotiable receipts, notes and other securities; and engraved steel plates, dies and rolls, suitable for use in engraving or printing bonds, stock certificates or other securities.

613. Steel ingots, cogged ingots, blooms and slabs, die blocks or blanks, and billets, if made by the Bessemer, Siemens-Martin, open-hearth or similar processes, not containing alloy, such as nickel, cobalt, vanadium, chromium, tungsten, or wolfram, molybdenum, titanium, iridium, uranium, tantalum, boron, and similar alloys.

614. Stone and sand: Burrstone in blocks, rough or unmanufactured; rotten stone, tripoli, and sand, crude or manufactured; cliff stone, freestone, granite, sandstone, and limestone, unmanufactured, and not suitable for use as monumental or building stone; all of the foregoing not specially provided for in this section.

Notes of Decisions

Corundum ore.—In Act 1897, par. 671, relating to "sand, crude or manufactured," the term "sand" is inapplicable to any metalliferous mineral, though it be in comminuted fragments; and corundum ore, being a mineral of this character, is not, when ground, classible as "sand, * * * manufactured." F. W. Myers & Co. v. U. S. (1908) 163 Fed. 53, 89 C. C. A. 284, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 155 Fed. 502.

Crude sand.—Held that, under Act 1897, par. 671, relating to "sand, crude or manufactured," "crude," sand is such as is found in nature, and "manufactured" sand is, though manufactured substantially the same as crude sand; and pulverized corundum, which is not produced from crude sand, is therefore not sand of either kind within the meaning of the act. F. W. Myers & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 155 Fed. 502, judgment affirmed (1908) 163 Fed. 53, 89 C. C. A. 284.

Fire sand.—The merchandise here is made by combining approximately 60 parts of crushed quartz with 30 parts of coke, 1 part of salt, and 10 parts of sawdust. The term "manufactured sand," paragraph 683, Act 1909, relates to material composed of common or crude sand, and cannot be taken to include this merchandise. Henderson & Hall v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 327. See, also, Myers v. Same (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 506.

615. Strontia, oxide of, protoxide of strontian, and strontianite or mineral carbonate of strontia.

616. Strychnia or strychnine, and its combinations with acids not subject to duty under this section.

617. Sulphur in any form, brimstone, and sulphur ore as pyrites, or sulphuret of iron in its natural state, containing in excess of 25 per centum of sulphur.

Notes of Decisions

Crocus.—Crocus held not dutiable as dross residuum from burnt pyrites. See paragraph 63.

"Crude."—"Crude" refers commonly to substances or articles in a condition unfit for the ultimate purpose or use for which they are intended. Newhall & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 134.

Sulphur.—The sulphur of the importation is from Japan. It is expelled by volcanic force from geysers, is drawn off in conduits, and when cooled is broken into various shapes and placed in sacks for transportation. This sulphur, very nearly pure, cannot be said to have been refined; nor is it crude. It falls within the free entry paragraphs of Acts 1897 and 1909, as sulphur not otherwise provided for. Newhall & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 134.

Sublimation of sulphur is the artificial distillation thereof, in the course of which the sulphur content of the article distilled is, after evaporation, deposited, collected, and formed according to the commercial or other uses for which it may be designed. Id.

618. Sumac, ground or unground.

619. Swine, cattle, sheep, and all other domestic live animals suitable for human food not otherwise provided for in this section.

620. Tagua nuts.

621. Talcum, steatite, and French chalk, crude and unground.

622. Tallow.

Notes of Decisions

Stearine.—Stearine is not to be classed as "tallow," but as a "manufacture of tallow," and as such is subject to a duty of 25 per cent. under R. S. § 2516. Fairbanks v. Spaulding (C. C. 1884) 19 Fed. 416.

623. Tamarinds.

Notes of Decisions

Tamarinds.—It appears that "tamarinds" as a commercial designation has been accepted for a number of years in the administration of our tariff laws, and having been incorporated in Act 1909, it is to be inferred the interpretation so established was there adhered to. The addition of the words "packed in molasses" will not suffice to change the classification. The importation was entitled to free entry. U. S. v. John Duncan's Sons (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 380.

624. Tanning material: Extracts of quebracho, and of hemlock bark; extracts of oak and chestnut and other barks and woods other than dyewoods such as are commonly used for tanning not specially provided for in this section; nuts and nutgalls and woods used expressly for dyeing or tanning, whether or not advanced in value or condition by shredding, grinding, chipping, crushing, or any other process; and articles in a crude state used in dyeing or tanning; all the foregoing not containing alcohol and not specially provided for in this section.

Notes of Decisions

Chrome alum.—The provision for articles in a "crude state," in Act 1897, par 482, does not include chrome alum, which is removed from its crude state of a paste by a crystalizing process, in which it is freed from incidental impurities. Kuttroff, Pickhardt & Co. v. U. S. (1909) 169 Fed. 283, 94 C. C. A. 559.

"Crude article."—Though an article may have been processed, if, as a matter of fact, it must be subjected to some additional process to fit it for its chief or only use, it is, so far as that use is concerned, a crude article. U. S. v. Danker & Marston (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 522. See, also, Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 822.

Gum tragasol.—Gum tragasol is an article in a "crude" state used in dyeing; it is not a vegetable extract for dyeing, coloring, staining, or tanning. It was free of duty under paragraph 482, Act 1897, and paragraph 499, Act 1909. U. S. v. Danker & Marston (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 522.

Hydroxide of chrome.—Hydroxide of chrome, as here imported, in the state of its first production, unrefined and unfit for use for dyeing or tanning without being subjected to refining processes, was not dutiable as a chemical compound under either the tariff act of 1897 or that of 1909, but under each act was free of duty as an article in a crude state used in dyeing or tanning not specially provided for. U. S. v. Continental Color & Chemical Co. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 165.

Lentiscum.—So-called lentiscum or lentiscus, consisting of the leaves or stems of the pistacia lentiscus, or mastic tree, ground or crushed to a finely powdered condition, is held to be a crude article, and to be within paragraph 482, Act 1897. Leber & Meyer v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 135 Fed. 243.

Zinc dust.—Zinc dust, an article used in dyeing, which is crude as a metal, but not as a mineral, held not included in the provision in paragraph 183, Act 1897, for "metallic mineral substances in a crude state, * * * not specially provided for," but free of duty under paragraph 482, covering "articles in a crude state used in dyeing or tanning not specially provided for." U. S. v. Klipstein (C. C. 1901) 123 Fed. 996.

625. Tapioca, tapioca flour, cassava or cassady.

Notes of Decisions

Tapioca flour.—The general words, "preparations * * * fit for use as starch," are insufficient to show that an article fit for such use, but which is specially named on the free list, is "otherwise specially provided for" so as to prevent its exemption from duty. Chew Hing Lung & Co. v. Wise (1900) 20 Sup. Ct. 320, 323, 176 U. S. 156, 44 L. Ed. 412, reversing judgment Wise v. Chew Hing Lung (1897) 83 Fed. 162, 27 C. C. A. 494.

Tapioca flour, being one of the three forms of tapioca known to commerce, is entitled to free entry under Act 1890, par. 730, as tapioca, even if it should be deemed fit for use as starch, so that, if not named on the free list, it would have been dutiable under paragraph 323, as a preparation fit for use as starch. Id.

Tapioca flour, which is commercially known as "tapioca," and is used mainly by calico printers and carpet manufacturers for thickening colors, and which, though chemically a starch, is not adapted to commercial use as starch, belongs in the free list, as "tapioca," under paragraph 730, Act 1890, and is not dutiable as a "preparation * * * fit for use as starch," under paragraph 323. In re Townsend (1893) 56 Fed. 222, 5 C. C. A. 488.

626. Tar and pitch of wood.

627. Tea not specially provided for in this section, and tea plants: Provided, That the cans, boxes, or other containers of tea packed in packages of less than five pounds each shall be dutiable at the rate chargeable thereon if imported empty: Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to repeal or impair the provisions of an Act entitled "An Act to prevent the importation of impure and unwholesome tea," approved March second, eighteen hundred and ninety-seven, and any Act amendatory thereof.

Act March 2, 1897, c. 358, to prevent the importation of impure and unwholesome tea, mentioned in this paragraph, is set forth post, §§ 8786–8796.

Act June 13, 1898, c. 448, § 50, 30 Stat. 470, which imposed a duty upon tea of ten cents a pound,' was repealed by Act April 12, 1902, c. 500, § 10, 32 Stat. 99, and tea was included in the Free List in the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 1, par. 691, 36 Stat. 80, with a proviso similar to that annexed to this paragraph.

Notes of Decisions

Bohea tea.—"Bohea tea," in the sense of the revenue laws, means the article known as such in the usage of trade, and scientific classifications are not to be resorted to for the definition of those words. Two Hundred Chests of Tea (1824) 22 U. S. (9 Wheat.) 430, 6 L. Ed. 128.

Containers.—Paragraph 627, Act 1913, levying duty upon "cans, boxes, or other containers of tea packed in packages of less than five pounds," does not levy duty upon the immediate containers of tea in less than 5-pound packages. The provision is relative in its terms and does not apply to immediate containers. Wright & Graham Co. v. U. S. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 528.

Reviewing the history of the legislation affecting containers, such as the immediate coverings of tea in this case, and the larger holders or boxes carrying the packages of tea, it is held that the larger containers used in the shipment and transportation of tea put up and imported in packages less than 5 pounds each should be taxed under paragraph 627, Act 1913, but the immediate coverings or wrappers, constituting a part of the packages, are free of duty. Wright & Graham Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 453.

Standard.—The present tariff law vests in the administrative officers of the government the power to fix the standard of quality of teas that may be imported, which does not necessarily depend on their purity and wholesomeness, and to determine finally the question whether an importation meets the requirements of the standard so fixed; and such provisions are a constitutional exercise of legislative power. Buttfield v. Bidwell (C. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 126.

628. Teeth, natural, or unmanufactured.
629. Terra alba, not made from gypsum or plaster rock.
630. Terra japonica.

Notes of Decisions

Gambia.—"Gambia" held synonymous with "terra japonica," and exempt from duty. Act 1861. Hallett v. Smythe (C. C. 1867) Fed. Cas. No. 5,959.

631. Tin ore, cassiterite or black oxide of tin, tin in bars, blocks, pigs, or grain or granulated, and scrap tin: Provided, That there shall be imposed and paid upon cassiterite, or black oxide of tin, and upon bar, block, pig tin and grain or granulated, a duty of 4 cents per pound when it is made to appear to the satisfaction of the President of the United States that the mines of the United States are producing one thousand five hundred tons of cassiterite and bar, block, and pig tin per year. The President shall make known this fact by proclamation, and thereafter said duties shall go into effect.

Notes of Decisions

Tin in plates or sheets.—"Tin in plates or sheets" is subject to a duty of 15 per cent. ad valorem, in accordance with the provisions of R. S. § 2504, Schedule E. May v. Simmons (C. C. 1880) 4 Fed. 499.

632. Tobacco stems.
633. Tungsten-bearing ores of all kinds.
634. Turmeric.
635. Turpentine, Venice, and spirits of.

636. Turtles.

637. Type, stereotype metal, electrotype metal, linotype composition, all of the foregoing, old and fit only to be remanufactured.

638. Uranium, oxide and salts of.

639. Valonia.

640. Wafers, unleavened or not edible.

Notes of Decisions

Sugar wafers.—Sweetened biscuit known as sugar wafers held not dutiable as wafers not edible. See paragraph 385.

Unleavened wafers.—Edible wafers held not free of duty as unleavened wafers. See paragraph 385.

641. Wax, vegetable or mineral.

Notes of Decisions

Carnauba wax substitute.—Carnauba wax substitute, which is compounded of carnauba wax (vegetable wax), and paraffin (mineral wax), and which is to all appearance a waxy substance used for the same purpose as other waxes, is covered by the provision for "wax, vegetable or mineral," in Act 1897, par. 695. U. S. v. Charles Morningstar & Co. (1909) 168 Fed. 541, 94 C. C. A. 123.

Mineral wax.—The expression "wax, * * * mineral," in Act 1897, par. 695, must have been used in the popular sense of those words, inasmuch as the so-called mineral waxes are not waxes in the chemical sense. U. S. v. Charles Morningstar & Co. (1909) 168 Fed. 541, 94 C. C. A. 123.

642. Wearing apparel, articles of personal adornment, toilet articles, and similar personal effects of persons arriving in the United States; but this exemption shall include only such articles as were actually owned by them and in their possession abroad at the time of or prior to their departure from a foreign country, and as are necessary and appropriate for the wear and use of such persons and are intended for such wear and use, and shall not be held to apply to merchandise or articles intended for other persons or for sale: Provided, That in case of residents of the United States returning from abroad all wearing apparel, personal and household effects taken by them out of the United States to foreign countries shall be admitted free of duty, without regard to their value, upon their identity being established under appropriate rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided further, That up to but not exceeding $100 in value of articles acquired abroad by such residents of the United States for personal or household use or as souvenirs or curios, but not bought on commission or intended for sale, shall be admitted free of duty.

Notes of Decisions

Construction of paragraph in general.—The rule is to exempt from duty such articles as fulfill the following conditions: (1) Wearing apparel owned by the passenger and in a condition to be worn at once without further manufacture; (2) brought with him as a passenger and intended for the use or wear of himself or his family who accompanied him as passengers, and not for sale or purchase, or imported for other persons, or to be given away; (3) suitable for the season of the year immediately approaching at the time of arrival; (4) not exceeding in quantity or quality the value of what the passenger was in the habit of ordinarily providing for himself or his family at that time, and keeping on hand for his and their reasonable wants, in view of their means and habits in life, though such articles had not been actually worn. Astor v. Merritt (1884) 4 Sup. Ct. 413, 418, 111 U. S. 202, 28 L. Ed. 401.

Persons arriving in the United States are citizens returning or foreigners visiting or emigrating, and the statute applies to all equally. Id.

Act 1897, par. 697, provides for "personal effects of persons arriving in the United States," with a proviso relating to "residents of the United States returning from abroad." Held, that the first provision is only for immigrants, and that the proviso concerns Americans only. U. S. v. Bernays (1908) 158 Fed. 792, 86 C. C. A. 52.

Act 1897, par. 697, places on the free list "such articles of wearing apparel, personal adornment, toilet articles and similar personal effects as are in the use of and accompanying persons arriving in the United States and are necessary and appropriate for the immediate purposes of the journey and their present comfort and convenience: provided that in case of residents of the United States returning from abroad all wearing apparel and other personal effects taken by them out of the United States to foreign countries shall be admitted free of duty, without regard to their value, * * * but no more than one hundred dollars in value of articles purchased abroad by such residents of the United States shall be admitted free of duty upon their return." Held, that such paragraph classifies exempt articles according to the citizenship of the persons arriving in this country, and that the provisions preceding the proviso have no application in case of a citizen of the United States, whose exemptions are those only enumerated in the proviso. U. S. v. One Pearl Necklace (1901) 111 Fed. 164, 49 C. C. A. 287, 56 L. R. A. 130.

Good faith.—One going to a foreign country to buy clothing is not entitled to free entry thereof, though he wears the same in returning home. Simmons' Case (D. C. 1865) Fed. Cas. No. 12,865.

Persons crossing into Canada for no other purpose than to purchase clothing there, and immediately returning, are not entitled to introduce the same free of duty as "personal effects" under paragraph 752, Act 1890. (1894) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 3.

Loss of exemption.—The exemption from duty of $100 worth of articles in the personal effects of residents of the United States returning from abroad, as provided in Act 1897, par. 697, may not be claimed, except where there has been a compliance with the provisions of section 2802, R. S., section 5499, post, regarding the entry of baggage. If the baggage is confiscated through failure to observe the provisions of said section, the right of exemption is lost. Harts v. U. S. (1905) 140 Fed. 843, 72 C. C. A. 255, affirming judgments U. S. v. Harts (D. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 886, and Same v. Sixteen Bolts of Silk (D. C. 1904) 139 Fed. 1008.

In construing the provision in paragraph 697, Act 1897, that $100 in value of articles purchased abroad by returning residents of the United States may be admitted free of duty, held that it is the passengers' duty to enter and declare the value of such articles, whether they cost more than $100 or not, and that when not so declared they are subject to forfeiture. Dodge v. U. S. (1904) 131 Fed. 849, 65 C. C. A. 603, writ of certiorari denied (1904) 25 Sup. Ct. 790, 195 U. S. 632, 49 L. Ed. 353.

Personal effects.—Act 1897, par. 697, provides in its final clause for the exemption from duty of "one hundred dollars in value of articles purchased abroad by * * * residents of the United States, * * * upon their return." Held, that this privilege does not extend to articles which are not personal effects, such as the "wearing apparel, toilet articles," etc., specified in the preceding portion of the paragraph, and that pictures, chairs, tables, and other small trinkets brought in by an American resident are therefore not within the paragraph. U. S. v. Bernays (1908) 158 Fed. 792, 86 C. C. A. 52.

Personal effects of a person arriving in the United States do not cease to be baggage by being so disposed on the person as to be covered from view by the passenger's dress. U. S. v. One Pearl Chain (1905) 139 Fed. 513, 71 C. C. A. 500.

Bicycles are "personal effects" within the meaning of the tariff acts. (1893) 20 Op. Atty. Gen. 648; (1894) 20 Op. Atty. Gen. 719; (1884) 17 Op. Atty. Gen. 679.

Residence.—The appellant, though born in the United States, lived in England for many years with her father, who, at her birth and continuously thereafter, was a resident of England. She married in London a citizen of the United States. Voyaging to the United States after her marriage, she is not to be deemed a resident of the United States, returning thereto, but a person arriving in the United States, and under paragraph 642, Act 1913, her personal effects were entitled to entry free of duty. Thompson v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 341.

The appellant, a married woman, had lived mainly abroad for a number of years to educate her children. During this time her husband's home was in New York, his business was there, and there he voted. She, during this period, went to France and returned after longer or shorter intervals, living admittedly in amicable relations with her husband. Her legal residence remained accordingly her husband's residence, and she was entitled to have entered free of duty only such wearing apparel or personal effects as she took out of this country and such articles as she may have purchased abroad not exceeding $100 in value (Act 1909). Bache v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 414.

Apart from any question of legal citizenship, one who is in good faith residing and making his home abroad, according to the evidence, and who visits the United States with no intention of remaining here, is entitled to bring in his wearing apparel—his personal effects—free of duty. Bradley Martin, Jr., v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 134.

Theatrical costumes.—Theatrical costumes imported by one of two joint owners, for their joint use in the production of a theatrical burlesque, held not subject to duty (Act 1890, par. 686) on the ground that they were imported for another person as well as for the one arriving with them. Henderson v. U. S. (1895) 66 Fed. 53, 13 C. C. A. 328.

Value of articles.—Articles 610, 611, Treasury Regulations of 1908, requiring passengers to state the value of their baggage, held valid, because Act 1897, par. 697, puts a pecuniary limitation upon the exemption to which the passenger is entitled. U. S. v. One Trunk (D. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 1012, decree affirmed (1912) 192 Fed. 913, 114 C. C. A. 353.

The rules and regulations relating to the importation of baggage, or articles upon the person, of people arriving in the United States, though applying usually to articles of no great value, apply as well where the articles so imported are of very great value. U. S. v. One Pearl Chain (D. C. 1904) 139 Fed. 510.

Wearing apparel.—The term "wearing apparel," as generally used in the tariff acts, refers not merely to a person's outer clothing, but covers all articles usually worn, including underclothing. Arnold v. U. S. (1893) 13 Sup. Ct. 406, 407, 147 U. S. 494, 37 L. Ed. 253.

643. Whalebone, unmanufactured.

644. Wheat, wheat flour, semolina, and other wheat products, not specially provided for in this section: Provided, That wheat shall be subject to a duty of 10 cents per bushel, that wheat flour shall be subject to a duty of 45 cents per barrel of 196 pounds, and semolina and other products of wheat, not specially provided for in this section, 10 per centum ad valorem, when imported directly or indirectly from a country, dependency, or other subdivision of government which imposes a duty on wheat or wheat flour or semolina imported from the United States.

Notes of Decisions

In general.—To entitle merchandise to free entry under paragraph 644, Act 1913, it must appear that it is a wheat product not specially provided for and that it is imported from a country or subdivision thereof which does not impose a duty on wheat products imported from the United States. U. S. v. Kuyper & Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 142.

"Wheat" is used in the act of 1909 without limitation or qualification, and in the absence of a contrary commercial custom must be applied to every kind and class of merchandise embraced in the term. Schade & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 465.

Wheat bin burned.—This wheat was stored in a damp condition and it heated and fermented and became "bin burned." To prevent further deterioration it was subjected to a process of dry heating. Notwithstanding the commodity had been "bin burned" and "dry heated" it remained essentially wheat and was bought and sold as wheat. Atwood-Stone Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 472. See, also, U. S. v. W. P. Devereux Co. (C. C. 1905) 135 Fed. 428; Malouf v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 437.

Wheat injured by frost.—Wheat injured by frost to such an extent as to reduce it to a low grade, or to "no grade," but which can still be used for seed and for making flour, is dutiable as wheat, under paragraph 234, Act 1897, and not as a nonenumerated unmanufactured article, under section 6 of said act. U. S. v. W. P. Devereux Co. (C. C. 1905) 135 Fed. 428.

This importation was of frozen Manitoba wheat. Even if it be assumed that no commercial designation was shown, and that the merchandise here was improperly classed as "no grade," the record and the samples clearly establish that the common, ordinary designation of "wheat" applies, and this is so, though the wheat was confessedly of inferior quality, suitable alone for animal food. Schade & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 465.

Wheat prepared into food product.—Wheat that has been boiled, dried, and ground or otherwise broken, constituting thereby a food product, has lost its character as a grain and takes on a form, nature, appearance, and use differing distinctly from those it had before being subjected to the described treatment, and it cannot be properly classified as wheat, or by similitude as wheat. Malouf v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 437.

645. All barbed wire, galvanized wire not larger than twenty one-hundredths of one inch in diameter and not smaller than eight one-hundredths of one inch in diameter of the kind commonly used for fencing purposes, galvanized wire fencing composed of wires not larger than twenty one-hundredths of one inch in diameter nor smaller than eight one-hundredths of one inch in diameter, and wire commonly used for baling hay or other commodities.

646. Witherite.

Notes of Decisions

Native carbonate of baryta.—Under paragraph 489, Act 1897, native or precipitated carbonate of baryta was non-dutiable. U. S. v. Gabriel & Schall (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 90.

647. Wood: Logs, timber, round, unmanufactured, hewn or sawed, sided or squared; pulp woods, kindling wood, firewood, hop poles, hoop poles, fence posts, handle bolts, shingle bolts, gun blocks for gunstocks rough hewn or sawed, or planed on one side; hubs for wheels, posts, heading bolts, stave bolts, last blocks, wagon blocks, oar blocks, heading blocks, and all like blocks or sticks, rough hewn, sawed, or bored; sawed boards, planks, deals, and other lumber, not further manufactured than sawed, planed, and tongued and grooved; clapboards, laths, pickets, palings, staves, shingles, ship timber, ship planking, broom handles, sawdust, and wood flour; all the foregoing not specially provided for in this section.

Notes of Decisions

1. Blocks or sticks, rough-hewn, sawed, etc.
2. Boards planed for splines.
3. Boards tongued and grooved.
4. Firewood.
5. Gun blocks.
6. Lumber fireproofed.
7. Pulp woods.
8. Round timber.
9. Sandalwood.
10. Sawed lumber.
11. Shingles.

1. Blocks or sticks, rough-hewn, sawed; etc.—In construing Act 1897, par. 200, relating to "blocks or sticks, * * * rough-hewn, sawed," etc., held that the hewing contemplated is a new shaping, and that the sawing is something more than merely sawing the blocks or sticks off from longer pieces. U. S. v. Pierce (C. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 962, judgment affirmed (1906) 147 Fed. 199, 77 C. C. A. 425.

The question is whether the beading which appears upon the ceiling lumber and upon some of the novelty siding serves to exclude the importation from proper classification as "not further manufactured than sawed, planed, and tongued and grooved," paragraph 647, Act 1913. The planer and matcher used in dressing sawed boards is, in fact, simply a planing machine, and its work is simply planing, whether the boards are or not beaded in the process. "Planing" includes beading, the beading giving the boards no new name, character, or use. The free entry clause applies. U. S. v. Myers & Co. (1915) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 541.

2. Boards planed for splines.—Boards and planks, of uniform length, width, and thickness, planed and matched for splines, are not dutiable as "manufactures of wood," under paragraph 181, Act 1894, but are entitled to free entry as "dressed lumber," under paragraph 676. U. S. v. Dudley (1897) 79 Fed. 75, 24 C. C. A. 449, affirming Dudley v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 74 Fed. 548, and judgment affirmed (1899) 19 Sup. Ct. 801, 174 U. S. 670, 43 L. Ed. 1129.

3. Boards tongued and grooved.—Lumber planed on one side, and tongued and grooved, to be used as flooring and sheathing, is entitled to be admitted free of duty, as "sawed boards, plank. deals and other lumber, rough and dressed," under Act 1894, par. 676, and is not dutiable as "house or cabinet furniture, of wood, wholly or partly finished, manufactures of wood," under paragraph 181. U. S. v. Dudley (1899) 19 Sup. Ct. 801, 174 U. S. 670, 43 L. Ed. 1129, affirming judgment (1897) 79 Fed. 75, 24 C. C. A. 449.

4. Firewood.—The evidence here is that not over 30 per cent. of these importations is suitable for or is used for making matches, and that the remainder is used for firewood. The merchandise—ends cut from deals or planks—should be classified as firewood, and was entitled to free entry. U. S. v. Saunders (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 102.

5. Gun blocks.—Under Act 1883, prescribing rates of duty on wood and wooden wares, gun blocks, which are not "rough-hewn or sawed only," but are planed on two sides, are subject to an ad valorem duty of 35 per cent. U. S. v. Windmuller (C. C. 1890) 42 Fed. 292.

6. Lumber fireproofed.—Lumber which has been subjected to a fireproofing process that largely increases its value, but which can still be applied to the ordinary uses of sawed lumber, held not dutiable as manufactures of wood, under paragraph 208, Act 1897, but as "sawed lumber," under paragraph 195. F.

W. Myers & Co. v. U. S. (1906) 147 Fed. 204, 77 C. C. A. 430, affirming judgment U. S. v. F. W. Myers & Co. (C. C. 1905) 139 Fed. 344.

7. Pulp woods.—In construing the provision in paragraph 699, Act 1897, for "round unmanufactured timber including pulp woods," held, that the pulp wood subjected to the rossing process, whereby the bark, skin, and rough places are removed, is not manufactured in any true sense; also that it is not necessary that the "pulp woods" should be "round unmanufactured timber," "including" being used as equivalent to "also." U. S. v. Pierce (1906) 147 Fed. 199, 77 C. C. A. 425, affirming judgment (C. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 962.

The term "pulp woods" in paragraph 699, Act 1897, has no commercial signification differing from its ordinary meaning, and is employed as a short, comprehensive expression intended to cover pulp wood in all its forms, including such as has been subjected to the rossing process. Id.

8. Round timber.—In Act 1897, pars. 194, 196, provide, respectively, for "round timber used in building wharves," and for electric light poles, etc.; and paragraph 699 enumerates "round unmanufactured timber * * * not specially provided for." Held, that any round sticks which in their shape as imported are used for any of the purposes specified in said paragraphs 194 and 196, either in the rough or finished, are subject to classification under those paragraphs, rather than under paragraph 699. Perfection Pile-Preserving Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 147 Fed. 922.

These white oak logs were imported substantially as the tree had fallen when cut down. The branches had been cut off, but the logs had not been peeled or sided. It is doubtful if importations of this character and condition are within the letter or spirit of paragraph 200, Act 1909, and there is nothing in the record so convincing of the contrary as to warrant a reversal. The logs were properly held not dutiable as being the round unmanufactured timber of paragrap 712. U. S. v. MacNaughton (1913) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 114.

It was clearly intended in paragraph 712, Act 1909, to include in the phrase "round, unmanufactured timber" something other than logs; that timber should not have there a restricted, limited meaning. Articles ejusdem generis with those specifically named are included, and the importation accordingly was entitled to free entry. U. S. v. Nightingale (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 79.

9. Sandalwood.—Sandalwood, in pieces of varying sizes, several feet long and several inches thick, to which nothing has been done beyond removing the bark and sawing the wood into lengths convenient for transportation, held not dutiable under paragraph 198, Act 1897, as "wood, unmanufactured, not specially provided for," but free of duty, under the provision in paragraph 699 of said act, for "logs of wood." George Lueders & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 655.

10. Sawed lumber.—White pine lumber in sticks measuring 6 by 12 inches held dutiable as "sawed lumber, not specially provided for," under paragraph 195, Act 1897, and not as timber "hewn, sided or squared," under paragraph 194. In re E. W. Rathbun & Co. (C. C. 1898) 88 Fed. 257.

By Act March 2, 1861, § 20, a duty of 20 per cent. ad valorem was laid on "sawed timber"; and by Act June 6, 1872, § 1, a certain duty per thousand feet was imposed on "sawed lumber." The Treasury Department construed the latter provision to supersede the former. Both provisions were, however, subsequently re-enacted in section 2504, R. S. Held, that the construction of the Treasury Department was correct, and that the mere bringing forward into the Revised Statutes of the two provisions has not changed the previous state of the law. (1875) 15 Op. Atty. Gen. 493.

11. Shingles.—Shingles, not specifically enumerated in Act 1861, held dutiable as manufactures of wood. Stockwell v. U. S. (C. C. 1870) Fed. Cas. No. 13,466.

648. Woods: Cedar, including Spanish cedar, lignum-vitæ, lance-wood, ebony, box, granadilla, mahogany, rosewood, satinwood, and all forms of cabinet woods, in the log, rough, or hewn only, and red cedar (Juniperus virginiana) timber, hewn, sided, squared, or round; sticks of partridge, hair wood, pimento, orange, myrtle, bamboo, rattan, reeds unmanufactured, india malacca joints, and other woods not specially provided for in this section, in the rough, or not further advanced than cut into lengths suitable for sticks for umbrellas, parasols, sunshades, whips, fishing rods, or walking canes.

Notes of Decisions

Bamboo.—Split bamboo, cut into lengths of 12 inches, and tied in bundles intended for use in making brooms, held not taxable under Act 1897, par. 208, as manufactures of wood, but is entitled to free entry as "bamboo, rattan, and reed unmanufactured," under paragraph 700. R. Brauss & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 120 Fed. 1017.

The splitting and cutting into lengths of this bamboo does not in fact make of it anything and putting it up into bundles did not change its character. It has not been manufactured. The decisions and the legislative history of the relevant provision show the merchandise was entitled to free entry under paragraph 713, Act 1909. U. S. v. Steeb & Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 275.

Cabinet woods.—Cabinet wood, sawed lengthwise on two or more sides, held not free of duty, under paragraph 700, Act 1897, for "all forms of cabinet wood, in the log, rough or hewn only," but dutiable under paragraph 198, covering "cabinet woods not further manufactured than sawed." I. T. Williams & Sons v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 838.

The issue as made here was one of fact, whether the wood of the importation is or is not cabinet wood as described in paragraph 203, Act 1909. The board found that oak, poplar, and ash are not cabinet woods and the evidence supports this finding. Paragraph 201 applies. U. S. v. Mitsui & Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 449.

Dyers' sticks.—Bamboo dyers' sticks, rounded at the ends and smoothed off at the joints, are covered by the enumeration of bamboo in Act 1897, par. 700, rather than by the provision for wood, unmanufactured, in paragraph 198. U. S. v. Knipscher & Maas Silk Dyeing Co. (C. C. 1907) 152 Fed. 590.

Dyers' sticks of hard wood, which have been trimmed and peeled, and had the rough edges removed, and the ends rounded, held not dutiable as manufactures of wood, under Act 1897, par. 208, but as wood unmanufactured, under paragraph 198. Id.

Rattan.—These pieces of rattan are not further advanced than cut into lengths suitable for umbrella sticks, etc. They cannot be said to be by their condition definitely appropriated to any specified use. They were entitled to free entry under paragraph 648, Act 1913. U. S. v. Larzelere & Co. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 273.

The slab rattan and the broom or split rattan of the importation are used only in the manufacture of brooms and never in the manufacture of chairs. They did not fall within paragraph 212, Act 1909, but were entitled to free entry as rattan unmanufactured. Rattan & Cane Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 1.

Red or canoe cedar.—Lumber manufactured from the tree botanically known as "thuja gigantea," and commonly called "red cedar" or "canoe cedar," is not within the exception of "cedar * * * and all other cabinet woods," in Act Aug. 27, 1894, par. 676, but is entitled to free entry under that paragraph. In re Myers (C. C. 1895) 69 Fed. 237.

Reeds.—Reeds not cut into lengths, but stripped of enamel so as to transform them from rattan into reed, leaving the inner portion intact, are free under Act 1897, par. 700, as "reeds unmanufactured." U. S. v. Foppes (C. C. 1899) 99 Fed. 558.

Rattan, from which the outer bark or enamel ("chair cane") has been cut by a first process from the raw material, leaving a product known in trade and commerce in the United States at the time of the passage of the tariff act of 1883, as "round reeds," are duty free, under paragraph 770 of that act, as "rattans and reeds, unmanufactured." Foppes v. Magone (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 570.

The articles known in trade and commerce at the same date as "square reeds," "oval reeds," and "flat reeds," being obtained by a further process of cutting from the "round reeds," held liable to duty under Act 1883, par. 482, as "rattans and reeds, manufactured but not made up into completed articles, ten per centum ad valorem. Id.

Reeds imported in the rough in the crudest form in which such reeds are imported are unmanufactured, and fall within the terms of paragraph 713, Act 1909, for "reeds unmanufactured * * * or not further advanced than cut into lengths suitable for sticks for umbrellas, parasols, sunshades, etc.," although not suitable for sticks, etc. The fact that a further provision or exception extended the paragraph to reeds partly manufactured, to wit, when advanced but not further than cut into lengths suitable for sticks, etc., does not exclude the importation in question therefrom. The further provision was not designed as restrictive, but the words employed are words of extension. U. S. v. Winter & Smillie (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 522.

Umbrella sticks.—These sticks are in the rough and not further advanced than cut into lengths suitable for use in making umbrellas, parasols, etc. They remain boxwood sticks in the rough and their principal use, as was shown, is for umbrella or parasol handles, and it further appears that umbrella handles are parts of umbrella sticks. Paragraph 713, Act 1909, applied, and the sticks were entitled to free entry. U. S. v. Benneche (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 92; Same v. Gerdau Co., Id. 97.

649. Mechanically ground wood pulp, chemical wood pulp, unbleached or bleached, and rag pulp.

Notes of Decisions

Dry weight.—The term "dry weight," as used in paragraph 415, Act 1890, imposing a duty of six dollars per ton dry weight on unbleached chemical wood pulp, and seven dollars per ton dry weight on bleached chemical wood pulp, does not refer to the absolute dry weight of the material immediately after desiccation in a kiln, but to the air-dry weight as understood in commerce. U. S. v. Perkins (1895) 66 Fed. 50, 13 C. C. A. 324.

Wood pulp.—Wrapping paper held not dutiable as wood pulp. See paragraph 328.

Wood flour, produced by grinding small pieces of wood obtained by breaking or cutting waste wood, etc., held dutiable as a manufacture of wood under Act 1897, par. 208, and not as "wood pulp," under paragraph 393, nor as "waste" under paragraph 463. Nairn Linoleum Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 151 Fed. 955.

Wood ground into a powder by a dry process, and known in trade both as "wood flour" and "wood pulp," held not dutiable as wood pulp, under paragraph 303, Act 1894. Goldman v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 87 Fed. 193.

Wood flour held dutiable as a manufacture of wood. Lang v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 464. See, also, Salomon v. Same (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 92; Rossman v. Same (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 280.

The wood pulp of this importation and the pulp wood from which it was manufactured were entitled to exportation from Canada into the United States free of any export charge or prohibition or restriction upon exportation, and it accordingly falls directly within the provisions of section 2 of the reciprocity act, superseded by this paragraph, and is thereby entitled to free entry. Cliff Paper Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 186.

650. Wool of the sheep, hair of the camel, and other like animals, and all wools and hair on the skin of such animals, and paper twine for binding any of the foregoing. This paragraph shall be effective on and after the first day of December, nineteen hundred and thirteen, until which time the rates of duty now provided by schedule K of the existing law shall remain in full force and effect

Cabretta skins.—The growth on cabretta skins held dutiable as "wool," under Act 1897. Lawrence Johnson & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 159 Fed. 189, judgment affirmed (1908) 166 Fed. 728, 92 C. C. A. 418, and writ of certiorari denied (1909) 29 Sup. Ct. 694, 214 U. S. 511, 53 L. Ed. 1062.

Classification and quality of wool.—Scoured wool, made up in England into the form of "tops," which were afterwards purposely torn up in order to be imported as "waste," was not classifiable under the act of 1883 (22 Stat. 508) as "waste," nor as manufactures of wool, but was dutiable at 60 cents per pound, under the provision imposing treble duties upon scoured wool as compared with unwashed wool, and the further provision imposing double duties in case of wools purposely changed in character or condition for the purpose of evading the duty properly chargeable upon them. Patton v. U. S. (1895) 16 Sup. Ct. 89, 92, 159 U. S. 500, 40 L. Ed. 233, affirming (D. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 461.

The provision in the act of 1883 (22 Stat. 508) imposing double and treble duties, respectively, upon wools imported washed and wools imported scoured, refers, not to the commercial designation, but to the fact whether the wool has been actually washed or scoured, or is imported unwashed. Id.

The statute makes the appraised value of wool in its unwashed state the standard for determining the amount of ad valorem duty to be collected upon washed wool. Arthur v. Pastor (1883) 3 Sup. Ct. 96, 98, 109 U. S. 139, 27 L. Ed. 882.

Certain bales of merchandise purporting to be the fleeces of the unimproved North China sheep were imported from Shanghai, the papers being regular, and free from all question of fraud. The goods consisted of very low grade wool, containing a large mixture of coarse, short hair, and cost three cents a pound in Shanghai, and were worth but nine cents in Baltimore. The importer testified that he had lived in China, and had dealt in the fleeces of the China sheep, and that the importation consisted of such fleeces. A customhouse expert, however, testified that the hair in the fleeces was goat's hair, and on this evidence the collector and board of appraisers placed the importation in class 2, par. 377, Act Oct. 1, 1890, and assessed a duty of 12 cents a pound, and this conclusion was sustained by the circuit court. Held, that an appellate court, taking judicial notice of the fact that a large proportion of hair grows on the bodies of unimproved sheep, would find that the whole importation consisted of the fleece of the sheep, and therefore belonged to class 3, (paragraph 378,) and was dutiable at 32 per cent. ad valorem. Lyon v. Marine (1893) 55 Fed. 964, 5 C. C. A. 359.

The importation of wool separated as to colors by entire fleeces, the colors being of different values, and entered for duty as washed wool of the third class, is not within paragraph 383 of the tariff act of 1890, which imposes double duties upon wool "which shall be imported in any other than ordinary condition, or which shall be changed in its character or condition for the purpose of evading the duty, * * * or which has been sorted or increased in value by the rejection of any part of the original fleece." In re Higgins (1893) 55 Fed. 278, 5 C. C. A. 104, affirming (C. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 910.

The proviso excepting "wools on which duty is assessed amounting to three times or more than that which would be assessed if said wool was imported unwashed" from the double duty imposed by paragraph 383 of the tariff act of 1890 on wools sorted in quality for the purpose of evading duty cannot be restricted to those classes of wool upon which the act assesses duty by the express term "unwashed." Id.

The standard samples of wool prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury on the authority of Act 1897, par. 352, are conclusive in respect to classification and quality, except, perhaps, where the issue is one of fraud or mistake, and regulations in respect to such samples are not subject to review by the courts or the Board of General Appraisers; and where imported wools answer the quality of the standard samples, they should be classified accordingly regardless of whether such standards operate unjustly, oppressively, or disproportionately to other classifications and values. U. S. v. American Express Co. (C. C. 1910) 177 Fed. 735.

In Act 1897, par. 349, relating to wools, the words "merino blood, immediate or remote," convey an unmistakable meaning, and include wool in which the presence of merino blood is marked, though of inferior quality. Id.

Wools are classified in paragraphs 349, 350, and 351, Act 1897, according to quality, and not place of origin, and wool of English blood, containing no perceptible mixture of merino, belongs in class 2, and is dutiable under paragraph 350, although imported from New Zealand. Hempstead v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 99.

The "sorting clause" (so called) of paragraph 383, Schedule K, Tariff Act Oct. 1, 1890 (26 Stat. 567), applies to wools of all classes. In re Higgins (C. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 910, judgment affirmed U. S. v. Higgins (1893) 55 Fed. 278, 5 C. C. A. 104.

Schedule K, Tariff Act 1883, imposing a double duty upon "wool of the sheep * * * imported in any other than ordinary condition, as now and heretofore practiced," etc., is not to be restricted to wool changed in its character or condition for the purpose of evading the duty, nor to wool reduced in value by the admixture of dirt or any other foreign substance, but to cover also wool advanced or improved beyond such "ordinary condition." Juillard v. Magone (C. C. 1889) 37 Fed. 857.

The rate on washed wool is computed by doubling the specific and ad valorem rates for unwashed wool. R. S. § 2504, Schedule L. Foster v. Simmons (C. C. 1878) Fed. Cas. No. 4,982a.

Where wool imported has been changed from one condition to another for the purpose of evading duty, whether the condition in which it was entered was a customary condition in which wool was imported prior to the date of the act of 1883 or not, it is subject to double duty. U. S. v. Patton (D. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 461.

In the tariff act of 1883, in the enumeration of wools of the first class, as "wools of merino blood, near or remote," "remote" is limited to mean within the limit of merino blood requisite to characterize the wool as possessing merino qualities, and adding to the value. U. S. v. Midgley (D. C. 1890) 42 Fed. 668.

A wool was originally placed in the third class by the examiner, who afterwards, upon the orders of the appraiser, made another examination, and placed it in the second, and, upon the refusal of the appraiser to indorse, made a third examination, and placed it in the first class. On trial several experts testified, upon seeing the wool for the first time, that it was plainly clothing wool (first class). Held, that the fact of the original judgment of the government examiner was evidence for the defendant as to the "grade" of the wool, and to impeach the reliability of plaintiff's expert testimony produced at the trial. Id.

Goat hair.—In Schedule K of the act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 488), the words, in class 2, "combing wools," apply only to the first part of the clause, which enumerates wools, and not to the latter part, reading, "and also all hair of the alpaca, goat, and other like animals;" and such hairs, whether fit for combing or not, are dutiable at a uniform rate of 10 cents a pound. Common goat hair is therefore included in this specification, and is not comprehended in the clause (paragraph 717) relating to hair "not specially provided for in this act." Cooper v. Dobson (1895) 15 Sup. Ct. 568, 157 U. S. 148, 39 L. Ed. 652, reversing Dobson v. Cooper (D. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 184, and approving U. S. v. Hopewell (1892) 51 Fed. 798, 2 C. C. A. 510.

Under Act 1890, common goat hair, even if not fit for combing, is dutiable at 12 cents a pound, under Schedule K, par. 377, class 2, and is not embraced in paragraph 604 of the free list. U. S. v. Hopewell (1892) 51 Fed. 798, 2 C. C. A. 510, reversing In re Chase (C. C. 1892) 48 Fed. 630.

"Like animals."—A sheep, in respect to its fleece, is not a "like animal" to the goat, within Act 1890, par. 377, classifying wools. Lyon v. Marine (1893) 55 Fed. 964, 5 C. C. A. 359.

Sheepskins.—Under the tariff act of July 30, 1846 (9 Stat. 42), imported sheepskins, dried with the wool on them, do not come within the class of "raw hides, and skins of all kinds, whether dried, salted or pickled, not otherwise provided for;" nor can the skins be treated as coming within that class, and the wool upon them estimated separately, as "wool unmanufactured;" but the skins and wool together must be charged with a duty of 20 per cent. ad valorem, as nonenumerated articles. De Forest v. Lawrence (1851) 54 U. S. (13 How.) 274, 14 L. Ed. 143; Coggill v. Lawrence (C. C. 1850) Fed. Cas. No. 2,956.

As to the coat on so-called mocha whitehead sheepskins, which contains a percentage of wool of a low order, held, that it is subject to the duty provided for wools on the skin in paragraphs 351, 358, 360, Act 1897, and is not free of duty under paragraph 664, relating to raw skins, "except sheepskins with the wool on." Goat & Sheepskin Import Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 141 Fed. 493, judgment affirmed (1906) 145 Fed. 1022, 74 C. C. A. 82, which is reversed (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 634, 206 U. S. 194, 51 L. Ed. 1022.

Paragraph 360, Act 1897, must be taken to refer to skins with wool upon them of such character and quantity that it would be profitable to remove this wool from the skins; and there being no question here that the importation of raw sheepskins was not of that kind, but was of skins the wool upon which could not be removed with profit, following the rule established by a long-continued practice in the customs administrative service, these were free of duty under paragraph 562. U. S. v. Heckman (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 272. See, also, Same v. Bennet (1895) 66 Fed. 299, 13 C. C. A. 446; Lawrence, Johnson & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 124 Fed. 1000.

Weight.—Wool must pay duty on its weight on arrival, though the same was increased by absorption of moisture, where not exposed to or injured by sea water. U. S. v. Choteau (D. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 14,793.

651. Wool wastes: All noils, top waste, card waste, slubbing waste, roving waste, ring waste, yarn waste, bur waste, thread waste, garnetted waste, shoddies, mungo, flocks, wool extract, carbonized wool, carbonized noils, and all other wastes not specially provided for in this section. This paragraph shall be effective on and after the first day of December, nineteen hundred and thirteen, until which time the rates of duty now provided by schedule K of the existing law shall remain in full force and effect.

Notes of Decisions

Noils.—Camel's hair noils, being the short hair of the camel, obtained by combing, were dutiable as noils, under paragraph 388, Act 1890, and not as camel's hair of the second class, under paragraphs 377 and 384, or as waste, under paragraph 472. Lobsitz v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 75 Fed. 834, appeal dismissed (1897) 89 Fed. 1018, 32 C. C. A. 609.

Reviewing the authorities bearing on the paragraph of the tariff involved, it is clear that the "wool wastes" of paragraph 651, Act 1913, embracing as it does all noils, includes noils of hair from Angora or alpaca goats. Crimmins & Pierce v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 137.

Wool waste.—Mill sweepings held not classifiable as wool waste. See paragraph 566.

Merchantable wool "tops," which have been torn into fragments for the purpose of changing their character from that of tops to that of "waste," in order to evade the duty to which the wool would be subject in the form of tops, is liable to pay the double duty expressly imposed in such cases by the act of 1883, irrespective of the question whether such torn-up tops were commercially known as "waste" or "top waste" or not. Patton v. U. S. (1895) 16 Sup. Ct. 89, 159 U. S. 500, 40 L. Ed. 233, affirming judgment U. S. v. Patton (D. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 461.

The word "waste," as used in respect to wools in the tariff act of 1883 (22 Stat. 508), means refuse, or material that is not susceptible of being used for the ordinary purposes of manufacture. It does not presuppose that the article is absolutely worthless, but that it is unmerchantable, and used for purposes for which merchantable material of the same class is unsuitable. Id.

Clippings of woolen material, produced in the process of making up garments, are "rags," within both the popular and the commercial signification of the term, and are more specifically provided for as "woolen rags," in paragraph 363, Act 1897, than in paragraph 362 of said act, as "wastes composed wholly or in part of wool, not specially provided for." U. S. v. Pearson & Emmott (1905) 137 Fed. 1021, 70 C. C. A. 306, affirming judgment (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 571.

Waste pieces of cloth, composed in part of rubber, cotton, and wool, held to be dutiable as "waste, composed in part of wool," under Act 1890, par. 388, and not as "waste, not specially provided for in this act." U. S. v. Cummings (C. C. 1895) 65 Fed. 495.

Pulverized waste or flock or shoddy is dutiable as "waste or shoddy" and not as a manufacture of wool. Act July 30, 1846. Lennig v. Maxwell (C. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 8,243.

"Wool waste," as employed in the tariff acts, signifies such parts or particles of wool as are thrown off in the several processes of manufacture of wool in wool or worsted fabrics, and does not include wool which has been prepared for spinning, and artificially and intentionally made into a form like such parts or particles, even if sometimes called "waste" by the trade. U. S. v. Patton (D. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 461.

652. Original paintings in oil, mineral, water, or other colors, pastels, original drawings and sketches in pen and ink or pencil and water colors, artists' proof etchings unbound, and engravings and woodcuts unbound, original sculptures or statuary, including not more than two replicas or reproductions of the same; but the terms "sculpture" and "statuary" as used in this paragraph shall be understood to include professional productions of sculptors only, whether in round or in relief, in bronze, marble, stone, terra cotta, ivory, wood, or metal, or whether cut, carved, or otherwise wrought by hand from the solid block or mass of marble, stone, or alabaster, or from metal, or cast in bronze or other metal or substance, or from wax or plaster, made as the professional productions of sculptors only; and the words "painting" and "sculpture" and "statuary" as used in this paragraph shall not be understood to include any articles of utility, nor such as are made wholly or in part by stenciling or any other mechanical process; and the words "etchings," "engravings," and "woodcuts" as used in this paragraph shall be understood to include only such as are printed by hand from plates or blocks etched or engraved with hand tools and not such as are printed from plates or blocks etched or engraved by photochemical or other mechanical processes.

Notes of Decisions

Blocks.—In Act 1897, par. 454, relating to "statuary * * * wrought by hand from a solid block or mass of marble * * * or from metal," the words "solid block," etc., do not refer to metal." U. S. v. Tiffany & Co. (1908) 160 Fed. 408, 87 C. C. A. 360, affirming judgment Tiffany & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 168.

The provision in paragraph 454, Act 1897, for statuary produced from "a solid block or mass of marble," etc., is not limited to statuary made from single blocks, and is held to include certain statues, each carved from three solid blocks of marble. U. S. v. Perry (C. C. 1904) 133 Fed. 841.

Busts of metal.—It seems that busts of lead are duty free, under Act 1832, as "all busts of marble, metal, or plaster," though put in that form to avoid the duty on lead in pigs, bars, and sheets. U. S. v. Levitt (D. C. 1842) Fed. Cas. No. 15,594.

Frames.—Frames of paintings held dutiable as manufactures of wood. See paragraph 176.

Paintings in oil or water color.—See, also, notes under paragraph 376.

Ceilings, painted on wood taken from a palace in Italy, should be classified under Act 1897, par. 454, as paintings in oil, and not under paragraph 208, as manufactures of wood not specially provided for. White v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 113 Fed. 855.

Certain antique mythological paintings of great value and high artistic character, consisting of a ewer and tray made of copper, and enameled by a process not now understood, are not covered by the provision in paragraph 159, Act 1897, for "sheets, plates, wares, or articles of iron, steel, or other metal, enameled or glazed with vitreous glasses," but dutiable under paragraph 454, as "paintings in oil or water colors." Amerman v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 124 Fed. 298.

Artistic paintings in oil on a plain slab of porcelain, intended solely for ornamental purposes, and not susceptible of any other use, and whose valuable and distinctive feature is the painting, and not the porcelain, are dutiable as "paintings in oil or water color" at 15 per cent. ad valorem, under paragraph 465, and not as "porcelain ware, painted," under paragraph 100, of the act of October 1, 1890. In re Davis Collamore (C. C. 1893) 53 Fed. 1006.

Professional production of a sculptor.—See, also, notes under paragraph 376.

Bronze statue, molded, but finished by the hand of the sculptor, held not dutiable as statuary, etc. See paragraph 167.

Manufactures of marble held not free as articles the production of a sculptor. See paragraph 98.

Plaintiff imported bronze statues and statuettes, and, being compelled to pay 45 per cent., sued to recover back all but 10 per cent. It was shown that all of the statues, except two, were made by manufacturers or mechanics, by means of artists' models, from which any number could be cast. Expert witnesses testified that the process was purely mechanical, but that it was necessary to use the model of a sculptor. There was testimony that two of the statues were modeled by an artist, and manufactured under his personal supervision. Held, that it was error to refuse to instruct in behalf of defendant that if the imported articles were made, not by professional sculptors or statuaries, or by their assistants, under their direction, but by skilled workmen or mechanics in the employ of the manufacturer, the verdict should be for defendant. Merritt v. Tiffany (1889) 10 Sup. Ct. 52, 132 U. S. 167, 33 L. Ed. 299.

Marble statues, executed by professional sculptors in the studio and under the direction of another professional sculptor, whether from models just made by a professional sculptor, or from antique models whose author is unknown, held to be "professional productions of a statuary or of a sculptor," liable to a 10 per cent. ad valorem duty under R. S. § 2504, Schedule M. Tutton v. Viti (1883) 2 Sup. Ct. 687, 689, 108 U. S. 312, 27 L. Ed. 737.

A statue of great value and high artistic merit, in which bronze was overwhelmingly predominant in bulk, though ivory was the component of chief value, was produced by the "cire perdue" process. After the metal part was cast, it was gone over carefully by hand by a renowned sculptor, who thereby made the alterations necessary to the execution of his artistic conceptions; this being the important part, which gave the piece its distinctive personal character. The entire work, from the original conception to the last touch, was under the sculptor's constant supervision, and he did everything that a sculptor could do to make his work complete. Held, that this statue was within the provision of Act 1897, par. 454, for "such statuary as is cut, carved, or otherwise wrought by hand * * * from metal, and is the professional production of a statuary or sculptor only." U. S. v. Tiffany & Co. (1908) 160 Fed. 408, 87 C. C. A. 360.

The phrase "professional production of a sculptor," as used in Act 1897, par. 454, providing that "the term 'statuary' * * * shall be understood to include only such statuary * * * as is the professional production of a statuary or sculptor," must be considered as synonymous with "productions of a professional sculptor." U. S. v. Townsend (1902) 113 Fed. 442, 51 C. C. A. 276.

Statues cut, carved, and wrought by hand from a solid block of marble, by a person who is a graduate of a recognized school of art, are "statuary, the work of a professional sculptor," within paragraph 454, Act 1897, and entitled to entry as such, without regard to the purpose for which they are to be used. U. S. v. Townsend (1901) 112 Fed. 1023, 50 C. C. A. 680, affirming judgment Townsend v. U. S. (C. C. 1901) 108 Fed. 801.

Carved figures or statues in wood, made by a professional statuary or sculptor from designs made by another professional statuary or sculptor, shown by full-sized drawings, in the making of which statues it was necessary to first model them in clay, and then take a plaster cast, from which the work in wood was done, are "statuary," entitled to free entry, under paragraph 575 in the free list of the tariff act of 1894, and are not dutiable as manufactures of wood, under paragraph 181. U. S. v. Morris European & American Exp. Co. (1900) 101 Fed. 111, 41 C. C. A. 240, affirming judgment Morris European & American Exp. Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 643.

A single bronze statuette, imported for the purpose of being added to, and becoming a part of, a pre-existing collection, held not a "collection of antiquities," within Act 1890, par. 524, but dutiable as statuary wrought by hand, under paragraph 465. In re Glaenzer (1893) 55 Fed. 642, 5 C. C. A. 225, reversing judgment (C. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 730.

In Act 1897, par. 454, the definition there given the term "'statuary' as used in this act," governs the provision for "statuary" in section 3, and the reciprocal commercial agreements negotiated as provided in said section. Altman & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 161, judgment affirmed B. Altman & Co. v. Same (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 593, 224 U. S. 583, 56 L. Ed. 894.

Held, that a "cistern" in several pieces, with figures sculptured thereon in almost full relief, is "statuary," within the meaning of that term as used in Act 1897, par. 454. U. S. v. American Express Co. (C. C. 1905) 139 Fed. 89.

A marble figure, produced in the establishment of a professional sculptor, under whose instructions the original model was made, and who gave such oral instructions and other supervision as were necessary to insure a faithful reproduction of the design, is held to be "statuary," within the meaning of paragraph 454, Act 1897, where it is provided that that term, wherever used in the act, "shall be understood to include only such statuary * * * as is the professional production of a statuary or sculptor only." Sibbel v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 124 Fed. 105.

Statues carved out of wood by a professional sculptor may be admitted free of duty, as "the professional production of a statuary or sculptor," although the design was produced by an artist in the United States. Morris European &

American Exp. Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 643.

Under R. S. § 2504, the artistic work of a professional sculptor is liable to a duty of 10 per cent. ad valorem, and is not to be classed with "all manufactures of marble not otherwise provided for," which are liable to a duty of 50 per cent. ad valorem. Viti v. Tutton (C. C. 1882) 14 Fed. 241, judgment affirmed Tutton v. Viti (1883) 2 Sup. Ct. 687, 108 U. S. 312, 27 L. Ed. 737.

A winged figure of a woman, concededly a sculpture, upon a pedestal made of a square shaft with a carved capital and base, the testimony showing that the monument was ordered, designed, and made as an entirety, was dutiable as an entirety under paragraph 470, Act 1909. U. S. v. Haaker (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 508.

Highly ornamented columns made of solid marble were found by the board to be sculptures and dutiable as such under paragraph 470, Act 1909. On the whole record it does not appear that the finding of the board is clearly against the weight of the testimony. U. S. v. Sterling Bronze Co. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 389.

Bronze and ivory statue held dutiable as a sculpture under paragraph 470, Act 1909. U. S. v. Masson (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 168.

Statuary wrought from metal.—In Act 1897, par. 454, the provision for "statuary * * * wrought * * * from metal" does not require metal to be the only component, or even the component of chief value. It is enough if it so greatly predominate as to characterize the entire work. U. S. v. Tiffany & Co. (1908) 160 Fed. 408, 87 C. C. A. 360.

The provision for "statuary * * * wrought by hand * * * from metal," in Act 1897, par. 454, does not include a bronze statue cast in a foundry by artisans from a model that was made in plastic material by an artist, but upon which he did little or no retouching. Altman & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 161, judgment affirmed B. Altman & Co. v. U. S. (1912) 32 Sup. Ct. 593, 224 U. S. 583, 56 L. Ed. 894.

653. Works of art, drawings, engravings, photographic pictures, and philosophical and scientific apparatus brought by professional artists, lecturers, or scientists arriving from abroad for use by them temporarily for exhibition and in illustration, promotion, and encouragement of art, science, or industry in the United States, and not for sale, shall be admitted free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe; but bonds shall be given for the payment to the United States of such duties as may be imposed by law upon any and all such articles as shall not be exported within six months after such importation: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, extend such period for a further term of six months in cases where application therefor shall be made.

654. Works of art, collections in illustration of the progress of the arts, sciences, agriculture, or manufactures, photographs, works in terra cotta, parian, pottery, or porcelain, antiquities and artistic copies thereof in metal or other material, imported in good faith for exhibition at a fixed place by any State or by any society or institution established for the encouragement of the arts, science, agriculture, or education, or for a municipal corporation, and all like articles imported in good faith by any society or association, or for a municipal corporation, for the purpose of erecting a public monument, and not intended for sale nor for any other purpose than herein expressed; but bond shall be given under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, for the payment of lawful duties which may accrue should any of the articles aforesaid be sold, transferred, or used contrary to this provision, and such articles shall be subject, at any time, to examination and inspection by the proper officers of the customs: Provided, That the privileges of this and the preceding paragraph shall not be allowed to associations or corporations engaged in or connected with business of a private or commercial character

Associations.—A company incorporated in this country for the purpose of importing pictures and paintings for purposes of exhibition and then reexportation, and which is established in part as an advertising adjunct of a commercial firm of art dealers and publishers, whose name it adopts, whose place of business it uses gratuitously, and whose employé is its general manager, is not an "association established in good faith * * * expressly and solely for the promotion and encouragement of science, art or industry," within the meaning of paragraph 758, Act 1890, which permits the free importation of paintings, etc., by such associations. U. S. v. Boussod-Valadon Co. (1896) 71 Fed. 503, 18 C. C. A. 223, reversing Boussod-Valadon Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 718.

Clubs.—The principal purpose of the Olympic Club is to encourage athletics, and to do this a regular corps of teachers is employed to give systematic physical instruction. Such an institution is engaged in educational work, and a statue artistic in character, imported for exhibition in the club, falls within the terms of paragraph 715, Act 1909, and was entitled to free entry. U. S. v. Olympic Club (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 251.

Picture frames.—Picture frames, containing oil paintings which are imported into this county for exhibition purposes, are not to be treated as parts of "works of art" and therefore are not entitled to entry free of duty under paragraph 702, Act July 24, 1897 (30 Stat. 203). (1904) 25 Op. Atty. Gen. 276.

655. Works of art, productions of American artists residing temporarily abroad, or other works of art, including pictorial paintings on glass, imported expressly for presentation to a national institution or to any State or municipal corporation or incorporated religious society, college, or other public institution, including stained or painted window glass or stained or painted glass windows imported to be used in houses of worship, and excluding any article, in whole or in part, molded, cast, or mechanically wrought from metal within twenty years prior to importation; but such exemption shall be subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

Notes of Decisions

Altars.—Held, that the provision in paragraph 703, Act 1897, for "works of art" intended for presentation to religious societies, includes certain marble altars imported for presentation to a church, which were carved by a professional sculptor and were of a value of $1,800. U. S. v. Ecclesiastical Art Works (C. C. 1904) 139 Fed. 798, judgment affirmed (1905) 142 Fed. 1038, 71 C. C. A. 685.

Plaintiff imported a church altar and reredos for presentation to a church in New York. It was originally designed by a leading American artist in this style of church architecture. A French artist of reputation made original designs for the angels, and impressed his personality upon the work. Held, that it is a "work of art," within the meaning of Act 1894, par. 686. Morris European & American Exp. Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1898) 85 Fed. 964.

American artist.—A native Porto Rican, an artist by profession, although temporarily living in France on the 11th day of April, 1899, is, under section 7 of the act of April 12, 1900, a citizen of Porto Rico, and, as such, is an American artist, whose paintings upon importation into the United States are entitled to the privileges provided in paragraph 703, Act 1897. (1902) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 40.

An artist of foreign birth, but who has resided in the United States for 14 years and has declared his intention to become a citizen thereof, may properly be treated as an American artist within the meaning of the provision in Act 1883 declaring free of duty "works of art, painting, etc., the production of American artists." (1885) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 163.

Casts of sculpture.—The omission from Act 1897, par. 638, of the provisions of prior tariff acts for the free entry of casts, was not intended to prevent the free entry of such casts as also come within the designation of "casts of sculpture," which, under paragraph 649, are entitled to free entry where specially imported, in good faith, for the use and by the order of any society incorporated or established solely for religious, philosophical, scientific, educational, or literary purposes. Benziger v. U. S. (1904) 24 Sup. Ct. 189, 192 U. S. 38, 48 L. Ed. 331, reversing judgment (1902) 113 Fed. 1016, 51 C. C. A. 587.

Residence abroad.—The regulation prescribed by the secretary of the treasury that an artist can live abroad only five years, with right to have his paintings admitted free of duty, under Act 1897, par. 703, as the product of an American artist residing temporarily abroad, cannot be sustained. Knoedler v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 113 Fed. 999.

Stained window glass.—Under Act 1890, stained-glass windows containing representations of saints and other Biblical subjects, and imported in a fragmentary state for the use of a convent, are not exempt from duty, under paragraph 677, as "paintings," specially imported in good faith, for the use of any society or institution established for religious purposes, but are dutiable at 45 per cent. ad valorem, under paragraph 122, as "stained or painted window glass and stained or painted glass windows," "wholly or partly manufactured, and not specially provided for in this act." In re Perry (C. C. 1891) 47 Fed. 110, reversed U. S. v. Perry (1892) 13 Sup. Ct. 26, 146 U. S. 71, 36 L. Ed. 890.

The legislative history of that portion of paragraph 655, Act 1913, that relates to painted or stained glass windows shows clearly, and the language itself must be taken to show, that it is a complete and independent provision, in no wise modified or affected by the clause of exclusion in the paragraph. Houses of worship are those designated as beneficiaries in importing free of duty painted or stained glass windows, and they are so entitled whether incorporated or not. Perry, Ryer & Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 201.

Works of art.—The provision in Act 1897, par. 703, for "works of art," does not include fashion plate drawings, which, though possessing artistic merit, are for purely practical and utilitarian purposes. Harper & Bros. v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 172 Fed. 289.

The term "works of art," in Act 1897, par. 703, held not to include a monument on which the only free sculpture is the cornice, a relief bust, and a garland of flowers, all covering only a very slight area of the whole surface. F. B. Vandegrift & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 162 Fed. 1003.

Pen and ink drawings of an artistic character, of a proposed building, produced by an architect, are within paragraph 703, Act 1897, relating to "works of art, the production of American artists." Young v. Bohn (C. C. 1905) 141 Fed. 471.

Silk banners, embroidered by hand in designs specially prepared by an artist, made and imported expressly for presentation to an incorporated church society, to be used in connection with its service, and which derive their value from their artistic appearance, and not from the fact that they are embroidered, are "works of art," entitled to free entry, under paragraph 686, Act 1894, and are not dutiable as silk embroidery, under paragraph 301. In re Hempstead (C. C. 1899) 95 Fed. 969.

656. Works of art (except rugs and carpets), collections in illustration of the progress of the arts, works in bronze, marble, terra cotta, parian, pottery, or porcelain, artistic antiquities, and objects of art of ornamental character or educational value which shall have been produced more than one hundred years prior to the date of importation, but the free importation of such objects shall be subject to such regulations as to proof of antiquity as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

Notes of Decisions

Collection of antiquities.—A bronze statuette, imported to become part of a collection of antiquities, held not a collection of antiquities. See paragraph 652.

A single antique opal held not free of duty as a collection of antiquities. See paragraph 357.

Picture frame held not free as antiquity. See paragraph 176.

Where a known and acknowledged collection of antiquities was purchased abroad, and sent to this country, the fact that a single vase of such collection chanced to be sent with a separate invoice, and without its companions, does not disturb its character as a "collection of antiquities," admissible free of duty under Act 1890, par. 524. In re Glaenzer (1893) 55 Fed. 642, 5 C. C. A. 225, reversing judgment (C. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 730.

Four tapestries, of different sizes, each belonging to a period prior to 1700, and purchased for the purpose of being added to a collection of curiosities and bric-a-brac, constitute a "collection of antiquities," within Act 1890, par. 524. Id.

Several different antique articles, never assembled together in Europe, but imported in separate ships, under separate invoices, could not be entered free, under paragraph 524, Act 1890, as a "collection of antiquities," although the importer intended to add them to a collection in this country. Tiffany v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 729, followed Davis v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 72 Fed. 49, judgment affirmed (1896) 77 Fed. 172, 23 C. C. A. 113.

A collection of antiquities produced prior to the year 1700 held entitled to free entry under Act 1890, par. 524, irrespective of the intention of the importer to sell the collection, or parts thereof, after its importation. Godwin v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 739.

Antique tapestries, produced prior to the year 1700, imported by dealers in antiquities, to be placed among like articles owned and kept by them in their trade, or for sale, are dutiable, under Act 1890, par. 392, and not entitled to free entry, under paragraph 524, as a collection of antiquities. In re Glaenzer (C. C. 1894) 67 Fed. 532.

The "collections of antiquities" which are made free of duty by Act 1890, par. 524, include only collections of such antique articles as are commonly recognized to be suitable for "cabinet collections" according to the taste and usage of collectors of antiquarian and artistic curiosities. Id.

A painting on canvas, nine by three feet in dimensions, representing a mythological subject, and produced prior to the year 1700, which was imported, together with certain antique tapestries, by a dealer in antiquities, is not entitled to free entry, under paragraph 524, Act 1890, as part of a collection of antiquities. Id.

Two articles only, produced at a period prior to the year 1700, do not constitute a collection of antiquities, within the meaning of Act 1890, par. 524, entitling to entry, free of duty, "cabinets of old coins and medals, and other collections of antiquities." In re Stern (C. C. 1892) 49 Fed. 730, judgment reversed U. S. v. Glaenzer (1893) 55 Fed. 642, 5 C. C. A. 225.

Whether or not an article is within Tariff Act 1890, par. 524, does not depend upon the fact whether it has belonged to a collection of antiquities, or is imported to add to such a collection, but whether it is a part of such a collection when it is brought in. Id.

A portrait by an old master, imported by the owner of a collection of such portraits, who has purchased it for purpose of adding it to his collection, should be admitted free under Act 1883, par. 669, which places on the free list "cabinets of coins, medals, and all other collections of antiquities," although the portrait in question is the only one of the collection that is imported at the time. Marine v. Robson (C. C. 1891) 47 Fed. 34, appeal dismissed (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 984, 145 U. S. 645, 36 L. Ed. 856.

The provision in the free list of the tariff act of 1883, for "cabinets of coins, medals, and all other collections of antiquities," does not cover antiquities which do not form a collection. Baumgarten v. Magone (C. C. 1890) 41 Fed. 770.

Curtains made of lace, the product of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, and rugs, the product of the sixteenth century, imported at different times as articles of merchandise, are not exempt from duty by virtue of the provision in the free list for "collection of antiquities," but are properly dutiable, under the provisions in the schedules for laces and rugs. Id.

R. S. § 2505, declares that, among other articles, "cabinets of coins, medals, and all other collections of antiquities," and "collections of antiquities especially imported, and not for sale," shall be exempt from duty. Held to give effect to the second clause, that only such collections are embraced in the first clause as are ejusdem generis with coins and medals. U. S. v. Terra Cotta Vases (C. C. 1883) 18 Fed. 508.

The item "antiquities," in the "free list," dating back to Act July 30, 1846 (9 Stat. 42), has ever since continued without change, and has the same meaning now as it had then. Sixty-Five Terra Cotta Vases (D. C. 1882) 10 Fed. 880.

Oriental rugs.—An antique oriental rug, owned by a third person, but imported by a dealer in antiquities, is free of duty, under Act 1890, par. 524. In re Glaenzer (C. C. 1894) 67 Fed. 532, following (1893) 55 Fed. 642, 5 C. C. A. 225.

A single oriental rug of the sixteenth century, bought in Paris, France, at nearly the same time with one other antique rug and three articles of antique tapestries and four other oriental rugs purchased in Constantinople by the same purchaser, for the purpose of being added to a collection of old furniture, bric-a-brac, etc., in the private house of the owner in New York, although not imported in the same vessel as the other articles, is duty free under Act 1883, par. 669. In re Godwin (C. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 361.

Proof of antiquity.—On entry certain merchandise was claimed as entitled to free entry. This claim was supported by an affidavit in which all the articles were not claimed to be free of duty, and the articles so omitted were withdrawn by counsel from consideration here. The evidence that the goods are artistic antiquities is too weak and confused to warrant the finding of the board that they are dutiable should be disturbed, based as this was on a thorough inspection of the goods by an examiner. Bowles v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 474.

Section 2 of the Treasury Regulations governing the importation of artistic antiquities requires an "affidavit of the owner." The affidavit here was made by the consignee. By the terms of the tariff law, subsection 1 of section 28, the consignee is to be deemed the owner of the property consigned; and it will be assumed the Treasury Regulations were framed in view of this provision of law. Compliance was shown here as to the affidavit. Finman v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 262.

It is not within the discretion of a collector to waive the production of proof of the facts going to show an article is an antique within the last provision of paragraph 717, Act 1909. The regulations governing the admission of antiques were in force at the time the lyre in a screen here was imported. These regulations unconditionally required that the specified papers in proof of antiquity should be filed on entry of the importation. The regulations were not complied with. Kronfeld, Saunders & Co. v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 60.

It is a reasonable treasury regulation that requires an affidavit to be made by the importer of an antique showing why the article is regarded as an antique; and that requires further a described kind of declaration by the foreign seller of the antique as to the character and history of this. That the importation was brought in as personal baggage does not exempt the owner from showing a compliance with this regulation, both as to the affidavit and the declaration. Bradley Martin, Jr., v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 384.

The regulation in terms requires the affidavit and the declaration to be produced upon entry, and the fact that no objection was made before the collector that the declaration was wanting will not excuse the importer from showing, on appeal to the board of general appraisers, that the requirements had been complied with at the time of entry. Id.

Conformity to the treasury regulations governing the free entry of artistic antiques is a condition precedent to the right accruing under the statute. Conformity is here shown. U. S. v. Morris European & American Exp. Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 146. See, also, Same v. Dominici (1897) 78 Fed. 334, 24 C. C. A. 116.

The question is one of proper compliance with treasury regulations governing the admission duty free of works of art produced more than 100 years prior to the date of importation. The collector assessed the goods for duty. The character of the affidavits of record, ex parte as these are, and unsupported as they are, does not warrant a reversal of the collector's action, presumably correct, as this must be considered. U. S. v. Thomas (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 142.

The regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury, duly promulgated, requiring an importer who desires to obtain the benefit of paragraph 717, Act 1909, to file at the time he makes entry of his merchandise certain affidavits, is a requirement applying to merchandise in a bonded warehouse at the time the act of 1909 went into effect; and as to merchandise of this description the regulations will be taken to refer to the time when the necessary steps were taken to withdraw the goods from bond, duty ascertained and liquidated, a delivery permit issued, and not to a later time. Gump Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 137.

By Act 1897, the Treasury Department was duly and lawfully authorized to prescribe regulations governing the allowance of exemptions from duty on works of art imported expressly for presentation; and the requirement in that act that there should be filed with the entry of such works of art an affidavit showing the importation to be of the kind contemplated by the statute must be taken to mean the affidavit so prescribed should have been filed at the time entry was made and not later. McBride v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 293.

Works of art.—The importer here clearly limited himself in his protest to a claim under the 20-year clause, paragraph 717, Act 1909, and the question now presented is whether that paragraph confers an exclusive and final jurisdiction upon the Secretary of the Treasury to determine a particular importation is or is not a work of art of a described kind. The Secretary has asserted no such power, and properly, for the intention in the statute seems manifestly to have been to confer upon that official authority to prescribe rules and regulations according to which all questions as to the age of works of art are to be determined by the ordinary tribunals having jurisdiction in customs cases. Bowling Green Storage & Van Co. v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 309.

Where the sole artistic feature of furniture was the carving on it, and this had been recently applied, it could not be admitted free. U. S. v. Morris European & American Express Co. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 146.

657. Zaffer. (38 Stat. 114. 39 Stat.)

This was the first section of the Underwood Tariff Act of 1913, cited above, entitled "An act to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenues for the Government, and for other purposes."

This section was amended, and portions thereof repealed, by Act April 27, 1916, c. 93, 39 Stat., and by Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, §§ 500–502, 600. Said amendments and repeals are indicated by notes under the paragraphs of this section so amended or repealed.

Section II of said Underwood Tariff Act, imposing a tax upon incomes, was superseded by Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, Title I, post, §§ 6319–6336.

Section III of said Underwood Tariff Act amending the Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, 26 Stat. 131, is set forth post, §§ 5519–5524, 5526–5528, 5529–5533, 5591, 5592, 5594–5602, 5656, 5718, 5791.

Provisions of section IV of said Underwood Tariff Act, relating to duties on imports, are set forth post, §§ 5292–5318; and other provisions of said section are set forth post, §§ 5668, 5672, 5673, 5724, 6137.

All laws affecting imports into the United States apply to articles, etc., coming from the Canal Zone, Isthmus of Panama, by Act March 2, 1905, c. 1311, post, § 5323.

Provisions for lower rates of duty on specified articles imported from Canada when Canada should impose reciprocal rates on specified articles imported from the United States, and for exemption from duty of other articles imported from Canada when specified articles from the United States should be admitted to Canada free of duty, were made by Act July 26, 1911, c. 3, § 1, post, § 5326.

Grain brought, in wagons, etc., by Canadian farmers, to be ground in mills in the United States, was not to be deemed imported or liable to import duties, by Act Jan. 9, 1883, c. 17, post, § 5320.

Articles, live stock, or wild or other animals, sent out of the United States for exhibition at any public exposition, etc., held in a foreign country, may be returned to the United States without payment of customs duty, by Act May 18, 1896, c. 195, and Act March 3, 1899, c. 454, post, §§ 5321, 5322.

Other changes in the free list and in the dutiable list were made by Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, §§ 500, 501, post, §§ 5291a, 5291b.

§ 5291a. (Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, § 500.) Dyestuffs; free list; dutiable list.

On and after the day following the passage of this Act, except as otherwise specially provided for in this title, there shall be levied, collected, and paid upon the articles named in this section when imported from any foreign country into the United States or into any of its possessions, except the Philippine Islands and the islands of Guam and Tutuila, the rates of duties which are prescribed in this title, namely:

FREE LIST

Group I. Acenaphthene, anthracene having a purity of less than twenty-five per centum, benzol, carbazol having a purity of less than twenty-five per centum, cresol, cumol, fluorene, metacresol having a purity of less than ninety per centum, methylanthracene, methylnaphthalene, naphthalene having a solidifying point less than seventy-nine degrees centigrade, orthocresol having a purity of less than ninety per centum, paracresol having a purity of less than ninety per centum, pyridin, quinolin, toluol, xylol, crude coal tar, pitch of coal tar, dead or creosote oil, anthracene oil, all other distillates which on being subjected to distillation yield in the portion distilling below two hundred degrees centigrade a quantity of tar acids less than five per centum of the original distillate, and all other products that are found naturally in coal tar, whether produced or obtained from coal tar or other source, and not otherwise specially provided for in this title, shall be exempt from duty.

DUTIABLE LIST

Group II. Amidonaphthol, amidophenol, amidosalicylic acid, anilin oil, anilin salts, anthracene having a purity of twenty-five per centum or more, anthraquinone, benzoic acid, benzaldehyde, benzylchloride, benzidin, binitrobenzol, binitrochlorobenzol, binitronaphthalene, binitrotoluol, carbazol having a purity of twenty-five per centum or more, chlorophthalic acid, cumidin, dimethylanilin, dianisidin, dioxynaphthalene, diphenylaimin, metacresol having a purity of ninety per centum or more, methylanthraquinone, metanilic acid, naphthalene having a solidifying point of seventy-nine degrees centigrade or above, naphthylamin, naphthol, naphthylenediamin, nitrobenzol, nitrotoluol, nitronaphthalene, nitranilin, nitrophenylenediamin, nitrotoluylenediamin, orthocresol having a purity of ninety per centum or more, paracresol having a purity of ninety per centum or more, phenol, phthalic acid, phthalic anhydride, phenylenediamin, phenylnaphthylamin, resorcin, salicylic acid, sulphanilic acid, toluidin, tolidin, toluylenediamin, xylidin, or any sulphoacid or sulphoacid salt of any of the foregoing, all similar products obtained, derived, or manufactured in whole or in part from the products provided for in Group I, and all distillates which on being subjected to distillation yield in the portion distilling below two hundred degrees centigrade a quantity of tar acids equal to or more than five per centum of the original distillate, all the foregoing not colors, dyes, or stains, photographic chemicals, medicinals, flavors, or explosives, and not otherwise provided for in this title, and provided for in the paragraphs of the Act of October third, nineteen hundred and thirteen, which are hereinafter specifically repealed by section five hundred and two, fifteen per centum ad valorem.

Group III. All colors, dyes, or stains whether soluble or not in water, color acids, color bases, color lakes, photographic chemicals, medicinals, flavors, synthetic phenolic resin, or explosives, not otherwise specially provided for in this title, when obtained, derived, or manufactured in whole or in part from any of the products provided for in Groups I and II, natural alizarin and indigo, and colors, dyes, or color lakes obtained, derived, or manufactured therefrom, thirty per centum ad valorem. (39 Stat.)

This section and the two sections next following constituted a part of "An act to increase the revenue and for other purposes," cited above. Section 900 of said act provides that if any part of the act is adjudged invalid, the invalidity of such part shall not affect the other portions of the act. Section 902 of such act provides that the act shall take effect on the day following its passage unless otherwise specially provided and repeals all inconsistent acts. Certain other sections of said act, amending and repealing portions of Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § 1, are incorporated therein in their proper places. See ante, § 5291. Other sections of said act are set forth post, under Chapter B of this Title, under Title XXXV, "Internal Revenue," and under Title LVI D, "Federal Trade Commission, and Prevention of Unfair Competition."

The words "this title," as used in this section, refer to Title V of said Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, "Dyestuffs," which said Title consisted of this section and the two sections next following.

Notes of Decisions

See notes under § 5291, par. 1, ante.

§ 5291b. (Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, § 501.) Articles dutiable, and rates of duty; schedules and free list.

On and after the day following the passage of this Act, in addition to the duties provided in section five hundred, there shall be levied, collected, and paid upon all articles contained in Group II a special duty of 2½ cents per pound, and upon all articles contained in Group III (except natural and synthetic alizarin, and dyes obtained from alizarin, anthracene, and carbazol; natural and synthetic indigo and all indigoids, whether or not obtained from indigo; and medicinals and flavors), a special duty of 5 cents per pound.

During the period of five years beginning five years after the passage of this Act such special duties shall be annually reduced by twenty per centum of the rate imposed by this section, so that at the end of such period such special duties shall no longer be assessed, levied, or collected; but if, at the expiration of five years from the date of the passage of this Act, the President finds that there is not being manufactured or produced within the United States as much as sixty per centum in value of the domestic consumption of the articles mentioned in Groups II and III of section five hundred, he shall by proclamation so declare, whereupon the special duties imposed by this section on such articles shall no longer be assessed, levied, or collected. (39 Stat.)

See notes to preceding section.

Notes of Decisions

See notes under § 5291, par. 1, ante.

§ 5291c. (Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, § 502.) Articles dutiable; rates, schedules, and free list; repeal.

Paragraphs twenty, twenty-one, twenty-two, and twenty-three and the words "salicylic acid" in paragraph one of Schedule A of section one of an Act entitled "An Act to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes," approved October third, nineteen hundred and thirteen, and paragraphs three hundred and ninety-four, four hundred and fifty-two, and five hundred and fourteen, and the words "carbolic" and "phthalic," in paragraph three hundred and eighty-seven of the "free list" of section one of said Act, and so much of said Act or any existing law or parts of law as may be inconsistent with this title are hereby repealed. (39 Stat.)

See notes to § 5291a, ante. See, also, notes under the various paragraphs of § 5291a, indicating the amendments and repeals of said section by this section, and other sections of this act, and other acts.

Notes of Decisions

See notes under § 5291, pars. 1, 20–23, ante.

§ 5292. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, A.) Negotiation by President of trade agreements with foreign nations authorized.

A. For the purpose of readjusting the present duties on importations into the United States and at the same time to encourage the export trade of this country, the President of the United States is authorized and empowered to negotiate trade agreements with foreign nations wherein mutual concessions are made looking toward freer trade relations and further reciprocal expansion of trade and commerce: Provided, however, That said trade agreements before becoming operative shall be submitted to the Congress of the United States for ratification or rejection. (38 Stat. 192.)

This and the 26 paragraphs next following were subdivisions A–J, L, and P–U, of section IV of the Underwood Tariff Act of 1913, cited above.

The provisions of other subdivisions of the section, K, M, N, subsec. 1, and O, relating to the collection of duties, are set forth post, §§ 5668, 5672, 5673, 5724.

Subsection 2 of subdivision N, providing for the manufacture of alcohol free of tax for denaturalization only, is set forth post, § 6137.

Notes of Decisions

In general.—Reciprocal commercial agreements made with foreign countries under the authority of section 3, Act 1897, cannot legally extend the scope of said section. U. S. v. Julius Wile Bro. & Co. (1904) 130 Fed. 331, 64 C. C. A. 577, affirming judgment (C. C. 1903) 124 Fed. 1023.

The question whether certain articles upon which a specific duty is imposed by name are, like certain other articles, within a treaty stipulation for nondiscriminating duties is exclusively for congress. Taylor v. Morton (C. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 13,799.

The stipulation in a treaty with a foreign power, to the effect that no higher or other duties shall be imposed on the importation into the United States of any article, the produce or manufacture of the dominion of the treaty-making power, * * * than are or shall be payable on the like articles being the produce or manufacture of any other foreign country, held not to prevent congress from passing an act exempting from duty like products and manufactures imported from any particular foreign dominion it may see fit. Bartram v. Robertson (C. C. 1883) 15 Fed. 212, judgment affirmed (1887) 7 Sup. Ct. 1115, 122 U. S. 116, 30 L. Ed. 1118.

A stipulation in a treaty that "no higher or other duties shall be imposed on the importation into the United States of any article, the produce or manufacture of the dominion of the treaty-making power, * * * than are or shall be payable on the like articles, being the produce or manufacture of any other foreign country," does not prevent congress from passing an act exempting from duty like products and manufactures imported from any particular foreign dominion it may see fit. Whitney v. Robertson (C. C. 1884) 21 Fed. 566, judgment affirmed (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 456, 124 U. S. 190, 31 L. Ed. 386.

Whether the territory from which goods are imported into the United States is an integral part of a foreign country with which the United States has a reciprocal trade agreement, so that the importation is governed by the provisions of such agreement, or a colony to which the agreement does not apply, is a judicial question for the courts, and not a political one upon which the determination of an executive department of the government is conclusive. Tartar Chemical Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 726, judgment reversed U. S. v. Tartar Chemical Co. (1903) 127 Fed. 944, 62 C. C. A. 576.

In order to be entitled to the benefits of the reciprocal commercial agreements negotiated with foreign countries, under Act June 24, 1897, c. 11, § 3, importers must furnish satisfactory evidence that their importations were both produced in and exported from the country with which the agreement was made. Migliavacca Wine Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 148 Fed. 142.

The president has no power to issue the proclamation provided for in section 3, Act Oct. 1, 1890, to take effect in futuro, nor has he the power to reimpose duties on one or more of five articles enumerated in said section but not on the others. In the proclamation the particular country on whose products the duties are to be reimposed should be named. (1892) 20 Op. Atty. Gen. 290.

In case of conflict between a treaty and a subsequent statute, the latter governs. (1894) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 80.

England.—By a convention of December 22, 1815, the terms of which, through subsequent agreements, remain in full force and effect, it was stipulated by and between the United States and his Britannic Majesty that "no higher or other duties shall be imposed on the importation into the United States of any article the growth, produce, or manufacture of his Britannic Majesty's territories in Europe * * * than are or shall be payable on the like articles being the growth, produce, or manufacture of any other foreign country." In pursuance of a provision contained in the tariff act of 1897, looking to the arrangement of commercial agreements in which reciprocal and equivalent concessions might be secured in favor of the products and manufactures of the United States, a commercial agreement between the United States and the republic of France was negotiated and proclaimed June 1, 1898, in which it was reciprocally agreed that during the life of the agreement certain articles named therein should be admitted at designated rates on importation from one of the countries to the other. Among the articles so designated brandies or other spirits manufactured or distilled from grain or other materials were to be subject to a duty of $1.75 per gallon. The appellants subsequent to the date of this trade agreement with France imported into the United States from England certain whiskies and other spirituous liquors, and assert here that the favored nation clause in the existing convention between this country and Great Britian applies and that they are entitled to an allowance on their importation from England of the same rate of duty they would be entitled to if their importation had been brought in from France, namely, $1.75 per gallon. The goods were assessed at the port of New York at $2.25 per proof gallon, under paragraph 292, Act 1897. Held, a reciprocity agreement is based on reciprocal considerations moving from each party thereto to the other, separate obligations being assumed in return for benefits granted; and other countries, not parties to the agreement, bearing in no sense the burden of the obligations, cannot properly be taken to share in the accruing benefits. It would be, in the case at bar, to concede to Great Britain without a consideration what was conceded to France only on a consideration if these goods were permitted entry at the rate fixed in the French agreement; and the consignment was dutiable as assessed under paragraph 292, Act 1897. Shaw v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 426. See, also, Whitney v. Robertson (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 456, 124 U. S. 190, 31 L. Ed. 386; Bartram v. Same (1887) 7 Sup. Ct. 1115, 122 U. S. 116, 30 L. Ed. 1118.

France.—In regard to the reciprocal commercial agreement between the United States and France, proclaimed May 30, 1898 (30 Stat. 1774), which provided for reduced rates of duty on merchandise "the product of the soil or industry of France," it was arranged by the governments of the two countries to settle the question whether Algeria was a part of France within the meaning of the agreement by an abandonment of the contention on the part of France that it was so included, together with an acceptance in lieu thereof of an additional agreement extending the provisions of the original agreement to Algeria. Held, that this arrangement is binding on the courts, and that merchandise from Algeria, imported into the United States before such arrangement was made, is not subject to the reduced rates of duty provided on such merchandise when imported from France proper. U. S. v. Tartar Chemical Co. (1903) 127 Fed. 944, 62 C. C. A. 576, reversing judgment Tartar Chemical Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 726.

Article 1 of the agreement between the United States and France, proclaimed August 22, 1902, which was amendatory of and additional to the reciprocal commercial agreement proclaimed May 30, 1898 (30 Stat. 1774), and provided that the earlier agreement "shall apply also to Algeria," was intended to have a prospective operation only. Id.

Cordials are within the provision for "spirits manufactured or distilled from grain or other materials," in section 3, Act 1897, and, when imported from France, are subject to the reduced rate of duty provided for such spirits in the reciprocal commercial agreement with that country (30 Stat. 1774), negotiated under the authority of said section. U. S. v. Julius Wile Bro. & Co. (1904) 130 Fed. 331, 64 C. C. A. 577, affirming judgment (C. C. 1903) 124 Fed. 1023.

A bill of lading for certain merchandise was made out in Switzerland, but the invoice was certified by a United States consul in France, and the evidence showed France to have been the country of production, and from which the merchandise was exported. Held, that the importation was within the reciprocal commercial agreement with France and the United States, May 30, 1898, negotiated under the authority of section 3, Act 1897. U. S. v. Luyties (1904) 130 Fed. 333, 64 C. C. A. 579, affirming judgment (C. C. 1903) 124 Fed. 977.

The reciprocal commercial agreement with France, negotiated under Act 1897, which allows a reduction of duty on "brandies or other spirits," held to supersede the provision of a different rate by Schedule G, § 1, par. 263, of said act, on the alcohol in excess of 10 per cent. found in fruit preserved in spirits. La Manna, Azema & Farnan v. U. S. (1906) 144 Fed. 683, 75 C. C. A. 485, judgment reversed U. S. v. La Manna, Azema & Farnan (1908) 166 Fed. 751, 92 C. C. A. 431.

The question whether Algeria is a part of France and within the scope of the president's proclamation of May 30, 1898, putting in force a reciprocal commercial agreement between France and the United States, as authorized by Act 1897, or is merely a colony, and not affected by such agreement, is one which must be determined solely by the laws of France, and when the French minister of foreign affairs and the diplomatic and consular representatives of that country in the United States unite in stating that since the decree of October, 1870, abolishing the colonial government of Algeria, dividing it into departments, and adding them to the departments of European France, it has been an integral part of the republic of France, their statement should be accepted as conclusive by a court of this country in the administration of its customs laws, and in giving effect to the agreement between the two nations, entered into in a spirit of amity, with desire to improve their commercial relations. Tartar Chemical Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 726, judgment reversed U. S. v. Tartar Chemical Co. (1903) 127 Fed. 944, 62 C. C. A. 576.

The reciprocal commercial agreement entered into between the United States and France under section 3, Act 1897, and providing for a reduction in the duty on "brandies, or other spirits," was the result of negotiations, and representations had with reference, among other things to liqueurs and cordials, and the French copy of said agreement contains the word "liqueurs." Held, that merchandise known as "liqueurs" is included in the agreement. Nicholas v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 122 Fed. 892.

The cordial known as "Chartreuse," imported from France, is a liqueur, and is included in the provision for a reduced rate of duty on "brandies, or other spirits," in the reciprocal commercial agreement between the United States and France (Proc. May 30, 1898, 30 Stat. 1774). Id.

Where it was proved that absinthe imported was manufactured in Pontarlier, France, the fact that the bill of lading was dated at Basle, Switzerland, the point of shipment, did not justify a finding that the consignment was not exported from France, and therefore not entitled to admission at reduced rates of duty, under the reciprocity treaty between France and the United States. U. S. v. Luyties (C. C. 1903) 124 Fed. 977, judgment affirmed (1904) 130 Fed. 333, 64 C. C. A. 579.

Absinthe is a liqueur within the French reciprocity agreement, providing for reduced duties on brandies and other spirits. Id.

With respect to merchandise alleged to be within the reciprocal commercial agreement with France as having been both produced in and exported from that country, held, that evidence of those facts should be furnished by a witness who knows them, or from his position may be presumed to know them, and that a deposition by an importer to the effect that he had ordered the goods through a New York agency and that they were consigned to him direct by the exporting establishment in France, but which did not show that he had any further personal knowledge, was incompetent. Migliavacca Wine Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 148 Fed. 142.

Neither the argols of Tunisian or Algerian origin imported from Marseilles are entitled, as products of France, to the benefit of the reciprocal commercial arrangement negotiated between France and the United States under section 3, Act 1897. (1899) 22 Op. Atty. Gen. 477.

Germany.—The reciprocal commercial agreement with Germany, negotiated under Act 1897, which allows a reduction of duty on "spirits," supersedes the provision of a different rate by Schedule G, § 1, par. 263, of said act, on the alcohol in excess of 10 per cent. found in fruit preserved in spirits. Mihalovitch, Fletcher & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1908) 160 Fed. 988.

Hawaii.—The treaty with the king of the Hawaiian Islands, and the act of congress giving it effect, by which molasses from those islands was admitted into the United States free of duty, did not operate upon the previous treaty with the Dominican republic, so as to establish a like exemption as to molasses imported from the latter country. Bartram v. Robertson (C. C. 1883) 15 Fed. 212, affirmed (1887) 7 Sup. Ct. 1115, 122 U. S. 116, 30 L. Ed. 1118; Whitney v. Same (C. C. 1884) 21 Fed. 566; Netherclift v. Same (C. C. 1886) 27 Fed. 737; Kelly v. Hedden (C. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 607.

The treaty with the king of the Hawaiian Islands, and the act giving it effect (19 Stat. 200), by which sugar from those islands was admitted into the United States free of duty, did not operate upon the previous treaty with the Dominican republic, so as to establish a like exemption as to sugar imported from the latter country. Netherclift v. Robertson (C. C. 1886) 27 Fed. 737, writ of error dismissed (1891) 12 Sup. Ct. 986, 145 U. S. 649, 36 L. Ed. 847.

The treaty with the king of the Hawaiian Islands, and the act of congress giving it effect, by which molasses from those islands was admitted into the United States free of duty, did not operate upon the previous treaty with the Dominican republic, so as to establish a like exemption as to molasses imported from the latter country. Kelly v. Hedden (C. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 607.

Italy.—The provision for "statuary" in Act 1897, and in the reciprocal commercial agreement with Italy, negotiated under said section, has the same meaning as in section 1, Schedule N, par. 454, of said tariff act, where it is prescribed that the "term 'statuary' as used in this act shall be understood to include only such statuary as is cut, carved, or otherwise wrought by hand from a solid block or mass of marble, stone or alabaster, or from metal." Bronze statuary, not being covered by this definition, is therefore not covered by said reciprocal agreement. C. B. Richard & Co. v. U. S. (1907) 158 Fed. 1019, 86 C. C. A. 671, affirming judgment (C. C. 1907) 151 Fed. 954.

The tariff on statuary and other works of art (R. S. pp. 478, 479) considered in connection with the treaty of 1871 between the United States and Italy. (1881) 17 Op. Atty. Gen. 223.

That treaty makes no provision, in letter or spirit, as regards the importation, exportation, or prohibition of articles, the produce or manufacture of Italy, where dealt in by Italian citizens residing in Italy, excepting that such importations, etc., shall be upon as favorable a footing as like commerce by English, French, German, or other foreign citizens whatsoever. Id.

Portugal.—The second article of the treaty between the United States and Portugal, of August 26, 1840, provides that vessels of either country, arriving in the ports of the other, either laden or in ballast, shall be treated on their entrance, during their stay, and at their departure, upon the same footing as national vessels coming from the same place, with respect to the duties of tonnage, lighthouse duties, pilotage, port charges, fees of public officers, and all other duties and charges, of whatever kind or denomination, levied upon vessels of commerce. Held, that coffee imported in Portuguese vessels, directly from the place of its growth, was not exempt from duty, under the tariff act of July 30, 1846, as imported directly from the place of its growth in foreign vessels, entitled by reciprocal treaties to be exempted from discriminating duties, tonnage, and other charges. Oldfield v. Marriott (1850) 51 U. S. (10 How.) 146, 13 L. Ed. 364.

Prussia.—The "most favored nation clause" in the treaty of May 1, 1828, between the United States and the kingdom of Prussia is not violated by paragraph 608, Tariff Act Aug. 27, 1894 (28 Stat. 544), laying a discriminating duty on salt imported from a country which imposes a duty on salt exported from the United States. (1894) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 80.

Paragraph 608, Tariff Act Aug. 27, 1894 (28 Stat. 544), imposing a discriminating duty on salt imported from a country which imposes a duty on salt exported from the United States, does not violate the "most favored nation clause" in the treaty of May 1, 1828, with Prussia. Id.

That treaty is to be taken as operative as respects so much of the German empire as constitutes the kingdom of Prussia. Id.

San Domingo.—Plaintiff imported centrifugal and molasses sugars, the produce and manufacture of San Domingo, similar to sugars produced in Hawaii, which are by treaty admitted free of duty, and contended that they should be admitted free, under article 9 of the treaty with the Dominican republic (15 Stat. 475), which provides that no higher or other duty shall be imposed on the importation into the United States of any article, the growth, produce, or manufacture of the Dominican republic, than on like articles, the growth, produce, or manufacture of any other foreign country. Held, that the treaty is a pledge that there shall be no discriminating legislation, against the importation of the articles mentioned, in favor of articles of like character imported from any other country, and, as it was never designed to prevent special concessions on sufficient considerations touching the importation of specific articles, plaintiff must pay duty. Whitney v. Robertson (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 456, 457, 124 U. S. 190, 31 L. Ed. 386 (affirming judgment [C. C. 1884] 21 Fed. 566); Kelly v. Hedden (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 459, 124 U. S. 196, 31 L. Ed. 389 (affirming judgment [C. C. 1887] 31 Fed. 607).

The act of congress under which duties on centrifugal and molasses sugars from San Domingo are collected, authorized their exaction, and was passed after the treaty with the Dominican republic, and, if there be any conflict between the stipulations of the treaty and the requirements of the law, the latter must control. Id.

The eleventh section of the tariff act of 1883, referring to the sanctity of treaty obligations, notwithstanding that act, was not intended to revive and set in motion the inert features of the treaty with the Dominican republic of February 8, 1867, by which sugar therefrom was admitted free of duty, congress having subsequently to said treaty by various enactments imposed duties on all sugar from foreign countries. Netherclift v. Robertson (C. C. 1886) 27 Fed. 737, writ of error dismissed (1891) 12 Sup. Ct. 986, 145 U. S. 649, 36 L. Ed. 847.

§ 5293. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, B.) Reciprocity treaty with Cuba of Dec. 11, 1902, and Act Dec. 17, 1903, c. 1, for execution thereof, not affected by this act, except as to proviso of treaty abrogated.

B. Nothing in this Act contained shall be so construed as to abrogate or in any manner impair or affect the provisions of the treaty of commercial reciprocity concluded between the United States and the Republic of Cuba on the eleventh day of December, nineteen hundred and two, or the provisions of the Act of Congress heretofore passed for the execution of the same except as to the proviso of article eight of said treaty, which proviso is hereby abrogated and repealed. (38 Stat. 192.)

The treaty of commercial reciprocity mentioned in this subdivision of section V, was a commercial convention set forth in 33 Stat. 2136.

The act for the execution of said treaty, also mentioned in this subdivision, was Act Dec. 17, 1903, c. 1, set forth post, §§ 5324, 5325.

Article 8 of said treaty, including the proviso annexed thereto, which was abrogated and repealed by the last clause of this subdivision of section IV, was set forth in 32 Stat. 2140, as follows:

"The rates of duty herein granted by the United States to the Republic of Cuba are and shall continue during the term of this convention preferential in respect to all like imports from other countries, and, in return for said preferential rates of duty granted to the Republic of Cuba by the United States, it is agreed that the concession herein granted on the part of the said Republic of Cuba to the products of the United States shall likewise be, and shall continue, during the term of this convention, preferential in respect to all like imports from other countries. Provided, That while this convention is in force, no sugar imported from the Republic of Cuba and being the product of the soil or industry of the Republic of Cuba shall be admitted into the United States at a reduction of duty greater than twenty per centum of the rates of duty thereon as provided by the tariff act of the United States approved July 24, 1897, and no sugar, the product of any other foreign country, shall be admitted by treaty or convention into the United States, while this convention is in force, at a lower rate of duty than that provided by the tariff act of the United States approved July 24, 1897."

Notes of Decisions

In general.—See notes under § 5324, post.

§ 5294. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, C.) Duties on articles coming from Philippine Islands; certain articles free of duty; certain articles from United States free of duty in Philippine Islands; taxes equal to internal-revenue taxes on articles coming into United States from Philippine Islands, and into Philippine Islands from United States; internal revenues collected in Philippine Islands to accrue to government thereof; repeal of provision authorizing export duties.

C. There shall be levied, collected, and paid upon all articles coming into the United States from the Philippine Islands the rates of duty which are required to be levied, collected, and paid upon like articles imported from foreign countries: Provided, That all articles, the growth or product of or manufactured in the Philippine Islands from materials the growth or product of the Philippine Islands or of the United States, or of both, or which do not contain foreign materials to the value of more than 20 per centum of their total value, upon which no drawback of customs duties has been allowed therein, coming into the United States from the Philippine Islands shall hereafter be admitted free of duty: Provided, however, That in consideration of the exemptions aforesaid, all articles, the growth, product, or manufacture of the United States, upon which no drawback of customs duties has been allowed therein, shall be admitted to the Philippine Islands from the United States free of duty: And provided further, That the free admission, herein provided, of such articles, the growth, product, or manufacture of the United States, into the Philippine Islands, or of the growth, product, or manufacture, as hereinbefore defined, of the Philippine Islands into the United States, shall be conditioned upon the direct shipment thereof, under a through bill of lading, from the country of origin to the country of destination: Provided, That direct shipment shall include shipments in bond through foreign territory contiguous to the United States: Provided, however, That if such articles become unpacked while en route by accident, wreck, or other casualty, or so damaged as to necessitate their repacking, the same shall be admitted free of duty upon satisfactory proof that the unpacking occurred through accident or necessity and that the merchandise involved is the identical merchandise originally shipped from the United States or the Philippine Islands, as the case may be, and that its condition has not been changed except for such damage as may have been sustained: And provided, That there shall be levied, collected and paid, in the United States, upon articles, goods, wares, or merchandise coming into the United States from the Philippine Islands, a tax equal to the internal-revenue tax imposed in the United States upon the like articles, goods, wares, or merchandise of domestic manufacture; such tax to be paid by internal-revenue stamp or stamps, to be provided by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and to be affixed in such manner and under such regulations as he, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall prescribe; and such articles, goods, wares, or merchandise, shipped from said islands to the United States, shall be exempt from the payment of any tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws of the Philippine Islands: And provided further, That there shall be levied, collected, and paid in the Philippine Islands, upon articles, goods, wares, or merchandise going into the Philippine Islands from the United States, a tax equal to the internal-revenue tax imposed in the Philippine Islands upon the like articles, goods, wares, or merchandise of Philippine Islands manufacture; such tax to be paid by internal-revenue stamps or otherwise, as provided by the laws in the Philippine Islands; and such articles, goods, wares, or merchandise going into the Philippine Islands from the United States shall be exempt from the payment of any tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws of the United States: And provided further, That in addition to the customs taxes imposed in the Philippine Islands, there shall be levied, collected, and paid therein upon articles, goods, wares, or merchandise imported into the Philippine Islands from countries other than the United States, the internal-revenue tax imposed by the Philippine Government on like articles manufactured and consumed in the Philippine Islands or shipped thereto for consumption therein, from the United States: And provided further, That from and after the passage of this Act all internal revenues collected in or for account of the Philippine Islands shall accrue intact to the general government thereof and be paid into the insular treasury: And provided further, That section thirteen of "An Act to raise revenue for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes," approved August fifth, nineteen hundred and nine, is hereby repealed. (38 Stat. 192.)

Previous provisions relating to duties on articles coming from the Philippine Islands, and to the disposition of duties and taxes collected, of Act March 8, 1902, c. 140, §§ 2, 4, 5, 32 Stat. 54, were superseded by those of the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 5, 36 Stat. 83. That section was superseded by these provisions, and was one of the sections repealed by section IV, S, of this act, post, § 5316.

Previous provisions, in the last proviso of section 2 of said Act March 8, 1902, c. 140, 32 Stat. 54, and in a proviso annexed to Act March 3, 1905, c. 1408, § 13, 33 Stat. 975, for reduction of or exemption from export duties on products of the Philippine Islands coming to the United States, were superseded by the provisions relating to that subject of the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 5, repealed by this act, as stated above, and in section 13 of the Philippine Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 8, which was repealed by the last proviso annexed to these provisions.

Said section 13 of the Philippine Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 8, 36 Stat. 173, repealed by said last proviso above, was as follows:

"Sec. 13. That upon the exportation to any foreign country from the Philippine Islands, or the shipment thereof to the United States or any of its possessions, of the following articles, there shall be levied, collected and paid thereon the following export duties: Provided, however, That all articles the growth and product of the Philippine Islands coming directly from said islands to the United States or any of its possessions for use and consumption therein, shall be exempt from any export duties imposed in the Philippine Islands:

"352. Abaca (hemp), gross weight, one hundred kilos., seventy-five cents.

"353. Sugar, gross weight, one hundred kilos., five cents.

"354. Copra, gross weight, one hundred kilos., ten cents.

"355. Tobacco, gross weight:

"(a) Manufactured or unmanufactured, except as otherwise provided, one hundred kilos., one dollar and thirty cents.

"(b) Stems, clippings, and other wastes of tobacco, one hundred kilos., fifty cents."

Duties on all articles, goods, etc., entering the jurisdiction of the Philippine Islands from any place or places, including the United States and its possessions, were prescribed by said Philippine Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 8, 36 Stat. 130. That act superseded the previous act, which revised and amended the tariff laws of the Philippine Islands, Act March 3, 1905, c. 1408, 33 Stat. 928, amended by Act Feb. 26, 1906, c. 509, 34 Stat. 24.

Notes of Decisions

Effect of treaty of Paris.—The effect of the treaty of Paris, by which Spain ceded the Philippine Islands to the United States, and which took effect by the exchange of ratifications, and by the President's proclamation on April 11, 1899, was to repeal the existing tariff duties, so far as related to goods brought from such islands; and goods arriving at a port of entry of the United States from Philippine ports after its taking effect were not subject to duty, although they were shipped prior to said April 11th. American Sugar Refining Co. v. Bidwell (C. C. 1903) 124 Fed. 677.

Internal revenue tax.—Cigars and cigarettes brought into the United States from the Philippine Islands are subject to the internal revenue tax under section 5, Tariff Act Aug. 5, 1909 (36 Stat. 83), and internal revenue stamps in payment of such tax are required to be affixed to the packages containing the same. (1911) 29 Op. Atty. Gen. 77.

Military occupation.—The exaction of duties on importations into Porto Rico from the United States before the cession of the island by treaty was properly made, under the war power, by Gen. Miles' order of July 26, 1898, which merely extends the existing regulations, and by the tariffs of August 19, 1898, and February 1, 1899, prescribed by the president as commander in chief. Dooley v. U. S. (1901) 21 Sup. Ct. 762, 182 U. S. 222, 45 L. Ed. 1074; Armstrong v. Same (1901) 21 Sup. Ct. 827, 182 U. S. 243, 45 L. Ed. 1086.

The existence of an armed insurrection of the natives in the Philippine Islands after the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain did not justify the exaction of duties on imports from the United States into Manila after that date, under an order of the President, issued during the Spanish-American war, that "on the occupation of any forts and places in the Philippine Islands by the forces of the United States" the duties shall be levied and collected "as a military contribution." Lincoln v. U. S. (1905) 25 Sup. Ct. 455, 197 U. S. 419, 49 L. Ed. 816, reversing judgment (1904) 40 Ct. Cl. 1.

Ratification of illegal collections.—The ratification by Congress by Act June 30, 1906, c. 3912, 34 Stat. 636, of the illegal collection of duties on imports to the Philippine Islands which were levied under the President's order of July 12, 1898, between the dates of the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain and the passage of Act July 1, 1902, c. 1369, 32 Stat. 691, enacting a tariff of duties for those islands, does not deprive importers of their property without due process of law, in violation of Const. Amend. 5, even though they had commenced an action to recover the amount of the duties so collected before the ratifying statute was enacted. U. S. v. Heinszen (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 742, 744, 206 U. S. 370, 51 L. Ed. 1098, 11 Ann. Cas. 688, reversing judgment Heinszen v. U. S. (1907) 42 Ct. Cl. 58.

Aside from any question of intervening rights, Congress could, by Act June 30, 1906, c. 3912, 34 Stat. 636, ratify the illegal collection of duties on imports to the Philippine Islands which were levied under the President's order of July 12, 1898, between the dates of the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain and the passage of Act July 1, 1902, c. 1369, 32 Stat. 691, enacting a tariff of duties for those islands. What constitutes direct shipment.—Sponges were dispatched, freight prepaid, from Zamboanga via Hongkong and Tacoma, Wash., to Chicago. They were delivered by the agents on board a vessel lying in or off the port of Hongkong. The evidence to this effect makes a prima facie showing that the goods were shipped direct, and there being no evidence to show there was any delay in the course of the shipment, the consignment was entitled to free entry under section 5, Act 1909, governing articles the growth or product of the Philippine Islands. Rhodes v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 100.

In the enactment of the provisions of the tariff act of 1909 that relate to Commerce between the United States proper and the Philippine Islands, the Congress will be presumed to have had in mind the actual requirements of trade in the Philippines, as these may call for transshipment of merchandise; and having in view, too, the recognized benevolent intent of legislation affecting the archipelago, that shipment must be deemed a direct shipment from the Philippines to the United States when the consignment was forwarded on a through bill of lading from Manila to New York, but by reason of a trade requirement was transshipped at Hongkong; and so the goods fell within section 5, Act 1909, making them free of duty. U. S. v. United Cigar Stores Co. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 450.

§ 5295. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, D.) Exemption of articles going into Porto Rico from United States from internal-revenue taxes.

D. Articles, goods, wares, or merchandise going into Porto Rico from the United States shall be exempted from the payment of any tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws of the United States. (38 Stat. 193.)

See post, §§ 6338, 6338a.

§ 5296. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, E.) Countervailing duty on articles on which bounty on exportation was paid.

E. Whenever any country, dependency, colony, province or other political subdivision of government shall pay or bestow, directly or indirectly, any bounty or grant upon the exportation of any article or merchandise from such country, dependency, colony, province or other political subdivision of government, and such article or merchandise is dutiable under the provisions of this Act, then upon the importation of any such article or merchandise into the United States, whether the same shall be imported directly from the country of production or otherwise, and whether such article or merchandise is imported in the same condition as when exported from the country of production or has been changed in condition by remanufacture or otherwise, there shall be levied and paid, in all such cases, in addition to the duties otherwise imposed by this Act, an additional duty equal to the net amount of such bounty or grant, however the same be paid or bestowed. The net amount of all such bounties or grants shall be from time to time ascertained, determined, and declared by the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall make all needful regulations for the identification of such articles and merchandise and for the assessment and collection of such additional duties. (38 Stat. 193.)

Provisions in the same language as those of this subdivision were made by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 6, 36 Stat. 85, superseding similar provisions of previous tariff acts. That section was superseded by these provisions, and was repealed by section IV, S, post, § 5316.

The President was authorized, when satisfied that unjust discriminations were made by any foreign state against the importation or sale therein of any product of the United States, to direct that such products as he might deem proper of such foreign state be excluded from importation to the United States, by Act Aug. 30, 1890, c. 839, § 5, post, § 5319.

The importation and sale of articles in the United States at less than their market value abroad, plus transportation charges, with intent to restrain commerce, etc., or their importation under an agreement, with certain exceptions, that the importer or other person shall be restricted to using or dealing in such goods, is prohibited, and the President is empowered to prohibit the importation of articles from countries which forbid importations from the United States, and under certain conditions, to deny clearance to vessels discriminating against citizens of the United States, by Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, §§ 800–806, post, §§ 8836*l*–8836v.

Notes of Decisions

Validity of act.—The provision in Act 1890 for the payment of bounties to the sugar producers of the United States, is not so intimately connected with the provisions relating to duties on imports that its unconstitutionality would invalidate the whole statute. Field v. Clark (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 495, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. Ed. 294.

Construction of act in general.—Act 1897, which provides that whenever any country "shall pay or bestow, directly or indirectly, any bounty or grant upon the exportation of any article of merchandise from such country" which is dutiable under the act, an additional duty equal to such bounty or grant shall be collected thereon upon its importation into the United States, is a protective measure, and is intended to cover every case where by the laws of a foreign country the exporter is given, either directly or indirectly, a pecuniary benefit from the exportation, whether by way of a direct bounty paid from the public treasury, by the remission of taxes, or by exemption from taxes which would otherwise be imposed on the article. Downs v. U. S. (1902) 113 Fed. 144, 51 C. C. A. 100, decree affirmed (1903) 23 S. Ct. 222, 187 U. S. 496, 47 L. Ed. 275.

Conclusiveness of decision of secretary.—Under the provision of section 5 of Act 1897, that the net amount of any bounty or grant paid or bestowed by a foreign country on the exportation of an article of merchandise "shall be from time to time ascertained, determined, and declared by the secretary of the treasury," the decision of the secretary as to such amount is conclusive, and cannot be reviewed by the courts; but the question whether a country pays or bestows such bounty or grant, where it depends upon the construction of the laws of such country, is a judicial one, and, while it is to be decided primarily by the secretary, his decision thereon is reviewable. Downs v. U. S. (1902) 113 Fed. 144, 51 C. C. A. 100, decree affirmed (1903) 23 Sup. Ct. 222, 187 U. S. 496, 47 L. Ed. 275.

Where a published declaration by the Secretary of the Treasury as to the amount of sugar bounty, as authorized by Act 1897, § 5, was followed by another declaration, but there was nothing to indicate that the latter was issued for the purpose of correcting the former, evidence is not admissible to show that the former was wrong. The importer's only remedy is by appeal to the Secretary himself. Franklin Sugar Refining Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 178 Fed. 743.

A treasury declaration as to the amount of sugar bounty allowed by a foreign country, under Act 1897, § 5, which was properly issued, is presumably correct, and cannot be impeached or inquired into by the courts. Franklin Sugar Refining Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 178 Fed. 747.

Under the tariff act of 1897 the Secretary of the Treasury possessed full authority to assess and collect duties imposed by law to countervail foreign-paid bounties, and his determination, as of the date of the importation itself, of the amount of bounty granted on an exportation of raw beet sugar from Germany and imported here is not open to collateral attack and is final. Franklin Sugar Refining Co. v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 242. See, also, Cramer v. Arthur (1880) 102 U. S. 612, 26 L. Ed. 259.

Rate of duty.—The countervailing duty assessed on account of sugar bounty under Act 1897, applies according to the rate in force at the time of importation; and the promulgation of a new rate between the time of importation and of liquidation does not affect the amount of countervailing duty applicable. Franklin Sugar Refining Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1910) 178 Fed. 743.

Nature of bounty.—A bounty may be direct, as where a certain amount is paid upon the production or exportation of particular articles, or indirect, by the remission of taxes upon the exportation of articles which are subjected to a tax when sold or consumed in the country of their production. Downs v. U. S. (1903) 23 Sup. Ct. 222, 223, 187 U. S. 496, 47 L. Ed. 275.

What constitutes bounty.—The Russian laws regulating the production and exportation of sugar, under which an exporter of sugar is remitted the excise tax imposed on sugar sold in Russia, and obtains a certificate because of such exportation, which has a substantial market value, allow a bounty upon the exportation of sugar which, under Act 1897, § 5, subjects such sugar upon its importation into the United States to an additional duty equal to the entire amount of such bounty as ascertained and determined by the secretary of the treasury. Downs v. U. S. (1903) 23 Sup. Ct. 222, 229, 187 U. S. 496, 47 L. Ed. 275, affirming decree (1902) 113 Fed. 144, 51 C. C. A. 100.

When a tax is imposed upon all sugar produced, but is remitted upon all sugar exported, then, by whatever process or in whatever manner, or under whatever name it is disguised, it is a bounty upon exportation. Id.

The laws of Russia bestow a bounty or grant upon the exportation of so-called "free sugar," so as to work a benefit or advantage to the exporter in two ways: (1) By remitting the excise tax due upon the sugar exported, and (2) by the issuance by the government to the exporter of a certificate of exportation, which authorizes the sale in the domestic market of an equal quantity of "free reserve or free surplus" sugar without the payment of the additional tax otherwise required to be paid thereon, and which certificate is transferable and has a substantial market value; and such sugar, when imported into the United States, is subject to the additional or countervailing duty imposed by section 5 of the tariff act of 1897. Downs v. U. S. (1902) 113 Fed. 144, 51 C. C. A. 100, decree affirmed (1903) 23 Sup. Ct. 222, 187 U. S. 496, 47 L. Ed. 275.

Where under Act 1897, § 5, providing that, when any country shall pay any bounty on the exportation of merchandise dutiable in this country, there shall be levied an additional duty equal to the bounty, Holland gives bounty for the production of sugar, to be deducted from the excise thereon, but such excise is remitted on exportation, the duty is a grant on the exportation, and should be added to the regular duty on importation of sugar from that country. U. S. v. Hills Bros. Co. (1901) 107 Fed. 107, 46 C. C. A. 167, reversing judgment Hills v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 425.

Change of condition.—The "additional" duty imposed by Act 1897, § 5, on articles of merchandise imported into the United States and upon which an export bounty has been paid by the country of production, and which it is provided shall be "equal to the net amount of such bounty," is leviable only upon the article or merchandise which enters the United States, and in case of merchandise dutiable by weight and as to which the bounty as declared by the Secretary of the Treasury is also by weight, such as sugar, where the quantity entered at the custom house as shown by the official weigher is less than that shown by the foreign invoice, the "additional" duty, like the regular duty, is assessable only on the quantity so entered, and the cause of the loss or shrinkage is immaterial. The mere diminution in the quantity of units of weight or measure of a commodity usually measured by such units is not such a change of condition "by remanufacture or otherwise," within the meaning of such section, as to authorize a resort to other than the usual means for ascertaining the amount of the additional duty. Franklin Sugar Refining Co. v. U. S. (1906) 142 Fed. 376, 73 C. C. A. 476, reversing decree (C. C. 1905) 137 Fed. 655.

A change in the weight of imported sugar resulting from natural evaporation only is not a change in its condition by "remanufacture or otherwise." U. S. v. Franklin Sugar Refining Co. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 116.

The Secretary of the Treasury was empowered by law to make all needful regulations for the assessment and collection of a countervailing duty imposed by the act of 1897 on sugar imported into this country from a country where a bounty had been paid and regardless of any possible change in the weight on a consignment of sugar from Germany after its importation, the established regulations of the Treasury Department then in force controlled the shipment, and the countervailing duty, accordingly, was properly assessed on the actual or landed weight. Id.

"Country."—The free zone in Hamburg is in the German customs union; it is not a "country" in the sense that term is employed in the proviso to paragraph 626, Act 1897, and in the matter of customs duties it is to be regarded as a part of the German Empire. Sonneborn Sons v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 443.

§ 5297. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, F, subsec. 1.) Articles to be marked to indicate country of origin; packages, to indicate country of origin and quantity of contents.

F. Subsection 1. All articles of foreign manufacture or production, which are capable of being marked, stamped, branded, or labeled, without injury, shall be marked, stamped, branded, or labeled in legible English words, in a conspicuous place that shall not be covered or obscured by any subsequent attachments or arrangements, so as to indicate the country of origin. Said marking, stamping, branding, or labeling shall be as nearly indelible and permanent as the nature of the article will permit.

All packages containing imported articles shall be marked, stamped, branded, or labeled so as to indicate legibly and plainly, in English words, the country of origin and the quantity of their contents, and until marked in accordance with the directions prescribed in this section no articles or packages shall be delivered to the importer.

Should any article or package of imported merchandise be marked, stamped, branded, or labeled so as not accurately to indicate the quantity, number or measurement actually contained in such article or package, no delivery of the same shall be made to the importer until the mark, stamp, brand, or label, as the case may be, shall be changed so as to conform to the facts of the case.

The Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe the necessary rules and regulations to carry out the foregoing provision. (38 Stat. 194.)

Provisions in the same language as those of this subsection and subsection 2 of this subdivision, next following, were made by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, §§ 7, 8, 36 Stat. 85, 86, superseding similar provisions of previous tariff acts. Those sections were superseded by these provisions, and were repealed by section IV, S, of this act, post, § 5316.

Provisions of the Dingley Tariff Act of July 24, 1897, c. 11, § 11, 30 Stat. 207, which prohibited the importation of articles copying or simulating the name or trade-mark of any domestic manufacture or manufacturer, etc., were superseded by more comprehensive provisions of the same nature of the Trade-Mark Act of Feb. 20, 1905, c. 592, § 27, post, § 9513.

Notes of Decisions

Purpose of paragraph.—The purpose of section 11 of the tariff act of 1897 is twofold—to protect the domestic manufacturer against encroachment upon his trade-mark, and the public from the imposition of imported articles assuming domestic names. It is the simulation or counterfeit, and not reality or genuineness, at which the section is aimed. (1902) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 551.

§ 5298. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, F, subsec. 2.) Fraudulent violation of provisions relating to marking, etc., articles or packages, or defacing, etc., marks, etc.; punishment.

F. Subsection 2. If any person shall fraudulently violate any of the provisions of this Act relating to the marking, stamping, branding, or labeling of any imported articles or packages; or shall fraudulently deface, destroy, remove, alter, or obliterate any such marks, stamps, brands, or labels with intent to conceal the information given by or contained in such marks, stamps, brands, or labels, he shall upon conviction be fined in any sum not exceeding $5,000, or be imprisoned for any time not exceeding one year, or both. (38 Stat. 194.)

See notes to preceding subsection.

§ 5299. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, G, subsec. 1.) Importation of obscene books, etc., or other articles, or of lottery tickets, etc., prohibited; seizure and forfeiture.

G. Subsection 1. All persons are prohibited from importing into the United States from any foreign country any obscene book, pamphlet, paper, writing, advertisement, circular, print, picture, drawing, or other representation, figure, or image on or of paper or other material, or any cast, instrument, or other article of an immoral nature, or any drug or medicine, or any article whatever for the prevention of conception or for causing unlawful abortion, or any lottery ticket or any advertisement of any lottery. No such articles, whether imported separately or contained in packages with other goods entitled to entry, shall be admitted to entry; and all such articles shall be proceeded against, seized, and forfeited by due course of law. All such prohibited articles and the package in which they are contained in the course of importation shall be detained by the officer of customs, and proceedings taken against the same as hereinafter prescribed, unless it appears to the satisfaction of the collector of customs that the obscene articles contained in the package were inclosed therein without the knowledge or consent of the importer, owner, agent, or consignee: Provided, That the drugs hereinbefore mentioned, when imported in bulk and not put up for any of the purposes hereinbefore specified, are excepted from the operation of this section. (38 Stat. 194.)

Provisions in substantially the same language as those of this subsection and subsections 2 and 3 of this subdivision, next following, were made by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, §§ 9–11, 36 Stat. 86, superseding similar provisions of previous tariff acts. Those sections were superseded by these provisions, and were repealed by section IV, S, of this act, post, § 5316.

Photographic films imported under section 1 of this act were made subject to such censorship as may be imposed by the Secretary of the Treasury, by a proviso annexed to paragraph 380 of said section, ante, § 5291, par. 380.

Notes of Decisions

Forfeiture.—The provision of the tariff law of 1842, making the importation of indecent and obscene paintings cause for forfeiture of the entire invoice, is applicable, though the painting is not a distinct article, but is affixed to another article, such as a snuff box. U. S. v. Three Cases of Toys (D. C. 1843) Fed. Cas. No. 16,499.

Entire invoice is not exempted from confiscation by the fact that the owners thereof were unaware of the character of the paintings as obscene. Id.

Under Act March 2, 1857, c. 63, if an invoice or package of imported goods contains some articles which are indecent or obscene, and others which are not so, the whole are liable to forfeiture; the unlawful ones being destroyed, and the others sold. U. S. v. One Casé Stereoscopic Slides (D. C. 1859) Fed. Cas. No. 15,927.

Articles imported in boxes embellished with indecent and obscene prints are subject to forfeiture. Anonymous (D. C. 1865) Fed. Cas. No. 470.

§ 5300. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, G, subsec. 2.) Aiding, etc., by officer, etc., in violation of provisions prohibiting importation, etc., of obscene publications, etc., or other articles, a misdemeanor; punishment.

G. Subsection 2. Whoever, being an officer, agent, or employee of the Government of the United States, shall knowingly aid or abet any person engaged in any violation of any of the provisions of law prohibiting importing, advertising, dealing in, exhibiting, or sending or receiving by mail obscene or indecent publications or representations, or means for preventing conception or procuring abortion, or other articles of indecent or immoral use or tendency, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall for every offense be punishable by a fine of not more than $5,000, or by imprisonment at hard labor for not more than ten years, or both. (38 Stat. 195.)

See notes to preceding subsection.

The provision, in the same language as this subsection, of the Dingley Tariff Act of July 24, 1897, c. 11, § 17, 30 Stat. 209, and R. S. § 1785, which was in substantially the same language, were incorporated in the Criminal Code, § 102, post, § 10271, and were repealed by section 341 of said Code post, § 10515, which took effect Jan. 1, 1910.

§ 5301. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, G, subsec. 3.) Proceedings for seizure, etc., of articles mentioned in two preceding subsections, for violation thereof.

G. Subsection 3. Any circuit or district judge of the United States, within the proper district, before whom complaint in writing of any violation of the two preceding sections is made, to the satisfaction of such judge, and founded on knowledge or belief, and if upon belief, setting forth the grounds of such belief, and supported by oath or affirmation of the complainant, may issue, conformably to the Constitution, a warrant directed to the marshal or any deputy marshal in the proper district, directing him to search for, seize, and take possession of any such article or thing mentioned in the two preceding sections, and to make due and immediate return thereof to the end that the same may be condemned and destroyed by proceedings, which shall be conducted in the same manner as other proceedings in the case of municipal seizure, and with the same right of appeal or writ of error. (38 Stat. 195.)

See notes to preceding subsections of this subdivision.

Importation of opium in any form or of any preparation or derivative thereof, except for medicinal purposes only, was prohibited by Act Feb. 9, 1909, c. 100, post, §§ 8800, 8801.

The importation of tea inferior in purity, quality, and fitness for consumption to the standards provided, was prohibited by Act March 2, 1897, c. 358, post, §§ 8786–8796.

Importation of white phosphorus matches manufactured wholly or in part in any foreign country, was prohibited by a proviso annexed to paragraph 345 of section I of this act, ante, § 5291, par. 345, in accordance with Act April 9, 1912, c. 75, § 10, post, § 6280, which had prohibited the importation of such matches after January 1, 1913.

§ 5302. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, H, subsec. 1.) Importation of neat cattle and hides thereof prohibited; suspension of prohibition, in part, authorized.

H. Subsection 1. The importation of neat cattle and the hides of neat cattle from any foreign country into the United States is prohibited: Provided, That the operation of this section shall be suspended as to any foreign country or countries, or any parts of such country or countries, whenever the Secretary of the Treasury shall officially determine, and give public notice thereof, that such importation will not tend to the introduction or spread of contagious or infectious diseases among the cattle of the United States; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and empowered, and it shall be his duty, to make all necessary orders and regulations to carry this section into effect, or to suspend the same as herein provided, and to send copies thereof to the proper officers in the United States and to such officers or agents of the United States in foreign countries as he shall judge necessary. (38 Stat. 195.)

Provisions in the same language as those of this subsection and subsection 2 of this subdivision, next following, were made by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, §§ 12, 13, 36 Stat. 86, 87, superseding similar provisions of previous tariff acts. Those sections were superseded by these provisions and were repealed by section IV, S, of this act, post, § 5316.

Notes of Decisions

Suspension of prohibition.—Under the provisions of Act March 6, 1866, c. 12, it is for the Secretary of the Treasury to determine whether a cattle disease prevailing in a foreign country is such that, if neat cattle or the hides of neat cattle are imported from thence into the United States, the importation will tend to the introduction or spread of contagious or infectious diseases among the cattle here. (1869) 13 Op. Atty. Gen. 158.

Should the Secretary determine that such importation will have that tendency, he can revoke, in whole or in part, the suspension of the said act heretofore made by him. Id.

§ 5303. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, H, subsec. 2.) Violation of provisions of preceding subsection punishable.

H. Subsection 2. Any person convicted of a willful violation of any of the provisions of the preceding subsection shall be fined not exceeding $500, or imprisoned not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court. (38 Stat. 195.)

See note to preceding subsection.

Importation of eggs of game birds or eggs of birds not used for food, with some exceptions, was prohibited by a proviso annexed to paragraph 478 of section I of this act, ante, § 5291, par. 478.

Importation of aigrettes, egret plumes, or so-called osprey plumes and the feathers, etc., of wild birds, not for scientific or educational purposes, was prohibited by a proviso annexed to paragraph 347, of section I of this act, ante, § 5291, par. 347; but the provision was not to apply to the feathers or plumes of ostriches, or of domestic fowls. And the prohibition of the importation of feathers was not to be construed as applying to artificial flies used for fishing, by a proviso annexed to paragraph 136 of section I of this act, ante, § 5291, par. 136.

§ 5304. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, I.) Importation of goods manufactured by convict labor prohibited.

I. All goods, wares, articles, and merchandise manufactured wholly or in part in any foreign country by convict labor shall not be entitled to entry at any of the ports of the United States, and the importation thereof is hereby prohibited, and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to prescribe such regulations as may be necessary for the enforcement of this provision. (38 Stat. 195.)

Provisions in the same language as those of this subdivision were made by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 14, 36 Stat. 87, superseding similar provisions of previous tariff acts. That section was superseded by these provisions, and was repealed by section IV, S, of this act, post, § 5316.

The importation and sale of articles in the United States at less than their market value abroad, plus transportation charges, with intent to restrain commerce, etc., or their importation under an agreement, with certain exceptions, that the importer or other person shall be restricted to using or dealing in such goods, is prohibited, and the President is empowered to prohibit the importation of articles from countries which forbid importations from the United States, and, under certain conditions, to deny clearance to vessels discriminating against citizens of the United States, by Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, §§ 800–806, post, §§ 8836l–8836v.

Notes of Decisions

"Foreign country."—The Philippine Islands are not a "foreign country" within the meaning of the above-mentioned section. (1910) 28 Op. Atty. Gen. 422.

§ 5305. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, J, subsec. 1.) Discriminating duty on goods imported in foreign vessels.

J. Subsection 1. A discriminating duty of 10 per centum ad valorem, in addition to the duties imposed by law, shall be levied, collected, and paid on all goods, wares, or merchandise which shall be imported in vessels not of the United States, or which being the production or manufacture of any foreign country not contiguous to the United States, shall come into the United States from such contiguous country; but this discriminating duty shall not apply to goods, wares, or merchandise which shall be imported in vessels not of the United States entitled at the time of such importation by treaty or convention or Act of Congress to be entered in the ports of the United States on payment of the same duties as shall then be payable on goods, wares, and merchandise imported in vessels of the United States, nor to such foreign products or manufactures as shall be imported from such contiguous countries in the usual course of strictly retail trade. (38 Stat. 195.)

Provisions in the same language as those of this subsection were made by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 15, 36 Stat. 87, superseding similar provisions of previous tariff acts. That section was superseded by these provisions, and was repealed by section IV, S, of this act, post, § 5316.

So much of this subsection as imposed a discriminating duty on goods, etc., imported in a vessel owned by citizens of the United States, but not a vessel of the United States, was repealed by Act March 4, 1915, c. 171, § 1, 38 Stat. 1193, post, § 7812a, as to any such vessel which, after entering an American port, should, before leaving the same, be registered as a vessel of the United States.

See note under § 5304, ante.

Notes of Decisions

Importations from contiguous countries.—Diamonds imported into the United States from Canada, not in the usual course of strictly retail trade, which were the productions of a foreign country not contiguous to the United States, are subject to a discriminating duty of 10 per cent. under section 22 of the tariff act of July 24, 1897 (30 Stat. 209). (1897) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 591.

In determining the liability of the diamonds to the discriminating duty, it is not necessary to ascertain the mode of conveyance used in transporting them into the United States from Canada. Id.

Operation of act.—The purpose of section 22 of the Dingley act was to secure to United States vessels the transportation of goods by sea by discriminating against transportation in other vessels to the United States, and also to prevent evasion to a contiguous country. (1897) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 597.

To hold that there should be a discrimination by different duties upon importations, direct or indirect, under section 22 of the Dingley tariff act, would be to put a new purpose in the law and destroy its unity. This is not compelled by its language or any mischief intended to be remedied. Id.

The operation of section 22 of the Dingley tariff act commences with its passage and continues until it is suspended according to section 4228, R. S. section 7825, post, and again takes effect if the reciprocal exemptions of foreign nations be withdrawn. Id.

Section 22 of such act and section 4228, R. S., as amended (section 7825, post), are not coextensive in scope, therefore are complements of each other. Id.

Section 4228, R. S., section 7825, post, is in effect made a proviso to section 22 of the Dingley tariff act by the discriminating duties act of July 24, 1897 (30 Stat. 214), and as such is not repugnant to the latter section. Id.

§ 5306. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, J, subsec. 2.) Importation only in vessels of United States or of country of origin of goods.

J. Subsection 2. No goods, wares, or merchandise, unless in cases provided for by treaty, shall be imported into the United States from any foreign port or place, except in vessels of the United States, or in such foreign vessels as truly and wholly belong to the citizens or subjects of that country of which the goods are the growth, production, or manufacture, or from which such goods, wares, or merchandise can only be, or most usually are, first shipped for transportation. All goods, wares, or merchandise imported contrary to this section, and the vessel wherein the same shall be imported, together with her cargo, tackle, apparel, and furniture, shall be forfeited to the United States; and such goods, wares, or merchandise, ship, or vessel, and cargo shall be liable to be seized, prosecuted, and condemned in like manner, and under the same regulations, restrictions, and provisions as have been heretofore established for the recovery, collection, distribution, and remission of forfeitures to the United States by the several revenue laws. (38 Stat. 196.)

Provisions in substantially the same language as those of this subsection and subsection 3 of this subdivision, next following, were made by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, §§ 16, 17, 36 Stat. 87, superseding similar provisions of previous tariff acts. Those sections were superseded by these provisions, and were repealed by section IV, S, of this act, post, § 5316.

So much of this subsection as provided for the forfeiture of any vessel owned by citizens of the United States, but not a vessel of the United States, with her cargo, etc., was repealed by Act March 4, 1915, c. 171, § 1, 38 Stat. 1193, post, § 7812a, as to any such vessel which, after entering an American port, should, before leaving the same, be registered as a vessel of the United States.

See note under § 5304, ante.

Notes of Decisions

Information of forfeiture.—In an information of forfeiture against a foreign-built vessel owned in the United States, under Act March 1, 1817, the exception in the proviso of the act must be negatived. U. S. v. The Mary Merritt (D. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 15,-733.

Ownership of vessel.—Where a vessel built in the British province of Canada, but owned wholly by citizens of the United States, engaged in transporting the products of Canada into the ports of the United States, she might be forfeited, and in the absence of documents such as establish nationality, the vessel could not be deemed a British or Canadian vessel within the proviso, that the regulation shall not extend to vessels of any foreign nation which has not adopted a similar regulation. Murray v. U. S. (1873) 17 Wall. 582, 585, 21 L. Ed. 682.

Reciprocity Act March 1, 1817, c. 31, does not permit even an indirect carrying trade by foreign ships. Belgian vessels carrying hides and wool from Buenos Ayres to Boston come within the prohibition of and are subject to the forfeitures denounced by it. (1842) 4 Op. Atty. Gen. 69.

§ 5307. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, J, subsec. 3.) Restriction of preceding subsection to vessels, or goods, etc., imported in vessels, of foreign nations maintaining similar regulation.

J. Subsection 3. The preceding subsection shall not apply to vessels or goods, wares, or merchandise imported in vessels of a foreign nation which does not maintain a similar regulation against vessels of the United States. (38 Stat. 196.)

See note to preceding subsection and to § 5304, ante.

§ 5308. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, J, subsec. 4.) Admission without payment of duty, under bond for exportation, of certain articles for purposes or uses specified, not for sale.

J. Subsection 4. Machinery or other articles to be altered or repaired, molders' patterns for use in the manufacture of castings intended to be and actually exported within six months from the date of importation thereof, models of women's wearing apparel imported by manufacturers for use as models in their own establishments, and not for sale, samples solely for use in taking orders for merchandise, articles intended solely for experimental purposes, and automobiles, motor cycles, bicycles, aeroplanes, airships, balloons, motor boats, racing shells, teams, and saddle horses, and similar vehicles and craft brought temporarily into the United States by nonresidents for touring purposes or for the purpose of taking part in races or other specific contests, may be admitted without the payment of duty under bond for their exportation within six months from the date of importation and under such regulations and subject to such conditions as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe: Provided, That no article shall be entitled to entry under this section that is intended for sale or which is imported for sale on approval. (38 Stat. 196.)

Provisions similar to some extent to those of this subsection were made by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 18, 36 Stat. 87, superseding similar provisions of previous tariff acts. That section was superseded by these provisions and was repealed by section IV, S, of this act, post, § 5316.

Notes of Decisions

Samples.—Samples for use of salesman held not free of duty as samples solely for use in taking orders. See section 5291, par. 329.

The merchandise consists of fashion plates made of surface-coated paper with samples of embroidered or appliquéd dress goods attached for use mainly in mail order business. These goods are not properly "samples," but are printed matter on surface-coated paper, coming into competition with like commercial articles produced and for sale in this country. They were not, accordingly, entitled to free entry. Gernet v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App. 387.

§ 5309. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, J, subsec. 5.) Importation in bond of materials for construction of naval vessels or certain other vessels, and of materials for building their machinery, and articles for their outfit and equipment; use thereof free of duty.

J. Subsection 5. All materials of foreign production which may be necessary for the construction of naval vessels or other vessels of the United States, vessels built in the United States for foreign account and ownership, or for the purpose of being employed in the foreign or domestic trade, and all such materials necessary for the building of their machinery, and all articles necessary for their outfit and equipment, may be imported in bond under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; and upon proof that such materials have been used for such purposes no duties shall be paid thereon. (38 Stat. 196.)

Provisions similar to some extent to those of this subsection were made by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 19, 36 Stat. 88, superseding similar provisions of previous tariff acts. That section was superseded by these provisions and was repealed by section IV, S, of this act, post, § 5316.

Notes of Decisions

Drawback on fuel coal.—The provision, in Act 1883, allowing, as amended by Act June 19, 1886, a drawback of 75 cents per ton on imported coal used by United States vessels, was repealed by Act Oct. 1, 1890, § 25, merely imposing a duty of 75 cents per ton on imported coal; and the drawback was not continued in force by the provision in the latter act that there should be allowed, on the exportation of articles into which imported materials entered, a drawback equal in amount to the duties paid on such materials less 1 per centum thereof, and that the drawback on any article "allowed under existing law" should be continued "at the rate herein provided." U. S. v. Allen (1896) 16 Sup. Ct. 1071, 163 U. S. 499, 41 L. Ed. 242, reversing (1893) 58 Fed. 864, 7 C. C. A. 547.

Continuous customs custody is not essential to the allowance of drawback, under paragraph 415 of the tariff act of July 24, 1897 (30 Stat. 190), on coal imported into the United States and afterwards used for fuel on board of vessels registered under the laws of the United States, propelled by steam, and engaged in trade with foreign countries. (1908) 26 Op. Atty. Gen. 531.

Sections 2977, 2978, and 3025, R. S. sections 5663, 5664, 5729, post, relate exclusively to drawback or return of duties on exported merchandise, and have no application to the allowance of drawback on fuel coal under paragraph 415 of the tariff act of 1897. Id.

Sea stores.—See notes under section 5494, post.

Shipbuilding material. — Shipbuilding materials used in the construction of a vessel built for a foreign government, for use between ports in its own country, are not entitled to entry duty free. R. S. §§ 2513, 2514. Russell v. U. S. (C. C. 1878) Fed. Cas. No. 12,164.

Torpedoes.—Whitehead torpedoes, imported from Europe into the United States to be distributed among the torpedo boat destroyers of the United States, are dutiable under Tariff Act Aug. 5, 1909 (36 Stat. 11); but, until they are carried to a place where there is a port collector where they may be entered, and the duties ascertained and paid, no duty would become payable. (1911) 28 Op. Atty. Gen. 599.

§ 5310. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, J, subsec. 6.) Withdrawal from bond, free of duty, of articles for repair of naval vessels or certain other vessels.

J. Subsection 6. All articles of foreign production needed for the repair of naval vessels of, or other vessels owned or used by, the United States and vessels now or hereafter registered under the laws of the United States may be withdrawn from bonded warehouses free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe. (38 Stat. 196.)

Provisions similar to some extent to those of this subsection were made by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 20, 36 Stat. 88, superseding similar provisions of previous tariff acts. That section was superseded by these provisions, and was repealed by section IV, S, of this act, post, § 5316.

Notes of Decisions

Coastwise trade.—A vessel sailing in ballast from Boston, by way of New York, to San Francisco, for a cargo to Europe, is not engaged in "coastwise" trade, within Act June 1, 1872, § 10; and articles withdrawn from bond, and used in repairing her, are exempt from duty. U. S. v. Patten (C. C. 1874) Fed. Cas. No. 16,007.

Trade between the Atlantic and Pacific ports of the United States is "foreign trade," and not "coastwise trade," within Act June 1, 1872, § 10. Id.

The provision of Act 1890, § 8, requiring the duty on materials imported in bond for use in the construction or equipment of vessels to be paid in case the vessel shall be employed in the coastwise trade of the United States for more than two months in any one year, must be given a reasonable construction in harmony with the general spirit and purpose of the exemption contained in the section, permitting the use of such materials free of duty when the vessel is to be employed in the foreign trade; and it cannot be held to require the payment of the duty before the vessel is permitted to engage in the coastwise trade after the material exempted has become worn out, or has ceased to be useful or serviceable for the purpose for which it was used. In re J. D. Spreckels & Bros. Co. (C. C. 1900) 104 Fed. 879.

§ 5311. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, J, subsec. 7.) Discount on duties on goods, etc., imported in vessels registered under laws of United States.

J. Subsection 7. A discount of 5 per centum on all duties imposed by this Act shall be allowed on such goods, wares, and merchandise as shall be imported in vessels admitted to registration under the laws of the United States: Provided, That nothing in this subsection shall be so construed as to abrogate or in any manner impair or affect the provisions of any treaty concluded between the United States and any foreign nation. (38 Stat. 196.)

Notes of Decisions

Abrogation of treaties.—The Congress may abrogate a treaty made by the United States, and this may be accomplished either by legislation to that end or by legislation that by necessary implication results in abrogation. M. H. Pulaski Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 291.

It is clear the Congress intended to give present effect to the law, and by the named proviso, as was declared, intended that the paragraph in chief should not be held to abrogate the treaties in question or impair any rights thereunder. The treaties must be taken to forbid discrimination against merchandise imported in the vessels of a treaty nation. Whether the discriminations as forbidden relate primarily to the means or instrumentalities of transit and not to the products, reserved. Id.

Discount.—Held, in these cases—(a) That the merchandise involved, imported in the registered vessels of the United States, is entitled to the 5 per cent. discount, as held by the board, whose judgment relating thereto is hereby affirmed. (b) That as to the merchandise imported in the registered vessels of the said treaty nations, both that which was imported and entered for consumption subsequent to the taking effect of the tariff act of 1913, as well as that which was brought to our ports prior thereto and entered in bond for warehousing, subsequently withdrawn for consumption and duties paid, the 5 per cent. discount must be allowed, and with respect to such merchandise the judgment of the board of general appraisers is reversed. (c) That the merchandise imported in vessels of our registry before the tariff act of 1913 took effect which was entered in bond for warehousing, subsequently withdrawn and entered for consumption and duties paid, is entitled to the 5 per cent. discount thereon, and the judgment of the board with respect thereto is reversed. (d) That the merchandise from Cuba is entitled to the reduction of 20 per cent. ad valorem provided by the Cuban treaty and the further discount of 5 per cent. ad valorem from the amount so ascertained. As to such importations, the judgment of the board of general appraisers is affirmed. M. H. Pulaski Co. v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 291.

§ 5312. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, L.) Admission free of duty of merchandise from vessels sunk and abandoned.

L. Whenever any vessel laden with merchandise, in whole or in part subject to duty, has been sunk in any river, harbor, bay, or waters subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, and within its limits, for the period of two years, and is abandoned by the owner thereof, any person who may raise such vessel shall be permitted to bring any merchandise recovered therefrom into the port nearest to the place where such vessel was so raised free from the payment of any duty thereupon, but under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe. (38 Stat. 197.)

Provisions in the same language as those of this subdivision were made by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 22, 36 Stat. 88, superseding similar provisions of previous tariff acts. That section was superseded by these provisions and was repealed by section IV, S, of this act, post, § 5316.

Notes of Decisions

In general.—Goods saved from a wreck and brought within the United States were subject to import duties, under Acts April 20, 1818, and March 1, 1823. The Waterloo (D. C. 1830) Fed. Cas. No. 17,257.

The tackle, apparel, and furniture of a foreign vessel wrecked upon our shore, and landed and sold separate from the hull, held not subject to duty as imported articles. The Gertrude (D. C. 1841) Fed. Cas. No. 5,370.

§ 5313. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, P.) Duty on articles reimported after exportation free of internal revenue tax.

P. Upon the reimportation of articles once exported, of the growth, product, or manufacture of the United States, upon which no internal tax has been assessed or paid, or upon which such tax has been paid and refunded by allowance or drawback, there shall be levied, collected, and paid a duty equal to the tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws upon such articles, except articles manufactured in bonded warehouses and exported pursuant to law, which shall be subject to the same rate of duty as if originally imported, but proof of the identity of such articles shall be made under general regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. (38 Stat. 201.)

Provisions in the same language as those of this subdivision were made by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 26, 36 Stat. 90, superseding similar provisions of previous tariff acts. That section was superseded by these provisions, and was repealed by section IV, S, of this act, post, § 5316.

Notes of Decisions

In general.—See, also, notes under paragraph 404, § 5291, ante.

"Article."—The word "article" in this section includes things partly or not at all manufactured, as well as those completely manufactured. Junge v. Hedden (1892) 13 Sup. Ct. 88, 89, 146 U. S. 233, 36 L. Ed. 953.

Liquor.—Act 1890, § 22, provides that on the reimportation of an article manufactured in the United States, and once exported without paying an internal revenue tax, it shall pay a duty equal to the internal revenue tax on such article. Section 50 declares that any merchandise deposited on bond before the date of the act may be withdrawn for consumption on payment of the duties in force before the act; when such duties are based upon the weight of the goods, the weight shall be taken at the time of the withdrawal. Held, that while, under the internal revenue laws, the proof of spirits is determined by weight, yet the tax is always assessed upon the gallon measurement, whether the spirits are above or below proof, and hence reimported whisky, when withdrawn from bond, must pay according to the number of gallons at the time of importation, and not at time of withdrawal. Louisville Public Warehouse Co. v. Collector of Customs (1892) 49 Fed. 561, 1 C. C. A. 371, affirming Same v. Surveyor of Port at Louisville (C. C. 1891) 48 Fed. 372.

Where a person has removed liquor from a bonded warehouse to Canada without paying the internal revenue tax, and landed it, and permitted it to remain there for a month, he is entitled to bring it back to the United States on payment of duty equal to such tax, as provided in R. S. § 2500, notwithstanding that he intended, when he sent it to Canada, to bring it back again. Kidd v. Flagler (C. C. 1893) 54 Fed. 367, judgment reversed Flagler v. Kidd (1897) 78 Fed. 341, 24 C. C. A. 123.

Certain liquors which had been manufactured in the United States, in a bonded manufacturing warehouse, out of both domestic and imported spirits that were removed to such warehouse without payment of either the internal revenue or customs duties, and which had been exported therefrom, were imported into New York and assessed with the duty prescribed by the statute, Schedule H (22 Stat. 504), as foreign liquors. Held that, the liquors being of the manufacture of the United States and once exported, section 2500, R. S., affords the rule under which to levy duties thereon. (1889) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 243.

Sale of part of goods.—The right to reimport exported American products under Act 1799, § 47, is not affected by a sale of a part thereof in a foreign port. Kidd v. Swartwout (C. C. 1843) Fed. Cas. No. 7,756.

§ 5314. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, Q.) Duties imposed by act applicable to goods, etc., previously imported but not entered, or entered without payment of duty and under bond.

Q. On and after the day when this Act shall go into effect all goods, wares, and merchandise previously imported, for which no entry has been made, and all goods, wares, and merchandise previously entered without payment of duty and under bond for warehousing, transportation, or any other purpose, for which no permit of delivery to the importer or his agent has been issued, shall be subjected to the duties imposed by this Act and to no other duty, upon the entry or the withdrawal thereof: Provided, That when duties are based upon the 1897, for "merchandise previously imported, for which no entry has been made," the word "entry" refers to an entry for consumption. John B. Ellison & Sons v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 136 Fed. 969, judgment affirmed J. B. Ellison & Sons v. Same (1906) 142 Fed. 732, 74 C. C. A. 64, and writ of certiorari denied Ellison v. Same (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 763, 202 U. S. 615, 50 L. Ed. 1172.

Entry implies the presence of the merchandise at the time entry is sought to be made and where a consignment of gin on board a mail steamer reached Key West August 3, 1909, and entries of the gin were presented by the importer on August 4th, the commodity itself remaining on board ship while the vessel proceeded to another destination, but, returning, called again at Key West on a later day and subsequently to the going into full force and effect of the tariff act of 1909. Section 29 of that act governed the entry of the gin August 10, 1909, and it was dutiable as entered of that day. U. S. v. Cordero (1910) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 107.

It is unnecessary to determine whether the absence of an inspector would validate on a later day a tender of entry made during the inspector's absence, it appearing here no actual tender of entry was made of certain horses it was desired to import on August 5, 1909, and that the tender of entry was made in fact on August 6, 1909. The horses were rightly held dutiable as of that date under the act in force that day. Van Treese v. U. S. (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 288.

Goods which arrived in a port of the United States on the 30th of June, 1883, and from want of time to make other disposition of them remained on board ship until the next day, are to be regarded as in a public store or bonded warehouse within the meaning of section 10 of the act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 525). (1884) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 13.

Goods in bond.—The act of 1894 went into effect August 28, 1894. Section 1 provides that on and after August 1, 1894, there "shall" be levied the rates of duty prescribed, etc. Section 2 provides that on and after August 1, 1894, specified articles "shall" be exempt from duty. Section 72, in terms, repeals inconsistent acts and parts of acts, and keeps in force every right and liability of the government or of any person which had been incurred or had accrued prior to the passage of the act. Held, that on goods imported and withdrawn between August 1 and August 28, 1894, the rate of duty is that prescribed by Act Oct. 1, 1890, c. 1244, 26 Stat. 567, which was in force until repealed, Aug. 28, 1894. U. S. v. Burr (1895) 15 Sup. Ct. 1002, 1004, 159 U. S. 78, 40 L. Ed. 82, determined on certificate Burr v. U. S. (C. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 742.

The duty on imports withdrawn from bonded warehouses must be assessed on the basis of weight at the time of original entry, as prescribed by the proviso to Act 1897, § 33, notwithstanding the addition by Act Dec. 15, 1902, c. 1, of a proviso to section 20 of Customs Administrative Act June 10, 1890, c. 407, that the same rate of duty shall be collected upon such merchandise as may be imposed by law upon like articles imported at the time of withdrawal, since this provision refers to the rate of duty, and not to the date at which the weight is to be taken as the basis of such duty. U. S. v. G. Falk & Bro. (1907) 27 Sup. Ct. 191, 193, 204 U. S. 143, 51 L. Ed. 411.

The duty upon leaf tobacco which, when withdrawn from a bonded warehouse, has lost in weight through evaporation of moisture, must be assessed on the basis of weight at the time of the original entry, as prescribed by the proviso to Act 1897, § 33, which is general in its application, and not restricted to merchandise imported before the act took effect. Id.

Under Act June 30, 1864, all teas in warehouse on July 1, 1864, were dutiable at 25 cents a pound, when afterwards withdrawn for consumption. Smith v. Draper (C. C. 1865) Fed. Cas. No. 13,037.

The proper rate of duty on brandy warehoused December 1, 1866, and sold at auction after three years for nonpayment of duties, held to be the rate imposed by law at the expiration of three years from the date of the warehouse bond, and an additional duty equal to 10 per cent. thereof. U. S. v. Duvivier (C. C. 1875) Fed. Cas. No. 15,017.

Where the date of original importation of merchandise in bond was more than one year prior to August 1, 1890, the date when the act of June 10, 1890, went into effect, such merchandise is subject to the "additional duty of 10 per centum" imposed by section 2970, R. S., by virtue of the saving clause in section 29 of said act of June 10, 1890, which saves to the government all rights that existed in its behalf when that act took effect. (1890) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 668.

Reimported whisky when withdrawn from bond is taxable according to the number of gallons at the time of importation. (1894) 20 Op. Atty. Gen. 722.

Weight of merchandise.—Congress, by enacting the proviso to Act 1897, § 33, which differs from the proviso to Act 1890, § 50, only in substituting the word "entry" for the word "withdrawal" as the date when the weight of merchandise withdrawn from bonded warehouses is to be taken as the basis of the duty, must be deemed to have adopted the construction given to the earlier proviso by the Attorney General and followed by the executive officers charged with the administration of the law, viz., that such proviso was general in its application, and not restricted to merchandise imported before the act took effect. U. S. v. G. Falk & Bro. (1907) 27 Sup. Ct.

191, 193, 204 U. S. 143, 51 L. Ed. 411, reversing judgment American Cigar Co. v. U. S. (1906) 146 Fed. 484, 77 C. C. A. 40.

The second proviso in section 50, Act 1890, providing that when duties are based upon the weight of merchandise deposited in any public or bonded warehouse, said duties shall be levied and collected upon the weight of said merchandise at the time of its withdrawal, applies to importations under the act generally upon which duties are levied by law, and not merely to importations made prior to the taking effect of the act. (1891) 20 Op. Atty. Gen. 80.

§ 5315. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, R.) President to ascertain amount of imports and exports of articles enumerated in section I of act, and cause estimate to be made of amount of domestic production and consumption thereof, and advise Congress when imports amount to less than five per centum of domestic consumption.

R. The President shall cause to be ascertained each year, the amount of imports and exports of the articles enumerated in the various paragraphs in section one of this Act and cause an estimate to be made of the amount of the domestic production and consumption of said articles, and where it is ascertained that the imports under any paragraph amount to less than 5 per centum of the domestic consumption of the articles enumerated he shall advise the Congress as to the facts and his conclusions by special message, if deemed important in the public interest. (38 Stat. 201.)

§ 5316. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, S.) Repeal of Act Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, §§ 1–42, and of all inconsistent acts and parts of acts; limitations on operation of act and on effect of repeals of other acts thereby.

S. Except as hereinafter provided, sections one to forty-two both inclusive, of an Act entitled "An Act to provide revenue, equalize duties, and encourage the industries of the United States, and for other purposes," approved August fifth, nineteen hundred and nine, and all Acts and parts of Acts inconsistent with the provisions of this Act, are hereby repealed: Provided, That nothing in this Act shall be construed to permit any oaths to be demanded or fees to be charged except as provided in this Act or in section twenty-eight hundred and sixty-two of the Revised Statutes of the United States, nor to repeal or in any manner affect the following numbered sections of the aforesaid Act approved August fifth, nineteen hundred and nine, viz: Subsection twenty-nine of section twenty-eight and subsequent laws and amendments relating to the establishment and continuance of a Customs Court, subsection thirty of section twenty-eight, providing for additional attorneys, subsection twelve of section twenty-eight and subsequent provisions establishing a Board of General Appraisers of merchandise, sections thirty, thirty-one, thirty-two, thirty-three, and thirty-five, imposing an internal revenue tax upon tobacco, section thirty-six, providing for a tonnage duty, section thirty-nine, authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to borrow on the credit of the United States to defray expenditures on account of the Panama Canal, section forty, authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to borrow to meet public expenditures: Provided further, That all excise taxes upon corporations imposed by section thirty-eight, that have accrued or have been imposed for the year ending December thirty-first, nineteen hundred and twelve, shall be returned, assessed, and collected in the same manner, and under the same provisions, liens, and penalties as if section thirty-eight continued in full force and effect: And provided further, That a special excise tax with respect to the carrying on or doing of business, equivalent to 1 per centum upon their entire net income, shall be levied, assessed, and collected upon corporations, joint stock companies or associations, and insurance companies, of the character described in section thirty-eight of the Act of August fifth, nineteen hundred and nine, for the period from January first to February twenty-eighth, nineteen hundred and thirteen, both dates inclusive, which said tax shall be computed upon one-sixth of the entire net income of said corporations, joint stock companies or associations, and insurance companies, for said year, said net income to be ascertained in accordance with the provisions of subsection G of section two of this Act: Provided further, That the provisions of said section thirty-eight of the Act of August fifth, nineteen hundred and nine, relative to the collection of the tax therein imposed shall remain in force for the collection of the excise tax herein provided, but for the year nineteen hundred and thirteen it shall not be necessary to make more than one return and assessment for all the taxes imposed herein upon said corporations, joint stock companies or associations, and insurance companies, either by way of income or excise, which return and assessment shall be made at the times and in the manner provided in this Act; but the repeal of existing laws or modifications thereof embraced in this Act shall not affect any act done, or any right accruing or accrued, or any suit or proceeding had or commenced in any civil case before the said repeal or modification; but all rights and liabilities under said laws shall continue and may be enforced in the same manner as if said repeal or modifications had not been made. Any offenses committed and all penalties or forfeitures or liabilities incurred prior to the passage of this Act under any statute embraced in or changed, modified, or repealed by this Act may be prosecuted or punished in the same manner and with the same effect as if this Act had not been passed. No Acts of limitation now in force, whether applicable to civil causes and proceedings or to the prosecution of offenses or for the recovery of penalties or forfeitures embraced in or modified, changed, or repealed by this Act shall be affected thereby so far as they affect any suits, proceedings, or prosecutions, whether civil or criminal, for causes arising or acts done or committed prior to the passage of this Act, which may be commenced and prosecuted within the same time and with the same effect as if this Act had not been passed. (38 Stat. 201.)

§ 5317. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, T.) Effect of invalidity of part of act on remainder thereof.

T. If any clause, sentence, paragraph, or part of this Act shall for any reason be adjudged by any court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, such judgment shall not affect, impair, or invalidate the remainder of said Act, but shall be confined in its operation to the clause, sentence, paragraph, or part thereof directly involved in the controversy in which such judgment shall have been rendered. (38 Stat. 202.)

§ 5318. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, U.) Time of taking effect of act.

U. Unless otherwise herein specially provided, this Act shall take effect on the day following its passage. (38 Stat. 202.)

§ 5319. (Act Aug. 30, 1890, c. 839, § 5.) Suspension of importation of products from countries making unjust discriminations.

Whenever the President shall be satisfied that unjust discriminations are made by or under the authority of any foreign state against the importation to or sale in such foreign state of any product of the United States, he may direct that such products of such foreign state so discriminating against any product of the United States as he may deem proper shall be excluded from importation to the United States; and in such case he shall make proclamation of his direction in the premises, and therein name the time when such direction against importation shall take effect, and after such date the importation of the articles named in such proclamation shall be unlawful. The President may at any time revoke, modify, terminate, or renew any such direction as, in his opinion, the public interest may require. (26 Stat. 415.)

This section was part of an act providing for inspection of meats for exportation, prohibiting importation of adulterated articles of food and drink, etc.

Other sections of the act are set forth post, §§ 8682, 8683, 8685–8688, 8708.

A somewhat similar provision was made by Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, § 804, post, § 8836p.

See, also, note to § 5304, ante.

§ 5320. (Act Jan. 9, 1883, c. 17.) Grain brought from Canada by farmers to be ground not subject to duty.

Grain brought into the United States in wagons or other ordinary road vehicles, by farmers residing in the Dominion of Canada, to be ground by mills owned by citizens of the United States, shall not be deemed to be imported or liable to import duties; Provided, That such grain shall be brought into the United States under such regulations as the Treasury Department may prescribe to prevent fraud and evasion, and shall be returned as in like manner provided by such regulations: And provided further, That entry shall be made of and duties paid upon all such grain as shall be taken or received by mill-owners as tolls for such grinding, under like regulations provided by the Treasury Department. (22 Stat. 402.)

This was an act entitled "An act to permit grain brought by Canadian farmers to be ground at mills in the United States adjacent to Canadian Territory, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Treasury Department."

§ 5321. (Act May 18, 1896, c. 195.) Return free of duty of articles or live-stock exported for exhibition.

Whenever any article or articles or live stock shall be sent out of the United States for temporary use or exhibition at any public exposition, fair, or conference, held in a foreign country, such articles shall be entitled to be returned to the United States, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, without the payment of customs duty, whether they shall be of domestic or of foreign production: Provided, That the articles of foreign production have once paid duty in the United States and no drawback has been allowed thereon, and if any domestic articles are subject to internal-revenue tax, such tax shall be proved to have been paid before exportation and not refunded. (29 Stat. 122.)

This was an act entitled "An act to allow the return of duty of certain articles exported from the United States for exhibition purposes."

This act was amended to include in the privilege of free entry animals taken abroad temporarily for exhibition, by Act March 3, 1899, c. 454, post, § 5322.

Provisions for free importation of articles intended for foreign buildings and exhibits at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, made by Act Sept. 18, 1913, c. 14, § 1, 38 Stat. 112, are omitted, as temporary merely.

§ 5322. (Act March 3, 1899, c. 454.) Return free of duty of animals taken abroad for exhibition.

The Act entitled "An Act to allow the return free of duty of certain articles exported from the United States for exhibition purposes," approved May eighteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-six, is hereby amended so as to include in the privilege of free entry conferred thereby wild and other animals of foreign origin taken abroad temporarily for exhibition in connection with any circus or menagerie, subject, however, to the conditions and limitations prescribed in said Act: Provided, however, That the provision of this amendment shall apply only in such cases as those of foreign-born animals taken abroad, and inventories of which are filed prior to their leaving the country with the collector of customs at the port of their departure. (30 Stat. 1372.)

Act May 18, 1896, c. 195, mentioned in and amended by this act, is set forth ante, § 5321.

§ 5323. (Act March 2, 1905, c. 1311.) Laws affecting imports of articles, etc., and entry of persons into United States from foreign countries to apply to articles, etc., and persons coming from Canal Zone, Isthmus of Panama.

All laws affecting imports of articles, goods, wares, and merchandise and entry of persons into the United States from foreign countries shall apply to articles, goods, wares, and merchandise and persons coming from the Canal Zone, Isthmus of Panama, and seeking entry into any State or Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia. (33 Stat. 843.)

This was an act entitled "An act fixing the status of merchandise coming into the United States from the Canal Zone, Isthmus of Panama."

Notes of Decisions

Importations from Canal Zone.—Importations into the United States from the Panama Canal Zone, since the cession of such territory to the United States, are dutiable. David Kaufman & Sons Co. v. Smith (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 887.

The Treasury Department's regulation of November 25, 1912, issued under section 5, Panama Canal Act, prescribing, as a prerequisite for admission free under said section, an exclusive method of proof that the importations conform to the description in the section, is unreasonable in that it requires the importer to produce the affidavit of persons over whom he has no control, and is, therefore, invalid. U. S. v. Conkey & Co. (1916) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 487, 492.

The Canal Zone is not one of the possessions of the United States within the meaning of the tariff act of 1909, but rather a place subject to the use, occupation, and control of the United States, for the purpose of constructing and maintaining a ship canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. (1909) 27 Op. Atty. Gen. 594.

§ 5324. (Act Dec. 17, 1903, c. 1, § 1.) Reduction of duties on products of Cuba authorized; limitation of reduction of duties on sugar; construction of act as to origin of acts changing customs duties.

Whenever the President of the United States shall receive satisfactory evidence that the Republic of Cuba has made provision to give full effect to the articles of the convention between the United States and the Republic of Cuba, signed on the eleventh day of December, in the year nineteen hundred and two, he is hereby authorized to issue his proclamation declaring that he has received such evidence, and thereupon on the tenth day after exchange of ratifications of such convention between the United States and the Republic of Cuba, and so long as the said convention shall remain in force, all articles of merchandise being the product of the soil or industry of the Republic of Cuba, which are now imported into the United States free of duty, shall continue to be so admitted free of duty, and all other articles of merchandise being the product of the soil or industry of the Republic of Cuba imported into the United States shall be admitted at a reduction of twenty per centum of the rates of duty thereon, as provided by the tariff Act of the United States, approved July twenty-fourth, eighteen hundred and ninety-seven, or as may be provided by any tariff law of the United States subsequently enacted. The rates of duty herein granted by the United States to the Republic of Cuba are and shall continue during the term of said convention preferential in respect to all like imports from other countries: Provided, That while said convention is in force no sugar imported from the Republic of Cuba, and being the product of the soil or industry of the Republic of Cuba, shall be admitted into the United States at a reduction of duty greater than twenty per centum of the rates of duty thereon, as provided by the tariff Act of the United States, approved July twenty-fourth, eighteen hundred and ninety-seven, and no sugar the product of any other foreign country shall be admitted by treaty or convention into the United States while this convention is in force at a lower rate of duty than that provided by the tariff Act of the United States approved July twenty-fourth, eighteen hundred and ninety-seven: And provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be held or construed as an admission on the part of the House of Representatives that customs duties can be changed otherwise than by an Act of Congress, originating in said House. (33 Stat. 3.)

This section and the section next following were an act entitled "An act to carry into effect a convention between the United States and the Republic of Cuba, signed on the eleventh day of December, in the year nineteen hundred and two."

Nothing in the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of 1909 was to be construed to abrogate or impair or affect the provisions of the treaty mentioned in this act or the provisions of this act, by section 3 of said act, Act Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 3, 36 Stat. 83.

Nothing in the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, was to be construed to abrogate or impair or affect the provisions of the treaty mentioned in this act, or the provisions of this act, except as to the proviso of Article VIII of said treaty, which proviso was abrogated and repealed, by section IV, B, of said act, ante, § 5293.

See notes to said Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, B, ante, § 5293.

Notes of Decisions

Time of taking effect.—The reciprocal commercial convention with Cuba (33 Stat. 2136) became operative on the date of its approval by Act Dec. 17, 1903, c. 1, 33 Stat. 1, rather than on the tenth day after its ratification. Franklin Sugar Refining Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1906) 144 Fed. 563.

The treaty between Cuba and the United States, signed December 11, 1902, did not go into effect until December 27, 1903, the date proclaimed by the President, and imports from Cuba entered prior to that date were not entitled to the 20 per cent. reduction provided for therein from the duties imposed by Act 1897. M. J. Dalton Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1907) 151 Fed. 143; U. S. v. M. J. Dalton Co., Id. 144.

Retroactive operation.—A retrospective operation will not be given to the provision of Act Dec. 17, 1903, c. 1, 33 Stat. 3, that the treaty with Cuba of December 11, 1902, shall become effective on the tenth day after the exchange of ratifications, because such ratifications had in fact been exchanged some time before the statute was enacted. U. S. v. American Sugar Refining Co. (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 717, 719, 202 U. S. 563, 50 L. Ed. 1149, reversing judgment American Sugar Refining Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 136 Fed. 508.

Duties imposed by military government.—Merchandise imported into Cuba from the United States by an American citizen during the military occupation of the island, between March 31, 1900, and May 20, 1902, was not exempt from the payment of duties imposed and collected by the military government for necessary governmental purposes incident to the occupation of Cuba by the United States. Galban & Co. v. U. S. (1907) 28 Sup. Ct. 254, 207 U. S. 579, 52 L. Ed. 349, affirming judgment (1905) 40 Ct. Cl. 495.

Reduction of duties.—Imports from Cuba were not entitled, under the treaty of December 11, 1902, to the 20 per cent. reduction from the duties imposed by Act 1897, until December 27, 1903—the date proclaimed by the President of the United States and the President of the Cuban Republic for the commencement of the operation of the treaty. U. S. v. American Sugar Refining Co. (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 717, 202 U. S. 563, 50 L. Ed. 1149, reversing order American Sugar Refining Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 136 Fed. 508; Franklin Sugar Refining Co. v. U. S. (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 720, 721, 202 U. S. 580, 50 L. Ed. 1153.

Importations from Cuba are not free of duty. Downing v. U. S. (C. C. 1903) 116 Fed. 779, judgment affirmed (1903) 122 Fed. 445, 58 C. C. A. 427.

All articles of Porto Rican origin exported from Porto Rico to foreign countries after the passage of this act, may, since the proclamation of the President on July 25, 1901, doing away with the 15 per cent. duty imposed under this section, be imported into the United States free of duty under paragraph 483 of the tariff act of July 24, 1897 (30 Stat. 195), provided the articles have not been advanced in value or improved in condition by any process of manufacture or other means. (1902) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 55.

Tobacco grown in Porto Rico after the cession of that island to the United States and brought into this country for warehousing, and afterwards exported to Canada and thence returned to the United States, is within the benefits of paragraph 483 of the act of 1897, but subject to the internal revenue tax provisions of section 3 of the act of April 12, 1900. (1903) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 612.

§ 5325. (Act Dec. 17, 1903, c. 1, § 2.) No additional fees or charges on products of Cuba; equal treatment of imports by both countries.

So long as said convention shall remain in force, the laws and regulations adopted, or that may be adopted by the United States to protect the revenues and prevent fraud in the declarations and proofs, that the articles of merchandise to which said convention may apply are the product or manufacture of the Republic of Cuba, shall not impose any additional charge or fees therefor on the articles imported, excepting the consular fees established, or which may be established, by the United States for issuing shipping documents, which fees shall not be higher than those charged on the shipments of similar merchandise from any other nation whatsoever; that articles of the Republic of Cuba shall receive, on their importation into the ports of the United States, treatment equal to that which similar articles of the United States shall receive on their importation into the ports of the Republic of Cuba; that any tax or charge that may be imposed by the national or local authorities of the United States upon the articles of merchandise of the Republic of Cuba, embraced in the provisions of said convention, subsequent to importation and prior to their entering into consumption into the United States, shall be imposed and collected without discrimination upon like articles whensoever imported. (33 Stat. 4.)

See notes to preceding section of this act, ante, § 5324.

§ 5326. (Act July 26, 1911, c. 3, § 1.) Duties on specified imports from Canada, when reciprocal rates are imposed by Canada on specified imports from United States, and exemption from duty of specified articles imported from Canada, when specified articles from United States are admitted into Canada free of duty.

There shall be levied, collected, and paid upon the articles hereinafter enumerated, the growth, product or manufacture of the Dominion of Canada, when imported therefrom into the United States or any of its possessions (except the Philippine Islands and the islands of Guam and Tutuila), in lieu of the duties now levied, collected, and paid, the following duties, namely:

This was the first section of an act entitled "An act to promote reciprocal trade relations with the Dominion of Canada, and for other purposes."

This section was dependent for its legislative force upon ratification thereof by the Dominion of Canada. Such ratification has not been had, and this section must therefore, for the present at least, be regarded as inoperative.

Section 2 of the act provided for the admission of certain wood pulp described therein, and of paper and paper board manufactured from such wood pulp, imported from Canada, free of duty, on condition that no export duty, etc., or prohibition or restriction of the exportation thereof be imposed. It was superseded by the provisions of the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § I, as amended by Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, § 600, paragraphs 320–322 of which, ante, § 5291, pars. 320–322, imposed duties on certain pulp board, paper box board, etc., and on printing paper described, valued above 5 cents per pound, and paragraphs 567, 649, of which, ante, § 5291, pars. 567, 649, included in the Free List such printing paper valued at not above 5 cents per pound, and mechanically ground wood pulp, chemical wood pulp, unbleached or bleached, and rag pulp.

Section 3 of the act authorized the President to negotiate trade agreements with the Dominion of Canada, for the purpose of further readjusting duties on importations into the United States of articles the growth, product, or manufacture of Canada, and into Canada of articles the growth, product or manufacture of the United States. It was superseded by the more general provisions authorizing the President to negotiate trade agreements with foreign nations, made by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, A, ante, § 5292.

See Treasury Decisions (T. D. 36,116).

Notes of Decisions

Operation of section 2.—The sections of the Canadian reciprocity act are separable both in form and in character. The act contains no words that specifically or impliedly make the operation of section 1 dependent upon the operation of section 2 or the operation of section 2 dependent upon the operation of section 1 and section 2 is valid and in force. 5326c. Investigations relating to customs and customs laws.
5326d. Furnishing information to President and Congress; reports.
5326e. Investigation as to tariff relations with foreign countries.
5326f. Cost of Production Division of Department of Commerce transferred to commission.
5326g. Commission to have access to documents and right to obtain copies for furthering investigations; summoning witnesses and taking testimony; compelling production of books, etc.; subpœnas, oaths, etc.; compelling obedience; mandamus to compel compliance with provisions of act; depositions, fees and mileage of witnesses; immunity to person giving incriminating testimony.
5326h. Commission shall act in co-operation with other departments.
5326i. Members of commission shall not divulge information received; penalty for violation; investigation of Paris Economy Pact and other organizations.
5326j. Continuing appropriation.

§ 5326a. (Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, § 700.) United States tariff commission created; appointment, qualification and tenure of members; chairmen of commission; removal of members; vacancies.

A commission is hereby created and established, to be known as the United States Tariff Commission (hereinafter in this title referred to as the commission), which shall be composed of six members, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, not more than three of whom shall be members of the same political party. In making said appointments members of different political parties shall alternate as nearly as may be practicable. The first members appointed shall continue in office for terms of two, four, six eight, ten, and twelve years, respectively, from the date of the passage of this Act, the term of each to be designated by the President, but their successors shall be appointed for terms of twelve years, except that any person chosen to fill a vacancy shall be appointed only for the unexpired term of the member whom he shall succeed. The President shall designate annually the chairman and vice chairman of the commission. No member shall engage actively in any other business, function, or employment. Any member may be removed by the President for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office. A vacancy shall not impair the right of the remaining members to exercise all the powers of the commission, but no vacancy shall extend beyond any session of Congress. (39 Stat.)

This section and sections 5326b–5326j, post, constituted a part of "An act to increase the revenue and for other purposes," cited above. Section 900 of such act, set forth post, § 6371a, provides that if any part of the act is adjudged invalid, the invalidity of such part shall not affect the other portions of the act. Section 902 of such act, set forth post, § 6371b, provides that the act shall take effect on the day following its passage unless otherwise specially provided and repeals all inconsistent acts. Certain other provisions of this act are incorporated, or set forth, in Chapter A of this Title, and certain others are set forth post, under Title XXXV, "Internal Revenue," and under Title LVI D, "Federal Trade Commission, and Prevention of Unfair Competition."

issued to any corporation or other person, issue an order requiring such corporation or other person to appear before the commission, or to produce documentary evidence if so ordered, or to give evidence touching the matter in question; and any failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof.

Upon the application of the Attorney General of the United States, at the request of the commission, any such court shall have jurisdiction to issue writs of mandamus commanding compliance with the provisions of this title or any order of the commission made in pursuance thereof.

The commission may order testimony to be taken by deposition in any proceeding or investigation pending under this title at any stage of such proceeding or investigation. Such depositions may be taken before any person designated by the commission and having power to administer oaths. Such testimony shall be reduced to writing by the person taking the deposition, or under his direction, and shall then be subscribed by the deponent. Any person, firm, copartnership, corporation, or association, may be compelled to appear and depose and to produce documentary evidence in the same manner as witnesses may be compelled to appear and testify and produce documentary evidence before the commission, as hereinbefore provided.

Witnesses summoned before the commission shall be paid the same fees and mileage that are paid witnesses in the courts of the United States, and witnesses whose depositions are taken and the persons taking the same, except employees of the commission, shall severally be entitled to the same fees and mileage as are paid for like services in the courts of the United States: Provided, That no person shall be excused, on the ground that it may tend to incriminate him or subject him to a penalty or forfeiture, from attending and testifying, or producing books, papers, documents, and other evidence, in obedience to the subpœna of the commission; but no natural person shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction, matter, or thing as to which, in obedience to a subpœna and under oath, he may so testify or produce evidence, except that no person shall be exempt from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in so testifying. (39 Stat.)

See note to § 5326a.

§ 5326h. (Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, § 707.) Commission shall act in co-operation with other departments.

The said commission shall in appropriate matters act in conjunction and cooperation with the Treasury Department, the Department of Commerce, the Federal Trade Commission, or any other departments, or independent establishments of the Government, and such departments and independent establishments of the Government shall cooperate fully with the commission for the purposes of aiding and assisting in its work, and, when directed by the President, shall furnish to the commission, on its request, all records, papers, and information in their possession relating to any of the subjects of investigation by said commission and shall detail, from time to time, such officials and employees to said commission as he may direct. (39 Stat.)

See note to § 5326a.

§ 5326i. (Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, § 708.) Members of commission shall not divulge information received; penalty for violation; investigation of Paris Economy Pact and other organizations.

It shall be unlawful for any member of the United States Tariff Commission, or for any employee, agent, or clerk of said commission, or any other officer or employee of the United States, to divulge, or to make known in any manner whatever not provided for by law, to any person, the trade secrets or processes of any person, firm, copartnership, corporation, or association embraced in any examination or investigation conducted by said commission, or by order of said commission, or by order of any member thereof. Any offense against the provisions of this section shall be a misdemeanor and be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court, and such offender shall also be dismissed from office or discharged from employment. The commission shall have power to investigate the Paris Economy Pact and similar organizations and arrangements in Europe. (39 Stat.)

See note to § 5326a.

§ 5326j. (Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 463, § 709.) Continuing appropriation.

There is hereby appropriated, for the purpose of defraying the expense of the establishment and maintenance of the commission, including the payment of salaries herein authorized, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $300,000 for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and seventeen, and for each fiscal year thereafter a like sum is authorized to be appropriated. (39 Stat.)

See note to § 5326a.

CHAPTER ONE

Collection-Districts, Ports, and Officers

This chapter of the Revised Statutes included sections 2517–2612 thereof. Of these, sections 2517–2607 defined the customs collection districts, by describing the waters, shores, islands, etc., comprised in each or making other provisions as to their boundaries, with the ports of entry, subports of entry, and ports of delivery in the several districts, and also enumerated the officers authorized in each district, with some special provisions as to the duties, powers, etc., and compensation of certain officers in particular districts. Nearly all of these sections, and like provisions of acts subsequent to the Revised Statutes creating or making changes in collection districts or ports or offices therein, were superseded by the reorganization of the Customs Service made by the President pursuant to a provision of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, 37 Stat. 434, and communicated to Congress March 3, 1913, which, by said act, was to constitute, for the fiscal year 1914, and until otherwise provided by Congress, the permanent organization of the Customs Service.

This chapter includes said provision, authorizing the President to reorganize the Customs Service, of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, accompanied by the message of the President transmitting said plan of reorganization, etc., dated March 3, 1913, with such special provisions of the original chapter or of subsequent statutes, relating to particular districts, ports, or officers, as may be regarded as still in force.

Sec.

5327. Reorganization of Customs Service by President, to constitute permanent organization until otherwise provided.

5327a. President authorized to rearrange customs-collection districts and to discontinue ports of entry; limitation of number of districts and of ports of entry; designation of collector by number of district; President authorized to change location of headquarters of district; statement to Congress.

5327b. Act March 4, 1909, c. 314, § 1, not to prohibit Secretary of the Treasury from fixing pay of laborers.

5328. Port of Boston; town of Chelsea attached thereto.

5329. Port of Boston; employés in appraiser's office.

5330. Port of New York; extension of limits.

5331. Port of New York; examiners.

5332. Port of New York; employés in appraiser's office.

5333. Port of Philadelphia; employés in appraiser's office.

5333a. District of Florida; headquarters at Tampa.

5334. Port of New Orleans.

5335. Port of New Orleans; extension of limits.

5336. Port of New Orleans; extension of limits.

5337. Port of New Orleans; extension of limits.

5338. Port of New Orleans; temporary inspectors.

Sec.
5338a. District of Omaha; compensation of collector.
5339. District of Sabine; Port Arthur ship canal, etc., to be conveyed to United States; charges for use of docks, etc.
5340. Additional inspectors upon routes by which goods withdrawn from bonded warehouse may be exported to Mexico; reports by inspectors.
5341. Transshipment of goods transported in bond to Brownsville.
5342. Port of Portland, Oregon; extension of limits.
5343. Manifests of vessels bound for Portland.
5344. Manifests of vessels clearing from Portland.
5345. Vessels having merchandise for both Astoria and Portland.
5346. Port of Memphis; extension of limits.

§ 5327. (Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1.) Reorganization of Customs Service by President, to constitute permanent organization until otherwise provided.

The President is authorized to reorganize the customs service and cause estimates to be submitted therefor on account of the fiscal year nineteen hundred and fourteen bringing the total cost of said service for said fiscal year within a sum not exceeding $10,150,000 instead of $10,500,000, the amount authorized to be expended therefor on account of the current fiscal year nineteen hundred and twelve; in making such reorganization and reduction in expenses he is authorized to abolish or consolidate collection districts, ports, and subports of entry and delivery, to discontinue needless offices and employments, to reduce excessive rates of compensation below amounts fixed by law or Executive order, and to do all such other and further things that in his judgment may be necessary to make such organization effective and within the limit of cost herein fixed; such reorganization shall be communicated to Congress at its next regular session and shall constitute for the fiscal year nineteen hundred and fourteen and until otherwise provided by Congress the permanent organization of the customs service. (37 Stat. 434.)

This was a provision of the sundry civil appropriation act for the fiscal year 1913, cited above.

The plan of reorganization provided for by this act, with an estimate of the expenses of the same, was communicated by the President to Congress by Message dated March 3, 1913, as follows:

Message from the President of the United States, Transmitting Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service and Detailed Estimate of Expenses of the Same

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

Whereas, by virtue of the provision of chapter 355 of the acts of 1912, approved August 24, 1912, being "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and thirteen, and for other purposes," I was authorized to reorganize the customs service and cause estimates to be submitted therefor on account of the fiscal year 1914, reducing the total cost of said service for said fiscal year by an amount not less than $350,000, and I was further authorized in making such reorganization and reduction in expenses to abolish or consolidate collection districts, ports and subports of entry and delivery, to discontinue needless offices and employments, to reduce excessive rates of compensation below amounts fixed by law or Executive order, and to do all such other and further things that in my judgment may be necessary to make such reorganization effective and within the said limit of cost; and

Whereas it was further provided that such reorganization should be communicated to Congress at its next regular session and should constitute for the fiscal year 1914, and until otherwise provided by Congress, the permanent organization of the customs service: Now, therefore,

It is hereby ordered and communicated that the following plan shall be the organization of the customs service for the said fiscal year 1914, and unless otherwise provided by Congress the permanent organization of the customs service:

Francisco, in which San Francisco (including Oakland), Eureka, and Port Hartford shall be ports of entry.

(29) The district of Oregon, to include all of the State of Oregon, with district headquarters at Portland, in which Portland, Astoria, Newport, and Empire shall be ports of entry.

(34) The district of Dakota, to include all of the States of North and South Dakota and the county of Kittsen in the State of Minnesota, with district headquarters at Pembina, in which Pembina, Noyes, St. Vincent, Portal, St. John, Hannah, Neche, Ambrose, Souris, Walhalla, Sarles, Sherwood, Hansboro, Crosby, and Antler shall be ports of entry.

(35) The district of Minnesota, to include all of the State of Minnesota lying south of 46° north latitude, with headquarters at St. Paul and Minneapolis, in which St. Paul and Minneapolis shall be the port of entry, which port shall include both of said cities.

(36) The district of Duluth and Superior, to include all of the State of Minnesota, except the county of Kittsen, lying north of 46° north latitude, and all of the State of Wisconsin lying north of said latitude, and the Island of Isle Royal in the State of Michigan, with district headquarters at Duluth and Superior, in which Duluth and Superior, International Falls, Warroad, Ranier, Two Harbors, Ashland, and Isle Royal shall be ports of entry. The port of Duluth and Superior shall include both of said cities and West Superior.

(37) The district of Wisconsin, to include all of the State of Wisconsin lying south of 46° north latitude, with district headquarters at Milwaukee, in which Milwaukee, Green Bay, Kenosha, Kewaunee, Manitowoc, Marinette (including Menominee), Racine, Sheboygan, and Sturgeon Bay shall be ports of entry.

(38) The district of Michigan, to include all of the State of Michigan, with district headquarters at Detroit, in which Detroit, Port Huron, Saginaw, Alpena, Bay City, Marine City, St. Clair, Grand Rapids, Grand Haven, Charlevoix, Ludington, Manistee, Manistique, Muskegon, St. Joseph, Petoskey, Sault Ste. Marie, Cheboygan, Mackinaw, Detour, Escanaba, Gladstone, Houghton, and Marquette shall be ports of entry.

(39) The district of Chicago, to include all of the State of Illinois lying north of 39° north latitude and all that part of the State of Indiana lying north of 41° of north latitude, with district headquarters at Chicago, in which Chicago, Peoria, and Michigan City shall be ports of entry.

(40) The district of Indiana, to include all of the State of Indiana lying south of 41° of north latitude, with district headquarters at Indianapolis, in which Indianapolis and Evansville shall be ports of entry.

(41) The district of Ohio, to include all of the State of Ohio and the county of Erie, in the State of Pennsylvania, with district headquarters at Cleveland, in which Cleveland, Conneaut, Ashtabula, Fairport, Lorain, Sandusky, Put-in-Bay, Toledo, Cincinnati, Columbus, and Dayton, Ohio, and Erie and Corry, Pa., shall be ports of entry.

(42) The district of Kentucky, to include all of the State of Kentucky, with district headquarters at Louisville, in which Louisville and Paducah shall be ports of entry.

(43) The district of Tennessee, to include all of the State of Tennessee, with district headquarters at Memphis, in which Memphis, Nashville, Chattanooga, and Knoxville shall be ports of entry.

(44) The district of Iowa, to include all of the State of Iowa, with district headquarters at Des Moines, in which Des Moines, Sioux City, and Dubuque shall be ports of entry.

(45) The district of St. Louis, to include all of the States of Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, and Oklahoma, and all that part of the State of Illinois lying south of 39° north latitude, with district headquarters at St. Louis, in which St. Louis (including East St. Louis), Kansas City and St. Joseph, Mo., and Cairo, Ill., shall be ports of entry.

(46) The district of Omaha, to include all of the States of Nebraska and Wyoming, with district headquarters at Omaha, in which Omaha and Lincoln shall be ports of entry.

(47) The district of Colorado, to include all of the State of Colorado, with district headquarters at Denver, in which Denver shall be the port of entry.

(48) The district of Utah and Nevada, to include all of the States of Utah and Nevada, with district headquarters at Salt Lake City, in which Salt Lake City shall be the port of entry.

(49) The district of Porto Rico. (This district is not affected by this reorganization for the reason that the expenses of the district are not payable from the appropriation "Expenses of collecting the revenue from customs.")

II

The use of the terms "port of delivery" and "subport of entry" is hereby discontinued, and all ports of entry, subports of entry, and ports of delivery not above specifically mentioned as ports of entry, are hereby abolished.

III

The privileges of the first and seventh sections of the act of June 10, 1880, commonly known as the "immediate transportation act" shall remain as heretofore existing with respect to the ports of entry above mentioned.

IV

There shall be one collector of customs for each of the customs collection districts above established, who shall receive the compensation hereafter set forth, which shall constitute all the compensation and emoluments to be received by him and which shall be in lieu of all fees, commissions, salaries, or other emoluments of any name or nature (including the right to charge for blank manifests and clearances under the provisions of section 2648 of the Revised Statutes) heretofore received by or allowed to him.

All moneys collected or received by such collectors of customs in their official capacities, whether as fees, storage, commissions, or from the sale of blank forms or otherwise, shall be covered into the Treasury.

V

Such collectors shall maintain their principal offices at the headquarters of their respective districts, with the exception of the collectors for the districts of Virginia, Minnesota, and Duluth and Superior, who shall maintain a principal office at both Newport News and Norfolk, and at both St. Paul and Minneapolis, and at both Duluth and Superior, respectively.

VI

The collector of customs or the surveyor of customs (if there be no collector) for any district heretofore existing in which the port above mentioned as the headquarters of a district hereby created is located shall continue to hold office as the collector of customs for such new district under his existing commission, or if the port so designated as the headquarters of any district hereby created be an independent port of delivery the collector or surveyor (if there be no collector) shall continue to hold office as the collector of customs for such new district under his existing commission, and the terms of office of all other collectors of customs, and the terms of office of all other surveyors of customs, except the surveyors of customs at the ports of Portland, Me., Boston, Mass., New York, N. Y., Philadelphia, Pa., Baltimore, Md., New Orleans, La., and San Francisco, Cal., shall cease and determine upon this reorganization going into effect.

VII

The Secretary of the Treasury may appoint a deputy collector to have charge of each port of entry, who shall perform such duties and receive such compensation as the Secretary of the Treasury shall determine.

VIII

The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to prescribe uniform blank forms to be used in connection with the entry and clearance of merchandise, and to cause such forms to be printed and to be kept on sale at the various ports of entry as he may direct, the net proceeds of such sales to be covered into the Treasury.

IX

Merchandise shall not be entered or delivered from customs custody elsewhere than at one of the ports of entry hereinbefore designated, except at the expense of the parties in interest, upon express authority from the Secretary of the Treasury and under conditions to be prescribed by him. When it shall be made to appear to the Secretary of the Treasury that the interests of commerce or the protection of the revenue so require, he may cause to be stationed at places in the various collection districts, though not named as ports of entry, officers or employees of the customs with authority to enter and clear vessels, to accept entries of merchandise, to collect duties, and to enforce the various provisions of the customs and navigation laws.

X

All persons now in the classified civil service whose employment may be discontinued by reason of this reorganization shall be retained upon the list of eligibles for appointment to fill any vacancies hereafter occurring in the customs service.

XI

The notice of dissatisfaction and protest provided for by subsections 13 and 14 of section 28 of the act approved August 5, 1909, shall be deemed to be finally abandoned and waived unless within 30 days from the date of filing thereof the person who filed such notice or protest shall deposit with the collector of customs a fee of $1 with respect to each appraisement, entry, or payment objected to. Such fee shall be deposited and accounted for as "Miscellaneous receipts," and in case the notice of dissatisfaction or protest in connection with which such fee was deposited shall be finally sustained in whole or in part, such fee shall be refunded to the importer, with the duties found to be collected in excess, from the appropriation for the refund to importers of excess of deposits.

Attached hereto is a detailed estimate of the expenses of the customs service under the reorganization above provided.

Done at Washington, D. C., this 3d day of March, 1913.

Provisions similar to those of article XI of the foregoing plan of reorganization were made by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, M, N, post, §§ 5594, 5595.

Act June 19, 1906, c. 3436, § 1, mentioned in section I, subsec. 21, of the foregoing plan of reorganization, as creating the district of Sabine, is set forth post, § 5339.

For the district of Porto Rico, which was not included in the foregoing plan of reorganization, as stated in section I, subsec. 49, thereof, the Secretary of the Treasury was authorized to designate ports of entry to make regulations for the collection of customs duties, and to appoint necessary agents, by Act April 12, 1900, c. 191, § 4, ante, § 3752. The ports of entry so designated were, on July 1, 1913, as follows:

District of Porto Rico: Ports of entry—San Juan, Aguadilla, Arecibo, Arroyo, Fajardo, Guanica, Humacao, Mayaguez, Ponce.

The President was authorized to rearrange, by consolidation or otherwise, the customs-collection districts, and to discontinue ports of entry by abolishing the same or by establishing others in their stead, by a provision of Act Aug. 1, 1914, c. 223, § 1, post, § 5327a. Said provision also limited the number of customs-collection districts and ports of entry, provided that the collectors of customs should be designated by the number of the districts for which they were appointed, not by the name of the port where the headquarters are situated, authorized changes in the location of headquarters in customs-collection districts, and required the President to report to Congress at the beginning of each regular session changes made by him in the customs-collection districts, etc.

The headquarters of the customs district of Florida was changed to Tampa by Act Sept. 24, 1914, c. 309, post, § 5333a.

The compensation of the collector of customs for the district of Omaha was increased to $3,500 per annum by Act Dec. 28, 1914, c. 3, post, § 5338a.

Notes of Decisions

Historical.—As to history and effect of early legislation, see U. S. v. Heth (1806) 3 Cranch, 399, 407, 2 L. Ed. 479.

Boundaries of collection districts.—The acts and decisions of the secretary of the treasury upon the question of boundaries of collection districts are not conclusive upon the courts, unless made so by statute. U. S. v. McNelly (D. C. 1885) 28 Fed. 609.

In defining collection districts, it is the policy of the government, in cases of small bodies of water, not to divide the jurisdiction, by locating one side of the water in one district and the other side in another. Id.

§ 5327a. (Act Aug. 1, 1914, c. 223, § 1.) President authorized to rearrange customs-collection districts and to discontinue ports of entry; limitation of number of districts and of ports of entry; designation of collector by number of district; President authorized to change location of headquarters of district; statement to Congress.

The President is authorized from time to time, as the exigencies of the service may require, to rearrange, by consolidation or otherwise, the several customs-collection districts and to discontinue ports of entry by abolishing the same or establishing others in their stead: Provided, That the whole number of customs-collection districts, ports of entry, or either of them, shall at no time be made to exceed those now established and authorized except as the same may hereafter be provided by law: Provided further, That, hereafter, the collector of customs of each customs-collection district shall be officially designated by the number of the district for which he is appointed and not by the name of the port where the headquarters are situated and the President is authorized from time to time to change the location of the headquarters in any customs-collection district as the needs of the service may require: And provided further, That the President shall, at the beginning of each regular session, submit to Congress a statement of all acts, if any, done hereunder and the reasons therefor. (38 Stat. 623.)

This was a provision of the sundry civil appropriation act for the fiscal year 1915, cited above.

See ante, § 5327, and notes thereunder.

§ 5327b. (Act Sept. 8, 1916, c. 464.) Act March 4, 1909, c. 314, § 1, not to prohibit Secretary of the Treasury from fixing pay of laborers.

Section one of the Act entitled "An Act fixing the compensation of certain officials in the customs service, and for other purposes," approved March fourth, nineteen hundred and nine, shall not prohibit the Secretary of the Treasury from fixing the pay of laborers in the customs service at a rate not exceeding $2.50 per day if in so doing the aggregate amount paid to any person in any month does not exceed $70. (39 Stat.)

This was a provision of the deficiency appropriation act for the fiscal year 1917, cited above.

Act March 4, 1909, c. 314, § 1, 35 Stat. 1065, mentioned in this section, was superseded by the reorganization of the customs service by the President, as authorized by Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

See notes under said § 5327, ante.

(R. S. §§ 2517–2526. Superseded.)

See note at the beginning of this chapter.

§ 5328. (R. S. § 2527, subsec. 5.) Port of Boston; town of Chelsea attached thereto.

And the town of Chelsea shall be attached to and made a part of the port of entry and collection district of Boston and Charlestown.

Act Sept. 28, 1850, c. 79, § 13, 9 Stat. 511.

This provision was part of subsection 5 of R. S. § 2527, preceding provisions of which described the district of Boston and Charlestown, not including the town of Chelsea, in which Boston was the port of entry. Said provisions were superseded by the reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327, which established the district of Massachusetts, to include all of the State of Massachusetts, in which Boston was to be a port of entry.

See note at the beginning of this chapter.

§ 5329. (R. S. § 2530, as amended, Act Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, § 1.) Port of Boston; employés in appraiser's office.

The clerks and other persons employed in the appraiser's office at the port of Boston shall be appointed by the principal appraisers, and their number and compensation shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Act May 28, 1830, c. 147, § 6, 4 Stat. 411. Act Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, § 1, 19 Stat. 245.

This section, as enacted in the Revised Statutes, provided that the clerks, etc., mentioned should be appointed by "the principal appraiser."

It was amended, by striking out the word "appraiser" and inserting the word "appraisers," to read as set forth here, by Act Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, § 1, last cited above.

On the reorganization of the Customs Service, pursuant to Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327, the estimate for the district of Massachusetts included one appraiser only, and assistant appraisers.

(R. S. §§ 2531–2537. Superseded.)

See note at the beginning of this chapter.

§ 5330. (Act May 7, 1894, c. 71.) Port of New York; extension of limits.

That the limits of the port of New York, in the State of New York, be, and the same are hereby, extended so as to include the city of Yonkers, Westchester County, in said State. (28 Stat. 73.)

This was an act entitled "An act to extend the limits of the port of New York."

§ 5331. (R. S. § 2538.) Port of New York; examiners.

The Secretary of the Treasury may, on the nomination of the appraiser, appoint such number of examiners at the port of New York as the Secretary may in writing determine to be necessary, to aid each of the assistant appraisers in the examination, inspection, and appraisement of merchandise.

Act July 27, 1866, c. 284, § 4, 14 Stat. 303.

The provisions of this section relating to the number of examiners, and of R. S. § 2539, next following, relating to the number of clerks and other employés specified were superseded by the reorganization of the Customs Service, pursuant to act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, and the estimate for the district of New York accompanying the plan of reorganization, ante, § 5327.

§ 5332. (R. S. § 2539.) Port of New York; employés in appraiser's office.

The Secretary of the Treasury shall also appoint, on the nomination of the appraiser at the port of New York, the clerks, verifiers, samplers, openers, packers, and messengers employed in the appraiser's office, or in any of the departments thereof, and shall limit and fix their number.

Act July 27, 1866, c. 284, § 4, 14 Stat. 303.

See note to preceding section.

(R. S. §§ 2540–2544. Superseded.)

See note at the beginning of this chapter.

§ 5333. (R. S. § 2545, as amended, Act Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, § 1.) Port of Philadelphia; employés in appraiser's office.

The clerks and other persons employed in the appraiser's office at the port of Philadelphia shall be appointed by the principal appraisers, and their number and compensation shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Act May 28, 1830, c. 147, § 6, 4 Stat. 411. Act Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, § 1, 19 Stat. 245.

This section, as enacted in the Revised Statutes, provided for the appointment of the clerks, etc., mentioned, by "the principal appraiser." It was amended by striking out the word "appraiser," and inserting in lieu thereof, the word "appraisers," as set forth here, by Act Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, § 1, last cited above.

The provisions of this section relating to the number and compensation of clerks, etc., were superseded by the reorganization of the Customs Service, pursuant to Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, and the estimate for the District of Philadelphia accompanying the plan of reorganization, ante, § 5327.

See note at the beginning of this chapter.

Hereafter the headquarters of the customs district of Florida shall be at Tampa, in said State. (38 Stat. 716.)

This was an act entitled "An act to relocate the headquarters of the customs district of Florida," cited above.

The headquarters of the district of Florida were formerly at Jacksonville, and were so fixed by the President in reorganizing the customs service. See ante, § 5327, note, subdivision I, par. 18.

§ 5334. (R. S. § 2568, subsec. 1.) Port of New Orleans.

First. The district of New Orleans; * * in which New Orleans shall be the port of entry, to include the parish of Orleans, and that portion of the parish of Jefferson lying between the Mississippi River and Lake Pontchartrain, and between the upper line of the parish of Orleans, left bank, and a line running parallel thereto, commencing at the Mississippi River, at the upper line of the city of Carrollton, and extending to Lake Pontchartrain.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 17, 1 Stat. 639. Act Feb. 24, 1804, c. 13, § 4, 2 Stat. 252. Act June 15, 1844, c. 51, § 3, 5 Stat. 664. Res. Feb. 2, 1870, No. 7, 16 Stat. 368.

This provision defining the port of New Orleans was part of subsection 1 of R. S. § 2568, other provisions of which described the district of New Orleans, and the ports of delivery therein, etc.

Subsequent provisions for the extension of the limits of the port were made by Act July 23, 1888, c. 692, Act March 20, 1896, c. 62, and Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 372, post, §§ 5335–5337.

§ 5335. (Act July 23, 1888, c. 692.) Port of New Orleans; extension of limits.

That the limits of the port of entry of New Orleans, Louisiana, shall be, and the same are hereby, extended so as to include that portion of the Parish of Jefferson lying between the Mississippi River, Lake Pontchartrain, the upper line of the Parish of Orleans, left bank, and a line running parallel thereto, commencing at the Mississippi River at a point two miles above the upper line of the said Parish of Orleans and extending to Lake Pontchartrain. (25 Stat. 339.)

This was an act entitled "An act to extend the limits of the port of New Orleans."

Subsequent provisions for the extension of the limits of the port were made by Act March 20, 1896, c. 62, and Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 372, post, §§ 5336, 5337.

§ 5336. (Act March 20, 1896, c. 62.) Port of New Orleans; extension of limits.

That the limits of the port of entry of New Orleans shall be, and the same are hereby, extended so as to include that portion of the parish of Jefferson on the west bank of the Mississippi River lying between the upper line of the parish of Orleans, west bank, the west bank of the said river to a point opposite the upper boundary line of the parish of Orleans, east bank, a line drawn thence back four thousand feet, perpendicular to said river, and a line drawn thence parallel to the Mississippi River until it intersects said upper parish boundary line, west bank; and so as further to include that portion of the parish of Saint Bernard lying between the lower boundary line of the parish of Orleans, east bank, the east bank of the Mississippi River to a point three miles below said lower boundary, a line drawn thence back four thousand feet parallel to said lower boundary line, and a line drawn thence parallel to the Mississippi River, until it intersects said lower boundary line of the parish of Orleans. (29 Stat. 72.)

This was an act entitled "An act to extend the limits of the port of entry of New Orleans."

A subsequent provision for the extension of the limits of the port was made by Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 372, post, § 5337.

§ 5337. (Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 372.) Port of New Orleans; extension of limits.

That the limits of the port of entry of New Orleans, Louisiana, be, and the same are hereby, extended to include that portion of the parish of Saint Bernard within the following boundaries: Beginning at a point where the boundary line between the parishes of Orleans and Saint Bernard intersect the east bank of the Mississippi River; thence along said east bank to where the boundary line between lots sixteen and seventeen of the Corinne and Myrtle Grove plantations (according to a plan by A. C. Bell, civil engineer, July eleventh, eighteen hundred and ninety-three, and annexed to an act of sale by A.

L. Richardson to Jules Mereaux, passed before Charles T. Soniat, esquire, notary public in the parish of Orleans, January second, eighteen hundred and ninety-four) intersects said east bank, said point of intersection being at a distance of four miles and four thousand two hundred and eighty feet below the point at which the boundary between the parishes of Orleans and Saint Bernard intersects said east bank; thence along said boundary between said lots sixteen and seventeen a distance of four thousand feet; thence along a line parallel to the Mississippi River to the point where said boundary line intersects the boundary between the parishes of Orleans and Saint Bernard; thence along said boundary line to the point of beginning. (37 Stat. 499.)

This was an act entitled "An act to extend the limits of the port of entry of New Orleans, Louisiana."

(R. S. §§ 2569–2575. Superseded.)

See note at the beginning of this chapter.

§ 5338. (R. S. § 2576.) Port of New Orleans; temporary inspectors.

The collector for the district of New Orleans may, when the public service requires, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, appoint, in addition to the inspectors otherwise authorized by law, temporary inspectors, not exceeding twenty in number. But this section shall not be deemed to authorize the whole number of inspectors employed at the port of New Orleans to be at any time greater than the actual number of vessels from foreign ports, having cargoes to be discharged, then lying in the port.

Res. March 3, 1845, No. 15, 5 Stat. 801. Act Sept. 28, 1850, c. 79, § 20, 9 Stat. 512.

The provisions of this section prescribing the number of inspectors were superseded by the reorganization of the Customs Service, pursuant to Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, and the estimate for the District of New Orleans accompanying the plan of reorganization, ante, § 5327.

R. S. § 2577, authorized the collector at the port of New Orleans to appoint, with the approbation of the Secretary of the Treasury, three head gaugers for the port. It is omitted, as likewise superseded by said reorganization.

§ 5338a. (Act Dec. 28, 1914, c. 3.) District of Omaha; compensation of collector.

The compensation of the collector of customs for the customs collection district of Omaha shall be increased from $2,500 per annum, as provided in the plan of reorganization of the customs service promulgated by the President on March third, nineteen hundred and thirteen, to $3,500 per annum, and that compensation at the said rate of $3,500 per annum shall be paid to the said collector of customs from and after June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and thirteen. (38 Stat. 790.)

This was an act entitled "An act to increase and fix the compensation of the collector for the customs collection district of Omaha," cited above.

The compensation of the collector at Omaha was formerly $2,500 per year, and was so fixed by the President in reorganizing the customs service. See ante, § 5327, note, subdivision IV.

§ 5339. (Act June 19, 1906, c. 3436, § 1.) District of Sabine; Port Arthur ship canal, etc., to be conveyed to United States; charges for use of docks, etc.

An additional collection district in the State of Texas shall be, and is hereby, established, to be known as the district of Sabine, to comprise all of that portion of the State of Texas formerly embraced in the district of Galveston and now hereby detached therefrom, beginning on the Gulf of Mexico at the center of the stream of Sabine Pass; thence, north with the center of the stream of Sabine Pass to Sabine Lake; thence with the center of the stream of Sabine Lake to a point directly opposite to the Sabine River; thence north with the east shores of the Sabine River to the north boundary line of Shelby County, Texas; thence west to the Neches River; thence down said river with its west shores to a north boundary line of Jefferson County; thence in a westerly direction with the said north boundary line to the east boundary line of Liberty County, Texas; thence south to the Gulf of Mexico; thence in an easterly direction along the Gulf shores to the place of beginning; that Port Arthur, in the county of Jefferson, shall be the port of entry for said district, and Sabine, in the county of Jefferson, shall be a subport of entry: Provided, That there shall be conveyed to the United States, free of cost, a valid title to the line of water communication between Taylors Bayou and Sabine Pass, known as the Port Arthur Ship Canal, together with a valid title to the existing turning basin and to the artificial slip on which the lumber dock of the Port Arthur Canal and Dock Company is built; and the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to accept the said waterways as the property of the United States upon the delivery to him of a clear and indefeasible title thereto; and the said waterways shall thereupon become free public waters of the United States, and be subject to the laws heretofore enacted and that may be hereafter enacted by Congress for the maintenance, preservation, protection, and regulation of navigable waters: Provided further, That the company or corporation conveying title to said canal as aforesaid shall also convey to the United States, free of cost, the fee to a strip of land one hundred and fifty feet wide along the westerly margin of the canal, except that where the right of way of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company prevents the transfer of such strip of land along the westerly margin of said canal there shall be conveyed such strip on the easterly margin thereof as may be necessary to make up such one hundred and fifty feet of width, with the reservation that until Congress shall have authorized and provided for the enlargement and widening of said canal the said company or corporation, its successors or assigns, shall have the right to control, occupy, and use the said strip of land and every part thereof in the same manner and to the same extent as before the execution and delivery of the conveyance, and also the right to transfer, lease, sell, quitclaim, or otherwise dispose of said property and every part thereof, subject to the grant made to the United States: And provided further, That this Act shall take effect only when the foregoing requirements shall have been fully complied with to the satisfaction of the Secretary of War. And the charges for the use of said docks and wharves shall be just and reasonable and shall not be greater than charges for similar services at other ports of the United States on the Gulf of Mexico. (34 Stat. 302.)

This was the first section of an act entitled "An act to establish an additional collection district in the state of Texas, and for other purposes."

The district of Sabine, as established by this section, was retained in the reorganization of the Customs Service, pursuant to Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327, because of the express provisions of this act creating the district in consideration of the conveyance to the government of the Port Arthur ship canal and other water ways described in the act.

Section 2 of the act provided for the appointment, office, etc., and compensation of a collector for the district of Sabine. It was superseded by said Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service, pursuant to Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, and the estimate for the district of Sabine accompanying the plan of reorganization, ante, § 5327.

Section 3 of the act made Sabine a subport of entry and delivery in the district, with privileges of immediate transportation, etc., and provided for the appointment, duties, etc., of a deputy collector for the subport, and for other officers. It also was superseded by said reorganization of the customs service, pursuant to Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327, in which Port Arthur and Sabine were made ports of entry in the district of Sabine, by section 1, subsection 21, of said plan of reorganization.

See note at the beginning of this chapter.

§ 5340. (R. S. § 2580.) Additional inspectors upon routes by which goods withdrawn from bonded warehouse may be exported to Mexico; reports by inspectors.

The Secretary of the Treasury shall appoint inspectors of the customs to reside at San Antonio, Eagle Pass, the Presidio del Norte, and San Elizario, or at such other points as he may designate, not exceeding four in number, upon the routes by which goods entered and bonded and withdrawn from warehouse may, in pursuance of law, be exported to Mexico; and such inspectors shall make a report semiannually to the Secretary of the Treasury of all the trade that passes under inspection, stating the number of packages, description of goods, their value, and the names of the exporters.

Act Aug. 30, 1852, c. 96, § 3, 10 Stat. 38.

The appointment of inspectors to enforce the customs laws along the boundary between Mexico and the counties of San Diego and San Bernardino, California, was authorized by amendment of R. S. § 2607, by Act June 16, 1882, c. 223, 22 Stat. 105.

The withdrawal of imported merchandise from warehouse without payment of duties for immediate transportation to designated points in Mexico, through the ports of Lavaca and Eagle Pass, was authorized by R. S. §§ 3003, 3004, as amended by Act Sept. 25, 1890, c. 917, § 2, incorporated into R. S. § 3004, post, §§ 5688, 5689.

§ 5341. (R. S. § 2581.) Transshipment of goods transported in bond to Brownsville.

All merchandise transported in bond to the port of Brownsville from any other port of the United States, by Brazos Harbor, may, on arrival in that harbor, be transshipped under such regulations, not inconsistent with law, as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, in other vessels for transportation by the Rio Grande to Brownsville; and all merchandise imported into the district by Brazos Harbor, from any foreign country, may in like manner be transshipped to Brownsville as provided for goods, wares, and merchandise transshipped in bond.

Act June 16, 1860, c. 134, § 4, 12 Stat. 40.

The withdrawal of imported merchandise entered and bonded at Brownsville, or rewarehoused at said port, without the payment of the duties, for immediate transportation to points in Mexico, was authorized by R. S. § 3002, post, § 5687.

§ 5342. (Act March 1, 1889, c. 309.) Port of Portland, Oregon; extension of limits.

That the limits of the port of Portland, in the State of Oregon, as a port of entry, be, and the same are hereby, extended so as to include all that portion of the east bank of the Willamette River lying opposite to the city of Portland, for a distance of one mile in width, and extending from the south boundary-line of the corporate limits of the city of Portland down said east bank of said river to a point directly opposite to the lower end of Swan Island, in said river. (25 Stat. 750.)

This was an act entitled "An act to extend the limits of the port of Portland as a port of entry."

(R. S. §§ 2582–2587. Superseded.)

See note at the beginning of this chapter.

§ 5343. (R. S. § 2588.) Manifests of vessels bound for Portland.

The master of every vessel entering the Columbia River from the sea, and bound for Portland, in the district of Willamette, shall exhibit his papers to the collector of the port of Astoria, and deposit with him a sworn copy of the manifest of cargo. If the vessel is laden with domestic merchandise or merchandise in bond for Portland, the collector at Astoria shall permit her to proceed to her place of destination; but if she has dutiable merchandise on board not bonded, he shall cause a customs officer to proceed on board the vessel to Portland, who shall see that no goods are landed from such vessel before her arrival and entry at the latter port. The necessary expenses, including the per diem of such officer and the expense of his return to Astoria, shall be paid by the master of such vessel to the collector of customs at Portland, for the use of the United States, before permit shall be given to unload.

Act June 14, 1870, c. 127, § 2, 16 Stat. 151.

§ 5344. (R. S. § 2589.) Manifests of vessels clearing from Portland.

All vessels clearing from Portland, in the district of Willamette, and bound to sea, shall, on arrival at Astoria, in the district of Oregon, report to the collector; and the master of every vessel so reporting shall leave a copy of his manifest, including any additional cargo taken on board after leaving Portland, with the collector at Astoria, and thereupon shall be allowed to proceed to sea. The master or other person in charge or command of any vessel entering the Columbia River from the sea, or clearing from Portland and bound to sea as described in this section, who shall neglect to exhibit his papers, or to report to the collector, or to deposit his manifest, as herein required, shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars.

Act June 14, 1870, c. 127, § 3, 16 Stat. 151.

§ 5345. (R. S. § 2590.) Vessels having merchandise for both Astoria and Portland.

When a vessel shall arive at Astoria, in the district of Oregon, from sea, having merchandise on board for that place and also for Portland, in the district of Willamette, such vessel shall enter at Astoria and discharge such portion of her cargo as is destined for that place, whereupon the collector shall cause her hatches to be closed and sealed, and shall then permit her to proceed to Portland in charge of a customs officer.

Act June 14, 1870, c. 127, § 4, 16 Stat. 151.

(R. S. §§ 2591–2607. Superseded.)

See note at the beginning of this chapter.

§ 5346. (Act March 2, 1889, c. 358.) Port of Memphis; extension of limits.

That the limits of the present port of Memphis, Tennessee, be extended from Beale street southward to Jackson street, and that the east line of the present port be extended southward until it intersects said Jackson street. (25 Stat. 790.)

This was an act entitled "An act to extend the limits of the port of Memphis, Tennessee."

(R. S. § 2608. Repealed.)

This section provided for the appointment of four appraisers of merchandise, to be employed in visiting ports of entry under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, and to assist in the appraisement of merchandise as might be deemed necessary by the Secretary to protect and insure uniformity in the collection of the revenue from customs. It was repealed by Act June 10, 1890, c. 407, § 29, 26 Stat. 141.

(R. S. §§ 2609, 2610. Superseded.)

R. S. § 2609, provided for the appointment of merchant appraisers whenever an appraisement of imported merchandise was to be made at any port for which no appraiser was provided. R. S. § 2610, made every merchant refusing to serve as such appraiser liable to a penalty. Both sections were superseded by the provisions relating to appraisers and appraisements of the Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, 26 Stat. 131, which was amended by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36

Stat. 91, and again amended by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, making the provisions regarding appraisal read as set forth post, §§ 5591, 5592, 5594–5602.

R. S. § 2945, which contained a provision similar to that of R. S. § 2610, was repealed, without mention of section 2610, by said Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, § 29, 26 Stat. 141. Said provision was originally enacted by Act March 1, 1823, c. 21, § 19, 3 Stat. 736, which was incorporated into both said sections 2610 and 2945 of the Revised Statutes.

(R. S. §§ 2611, 2612. Transferred to Chapter 2 of this Title.)

R. S. § 2611, required special examiners of drugs, etc., to take and subscribe an oath as prescribed therein.

R. S. § 2612, provided for instructions to collectors of districts for which an examiner of drugs, etc., was not provided by law, to prevent the importation of adulterated and spurious drugs and medicines.

Both sections are placed, with other provisions relating to the qualifications of and duties of officers of the customs, under chapter 2 of this Title, post, §§ 5355, 5356.

CHAPTER TWO

Qualifications, Pay, and Duties of Officers

Customs-collection districts with headquarters and ports of entry, in lieu of existing districts and ports, were established by the reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327, which section provided that such reorganization "should constitute for the fiscal year 1914, and until otherwise provided by Congress, the permanent organization of the Customs Service."

The reorganization limited the expense of the Customs Service, prescribed the number of collectors, naval officers, surveyors, and other customs officers and employés for each district, and their compensation, required all moneys collected, "whether as fees, storage, commissions or from the sale of blank forms or otherwise," to be "covered into the Treasury," and authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to "appoint a deputy collector to have charge of each port of entry, who shall perform such duties and receive such compensation as the Secretary of the Treasury shall determine," and to "cause to be stationed at places in the various collection districts, though not named as ports of entry, officers or employés of the customs, with authority to enter and clear vessels, to accept entries of merchandise, to collect duties, and to enforce the various provisions of the customs and navigation laws." Thereby many sections of this chapter of the Revised Statutes and subsequent provisions relating to salaries, fees, etc., of various officers were superseded, as stated more particularly in the notes under said sections, respectively.

§ 5347. (R. S. § 2613.) Term of office of collectors, naval officers, etc.

Collectors of the customs, naval officers, and surveyors of the customs shall be appointed for the term of four years.

Act May 15, 1820, c. 102, § 1, 3 Stat. 582.

Notes of Decisions

Term of office.—On the ground of public necessity, naval and other administrative officers mentioned must be considered, in contemplation of law, as holding their offices until their successors are duly appointed and qualified. (1835) 2 Op. Atty. Gen. 713. See, also, Parsons v. U. S. (1897) 17 Sup. Ct. 880, 167 U. S. 324, 338, 42 L. Ed. 185; (1873) 14 Op. Atty. Gen. 259, 263; (1877) 15 Op. Atty. Gen. 214; (1882) 17 Op. Atty. Gen. 476.

Removal—Effect.—A collector of the revenue has no power to collect after he is removed from office. Sthreshley v. U. S. (1807) 8 U. S. (4 Cranch) 169, 2 L. Ed. 584.

Cited without definite application, U. S. v. Irving (1843) 1 How. 250, 258, 11 L. Ed. 120.

§ 5348. (R. S. § 2614.) Appraiser's oath of office.

The appraiser at New York, before he enters upon the duties of his office, shall take and subscribe an oath faithfully to direct and supervise the examination, inspection, and appraisement according to law, of such merchandise as the collector may direct pursuant to law, and to cause to be duly reported to the collector the true value thereof, as required by law. All other appraisers, [and all resident merchants appointed according to law to act as appraisers,] shall severally take and subscribe an oath diligently and faithfully to examine and inspect such merchandise as the collector may direct, and truly to report, to the best of their knowledge and belief, the true value thereof.

Act March 1, 1823, c. 21, § 16, 3 Stat. 735. Act July 27, 1866, c. 284, § 1, 14 Stat. 302. Act July 14, 1870, c. 255, §§ 34, 36, 16 Stat. 271.

The words of this section "and all resident merchants appointed according to law to act as appraisers," inclosed in brackets, were superseded by the provisions relating to appraisers of the Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, § 13, 26 Stat. 136, amended by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, §§ 28, 36, 99, and again amended and re-enacted by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, III, M, post, § 5594.

Notes of Decisions

De facto appraisers.—The acts of a de facto appraiser are valid. Gibb v. Washington (C. C. 1858) Fed. Cas. No. 5,380.

Right to produce witnesses.—This and other named sections held not to give importer right to produce witnesses, etc., before appraisers. (1886) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 360.

Cited without definite application, Greely v. Thompson (1850) 10 How. 225, 235, 13 L. Ed. 397; U. S. v. Rosenthal (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 766, 778 (affirmed Browne v. U. S. [1905] 145 Fed. 1, 76 C. C. A. 31); Curnen & Stiner v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 136 Fed. 807, 808, 809.

§ 5349. (R. S. § 2615.) Oath of assistant appraisers.

Each of the assistant appraisers at the port of New York, before entering upon the duties of his office, shall take and subscribe an oath diligently and faithfully to examine and inspect such goods, wares, and merchandise as the appraiser may direct, and truly to report to him the true value thereof, according to law. Such report shall be subject to revision and correction by the appraiser, and when approved by him shall be transmitted to the collector, and shall be deemed an appraisement by the United States local appraiser of the district of such merchandise required by law. The assistant appraisers at Boston, Philadelphia, and San Francisco, shall take and subscribe an oath diligently and faithfully to examine and inspect such merchandise as the principal appraisers may direct, and truly to report to them the true value thereof, according to law.

Act May 28, 1830, c. 147, § 2, 4 Stat. 409. Act July 27, 1866, c. 284, § 2, 14 Stat. 302. Act July 14, 1870, c. 255, §§ 34–36, 16 Stat. 271.

Notes of Decisions

Reports.—A report in regard to valuation of imported merchandise signed by an examiner or clerk appointed pursuant to section 5629, post, and approved by the appraiser, is not in compliance with the requirement of this section that the assistant appraiser make such report. (1894) 20 Op. Atty. Gen. 731.

Right to produce witnesses.—This and other named sections held not to give importer the right to produce witnesses, etc., before appraisers. (1886) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 360.

Cited without definite application, U. S. v. Curnen & Stiner (1906) 146 Fed. 45, 48, 76 C. C. A. 503; U. S. v. Rosenthal (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 766, 778 (affirmed Browne v. U. S. [1905] 145 Fed. 1, 76 C. C. A. 31).

§ 5350. (R. S. § 2616.) Oath of office of customs officers.

Every officer, clerk, or employé appointed under this Title shall, before entering upon his duties, take and subscribe an oath in addition to the oath of office prescribed by section seventeen hundred and fifty-six or section seventeen hundred and fifty-seven, Title "Provisions applying to several classes of officers," that he will use his best endeavors to prevent and detect frauds against the laws of the United States imposing duties upon imports.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 20, 1 Stat. 641. Act March 3, 1817, c. 109, § 7, 3 Stat. 397. Act July 30, 1846, c. 74, § 9, 9 Stat. 44. Act May 9, 1848, c. 40, 9 Stat. 220. Act June 26, 1848, c. 70, § 6, 9 Stat. 239.

R. S. § 1756, one of the sections mentioned in this section as prescribing an oath of office, was repealed by Act May 13, 1884, c. 46, § 2, ante, § 3216.

Provisions authorizing the collectors of customs to administer the oath required by this section, providing for the filing of duplicates thereof, and imposing a penalty for failure to comply therewith, were made by Act Feb. 8, 1875, c. 36, § 11, post, § 5353.

Notes of Decisions

Presumption.—An officer of the customs, duly commissioned, and acting in the duties of his office, is presumed to have taken the regular oaths. U. S. v. Bachelder (C. C. 1814) Fed. Cas. No. 14,490.

§ 5351. (R. S. § 2617.) Who may administer oath of office.

The oath of office required by law to be taken by a collector may be taken before any magistrate authorized to administer oaths within the district to which such collector belongs. The oath required to be taken by any other person appointed to any office under this Title shall be taken before the collector of his district.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 20, 1 Stat. 641. Act July 30, 1846, c. 74, § 9, 9 Stat. 44. Act June 26, 1848, c. 70, § 6, 9 Stat. 239.

Similar provisions for taking the required oath before the collector or other officer were made by Act Feb. 8, 1875, c. 36, § 11, post, § 5353.

The officers authorized to administer the oath of office were designated in R. S. § 1758, ante, § 3220.

§ 5352. (R. S. § 2618.) Certification, etc., of oath.

The oath of office administered to any person appointed to any office under this Title shall be certified under the hand and seal of the person by whom the same shall have been administered, and shall, within three months thereafter, be transmitted to the [Commissioner of Customs]. In default of taking such oath, or of transmitting a certificate thereof, the person failing shall be liable to a penalty of two hundred dollars.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 20, 1 Stat. 641, 642.

Provisions similar to those of this section were made by Act Feb. 8, 1875, c. 36, § 11, post, § 5353.

The words of this section, "Commissioner of Customs," inclosed in brackets, were superseded by the abolition of the office and the transfer of the powers and duties thereof to the Comptroller of the Treasury, by the Dockery Act of July 31, 1894, c. 174, § 4, ante, § 402. All provisions of law not inconsistent with said act, in any way relating to the Commissioner of Customs, are held by said section 4, to relate to the Comptroller of the Treasury.

The copy of the oath of subordinate customs officers was required to be transmitted to the Secretary of the Treasury by a provision of Act March 2, 1895, c. 177, § 5, post, § 5354. And the duties of the Comptroller of the Treasury in regard to customs officers' bonds were transferred to the Secretary of the Treasury by a further provision of said section 5, set forth ante, § 3288.

§ 5353. (Act Feb. 8, 1875, c. 36, § 11.) Oath of subordinate customs officers; before whom and how taken; certification, etc.; penalty for default.

The oaths now required to be taken by subordinate officers of the customs may be taken before the collector of the customs in the district in which they are appointed, or before any officer authorized to administer oaths generally; and the oaths shall be taken in duplicate, one copy to be transmitted to the [Commissioner of Customs], and the other to be filed with the collector of customs for the district in which the officer appointed acts. And in default of taking such oath, or transmitting a certificate thereof, or filing the same with the collector, the party failing shall forfeit and pay the sum of two hundred dollars, to be recovered, with cost of suit, in any court of competent jurisdiction, to the use of the United States. (18 Stat. 309.)

The words of this section, "Commissioner of Customs," inclosed in brackets, were superseded by the abolition of the office by the Dockery Act of July 31, 1894, c. 174, § 4, ante, § 402, and subsequent provisions for transmission of a copy of the oath to the Secretary of the Treasury by Act March 2, 1895, c. 177, § 5, post, § 5354.

Officers and employés in the customs service were required, as a condition precedent to payment of compensation for their services, to make oath that they had not received improper consideration for official services, by R. S. § 1790, ante, § 3265.

Officers of the revenue-cutters were to be deemed officers of the customs by R. S. § 2760, post, § 5448.

The oath required by R. S. § 1790, ante, § 3265, to be administered to the customs officers and employés was authorized to be administered by the collectors and their special deputies by Act March 15, 1898, c. 68, post, § 5360.

Cited without definite application,
U. S. v. Dominici (1897) 78 Fed. 334, 336, 24 C. C. A. 116.

§ 5354. (Act March 2, 1895, c. 177, § 5.) Custody of oaths of subordinate customs officers.

Hereafter the copy of the oath of office of subordinate officers of the customs, required to be transmitted to the [Commissioner of Customs] by section eleven of the "Act to amend existing customs and internal revenue laws, and for other purposes," approved February eighth, eighteen hundred and seventy-five, shall be transmitted to the Secretary of the Treasury. (28 Stat. 807.)

This provision was part of section 5 of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act of 1895, cited above. The remaining provisions of the section, relating to official bonds, are set forth ante, §§ 3288–3290.

Provisions as to the custody of oaths of office in general were made by R. S. § 1759, ante, § 3223.

The words of this section, "Commissioner of Customs," inclosed in brackets, were superseded by the abolition of the office and the transfer of the powers and duties thereof to the Comptroller of the Treasury, by the Dockery Act of July 31, 1894, c. 174, § 4, ante, § 402.

§ 5355. (R. S. § 2611.) Oath of special examiners of drugs.

Special examiners of drugs, medicines, chemicals, and so forth, shall, before entering upon their duties, take and subscribe an oath faithfully and diligently to perform such duties, and to use their best endeavors to prevent and detect frauds upon the revenue of the United States; which oath shall be administered by the collector of the port or district where the examiner making it is employed.

Act June 26, 1848, c. 70, § 6, 9 Stat. 239.

An examination of imported drugs and preparations used as medicine, before passing the custom house, in reference to their quality, purity, and fitness and their value, was required by R. S. § 2933, post, § 5622.

The exportation or destruction of rejected articles was provided for by R. S. § 2937, post, § 5626.

Subsequent provisions for inspection and regulation of importation of adulterated foods, drugs, and liquors, are contained in Title LVI B, "Regulation of Interstate and Foreign Commerce as to Particular Subjects," Chapter B.

§ 5356. (R. S. § 2612.) Instructions to prevent importation of adulterated drugs.

The Secretary of the Treasury shall give to the collectors of districts for which an examiner of drugs, medicines, and chemicals is not provided by law, such instructions as he may deem necessary to prevent the importation of adulterated and spurious drugs and medicines.

Act June 26, 1848, c. 70, § 5, 9 Stat. 238.

§ 5357. (R. S. § 2619, as amended, Act Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69.) Bonds of collectors, naval officers, and surveyors.

Every collector, naval officer, and surveyor, shall, before entering on the duties of his office, give a bond to the United States, with one or more sufficient sureties, for the true and faithful discharge of the duties thereof according to law. And all bonds to be hereafter given shall be of the form following, to wit: Know all men by these presents that we ——— are held and firmly bound unto the United States of America in the full and just sum of ——— dollars, money of the United States; to which payment, well and truly to be made, we bind ourselves, jointly and severally our joint and several heirs executors and administrators, firmly by these presents, sealed with our seals and dated this ——— day of ——— one thousand ——— The condition of the foregoing obligation is such, that whereas the President of the United States hath, pursuant to law, appointed the said ——— to the office of ——— in the State of ———: Now, therefore, if the said ——— has truly and faithfully executed and discharged, and shall continue truly and faithfully to execute and discharge, all the duties of the said office, according to law, then the above obligation to be void and of none effect; otherwise it shall abide and remain in full force and virtue.

Sealed and delivered in the presence of ——— And the amount of penalty shall be fixed by the President, as provided in section thirty six hundred and thirty nine.

First. The collectors of New York and Philadelphia, in the sum of sixty thousand dollars each.

Second. The collector of Boston and Charlestown, in the sum of forty thousand dollars.

Third. The collectors of Baltimore and Charleston, in the sum of thirty thousand dollars each.

Fifth. The collectors of Portsmouth in New Hampshire, Salem and Beverly, Newport, Providence, Wilmington in Delaware, Annapolis, Georgetown in the District of Columbia, Richmond, Alexandria, Wilmington in North Carolina, New Berne, Edenton, and Vicksburgh, in ten thousand dollars each.

Sixth. The collectors of Newburyport, Gloucester, Marblehead, Plymouth, Nantucket, Portland and Falmouth, New London, New Haven, Fairfield, Perth Amboy, Newark, Yorktown, Tappahannock, Georgetown in South Carolina, Beaufort in South Carolina, and Savannah, in five thousand dollars each.

Seventh. The collectors of Middletown and Waldoborough, in four thousand dollars each.

Eighth. The collectors of the several districts in the State of Florida, in such sum as the President shall prescribe.

Ninth. All collectors not above mentioned, in two thousand dollars each.

Tenth. The naval officers at Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Charleston, in ten thousand dollars each.

Eleventh. All naval officers not above mentioned, in two thousand dollars each.

Twelfth. The surveyors at Albany, Pittsburgh, Wheeling, Cincinnati, Louisville, Saint Louis, Nashville, and Natchez, in ten thousand dollars each.

Thirteenth. The surveyors of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Charleston, in five thousand dollars each.

Fourteenth. All surveyors not above mentioned, in one thousand dollars each.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 23, § 1, 1 Stat. 705. Act May 10, 1800, c. 49, 2 Stat. 68. Act May 7, 1822, c. 62, § 8, 3 Stat. 684. Act May 7, 1822, c. 107, § 2, 3 Stat. 693. Act Jan. 21, 1829, c. 10, § 1, 4 Stat. 331. Act March 2, 1831, c. 76, § 4, 4 Stat. 476. Act March 2, 1831, c. 87, §§ 1, 5, 4 Stat. 480, 482. Act June 30, 1834, c. 135, § 10, 4 Stat. 716. Act July 7, 1838, c. 169, § 8, 5 Stat. 267. Act June 4, 1844, c. 39, 5 Stat. 661. Act March 3, 1857, c. 105, 11 Stat. 200. Act March 2, 1867, c. 178, § 1, 14 Stat. 542. Act Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, § 1, 19 Stat. 245.

This section, as enacted in the Revised Statutes, did not contain the form of the bond. The section was amended by striking out after the words "according to law" the words "under penalty as follows," and by inserting after the said words "according to law" the provisions following, relating to the form of the bond, to the word "First," as set forth here, by Act Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, § 1, cited above.

Provisions authorizing the President to regulate and increase the sums for which bonds are required of collectors of customs, naval officers and surveyors, were made by R. S. § 3639, post, § 6638.

The Secretary of the Treasury was authorized to require bond from deputies clothed with powers of collectors by R. S. § 2633, post, § 5372.

Provisions for bonds of deputy collectors were also made by Act Feb. 6, 1907, c. 471, post, § 5369.

General provisions for the examination and renewal of official bonds were made by Act March 2, 1895, c. 177, § 5, ante, § 3290.

Notes of Decisions

Requisites and validity of bond.—The omission of the words "in the state of Vermont" from the official bond of the collector of customs for the district of Vermont does not impair its validity. The bond is valid, either under the statute or at common law. (1886) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 458.

Liability of sureties—In general.—Where a collector of customs intrusts a package of treasury notes, received by him in payment of duties, and canceled by him, to a person accustomed to put such packages in the post office, and they are lost or purloined before being placed in the post office, the collector is liable to the United States on his official bond for all actual damages sustained by them, which must be estimated by a jury from the damage likely to happen from their getting into circulation again, from delay and inconvenience in obtaining the proper vouchers to settle accounts, from the want of evidence at the treasury department that the notes had been redeemed, or from any other direct consequence of the condition of his bond, and of his instructions under it. U. S. v. Morgan (1850) 52 U. S. (11 How.) 154, 13 L. Ed. 643.

A collector of customs, who receives, in payment for duties, treasury notes previously canceled by him and since stolen or lost, and altered, is responsible to the United States on his official bond for the amount. Id.

The condition in a bond to well and faithfully behave and execute the office, does not render the surety liable for want of skill. Alexandria v. Corse (C. C. 1822) Fed. Cas. No. 183; Bank of United States v. Brent (C. C. 1826) Fed. Cas. No. 910.

Under the condition of a bond, given as additional security, that the officer "has faithfully discharged, and shall continue faithfully to discharge," etc., held that the surety became absolutely bound for any default of the officer. U. S. v. Anderson (C. C. 1848) Fed. Cas. No. 14,446; Same v. Brown (D. C. 1830) Fed. Cas. No. 14,663.

Liens extend to all the real estate of collectors and their sureties, owned by them at the time the sums in default were committed to them. (1830) 2 Op. Atty. Gen. 310.

—— Scope of duties.—A collector of the customs and his sureties are responsible on his official bond for the faithful application by him of moneys of the United States received by him from his predecessor in office. Broome v. U. S. (1853) 56 U. S. (15 How.) 143, 14 L. Ed. 636.

A collector and his sureties are responsible for money which he receives from his predecessor in office; and also for money transmitted to him by another collector, upon his representation and requisition that it was necessary to defray the current expenses of his office and advanced for that purpose. Broome v. U. S. (1853) 15 How. 143, 153, 14 L. Ed. 636.

Where duties not required by law were imposed on a collector of customs by the superior officers of the treasury department, he is still required to discharge his duties according to law, and the sureties on his official bond are liable for his failure to do so. U. S. v. Gaussen (C. C. 1875) Fed. Cas. No. 15,192.

The condition of a bond of a public officer to discharge the duties according to law refers to existing laws and those passed during his term of office. U. S. v. Gaussen (C. C. 1875) Fed. Cas. No. 15,192.

The sureties on the bond of a customs collector are not responsible for a loss of funds in his custody which he is transporting, under orders from the treasury department, from one place to another, such transportation being no part of his duty as collector. U. S. v. Adams (C. C. 1885) 24 Fed. 348.

—— Period of liability.—The bond of a collector of the customs takes effect from the time that he and his sureties part with it in the course of transmission to the comptroller of the treasury, even against the representatives of a party thereto, who dies before the bond is approved by the comptroller, as required by the act of congress of 1799. Broome v. U. S. (1853) 56 U. S. (15 How.) 143, 14 L. Ed. 636.

The sureties on a bond of a collector of customs appointed during a recess of the senate are not liable for his acts after he accepted a new appointment made by the president by and with the advice of the senate. U. S. v. Ellis (C. C. 1866) Fed. Cas. No. 15,047.

A bond given by a collector of customs under Act March 2, 1799, binds the sureties from the time he assumed office, though not executed until several months thereafter. Id.

The bond of a collector of customs as a depositor of public money and fiscal agent of the United States under Act Aug. 6, 1846, does not apply to past transactions. U. S. v. Ellis (C. C. 1866) Fed. Cas. No. 15,047.

The liability of sureties upon the official bond of a collector of customs is limited to acts done by him during his term of office. They are not responsible for defaults committed in relation to public moneys received by him after the term for which he was appointed. (1877) 15 Op. Atty. Gen. 214.

—— Extinguishment.—Giving a second official bond by a collector, with different sureties, does not of itself merge or extinguish the first; and an unsatisfied judgment on one does not bar an action on the other for the same breach. U. S. v. Hoyt (C. C. 1848) Fed. Cas. No. 15,409.

Payments and discharge of sureties.—Where a collector has, at different times, given two bonds, with different sureties, and the supervisor of the revenue has promised to apply his payments to the discharge of the first bond, though some of them were for money collected after the second bond was given, such promise does not bind the United States, nor amount to an application of the payments to the first bond. U. S. v. January (1813) 11 U. S. (7 Cranch) 572, 3 L. Ed. 443; Same v. Wardwell (C. C. 1828) Fed. Cas. No. 16,640.

Where the account of a collector of customs, who serves several successive terms, is kept by the officers of the treasury in one continued series of debits and credits, moneys paid into the treasury by the collector in the regular performance of his duty cannot, as against the sureties on his bond for that term, be applied by the treasury officers in discharge of a defalcation occurring in a previous term. U. S. v. Irving (1843) 42 U. S. (1 How.) 250, 11 L. Ed. 120.

The addition of a condition in the bond of a collector not specifically named in the act of congress, that the obligors shall not be liable if each and every deputy appointed by the collectors shall truly and faithfully execute and discharge all the duties of such deputy collector according to law, does not relieve the sureties from liability. Chadwick v. U. S. (C. C. 1880) 3 Fed. 750.

No change made by law in the rate of duties, the routine of the office, or in the method of conducting it, which does not change materially the character of the office, will discharge the sureties on the official bond of the collector. U. S. v. Gaussen (C. C. 1875) Fed. Cas. No. 15,192.

The sureties of the official bond of a collector of customs, where the mode of payment of the customs had been varied during their suretyship, were held not to be discharged by such change, as their principal was bound to receive such payments as the state directed, and to pay them over in specie, and any change in the mode or character of the payments does not affect his or their liability. Borden v. Houston (1847) 2 Tex. 594.

Action.—An assignment by a collector in trust to pay any judgment recovered on his official bond enables the United States, on recovering such judgment, to sue the trustees for an accounting. U. S. v. Hoyt (C. C. 1848) Fed. Cas. No. 15,410.

But, where the first act of the United States in affirmance of the trust is the filing of their bill for an account, the trustees are not liable for property previously disposed of with the consent of the assignor and sureties. Id.

United States, in an action upon a collector's bond, cannot obtain judgment against the surety for more than the penalty. U. S. v. Ricketts (C. C. 1825) Fed. Cas. No. 16,159.

Cited without definite application, U. S. v. Jones (C. C. 1896) 77 Fed. 717, 724.

§ 5358. (R. S. § 2620.) Bonds, how approved and filed.

All bonds required by law to be given by collectors, naval officers, surveyors, or other officers of the customs, shall be approved by the [Commissioner of Customs], and shall be filed in his office.

Act June 17, 1864, c. 130, § 5, 13 Stat. 134.

The words of this section, "Commissioner of Customs," inclosed in brackets, were superseded by the abolition of the office and the transfer of the powers and duties thereof to the Comptroller of the Treasury by the Dockery Act of July 31, 1894, c. 174, § 4, ante, § 402; and the duties of the Comptroller of the Treasury in regard to bonds were transferred to the Secretary of the Treasury by a provision of Act March 2, 1895, c. 177, § 5, set forth ante, § 3288.

Notes of Decisions

Date of approval.—The date of approval is not conclusive evidence of the commencement of the period when the bond began to run. It begins to be effective from the moment when the collector and his sureties part with it in the course of transmission. Broome v. U. S. (1853) 15 How. 143, 153, 14 L. Ed. 636.

§ 5359. (R. S. § 2621.) Duties of collector where naval officers and surveyors are appointed.

At each of the ports to which there are appointed a collector, naval officer, and surveyor, it shall be the duty of the collector:

First. To receive all reports, manifests, and documents to be made or exhibited on the entry of any ship or vessel, according to the regulations of this Title.

Second. To record, in books to be kept for that purpose, all manifests.

Third. To receive the entries of all ships or vessels, and of the goods, wares, and merchandise imported in them.

Fourth. To estimate, together with the naval officer where there is one, or alone where there is none, the amount of the dues payable thereupon, indorsing such amount upon the respective entries.

Fifth. To receive all moneys paid for duties, and take all bonds for securing the payment thereof.

Sixth. To grant all permits for the unlading and delivery of goods.

Seventh. To employ, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, proper persons as weighers, gaugers, measurers, and inspectors at the several ports within his district.

Eighth. To provide, with the like approval, at the public expense, store-houses for the safe-keeping of goods, and such scales, weights, and measures as may be necessary.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 21, 1 Stat. 642.

Provisions requiring collectors of customs to make quarterly reports to the Bureau of Statistics were made by R. S. § 337, ante, § 880.

Provisions requiring collectors of customs to seize vessels fitted out or held for the purpose of committing piracy were made by R. S. § 4299, post, § 8045.

Provisions requiring collectors of customs to detain vessels intended to be employed in violation of neutrality laws were made by R. S. § 5290, which was incorporated into the Criminal Code, in section 17 thereof, post, § 10181, and was repealed by section 341 thereof, post, § 10515.

The authority, power, and jurisdiction, in relation to the exclusion of Chinese, vested by law or treaty in the collectors of customs, were conferred upon such officers under the control of the Commissioner General of Immigration as the Secretary of Commerce and Labor might designate therefor, by provisions of Act Feb. 14, 1903, c. 552, § 7, ante, § 858.

Duties in respect to consignments of game from Alaska were imposed on the collectors of customs at Seattle, Portland, and San Francisco, and all collectors and deputy collectors were required to assist in the enforcement of Act June 7, 1902, c. 1037, 32 Stat. 327, for the protection of game in Alaska, as amended by Act May 11, 1908, c. 162, ante, §§ 3615–3621, by provisions of sections 6 and 7 of said amendatory act, ante, §§ 3620, 3621.

Notes of Decisions

Powers, duties, and liability in general.—All payments and disbursements of money received by the collector in his official capacity under direction of the secretary of the treasury were within the range of his official duty. Gaussen v. U. S. (1878) 97 U. S. 584, 591, 24 L. Ed. 1009.

An ex-collector cannot appropriate moneys of the United States in his hands in payment of fees due to officers of the customs, as such authority can be exercised only by the collector actually in office. Champney v. Bancroft (C. C. 1841) Fed. Cas. No. 2,587.

A collector of customs had no authority to take a lease of property for the government without authority from the Secretary of the Treasury. Kinkead v. U. S. (1883) 18 Ct. Cl. 504.

A customhouse officer has no power to control gate keepers at piers. U. S. v. Desmond (C. C. 1858) Fed. Cas. No. 14,951.

Inspectors of customs cannot lawfully be prevented by the local health officers from landing at quarantine stations in the discharge of their duties; but the former, while visiting and remaining at such stations, should observe all reasonable regulations in the interest of public health. (1884) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 15.

No local health regulation which denies to inspectors of customs ample opportunities for then and there protecting the public revenue is reasonable. Id.

A collector of the customs is not personally liable, in the absence of an express agreement, for the wages of one whom he employs as a night watch and oarsman. Nichols v. Moody (N. Y. 1856) 22 Barb. 611.

In an action of trespass against an inspector of customs for breaking and entering a store and carrying away goods which are subsequently condemned in the federal district court, it is a sufficient justification for the defendant to produce a warrant from a justice of the peace directed to the defendant, "as inspector," and describing the goods to be seized as "several bales of dry goods, calicoes, chintzes, etc., and other goods, wares, and merchandise." Steel v. Fisk (Vt. 1816) Brayt. 230.

Employment or removal of subordinates by collector.—Where it is the official duty of a collector of customs to appoint an officer possessing qualifications prescribed by statute, it is to be assumed that in making the appointment he performed his duty in that regard. Erhardt v. Ballin (1906) 150 Fed. 529, 80 C. C. A. 271.

In authorizing collectors, with the approbation of the secretary of the treasury, to employ "weighers, gaugers, measurers, and inspectors," congress exercised its constitutional power of vesting by law in the head of a department the appointment of officers of the government. Frelinghuysen v. Baldwin (D. C. 1882) 12 Fed. 395, 397.

A collector, with the approbation of the Secretary of the Treasury, is authorized to employ persons as occasional weighers and measurers, and to agree with them as to their compensation. Pray v. U. S. (1878) 14 Ct. Cl. 256.

Though a secretary's approval of a removal from office be founded upon a misrepresentation of facts made for an illegal and fraudulent purpose, the removal is nevertheless effective. Turner v. U. S. (1886) 21 Ct. Cl. 24.

Collectors of customs can neither appoint nor dismiss inspectors, weighers, gaugers, and measurers without the approbation of the Secretary of the Treasury. (1821) 1 Op. Atty. Gen. 459.

By analogy to the power of removal exercised by the President, collectors may remove their subordinates without consulting the Secretary of the Treasury, though the approbation of the latter be necessary to an appointment. (1838) 3 Op. Atty. Gen. 325.

It is not a breach of official duty on the part of collectors to refuse to report their reasons for removing their subordinate officers. Id.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 23, giving authority to collectors to employ occasional inspectors and others in aid of the revenue, did not authorize them to employ persons to perform clerical duties in customhouses, and to pay them out of the revenue. (1843) 4 Op. Atty. Gen. 230.

Inspectors in general.—Inspectors of the customs are public officers, and not the mere servants and agents of collector. Hooper v. Fifty-One Casks of Brandy (D. C. 1848) Fed. Cas. No. 6,674; U. S. v. Morse (C. C. 1844) Fed. Cas. No. 15,820.

The approval of the Secretary of the Treasury of the removal from office of an inspector of customs may be in writing or orally, and may be before or at the time of the removal or subsequent to it. Turner v. U. S. (1886) 21 Ct. Cl. 24.

Quære, whether inspector of customs holds a lucrative United States office within meaning of the constitution. Saunders v. Haynes (1859) 13 Cal. 145.

A collector of customs may appoint as inspectors persons who reside within his district, although such persons do not reside at a port of entry or delivery. Rowley v. Gibbs (N. Y. 1817) 14 Johns. 385.

No person can be appointed to the office of permanent inspector of customs except with the approbation of the Secretary of the Treasury. (1843) 4 Op. Atty. Gen. 162.

The only true construction under the Constitution of the acts providing for inspectors is that the name of the individual proposed to be appointed shall be submitted to the Secretary of the Treasury, and that no one shall be appointed unless approved by him. Id.

The approbation of the secretary of the treasury is presumed where the collector appoints and commissions an inspector. U. S. v. Bachelder (C. C. 1814) Fed. Cas. No. 14,490.

A collector of customs cannot remove a permanent inspector without the assent of the Secretary of the Treasury; but the Secretary of the Treasury may displace an inspector without the consent of the collector. (1843) 4 Op. Atty. Gen. 165.

But as the collector's opinion has been required in appointing inspectors, and as his opinion has been uniformly consulted in removing them, it is too late to act on the mere summum jus. Id.

Duties exacted by military authorities.—The duties exacted by the military authorities of San Francisco, from the date of the cessation of hostilities between the United States and Mexico until the arrival of the regular collector appointed by the president under the act of congress making San Francisco a port of entry, were properly levied. Cross v. Harrison (1853) 57 U. S. (16 How.) 164, 14 L. Ed. 889.

Cited without definite application, Tremlett v. Adams (1851) 13 How. 295, 305, 14 L. Ed. 152; Stewart v. U. S. (1854) 17 How. 116, 127, 15 L. Ed. 65.

§ 5360. (Act March 15, 1898, c. 68, § 1.) Collectors and special deputies may administer oaths.

Hereafter Collectors of Customs and their special deputies shall be competent to administer oaths to officers of the Revenue Marine Service and employees in the Customs Service required by sections seventeen hundred and ninety [and twenty-six hundred and ninety-three] of the Revised Statutes.

Act March 15, 1898, c. 68, § 1, 30 Stat. 286.

This was a provision of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act for the fiscal year 1899, cited above.

It superseded a similar provision made by Act March 3, 1893, c. 208, § 1, 27 Stat. 577.

The words of this section, "and twenty-six hundred and ninety-three," inclosed in brackets, were superseded by the reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327. See note to R. S. § 2693, post, in this chapter.

§ 5361. (R. S. § 2622.) Duties of collector where no naval officer is appointed.

At ports to which a collector and surveyor only are appointed, the collector shall solely execute all the duties in which the cooperation of the naval officer is requisite at the ports where a naval officer is appointed. And he shall act in like manner in case of the disability or death of the naval officer, until a successor is appointed, unless there is a deputy duly authorized under the hand and seal of the naval officer, who in that case shall continue to act until an appointment is made.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 21, 1 Stat. 643.

Cited without definite application,
Pacific Creosoting Co. v. U. S. (1912)
196 Fed. 35, 116 C. C. A. 50.

§ 5362. (R. S. § 2623.) Duties of collector where a collector only is appointed.

At ports to which a collector only is appointed, the collector shall solely execute all the duties in which the co-operation of the naval officer is requisite, at ports where a naval officer is appointed, and he shall also, as far as may be, perform all the duties prescribed for surveyors at ports where surveyors are authorized.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 21, 1 Stat. 643.

(R. S. § 2624. Superseded.)

This section was as follows:

"At ports of delivery to which no surveyor is appointed, and at such ports only, the collector may, from time to time, when it is necessary, employ a proper person to perform the duties of surveyor, who shall be entitled to the like compensation with an inspector during the time he is employed."

It was superseded by the abolition of ports of delivery not specifically mentioned as ports of entry, and the grant of authority to the Secretary of the Treasury to "cause to be stationed at places in the various collection districts, though not named as ports of entry, officers or employés of the customs service with authority to enter and clear vessels, to accept entries of merchandise, to collect duties, and to enforce the various provisions of the customs and navigation laws," by sections 2 and 9 of the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

§ 5363. (R. S. § 2625.) Performance of collector's duties in case of disability.

In case of the disability or death of a collector, the duties and authorities vested in him shall devolve on his deputy, if any there be at the time of such disability or death, for whose conduct the estate of such disabled or deceased collector shall be liable; and, if there be no deputy, they shall devolve upon the naval officer of the same district, if any there be; and if there be no naval officer, they shall devolve upon the surveyor of the port appointed for the residence of such disabled or deceased collector, if any there be; and if there be no such surveyor, they shall devolve upon the surveyor of the port nearest thereto and within the district.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 22, 1 Stat. 644.

Notes of Decisions

Resignation of collector.—The term "disability" is comprehensive enough to embrace any cause whereby the surveyor becomes no longer capable of discharging the duties of his office, and in this sense it includes the case of a resignation. (1873) 14 Op. Atty. Gen. 260.

Deputy collectors.—See § 5868, post, as to appointment and delegation of collector's duties to deputies.

Where the office of collector of customs is in "abeyance," the duties thereof, whilst it remains in abeyance, may lawfully be performed by his special deputy, if there be one; if there be no such deputy, then by the naval officer, and so on, as provided herein, in the order there named. (1877) 15 Op. Atty. Gen. 398.

The authority to exercise the duties of the office in that case is, however, not imparted by this section, but by section 1769 R. S. (repealed), within the terms of which latter section the above-named officers (in the order referred to) come, agreeably to the construction given. Id.

Surveyor.—If there be no collector of the port of Galena, Ill., and all the duties of that office are imposed upon the surveyor of customs, then his acts done in performance of the duties and functions of the office of collector of the port are as valid and effective as if done by a collector of the port. His certificate, in conjunction with that of the local inspector of steamboats, is sufficient to authorize the Secretary of War to draw his warrant as provided in the act of Congress authorizing the city of Galena, Ill., to complete certain improvements of the channel of the Galena river. (1894) 20 Op. Atty. Gen. 700.

§ 5364. (R. S. § 2626.) Duties of naval officers.

At ports to which there are appointed a collector, naval officer, and surveyor, it shall be the duty of the naval officer—

First. To receive copies of all manifests and entries.

Second. To estimate, together with the collector, the duties on all merchandise subject to duty, and no duties shall be received without such estimates.

Third. To keep a separate record of such estimates.

Fourth. To countersign all permits, clearances, certificates, debentures, and other documents, to be granted by the collector.

Fifth. To examine the collector's abstracts of duties and other accounts of receipts, bonds, and expenditures, and certify the same if found right.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 21, 1 Stat. 642.

Naval officers were required at the close of each quarter, and oftener, if directed by the Secretary of the Treasury, to examine the books, accounts, returns, and money on hand of the collectors in their respective districts by R. S. § 3650, post, § 6654.

§ 5365. (R. S. § 2627.) Duties of surveyors where collectors and naval officers are appointed.

At ports to which there are appointed a collector, naval officer, and surveyor, it shall be the duty of the surveyor, who shall be in all cases subject to the direction of the collector—

First. To superintend and direct all inspectors, weighers, measurers, and gaugers within his port.

Second. To report once in every week to the collector the name or names of all inspectors, weighers, gaugers, or measurers who are absent from or neglect to do their duty.

Third. To visit or inspect the vessels which arrive in his port, and make a return in writing every morning to the collector of all vessels which have arrived from foreign ports during the preceding day; specifying the names and denominations of the vessels, the masters' names, from whence arrived, whether laden or in ballast, to what nation belonging, and, if American vessels, whether the masters thereof have or have not complied with the law, in having the required number of manifests of the cargo on board, agreeing in substance with the provisions of law.

Fourth. To put on board each of such vessels one or more inspectors immediately after their arrival in his port.

Fifth. To ascertain the proof, quantities, and kinds of distilled spirits imported, rating such spirits according to their respective degrees of proof, as defined by the laws imposing duties on spirits.

Sixth. To examine whether the goods imported in any vessel, and the deliveries thereof, agreeably to the inspector's returns, correspond with the permits for landing the same; and if any error or disagreement appears, to report the same to the collector, and to the naval officer, if any.

Seventh. To superintend the lading for exportation of all goods entered for the benefit of any drawback, bounty, or allowance, and examine and report whether the kind, quantity, and quality of the goods, so laden on board any vessel for exportation, correspond with the entries and permits granted therefor.

Eighth. To examine, and, from time to time, and particularly on the first Mondays of January and July in each year, try the weights, measures, and other instruments used in ascertaining the duties on imports, with standards to be provided by each collector at the public expense for that purpose; and where disagreements or errors are discovered, to report the same to the collector; and to obey and execute such directions as he may receive for correcting the same, agreeably to the standards.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 21, 1 Stat. 642.

Surveyors were required at the close of each quarter, and oftener, if directed by the Secretary of the Treasury, to examine the books, accounts, returns, and money on hand of the collectors in the respective districts by R. S. § 3650, post, § 6654.

Proceedings on returns of deliveries of goods unladed, mentioned in subsection 6, were prescribed by R. S. §§ 2887–2890, post, §§ 5579–5582.

§ 5366. (R. S. § 2628.) Duties of surveyor where surveyor only is appointed.

At ports to which surveyors only are appointed, the surveyor shall perform all the duties enjoined upon surveyors by the preceding section; and shall also receive and record the copies of all manifests transmitted to him by the collector; shall record all permits granted by the collector, distinguishing the gauge, weight, measure, and quality of goods specified therein; and shall take care that no goods be unladen or delivered from any ship or vessel without a proper permit for that purpose.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 21, 1 Stat. 643.

The terms of office of surveyors not continued as collectors, except surveyors at certain ports, ceased upon the reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

The duties of surveyors to enroll and license vessels employed in the coasting-trade and fisheries, were prescribed by R. S. § 4344, post, § 8093.

Surveyors at the ports of Cold Spring, Greenport, and Port Jefferson, in the State of New York, were authorized to enroll and license vessels employed in the coasting trade and fisheries and to enter and clear and grant registers to vessels employed in the whale-fisheries, by R. S. § 4345, post, § 8094.

Notes of Decisions

Validity of acts.—If there be no collector of the port at Galena, Ill., and all the duties of that office are imposed upon the surveyor of customs, then his acts done in the performance of the duties and functions of the office of collector of the port are as valid and effective as if done by a collector of the port. (1894) 20 Op. Atty. Gen. 700.

Disbursements.—Surveyors of customs at ports where there are no collectors are not to be considered as collectors, and therefore within the provisions of section 6665, post, which requires collectors of customs to disburse all moneys that may be appropriated for the construction of customhouses, courthouses, post offices, etc. (1907) 26 Op. Atty. Gen. 108.

§ 5367. (R. S. § 2629.) Performance of surveyor's duties in case of disability.

In case of the disability or death of a surveyor, the collector of the district may authorize some fit person to perform his duties and exercise his powers; and the powers of the person so authorized shall continue until a successor is duly appointed, and ready to enter upon the execution of his office.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 22, 1 Stat. 644.

Notes of Decisions

Disability.—The duties of the office of surveyor of customs, whilst it is in "abeyance," are, by section 1769, R. S. (repealed), construed in connection with this section, devolved upon such customs officer as the collector of the district may authorize to perform them. (1877) 15 Op. Atty. Gen. 401.

§ 5368. (R. S. § 2630.) Deputy collectors.

Every collector of the customs shall have authority, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to employ within his district such number of proper persons as deputy collectors of the customs as he shall deem necessary; and such deputies are declared to be officers of the customs. And in cases of occasional and necessary absence, or of sickness, any collector may exercise his powers and perform his duties by deputy, duly constituted under his hand and seal, and he shall be answerable for the acts of such deputy in the execution of such trust.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 22, 1 Stat. 644. Act March 3, 1817, c. 109, § 7, 3 Stat. 397.

The provisions of this section may be superseded to some extent by the grant of authority to the Secretary of the Treasury to appoint a "deputy collector to have charge of each port of entry" by section 7 of the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

See note to R. S. § 2613, ante, § 5347.

Notes of Decisions

Appointment.—A collector, when authorized by the secretary of the treasury, may appoint as many deputies as may be necessary. Schmaire v. Maxwell (C. C. 1856) Fed. Cas. No. 12,460.

The appointment of the assistant collector at the port of New York (who was formerly employed by the collector with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury) should now, by virtue of the effect of section 10593, post, be made by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. (1885) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 98.

Bond.—Although no bond for a deputy collector of customs is prescribed by law, the collector may exact one for his security against defalcation, either before or after the appointment of the deputy; but such bond does not impose on the deputy the performance of other or greater duties than those required by law. Dignan v. Shields (1879) 51 Tex. 322.

A bond executed by a deputy collector of customs to his principal, for the faithful performance of a cashier's duties, imposes no greater duties than are required by law; nor is it invalid because exacted colore officii. Id.

Compensation.—A deputy collector acting also as inspector may receive additional compensation therefor. U. S. v. Morse (C. C. 1844) Fed. Cas. No. 15,820.

In an action by a deputy collector against the collector of customs to recover for his services, if it appear that it was the understanding of both parties that the defendant would be personally responsible for the plaintiff's services, plaintiff may recover, though it is the custom to pay deputies out of funds collected, and charge the same to the government. Fuller v. Briggs (1849) 22 Vt. 80.

In an action by a deputy collector of customs to recover for his services, a declaration alleging that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff for work and labor performed as deputy collector at the request of the defendant, and that the defendant in consideration thereof afterwards promised to pay the defendant, is sufficient. Id.

Though the government does not allow the collector's account for money paid for the services of a deputy collector unless the account is accompanied by a voucher executed and sworn to by the deputy, showing that the money has in fact been paid to him, yet it is not necessary, in order that the deputy may recover from the collector for his services, that he will first execute such voucher, but it is sufficient if he offer to furnish the voucher when the money is paid to him. Id.

Powers and duties in general.—See § 5363, ante, as to performance of collector's duties by deputy.

Collecting freight charges not an official act. Cleveland, C., C. & I. R. Co. v. McClung (1886) 7 Sup. Ct. 262, 267, 119 U. S. 454, 30 L. Ed. 465.

The offices of deputy collector and of inspector may be held by the same person. Act 1822, c. 107. U. S. v. Morse (C. C. 1844) Fed. Cas. No. 15,820.

Reappraisers may be sworn by a deputy collector. Falleck v. Barney (C. C. 1862) Fed. Cas. No. 4,625; Lehmaier v. Maxwell (C. C. 1856) Fed. Cas. No. 8,-214.

Deputy may administer any oath required to be administered by the collector. Schmaire v. Maxwell (C. C. 1856) Fed. Cas. No. 12,460.

At a port where there are no appraisers, a deputy collector may examine goods entered for warehousing to ascertain their dutiable value, as well as the collector. Spring v. Russell (C. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 13,261.

A deputy collector has no authority to waive a tender proposed to be made by importers, by acknowledging a tender when none is made. U. S. v. Nash, (C. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 15,856.

The deputy collector is a permanent officer of the customs, and may exercise and perform the functions, powers, and duties of the collector. U. S. v. Barton (D. C. 1833) Fed. Cas. No. 14,534.

The authority of a deputy collector of customs ceases upon the removal of the collector. (1842) 4 Op. Atty. Gen. 26.

A collector of customs may delegate to his deputy the duty of receiving and keeping customs moneys, as cashier in his office, without violating the regulations which prohibit customs officers from performing their duties by substitutes. Dignan v. Shields (1879) 51 Tex. 322.

Term of office.—Although a deputy collector of customs is constituted and appointed by the collector, with the approval of the secretary of the treasury, the tenure of office of such deputy is de facto at the will of the collector. Dignan v. Shields (1879) 51 Tex. 322.

The provision made for the continuance of deputies, in cases of disability or death of collectors, does not apply to cases where collectors have been removed from office. (1842) 4 Op. Atty. Gen. 26.

Resignation.—While a final resignation of a deputy collector of customs cannot be withdrawn, a prospective resignation may be withdrawn at any time before acceptance, or after acceptance, with consent of the authority accepting, if no new rights have intervened. Bunting v. Willis (Va. 1876) 27 Grat. 144, 21 Am. Rep. 338.

A deputy collector of customs has an absolute right to resign his office. Id.

§ 5369. (Act Feb. 6, 1907, c. 471.) Additional deputy collectors and other officers; duties; bonds.

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint a deputy collector of customs and other customs officers at ports and subports of entry in the several customs collection districts, and deputy collectors thus appointed shall have authority to receive entries, collect duties, and to perform any and all functions prescribed by law for collectors of customs, subject to such regulations and restrictions as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe: Provided, That whenever the Secretary of the Treasury shall appoint a deputy collector at a port of entry where there is no collector, he shall designate the collector through whom such deputy shall report, but the bond of such deputy shall run to the Government, and the deputy shall be financially responsible directly to the Government. (34 Stat. 880.)

This was a provision of an act to prescribe the duties of deputy collectors of customs, cited above.

The provision preceding the proviso was superseded by the grant of similar authority to the Secretary of the Treasury by sections 7 and 9 of the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

§ 5370. (R. S. § 2631.) In case of sickness or absence, collectors and surveyors may authorize some officer or clerk to act.

In case of the sickness or unavoidable absence of any collector or surveyor of customs from his office, he may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, authorize some officer or clerk under him to act in his place, and to discharge all the duties required by law of such collector or surveyor in his capacity as disbursing agent; and the official bond given by the principal of the office shall be held to cover and apply to the acts of the person appointed to act in his place in such cases.

Act March 3, 1873, c. 271, 17 Stat. 604.

Provisions for the performance, temporarily, of the duties of appraisers and assistant appraisers, in case of vacancy in the office, or of sickness, disability, or absence, were made by Act March 3, 1905, c. 1413, post, §§ 5395, 5396.

§ 5371. (R. S. § 2632.) Deputies of naval officers and surveyors.

Every naval officer and surveyor, in cases of occasional and necessary absence, or of sickness, and not otherwise, may respectively exercise and perform his functions, powers, and duties by deputy, duly constituted under their hands and seals respectively, for whom, in the execution of their trust, they shall respectively be answerable.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 22, 1 Stat. 644.

Notes of Decisions

Naval officer's deputy.—A special deputy (without compensation as such), constituted by the naval officer at the port of New York to perform the duties of the latter in cases of occasional and necessary absence or of sickness, may at the same time be appointed to a clerkship in the office of such naval officer, and be allowed, under section 2745 R. S., a compensation for his services as clerk greater in amount than that affixed by law to the permanent office of deputy naval officer at the same port, provided it do not exceed the rate usually paid for similar services. This case distinguished from the cases considered in the opinion of June 4, 1877 (15 Op. Atty. Gen. 286). (1877) 15 Op. Atty. Gen. 356.

§ 5372. (R. S. § 2633.) When deputies may be clothed with powers of collectors.

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized, whenever in his opinion the public interest demands it, to clothe any deputy collector at a port other than the principal port of entry, with all the powers of his principal appertaining to official acts; and he may require such deputy to give bond to the United States, in such amount as the Secretary may prescribe, for the faithful discharge of his official duties.

Act July 18, 1866, c. 201, § 29, 14 Stat. 185. Act July 27, 1868, c. 273, § 3, 15 Stat. 240.

The Secretary of the Treasury was authorized to "appoint a deputy collector to have charge of each port of entry, who shall perform such duties" as the Secretary shall determine, by section 7 of the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

Cited without definite application,
Wynne v. U. S. (1910) 30 Sup. Ct. 447, 450, 217 U. S. 234, 54 L. Ed. 748.

This section was as follows:

"The Secretary of the Treasury may, from time to time, except in cases otherwise provided, limit and fix the number and compensation of the clerks to be employed by any collector, naval officer, or surveyor, and may limit and fix the compensation of any deputy of any such collector, naval officer, or surveyor."

It was superseded by the salary allowances for clerks and deputies prescribed by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

The Secretary of the Treasury was required to classify, as nearly as possible in conformity with R. S. § 163, ante, § 242, the clerks and persons employed by the collector, naval officer, surveyor, and appraisers in all customs districts, where the whole number of clerks and persons employed shall be as many as fifty, by the Civil Service Act of Jan. 16, 1883, c. 27, § 6, set forth ante, § 3277.

The permanent appropriation for the expenses of collecting the revenue from customs, made by R. S. § 3687, was repealed by Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, 37 Stat. 434.

§ 5373. (Act Dec. 18, 1890, c. 22.) Neglect or minor delinquency of customs officers or employés.

The several collectors, naval officers, surveyors, and appraisers shall have power, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, as punishment for any neglect or minor delinquency the punishment whereof is not prescribed by law, to suspend from duty with loss of pay for a period not to exceed thirty days for any one cause, any customs officer or employee nominated or appointed and subordinate to such collector, naval officer, surveyor, or appraiser: Provided, however, that the Secretary of the Treasury may, on application by the suspended person within one year from the expiration of the suspension, in his discretion pay the whole or any part of the pay forfeited by reason of said suspension. (26 Stat. 690.)

This was an act entitled "An act providing for the maintenance of discipline among customs officers."

Notes of Decisions

Liability of collector for negligence of his subordinates.—The collector of customs is not responsible in damages for negligent acts on the part of his subordinates, in the absence of proof that such subordinates were known by him to be careless or incompetent, or were selected by him without proper care. Robertson v. Sichel (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 1286, 1290, 127 U. S. 507, 32 L. Ed. 203; Rubens v. Robertson (C. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 86.

Plaintiff's trunk, on her arrival at the port of New York, was examined by the custom house officials, and erroneously decided to contain dutiable articles, and was therefore detained on the dock, in accordance with the regulations of the custom house, until it could be sent to the public store for appraisement. Before it could be removed it was destroyed by fire. Held, that the collector, being a public officer, was not chargeable with the negligence or misconduct of his subordinates in the course of their employment, in the absence of evidence that such subordinates were incompetent or improperly selected. Id.

§ 5374. (Act Aug. 28, 1890, c. 812, § 1.) Leave of absence of customs employés.

All officers and employees of the customs service of the Government who receive a per diem compensation shall be entitled to receive the same leave of absence as is provided for clerks and employees in the several executive departments at Washington, District of Columbia, by chapter one hundred and twenty-eight, section four, of the United States Statutes at Large, volume twenty-two, pages five hundred and sixty-three and five hundred sixty-four, approved March third, anno Domini eighteen hundred and eighty-three. (26 Stat. 362.)

This section and the section next following were an act entitled "An act providing for leave of absence for officers and employés in the customs service of the government who receive per diem compensation."

The per diem compensation of officers and employés of the Customs Service was prescribed by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

The provisions of Act March 3, 1883, c. 128, § 4, mentioned in this section, were incorporated into Act March 3, 1893, c. 211, § 5, which, as amended by Act March 15, 1898, c. 68, § 7, is set forth ante, § 238.

Notes of Decisions

Leave of absence.—The subordinate officers and employés of the customs service, wherever employed, and whether they receive an annual or per diem compensation, are entitled to the same privileges of the statute with reference to leaves of absence as clerks and employés in the executive departments at Washington. (1898) 22 Op. Atty. Gen. 77.

§ 5375. (Act Aug. 28, 1890, c. 812, § 2.) Rules and regulations to carry act into effect.

The Secretary of the Treasury shall make all rules and regulations necessary to carry the provisions of this act into effect. (26 Stat. 362.)

§ 5376. (R. S. § 2635.) Table of fees to be kept posted up.

Every collector, naval officer, and surveyor shall cause to be affixed, and constantly kept in some public and conspicuous place of his office, a fair table of the rates of fees and duties demandable by law, and shall give a receipt for the fees received by him, specifying the particulars whenever required so to do; and for every failure so to do, he shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars, recoverable to the use of the informer.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 73, 1 Stat. 680.

§ 5377. (R. S. § 2636.) Penalty for extortion by customs officers.

Every officer of the customs who demands or receives any other or greater fee, compensation, or reward than is allowed by law, for ›rming any duty or service required from him by law, shall be ɜ to a penalty of two hundred dollars for each offense, recovera- o the use of the party aggrieved.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 73, 1 Stat. 680.

Bribery of customs officers or employés, and soliciting or demanding unlawful es by such officers, are punishable by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 913, c. 16, § III, AA, BB, post, §§ 5331, 5332, which re-enacted provisions of ıe Customs Administration Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, §§ 26, 27, as amend- l by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 103.

Provisions prescribing a punishment for customs officers receiving part of ıformer's fees were made by Act June 22, 1874, c. 391, § 7, post, § 5801.

Notes of Decisions

78. (R. S. § 2637.) Penalty for extortion by inspectors, weigh- ers, gaugers, or measurers.

any inspector, gauger, weigher, or measurer shall receive any uity, fee, or reward for any services performed by virtue of this , other than is by law allowed, or if any gauger, weigher, or surer, employed as such by the public, in the districts of Ports- th, Salem and Beverly, Boston and Charlestown, Providence, York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Norfolk and Portsmouth, or rleston, shall gauge, weigh, or measure any article or articles, r than shall be directed by the proper officer, in order to ascer- the duties to be received, or the drawbacks to be allowed thereon, ıall make a return of the weight, gauge, or measure of any mer- dise laden, or to be laden, on board any vessel for the benefit rawback upon exportation, without having actually weighed, ɜed, or measured the same, as the case may require, after such chandise shall have been notified to the collector and entered exportation, he shall be liable for the first offense to a penalty fty dollars, and for each subsequent offense to a penalty of two lred dollars, and be discharged from the public service. And y inspector or other officer of the customs shall certify the ship- t of any merchandise entitled to drawback on exportation with- having duly inspected and examined the same, after he shall received the permit for lading such merchandise, or if the unt of such drawback shall be estimated according to weight, ɜe, or measure, until such merchandise shall be first weighed, ɜed, or measured, as the case may require, he shall be subject ıe like penalties, and be discharged from the public service.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 73, 1 Stat. 680.

In lieu of the districts mentioned in this section, other districts with differ- ıt boundaries and names, were established by the Plan of Reorganization of ıe Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, 1, ante, § 5327.

The punishment of revenue officers admitting or aiding in admitting to entry ıerchandise upon the payment of less than the amount of the duty was pre- ɜribed by R. S. § 5444, which was incorporated into the Criminal Code, in ɜction 68 thereof, post, § 10246, and was repealed by section 341 thereof, ost, § 10515.

See note to R. S. § 2636, ante, § 5377.

79. (R. S. § 2638.) Customs officers, etc., not to own vessels or engage in importation.

o person employed under the authority of the United States, in collection of duties on imports or tonnage, shall own, either in le or in part, any vessel, or act as agent, attorney, or consignee for the owner or owners of any vessel, or of any cargo or lading on board the same; nor shall any such person import, or be concerned directly or indirectly in the importation of any merchandise for sale into the United States. Every person who violates this section shall be liable to a penalty of five hundred dollars.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 86, 1 Stat. 695.

Provisions prohibiting under penalty the Secretary of the Treasury and certain named officers from being interested in the business of trade or commerce, or from being concerned in the purchase or disposition of State or federal securities, were made by R. S. § 243, ante, § 377.

Provisions prohibiting disbursing officers from trading in public funds or property were made by R. S. § 1788, which was incorporated into the Criminal Code, in section 103 thereof, post, § 10272, and was repealed by section 341 thereof, post, § 10515.

Officers and employés in the customs service were required, as a condition precedent to the payment of compensation for their services, to make oath that they had not received improper consideration for official services, by R. S. § 1790, ante, § 3265.

Customs officers were prohibited from having any personal ownership of, or interest in, any bonded warehouse or general-order store by Act June 22, 1874, c. 391, § 24, post, § 5683.

§ 5380. (R. S. § 2639, as amended, Act July 31, 1894, c. 174, § 19.) Collectors, naval officers, and surveyors must keep and render accounts.

Every collector, naval officer, and surveyor shall keep accurate accounts of all fees and official emoluments received by him, and of all expenditures, specifying expenditures for rent, fuel, stationery, and clerk-hire, and shall annually, within ten days after the thirtieth day of June, transmit the same, verified by oath, to the proper Auditor, who shall annually lay an abstract of the same before Congress. Every collector, naval officer, or surveyor who omits or neglects to keep such account, or to transmit the same so verified, shall be liable to a penalty of not more than five hundred dollars.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 23, § 2, 1 Stat. 708. Act March 3, 1849, c. 108, § 12, 9 Stat. 396. Act July 31, 1894, c. 174, § 19, 28 Stat. 210.

This section, as enacted in the Revised Statutes, was amended by striking out after the words "verified by oath, to the," the words "Commissioner of Customs," and by inserting in lieu thereof the words "proper Auditor," as set forth here, by the Dockery Act of July 31, 1894, c. 174, § 19, cited above.

The offices of Commissioner of Customs and Deputy Commissioner of Customs were abolished by section 4 of said act, set forth ante, § 402.

The "proper Auditor" referred to in this section as amended was designated by section 7 of said Act July 31, 1894, set forth ante, § 420, as the Auditor for the Treasury Department.

Provisions requiring customs officers to send with their reports papers and records as the Secretary of the Treasury may direct were made by section 20 of said act, set forth ante, § 436.

Provisions prescribing a penalty for officers failing to make returns or reports, at the times designated by law, other than their accounts, were made by R. S. § 1780, which was incorporated into the Criminal Code, in section 101 thereof, post, § 10269, and was repealed by section 341 thereof, post, § 10515.

The fees authorized by R. S. § 2654, post, § 5393, for the issuance of bills of health, were abolished by Act June 19, 1886, c. 421, § 1, post, § 8138.

The fees authorized by R. S. § 4382, post, § 8137, for the entry direct from a foreign port and for clearance direct to a foreign port of a vessel navigating the waters of the northern, northeastern, and northwestern boundaries, were abolished by a provision of Act March 3, 1897, c. 389, § 9, post, § 8139.

The compensation of collectors, Naval officers, and Surveyors was prescribed by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327. See note to R. S. § 2613, ante, § 5347.

9. (R. S. § 2649.) Special agents to examine books, ac- ounts, etc., of collectors, etc.

e Secretary of the Treasury may appoint special agents, not exceeding fifty-three in number, for the purpose of making the examinations of the books, papers, and accounts of collectors and other officers of the customs, and to be employed generally, under the direction of the Secretary, in the prevention and detection of frauds on the customs revenue; and the expense thereof shall be charged to the "appropriation to defray the expense of collecting the revenue from customs."

Act May 12, 1870, c. 102, § 1, 16 Stat. 122.

The number and compensation of special agents to be appointed under this section were prescribed by provisions of Act March 4, 1911, c. 285, § 1, set forth post, § 5390.

(R. S. § 2650. Superseded.)

This section, as enacted in the Revised Statutes, divided the special agents authorized by R. S. § 2649, ante, § 5389, into three classes: The first class to consist of 19 agents, 2 of whom were to receive $10 a day and expenses, and the rest to receive $8 per day. The second class to consist of 16 agents, each to receive, in addition to the actual expenses incurred, $6 per day. The third class to consist of 18 agents, each to receive, in addition to the expenses actually incurred, $5 per day. It was superseded by a provision of Act March 3, 1891, c. 542, § 1, 26 Stat. 968, which was superseded by a similar provision of Act March 4, 1911, c. 285, § 1, post, § 5390.

§ 5390. (Act March 4, 1911, c. 285, § 1.) Supervising agent and special agents to examine books, accounts, etc., of collectors; number and compensation.

Hereafter the number and compensation of special agents to be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury under section twenty-six hundred and forty-nine of the Revised Statutes of the United States, shall be as follows:

One supervising agent who shall supervise and direct the special agents of the Treasury Department and who shall receive, in addition to the necessary traveling expenses actually incurred by him, a compensation of four thousand five hundred dollars per annum;

Ten special agents who shall each receive, in addition to the necessary traveling expenses actually incurred by him, a compensation to be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, not to exceed twelve dollars per day;

Ten special agents who shall each receive, in addition to the necessary traveling expenses actually incurred by him, a compensation to be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, not to exceed ten dollars per day; and

Ten special agents who shall each receive, in addition to the necessary traveling expenses actually incurred by him, a compensation to be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury not to exceed eight dollars per day. (36 Stat. 1393.)

These were provisions of the sundry civil appropriation act for the fiscal year 1912, cited above.

Previous similar provisions of Act August 15, 1876, c. 287, 19 Stat. 152, and Act March 3, 1891, c. 542, § 1, 26 Stat. 968, were superseded by those of this act.

A general limitation on subsistence allowances, or money in lieu thereof, was made by §§ 3236a, 3236b, ante.

§ 5391. (R. S. § 2651.) Regulations for special agents, and limitations on their number and compensation.

The Secretary of the Treasury may, from time to time, make such regulations not inconsistent with law, for the government of the special agents, as he deems expedient, and may rescind or alter regulations so made. But no special agent, in addition to those authorized by the two preceding sections, shall be appointed or employed upon any business relating to the customs revenue; nor shall any sum be paid to any agent authorized to be employed for mileage or any other expenses except such as are actually incurred in the discharge of his official duty.

Act May 12, 1870, c. 102, §§ 2, 3, 16 Stat. 123.

Application.—This section applies to the revenue features of the law, and does not affect its criminal feature. U. S. v. Ortega (D. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 713, 715.

Instructions of secretary of treasury.—Although a collector must carry into effect all instructions of the secretary of the treasury relative to the execution of the revenue laws, yet as to third persons the legality of the collector's action is open to judicial review. Tracy v. Quartwout (1836) 10 Pet. 80, 95, 9 L. Ed. 354; Greely v. Thompson (1850) 10 How. 225, 234, 13 L. Ed. 397; U. S. v. Beebe (D. C. 1902) 117 Fed. 670, 680 (affirmed [1903] 122 Fed. 762, 58 C. C. A. 562).

The protest here raises the single question as to the regularity of the collector's action when taken by the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, and within one year from the original liquidation, the goods having in the meantime gone into consumption. The Secretary had authority to give the directions, the reliquidation was made within a prescribed period fixed by law, and there was no error. Hawley & Letzerich v. U. S. (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 456, citing U. S. v. Hobbs (1912) Id. 256.

The immunity of the United States from suit prevents the state of Louisiana, as a producer of sugar, from maintaining an original bill in the federal Supreme Court against the Secretary and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury to review their judgment as to the duty to be exacted under Tariff Acts July 24, 1897, and Oct. 3, 1913, and the commercial treaty with Cuba Dec. 11, 1902, as made effective by Act Dec. 17, 1903, on importations of Cuban sugar. State of Louisiana v. McAdoo (1914) 34 Sup. Ct. 938, 234 U. S. 627, 58 L. Ed. 1506.

This section was as follows:

"The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized, whenever he shall think it advantageous to the public service, to abolish or suspend the office of naval officer, or any other subordinate office, in any collection-district of the United States, except in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Charleston, Savannah, Portland in Maine, and San Francisco, and to assign the duties of the office or any other subordinate office so abolished or suspended to a deputy collector or inspector of the customs; and so much of all fines, penalties, and forfeitures as would otherwise inure to either of such naval officers shall, after the discontinuance of their offices, respectively, be paid into the Treasury of the United States, and there credited to the fund for defraying the expenses of collecting the revenue from customs."

It was superseded by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327, which section provided that such reorganization "should constitute for the fiscal year 1914, and until otherwise provided by Congress, the permanent organization of the customs service."

See note to R. S. § 2613, ante, § 5347.

§ 5393. (R. S. § 2654.) Fees of collectors.

There shall be allowed and paid for the use of the collectors the following fees:

First. To each collector for every entrance of any vessel of one hundred tons burden and upward, two dollars and a half.

Second. For every clearance of any vessel of one hundred tons burden and upward, two dollars and a half.

Third. For every entrance of any vessel under the burden of one hundred tons, one dollar and a half.

Fourth. For every clearance of any vessel under one hundred tons burden, one dollar and a half.

Fifth. For every post entry, two dollars.

Sixth. For every permit to land goods, twenty cents.

Seventh. For every bond taken officially, forty cents.

Eighth. For every permit to load goods for exportation, which are entitled to drawback, thirty cents.

Ninth. For every debenture or other official certificate, twenty cents.

Tenth. For every bill of health, twenty cents.

Eleventh. For every official document, registers excepted, required by any merchant, owner, or master of any vessel not elsewhere enumerated, twenty cents.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 23, § 2, 1 Stat. 706. Act June 17, 1864, c. 130, § 3, 13 Stat. 134.

The collection of the fees authorized by paragraph 10 of this section for bills of health, was abolished by Act June 19, 1886, c. 421, § 1, as amended by Act April 4, 1888, c. 61, § 2, post, § 8138.

Collectors were required to act as superintendents of light-houses, etc., and as disbursing agents for the Light-House Establishment, without compensation, by R. S. § 4672, and provisions of Act June 16, 1880, c. 235, set forth post. §§ 8445, 8446.

The fees for certain specified services of collectors and other officers of customs were abolished by Act June 19, 1886, c. 421, §§ 1, 9, post, §§ 8138, 8139.

Fees exacted by customs officers on entry of goods were abolished by a provision of the Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, § 22, 26 Stat. 140, amended by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 102; and nothing in the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, was to be construed to permit any fees to be charged "except as provided in this act or in" R. S. § 2862, post, § 5546. This rule of construction was part of a proviso annexed to the repeal of sections 1–42 of the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act, by section IV, S, of the Underwood Tariff Act, set forth ante, § 5316.

The annual compensation of collectors, "in lieu of fees," was fixed and all fees were required to be covered into the Treasury, by section 4 of the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327. See note to R. S. § 2613, ante, § 5347.

(R. S. §§ 2655–2657. Superseded.)

These sections provided for the division of fees and expenses between the collector and naval officer, and for the division of drawback fees between the collector, naval officer, and surveyor, and prescribed the fees of surveyors, inspectors, and deputy inspectors. They were superseded by the salary allowances prescribed by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the Provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

(R. S. § 2658. Superseded.)

This section was as follows:

"For every entry of goods at any customs-house on the northern, northeastern, and northwestern frontiers of the United States, a fee of fifty cents shall be charged by the collector, and accounted for to the government."

It was superseded by the abolition of fees on entry of goods by the Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, § 22, 26 Stat. 140, amended by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 102.

S. § 2684, by Act June 16, 1882, c. 223, 22 Stat. 105, and provisions for salaries of certain collectors, naval officers, and surveyors, made by Act June 22, 1874, c. 391, § 23, 18 Stat. 190, as amended by Act Feb. 26, 1879, c. 103, 20 Stat. 322, Act March 3, 1883, c. 135, 22 Stat. 567, Act May 2, 1888, c. 227, 25 Stat. 134, Act Aug. 28, 1890, c. 814, § 3, 26 Stat. 363, Act June 4, 1897, c. 2, § 1, 30 Stat. 30, Act Feb. 6, 1904, c. 151, 33 Stat. 11, and Act June 22, 1910, c. 311, § 2, 36 Stat. 579, were also superseded by said reorganization.

(R. S. § 2686. Superseded.)

This section provided for the division of commissions between a collector resigning, or the legal representative of a deceased collector, and his successor in office. It was superseded by the allowance of compensation in lieu of commissions by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

§ 5394. (R. S. § 2687.) Apportionment of compensation for part of a year's service.

Collectors and all other officers of the customs, serving for a less period than a year, shall not be paid for the entire year, but shall be allowed in no case a greater than a pro rata of the maximum compensation of such officers respectively for the time only which they actually serve as such collectors or officers, whether the same be under one or more appointments, or before or after confirmation. And no collector or other officer shall, in any case, receive for his services, either as fees, salary, fines, penalties, forfeitures, or otherwise, for the time he may be in service, beyond the maximum pro rata rate provided by law. And this section shall be applied and enforced in regard to all officers, agents, and employés of the United States whomsoever, as well those whose compensation is determined by a commission on disbursements, not to exceed an annual maximum, as those paid by salary or otherwise.

Act Feb. 11, 1846, c. 7, § 1, 9 Stat. 3. Act July 18, 1866, c. 201, § 34, 14 Stat. 186.

The annual compensation of collectors and other customs officers was prescribed by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

Rules for division of time and computation of pay were prescribed by Act June 30, 1906, c. 3914, § 6, ante, § 3243.

Provisions directing the Secretary of the Treasury to pay all customs officers lawfully holding over their respective salaries, compensation, fees, or emoluments provided by law were made by Act Aug. 23, 1894, c. 307, 28 Stat. 424. These provisions were superseded by more comprehensive provisions directing the said Secretary to pay all officers under the Treasury Department who lawfully hold over, made by Act March 2, 1895, c. 187, ante, § 3229.

Notes of Decisions

Apportionment of compensation in general.—Under Act 1838, c. 169, § 3, a collector who held his office for a part of that year was entitled only to a proportionate part of the annual compensation established by law. Hoyt v. U. S. (1850) 51 U. S. (10 How.) 109, 13 L. Ed. 348.

Officers of the customs are not entitled to additional compensation under the provisions of the third section of Act July 7, 1838, c. 169, the same having been rendered nugatory by the repeal of the act upon which it was based and the enactment of another law upon the subject. Their compensation is fixed by Act July 21, 1840, c. 99, which contains new and different provisions. (1850) 5 Op. Atty. Gen. 233.

—— Consuls.—A United States consul, who is entitled to retain fees collected by him during any year, up to a fixed limit, and who is removed from office during the course of a fiscal year, is not entitled to retain all the fees then collected, up to such limit, but only such part of the total annual allowance as is proportioned to the part of the fiscal year during which he has held office. Marston v. U. S. (1896) 71 Fed. 496, 18 C. C. A. 216.

A consular agent is entitled to pro rata compensation for part of a year. Mahin v. U. S. (1905) 41 Ct. Cl. 1.

—— Employés.—Expert witnesses for the government in cases arising under the food and drugs act are not "employés" as the term is used in this section. (1909) 28 Op. Atty. Gen. 75.

The word "employé," as used here, does not embrace persons whose services have been contracted for in connection with a particular case in court and whose employment has no degree of permanence. (1911) 29 Op. Atty. Gen. 75.

Decisions under prior statutes.—See Bates v. Drury (C. C. 1825) Fed. Cas. No. 1,100; U. S. v. Pearce (C. C. 1837) Fed. Cas. No. 16,021; Hoyt v. Curtis (C. C. 1844) Fed. Cas. 6,808; Prieur v. Morgan (La. 1845) 11 Rob. 292; Doane v. Phillips (1831) 29 Mass. (12 Pick.) 223.

(R. S. § 2688. Superseded.)

This section, as amended by Act March 3, 1875, c. 130, § 10, 18 Stat. 401, prescribed a limit to the compensation of collectors and surveyors acting as collectors. It was superseded by the allowance of a certain compensation in lieu of all fees by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

Provisions fixing the compensation of collectors acting as disbursing agents were made by R. S. § 3657, post, § 6665.

(R. S. § 2689. Superseded.)

This section was as follows:

"The aggregate sums allowed in each year to the collectors, naval officers, and surveyors, shall be exclusive of the necessary expenses incident to their respective offices, in the same year, subject to the regulation of the Treasury."

It was superseded by the allowance of an annual compensation by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

(R. S. §§ 2690, 2691. Superseded.)

These sections limited the compensation of collectors, naval officers and surveyors of various ports. They are superseded by the allowances for compensation made by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

An amendment of R. S. § 2691, by Act Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, 19 Stat. 246, was also superseded therewith.

(R. S. § 2692. Superseded.)

This section authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to relieve collectors from the payment of office expenses in case the fees and emoluments received were insufficient to afford reasonable compensation, after the payment of such expenses, and required all fees paid into the Treasury to be placed to the credit of the fund for defraying the expenses of collecting the revenue from customs. It was superseded by the allowance of a fixed compensation "in lieu of all fees" and the requirement that all moneys collected or received by collectors, whether as fees or otherwise should be "covered into the Treasury" by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327, which act repealed the permanent appropriation made by R. S. § 3687, for the expenses of collecting the revenue from customs.

(R. S. § 2693. Superseded.)

This section was as follows:

"No account for the compensation for services of any clerk, or other person employed in any duties in relation to the collection of the revenue, shall be allowed, until such clerk or other person shall have certified, on oath, that the same services have been performed, that he has received the full sum therein charged to his own use and benefit, and that he has not paid, deposited, or assigned, or contracted to pay, deposit, or assign, any part of such compensation to the use of any other person, or in any way, directly or indirectly, paid or given, or contracted to pay or give, any reward or compensation for his office or employment, or the emoluments thereof."

It was superseded by the allowances for compensation of clerks and other employés made by the reorganization of the Customs Service, pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

(R. S. §§ 2694–2696. Superseded.)

These sections provided for assistant collectors at New York, Jersey City, and Camden, and prescribed their duties and compensation. They were superseded by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

(R. S. §§ 2697–2702. Superseded.)

These sections, the last of which was amended by Act Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, 19 Stat. 246, prescribed the salaries of deputy collectors at various ports. They were superseded by the allowances for salaries of deputy collectors in the districts established by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

Provisions for salaries of other deputy collectors made by Act June 16, 1882, c. 223, 22 Stat. 105, Act May 2, 1888, c. 227, 25 Stat. 134, Act June 22, 1874, c. 402, 18 Stat. 196, Act Jan. 24, 1880, c. 13, 21 Stat. 62, Act Feb. 27, 1901, c. 615, 31 Stat. 816, Act Aug. 28, 1890, c. 814, § 3, 26 Stat. 363, Act Feb. 25, 1905, c. 799, § 1, 33 Stat. 814, Act June 19, 1906, c. 3436, § 3, 34 Stat. 303, and Act March 4, 1909, c. 314, § 3, 35 Stat. 1065, were also superseded by said Plan of Reorganization, article VII of which authorized the appointment of a deputy collector to have charge of each port of entry, "who shall perform such duties and receive such compensation as the Secretary of the Treasury shall determine."

(R. S. § 2703. Superseded.)

This section fixed the salary of the naval officer for the district of San Francisco at $4,500 a year. It was superseded by Act June 22, 1874, c. 391, § 23, 18 Stat. 190, which fixed the salary of such naval officer at $5,000 a year. The same salary was prescribed by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

(R. S. § 2704. Superseded.)

This section limited the compensation of naval officers. It was superseded by the allowances for compensation prescribed by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

(R. S. § 2705. Superseded.)

This section, as modified by Act Sept. 30, 1890, c. 1126, § 1, 26 Stat. 510, and Act March 4, 1909, c. 314, § 4, 35 Stat. 1065, fixed the salary of deputy naval officers at New York and other ports. It was superseded by the salary allowances prescribed by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

These sections fixed the compensation of surveyors at various ports. They were superseded by salary allowances prescribed by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

Provisions changing or otherwise affecting such compensation, made by Act June 22, 1874, c. 391, § 23, 18 Stat. 190, as amended by Act Feb. 26, 1879, c. 103, 20 Stat. 322, Act Feb. 18, 1875, c. 80, 18 Stat. 316, Act Aug. 3, 1882, c. 377, 22 Stat. 215, Act Feb. 21, 1891, c. 251, 26 Stat. 766, Act Sept. 4, 1890, c. 873, 26 Stat. 424, Act Jan. 29, 1875, c. 29, 18 Stat. 304, Act June 16, 1880, c. 239, 21 Stat. 283, Act Feb. 28, 1881, c. 91, 21 Stat. 373, Act Feb. 28, 1881, c. 92, 21 Stat. 373, Act March 3, 1881, c. 156, 21 Stat. 512, Act March 6, 1882, c. 25, 22 Stat. 13, Act June 4, 1888, c. 341, § 2, 25 Stat. 166, Act Oct. 19, 1888, c. 1209, 25 Stat. 565, as amended by Act Aug. 28, 1890, c. 813, 26 Stat. 362, Act Feb. 9, 1889, c. 121, 25 Stat. 658, as amended by Act March 13, 1890, c. 31, 26 Stat. 18, Act Sept. 25, 1890, c. 909, § 2, 26 Stat. 467, Act Sept. 25, 1890, c. 911, 26 Stat. 467, Act Sept. 25, 1890, c. 912, 26 Stat. 467, Act Sept. 29, 1890, c. 1047, 26 Stat. 501, Act May 18, 1896, c. 191, 29 Stat. 121, Act April 21, 1898, c. 186, 30 Stat. 361, Act April 12, 1904, c. 1246, 33 Stat. 171, and Act March 18, 1904, c. 715, § 2, 33 Stat. 85, as amended by Act June 23, 1906, c. 3519, 34 Stat. 452, were also superseded by said Plan of Reorganization.

These sections as amended or otherwise affected by Act June 22, 1874, c. 391, § 23, 18 Stat. 190, as amended by Act Feb. 26, 1879, c. 103, 20 Stat. 322, and Act Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, 19 Stat. 246, fixed a limit to the compensation of surveyors. They were superseded by the salary allowances prescribed by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

This section and the amendments thereof by Act Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, 19 Stat. 246, and Act March 4, 1909, c. 314, § 5, 35 Stat. 1065, provided for an additional compensation of twenty-five per centum to appraisers, deputy collectors, deputy surveyors, and deputy naval officers, at San Francisco. It was superseded by the allowances for compensation prescribed by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

Other provisions regulating the compensation of customs officers at various ports and subports, made by Act Aug. 28, 1890, c. 814, 26 Stat. 363, Act March 16, 1896, c. 58, § 2, 29 Stat. 60, Act Jan. 6, 1896, c. 4, 29 Stat. 2, Act June 10, 1896, c. 403, 29 Stat. 384, Act June 23, 1898, c. 494, 30 Stat. 487, and Act March 3, 1901, c. 858, 31 Stat. 1437, and the provisions authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to increase and fix the compensation of laborers, made by Act March 4, 1909, c. 314, § 1, 35 Stat. 1065, were also superseded by said Plan of Reorganization.

CHAPTER THREE

Revenue Cutters and Boats

§§ 5397–5461. (R. S. §§ 2747–2765, etc.) (Transferred.)

This chapter consisted of R. S. §§ 2747–2765, and subsequent acts and parts of acts, relating to the Revenue-Cutter Service, as follows: Act July 7, 1884, c. 332; Act Aug. 18, 1894, c. 301; Act June 11, 1896, c. 420; Act July 1, 1898, c. 546; Act April 12, 1902, c. 501; Act April 19, 1906, c. 1640; Act May 12, 1906, c. 2454; Act May 26, 1906, c. 2556; Act June 23, 1906, c. 3520; Act April 16, 1908, c. 145; Act April 21, 1910, c. 182; Act March 4, 1911, c. 285; Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355; Act Feb. 10, 1913, c. 35; Act June 23, 1913, c. 3.

By Act Jan. 28, 1915, c. 20, the Coast Guard was established in lieu of the then existing Revenue-Cutter Service and the Life-Saving Service, said Coast Guard to be composed of the Revenue-Cutter Service and the Life-Saving Service, with the existing offices and positions and the incumbent officers and men of such Services. Said Coast Guard was made a part of the military forces of the United States, to operate under the Treasury Department in time of peace, and to be a part of the Navy in time of war, subject to the orders of the Secretary of the Navy in time of war or when the President shall so direct. Said Act Jan. 28, 1915, c. 20, also contained provisions relative to the organization, etc., of said Coast Guard. Said act did not, however, affect to any great extent the personnel of the Revenue-Cutter Service or the Life-Saving Service, or the duties of either of said Services. Nevertheless, in view of the consolidation and merger of said Services, into the Coast Guard by said act, the laws constituting this chapter, as above enumerated, together with said Act Jan. 28, 1915, c. 20, and all other subsequent laws relating to the newly constituted Coast Guard, have been transferred to Title LV A, which was formerly entitled "The Life-Saving Service," and now changed to "The Coast Guard." Said sections of the Revised Statutes and said laws will accordingly be found set forth or referred to post, §§ 8459½b (1)—8459½b (65), under said Title LV A, "The Coast Guard."

5554. Definition of "person."

§ 5462. (R. S. § 2766.) Definition of word "merchandise."

The word "merchandise," as used in this Title, may include goods, wares, and chattels of every description capable of being imported.

The word "ton" was defined by R. S. § 2951, post, § 5636.

The word "person," as used in Act June 10, 1910, c. 283, relating to licensing custom-house brokers, was defined by section 5 of that act, post, § 5554.

The words "value," "actual market value," and "wholesale price" were defined by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, R, post, § 5599.

Notes of Decisions

Definition.—The denomination of merchandise is to be understood in a commercial sense, although not scientifically correct, and all laws regulating the payment of duties are to be understood in such sense. U. S. v. One Hundred Twelve Casks of Sugar (1834) 8 Pet. 277, 278, 8 L. Ed. 944.

Dredges and scows are vessels, and are not dutiable as "goods, wares, and merchandise," under the tariff laws. The International (D. C. 1897) 83 Fed. 840, distinguishing U. S. v. Dunbar (1895) 67 Fed. 783, 14 C. C. A. 639.

The term "merchandise" is not restricted to general merchandise, as distinguished from personal baggage. U. S v. Chesbrough (D. C. 1910) 176 Fed. 778.

"Merchandise" includes all personal property not imported for the use or enjoyment of the importer himself. (1894) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 92.

The word "merchandise" is a word used in different senses in different parts of legislation. Id.

The word "merchandise" includes placer gold. Six Parcels of Placer Gold v. U. S. (1904) 76 Pac. 473, 8 Ariz. 389.

§ 5463. (R. S. § 2767.) Definition of "port."

The word "port," as used in this Title, may include any place from which merchandise can be shipped for importation, or at which merchandise can be imported.

Notes of Decisions

Definition.—The statutes of Illinois provide that the city of Chicago shall have jurisdiction over Lake Michigan for a distance of three miles beyond the city limits, and the ordinances of that city give the city harbor master control over lake water outwardly for the same distance, between the north and south lines of the city. Held, as to certain barges in tow, which had reached a place within these limits, within the outer harbor works, where it was usual for such a tow to be broken up so the barges might be taken to their separate docks, that they should be considered as in the port of Chicago, for the purpose of fixing the time their cargoes became dutiable, though the arrival had not been reported at the barge office. Hartwell Lumber Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 306, decree affirmed U. S. v. Edwin S. Hartwell Lumber Co. (1905) 142 Fed. 432, 73 C. C. A. 548, writ of certiorari denied Edwin S. Hartwell Lumber Co. v. U. S. (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 760, 201 U. S. 644, 50 L. Ed. 903.

The term "port" may comprehend the city or town occupied by the importers, merchants, and others, but it is not confined in its extent or its limits to the town. It includes the harbor, roadstead, and shores, and all other natural and local incidents which go to make up a locality which comprises both land and water. (1899) 22 Op. Atty. Gen. 306.

§ 5464. (R. S. § 2768.) Definition of "master."

The word "master," as used in this Title, may include any person having the chief charge or command of the employment and navigation of a vessel.

Cited without definite application, U. S. v. Curtis (D. C. 1883) 16 Fed. 184, 192.

§ 5465. (R. S. § 2769.) Departure from prescribed forms.

In cases where the forms of official documents, as prescribed by this Title, shall be substantially complied with and observed, according to the true intent thereof, no penalty or forfeiture shall be incurred by a deviation therefrom.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 111, 1 Stat. 704.

§ 5466. (R. S. § 2770.) Where vessels from foreign ports may enter and unlade.

It shall not be lawful to make entry of any vessel which shall arrive within the United States, from any foreign port, or of the cargo on board such vessel, elsewhere than at one of the ports of entry designated in chapter one of this Title; nor to unlade the cargo, or any part thereof, elsewhere than at one of the ports of delivery therein designated, except that every port of entry shall be also a port of delivery. This section shall not prevent the master or commander of any vessel from making entry with the collector of any district in which such vessel may be owned, or from which she may have sailed on the voyage from which she shall then have returned.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 18, 1 Stat. 639.

Laws relating to customs duties were made applicable to vessels making voyages between the Philippine Islands and the United States by Act July 1, 1902, c. 1369, § 84, ante, § 3905.

This section may be superseded to some extent by the abolition of all ports of delivery not "mentioned as ports of entry," and the grant of authority to the Secretary of the Treasury to "cause to be stationed at places in the various collection districts, though not named as ports of entry, officers or employés of the customs with authority to enter and clear vessels," etc., by articles II and IX of the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

Whenever, by reason of unlawful combination in opposition to the laws of the United States, duties cannot be collected in the ordinary way, they may be collected at a place in the district, other than the port of entry, on land or on board a vessel, or the port of entry may be closed, by R. S. §§ 5314–5321, post, §§ 10156–10163.

Provisions for preliminary entry of vessels before issue of special license to lade or unlade were made by Act Feb. 13, 1911, c. 46, §§ 1–4, post, §§ 5559–5562.

Notes of Decisions

Port of entry.—The warehousing act of 1846, c. 84 (see § 5646, post), authorizing importers, on giving security for the duties, to deposit their goods in the public stores, and to draw them out and pay the duties at any time within a year, did not give them a right to enter their goods at a port of delivery not a port of entry, unless authorized by the secretary of the treasury. Tremlett v. Adams (1851) 54 U. S. (13 How.) 295, 14 L. Ed. 152.

If the proper port of entry of the district be in possession of the enemy, the collector may remove the customhouse to some other convenient port within the district, and there admit vessels to entry. U. S. v. Hayward (C. C. 1815) Fed. Cas. No. 15,336.

A special act of Congress is necessary to permit an entry of goods for consumption at any other port than the port of ultimate destination. John B. Ellison & Sons v. U. S. (C. C. 1905) 136 Fed. 969, 972, affirmed 142 Fed. 732, 74 C. C. A. 64, certiorari denied (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 763, 202 U. S. 615, 50 L. Ed. 1172.

§ 5467. (R. S. § 2771.) Where foreign vessels may enter and unlade.

Vessels which are not vessels of the United States shall be admitted to unlade only at ports of entry established by law; and no such vessel shall be admitted to make entry in any other district than in the one in which she shall be admitted to unlade.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 18, 1 Stat. 639. Act April 24, 1816, c. 71, 3 Stat. 299. Act May 7, 1822, c. 107, § 2, 3 Stat. 693. Act Feb. 22, 1827, c. 21, 4 Stat. 206. Act Feb. 13, 1837, c. 13, 5 Stat. 146.

See notes to R. S. § 2770, ante, § 5466.

Notes of Decisions

Part ownership of vessel by alien.—Vessels registered as American, and cargoes entered as such, were jointly owned by an alien and a citizen. Held, that the transaction was in violation of the laws of impost and tonnage, and an action would not lie between the parties to recover a balance of accounts. Cambioso v. Maffet (C. C. 1807) Fed. Cas. No. 2,330.

Cited without definite application, Devato v. Eight Hundred and Twenty-Three Barrels of Plumbago (D. C. 1884) 20 Fed. 510, 513.

§ 5468. (R. S. § 2772.) Where vessels bound to ports of delivery only may enter.

The master of every vessel bound to a port of delivery only, in any district, shall first come to at the port of entry of such district, with his vessel, and there make report and entry in writing, and pay all duties required by law, port fees and charges, before such vessel shall proceed to her port of delivery. Any master of a vessel who shall proceed to a port of delivery contrary to such directions shall be liable to a penalty of five hundred dollars, to be recovered with costs of suit.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 19, 1 Stat. 640. Act May 10, 1800, c. 49, § 4, 2 Stat. 68. Act Feb. 25, 1867, c. 82, § 1, 14 Stat. 411.
See notes to R. S. § 2770, ante, § 5466.

Cited without definite application, The Saratoga (D. C. 1881) 9 Fed. 322, 324; U. S. v. Curtis (D. C. 1883) 16 Fed. 184, 188.

§ 5469. (R. S. § 2773.) Penalty for departing from port of arrival before making a report or entry.

If any vessel, having arrived within the limits of any collection-district, from any foreign port, departs, or attempts to depart from the same, unless to proceed on her way to some more interior district to which she may be bound, before report or entry shall have been made by the master with the collector of some district, the master shall be liable to a penalty of four hundred dollars; and any collector, naval officer, surveyor, or commander of any revenue-cutter may cause such vessel to be arrested and brought back to the most convenient port of the United States. If, however, it is made to appear by the oath of the master, and of the person next in command, or by other sufficient proof to the satisfaction of the collector of the district within which such vessel shall afterward come, or to the satisfaction of the court in which the prosecution for such penalty may be had, that the departure or attempt to depart was occasioned by stress of weather, pursuit or duress of enemies, or other necessity, the penalty imposed by this section shall not be incurred.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 29, 1 Stat. 648.

Notes of Decisions

Arrival.—A mere transit through the waters of a river forming the boundary of the United States, for the purpose of proceeding to foreign territory, is not an arrival. The Apollon (1824) 9 Wheat. 362, 367, 6 L. Ed. 111.

The term "arrival," as used in acts of Congress, defined. Harrison v. Vose (1850) 9 How. 372, 380, 13 L. Ed. 179.

A Spanish fishing smack from Havana, which anchored within five miles of the mainland of Florida for the purpose of repairing a disabled mast, and did not enter any port of the United States, is not liable to a penalty for departing from the collection district without making report or entry. The Javirena (1895) 67 Fed. 152, 14 C. C. A. 350.

"More interior district."—A vessel arriving in the district of Barnstable from Nova Scotia, bound to New York, must make entry in such district, for New York is not "a more interior district," with reference to Barnstable. U. S. v. Bearse (C. C. 1826) Fed. Cas. No. 14,552.

Seizure of vessel for violating section.—As the municipal laws of one nation do not extend (except as to its own citizens) beyond its own territory, a seizure of a foreign vessel for the breach of them cannot be made in the territory of another nation. The Apollon (1824) 22 U. S. (9 Wheat.) 362, 6 L. Ed. 111.

§ 5470. (R. S. § 2774.) Duty of making report on arrival.

Within twenty-four hours after the arrival of any vessel, from any foreign port, at any port of the United States established by law, at which an officer of the customs resides, or within any harbor, inlet, or creek thereof, if the hours of business at the office of the chief officer of the customs at such port will permit, or as soon thereafter as such hours will permit, the master shall repair to such office, and make report to the chief officer, of the arrival of the vessel; and he shall, within forty-eight hours after such arrival, make a further report in writing, to the collector of the district, which report shall be in the form, and shall contain all the particulars required to be inserted in, and verified like, a manifest. Every master who shall neglect or omit to make either of such reports and declarations, or to verify any such declaration as required, or shall not fully comply with the true intent and meaning of this section, shall, for each offense, be liable to a penalty of one thousand dollars.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 30, 1 Stat. 649.

Special provisions to facilitate the entry of steamships running in an established line in foreign trade, made by Act June 5, 1894, c. 92, § 1, 28 Stat. 85, and extended to steamships trading between Porto Rico and Hawaii and the United States by Act May 31, 1900, c. 600, 31 Stat. 249, were repealed by section 6 of Act Feb. 13, 1911, c. 46, the preceding sections of which act made more comprehensive provisions for preliminary entry of any vessel from a foreign port, and for the lading or unlading of such vessels at night. Said act is set forth post, §§ 5559–5562, 5571.

Notes of Decisions

Report of arrival.—A collector who detains a ship's papers, the register, and the enrollment is liable in tort, though the secretary of the treasury justifies the proceedings. Badger v. Gutierez (1884) 4 Sup. Ct. 563, 565, 111 U. S. 734, 28 L. Ed. 581.

As to lien for penalties, see The Strathairly (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 609, 616, 124 U. S. 558, 31 L. Ed. 580.

An "open, clinker-built gasoline launch, about 18½ feet long," arriving at Seattle from a port of British Columbia, and not shown to be a foreign vessel or to contain merchandise, is not required to report to the customs officer of the port. U. S. v. One Gasoline Launch (1904) 133 Fed. 42, 43, 66 C. C. A. 148.

This act applies to all vessels arriving at a port, whether the arrival be voluntary or by stress of weather, or the port be the intended port of departure or not. U. S. v. Webber (C. C. 1813) Fed. Cas. No. 16,656.

If the master make report of arrival he is not liable to penalty, though he do not repair to the office of the principal officer of customs for that purpose. U. S. v. Rendell (C. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 16,147.

The report of the "arrival" required is the same thing as the "entry" of the vessel. Section 5469, ante, speaks of "report or entry." There is no other entry than the report required by this section. The Paolina S. (C. C. 1880) 11 Fed. 171, 172.

In a prosecution for not making the requisite report, the government has the burden of showing that it was not made at the proper office. U. S. v. Galacar (D. C. 1852) Fed. Cas. No. 15,181.

The report required to be made by the master of the arrival of his vessel must be made at the office of the chief officer of the customs. Id.

The fact that a collector at another port voluntarily kept his office open and received entries after the close of regular business hours of August 5th does not lay the foundation for the claim of an unlawful invasion of the constitutional rights of an importer under sections 8 and 9 of article I of the constitution of the United States. Talbot v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 415.

An American vessel in ballast, arriving in March or April, 1902, at Port Townsend, Wash., from Manila, did not arrive from a foreign port, within the meaning of the laws requiring the making of entry and the sending of a copy of the manifest. (1902) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 27.

C. 1904) 128 Fed. 306, 309 (affirmed [1905] 142 Fed. 432, 73 C. C. A. 548); U. S. v. Curtis (D. C. 1883) 16 Fed. 184, 188.

§ 5471. (R. S. § 2775.) Special report of spirits and wines.

The master of any vessel having on board distilled spirits, or wines, shall, within forty-eight hours after his arrival, whether the same be at the first port of arrival of such vessel or not, in addition to the requirements of the preceding section, report in writing to the surveyor or officer acting as inspector of the revenue of the port at which he has arrived, the foreign port from which he last sailed, the name of his vessel, his own name, the tonnage and denomination of such vessel, and to what nation belonging, together with the quantity and kinds of spirits and wines, on board of the vessel, particularizing the number of casks, vessels, cases, or other packages containing the same, with their marks and numbers, as also the quantity and kinds of spirits and wines, on board such vessel as sea-stores, and in default thereof he shall be liable to a penalty of five hundred dollars, and any spirits omitted to be reported shall be forfeited.

§ 5472. (R. S. § 2776, as amended, Act June 26, 1884, c. 121, § 29.) Exception as to goods destined for foreign port; articles in bulk for places in district other than port of entry.

Any vessel may proceed with any merchandise brought in her, and, in the manifest delivered to the collector of the customs, reported as destined for any foreign port, from the district within which such vessel shall first arrive to such foreign port without paying or securing the payment of any duties upon such merchandise as shall be actually re-exported in the vessel. But the manifest so declaring to re-export such merchandise shall be delivered to such collector within forty-eight hours after the arrival of the vessel. And the master of such vessel shall give bond as required by the next section. Provided, That vessels arriving at a port of entry in the United States, laden with coal, salt, railroad-iron, and other like articles in bulk, may proceed to places within that collection district to be specially designated by the Secretary of the Treasury, by general regulations or otherwise, under the superintendence of customs officers, at the expense of the parties interested, for the purpose of unlading cargoes of the character before mentioned.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 32, 1 Stat. 651. Act Feb. 22, 1805, c. 18, § 2, 2 Stat. 316. Act June 26, 1884, c. 121, § 29, 23 Stat. 59.

This section, as enacted in the Revised Statutes, did not contain the proviso at the end of the section. It was amended by adding the proviso as set forth here by Act June 26, 1884, c. 121, § 29, last cited above.

The provisions of Act Feb. 13, 1911, c. 46, §§ 1–5, post, §§ 5559–5562, 5571, for the lading and unlading vessels, were made applicable to vessels to be unladen at a place of discharge designated by the Secretary of the Treasury under this section, by section 4 of that act, post, § 5562.

Entry of merchandise elsewhere than at a port of entry, "except at the expense of the parties in interest, upon express authority from the Secretary of the Treasury," was forbidden by the plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327. See notes to R. S. § 2770, ante, § 5466.

Notes of Decisions

Goods entered for immediate exportation.—The entering of merchandise for immediate exportation, and without any intent that it shall enter into the commerce of a country, is not an importation. (1909) 27 Op. Atty. Gen. 440.

Smoking opium may be brought into a port of the United States from a foreign country on one vessel and lawfully transferred to another vessel for immediate transportation to a foreign destination. Id.

Opium could not, under the laws existing at the time of the passage of §§ 8800, 8801, post, be brought into a port of this country from a foreign country and exported from the same port on another vessel without being subject to duty. Id.

Since the enactment of sections 8800, 8801, post, which prohibit absolutely the importation of opium in any form, smoking opium is not subject to duty, and cannot under any circumstances be entered and bonded for warehousing; and the law which made the bringing of opium into a port an importation for such purposes is, as to smoking opium, repealed. Id.

Illegal exaction of moneys.—Moneys improperly exacted from vessels proceeding under Act 1884, § 29, to unlade at places other than a port of entry, may be refunded by the secretary of the treasury without formal protest by the applicant, where application has been made within one year. § 5473. (R. S. § 2777.) Bond before proceeding to foreign port.

The master of any vessel so destined for a foreign port shall give bond, with one or more sureties, in a sum equal to the amount of the duties upon the merchandise, as the same shall be estimated by the collector and naval officer of the port where the report shall be made, to the satisfaction of the collector, with condition that the merchandise, or any part thereof, shall not be landed within the United States, unless due entry thereof shall have been first made and the duties thereupon paid, according to law. Such bond shall be taken for the same period, and canceled in like manner, as a bond given for obtaining drawback of duties. No such bond shall be required in respect to merchandise on board of any vessel which has put into the United States from a necessity, shown as prescribed in section twenty-seven hundred and seventy-three.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 32, 1 Stat. 651.

Provisions relating to bonds for obtaining drawback of duties, on the exportation of merchandise imported, and for the discharge of such bonds, referred to in this section, were made by R. S. §§ 3043, 3044, post, §§ 5746, 5747.

§ 5474. (R. S. § 2778.) Duty of collector as to such bond.

The collector receiving any bond conditioned for the payment of duties upon merchandise reported as destined for a foreign port, in case the same shall be landed within the United States, or any other bonds taken upon the exportation of merchandise entitled to drawback, shall immediately after the time when by the conditions of the same they ought to be canceled, put the same in suit, provided the proof of the occurrence of such a necessity as excuses a landing of such goods within the United States has not been produced, or further time granted therefor by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 32, 1 Stat. 652.

Provisions for judgment at the return term in suits brought on bonds for the recovery of duties were made by R. S. § 960, ante, § 1598.

§ 5475. (R. S. § 2779.) Vessels may proceed to other districts.

Any vessel in which any merchandise is brought into the United States from any foreign port, and which is specified in the manifest verified before the collector of the port in which such vessel first arrives, to be destined for other districts, may proceed with the same from district to district within the United States, in order to the landing or delivery thereof; and the duties on such of the merchandise only as shall be landed in any district shall be paid within such district.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 33, 1 Stat. 652.

Notes of Decisions

Entry for consumption.—Imported merchandise entered at one port for immediate transportation to another cannot be entered for consumption at the latter port before its arrival within the limits of that port. § 5476. (R. S. § 2780.) Copy of report and manifest, with collector's certificate, required.

Before any vessel departs from the district in which she shall first arrive for another district, provided such departure is not within forty-eight hours after her arrival within such district, with merchandise brought in such vessel from a foreign port on which the duties have not been paid, the master shall obtain from the collector of the district from which she is about to depart, who is hereby required to grant the same, a copy of the report and manifest made by such master, certified by the collector, to which copy shall be annexed a certificate of the quantity and particulars of the merchandise which appears to him to have been landed within his district, or of the quantity and particulars of the merchandise which remains on board and upon which the duties are to be paid in some other district.

§ 5479. (R. S. § 2783.) Cancellation of bond.

The bond shall be canceled or discharged within six calendar months from the date thereof, by the production of certificates from the collectors of the districts for which the merchandise has been reported, showing the due entry and delivery of the merchandise in such districts, or upon due proof to the satisfaction of the collector by whom the bond was taken, and to the naval officer of the port, if any, that such entry and delivery were prevented by some unavoidable accident or casualty, and if the whole or any part of the merchandise has not been lost, that it has been duly entered and delivered within the United States.

Jurisdiction of treasury department.—The treasury department has jurisdiction of the issuing of instructions relating to the execution of this section. (1905) 25 Op. Atty. Gen. 535.

§ 5481. (R. S. § 2785.) Requisites of an entry of goods generally. The owner or consignee of any merchandise on board of any such vessel, or, in case of his absence or sickness, his known agent or factor in his name, shall, within fifteen days after the report of the master to the collector of the district for which such merchandise shall be destined, make entry thereof in writing with the collector, and shall in such entry specify the name of the vessel and of her master, in which, and the port or place from which such merchandise was imported, the particular marks, numbers, denominations, and prime cost, including charges of each particular package or parcel whereof the entry shall consist, or, if in bulk, the quantity, quality, and prime cost, including charges thereof, particularly specifying the species of money in which the invoices thereof are made out. Such entry shall be subscribed by the person making it, if the owner or consignee, in his own name, or, if another person, in his name as agent or factor, for the owner or consignee. The person making such entry shall also produce to the collector and naval officer, if any, the original invoices of the merchandise, or other documents received in lieu thereof, or concerning the same, in the same state in which they were received, with the bills of lading for the same; which invoices shall be signed by the persons in the offices of the collector and naval officer who have compared and examined them.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 36, 1 Stat. 655.

The separate entry of packages contained in packed packages, concerning which no invoice or statement of contents or values has been received, was provided for by Act May 1, 1876, c. 89, post, §§ 5482, 5483.

The entry of merchandise, the particulars of which are unknown, was provided for by R. S. § 2788, post, § 5485.

The requisites of invoices, and of indorsements thereon and declarations to accompany invoices on entry, were prescribed by the Customs Administrative Act June 10, 1890, c. 407, §§ 2–8, 26 Stat. 131–135, amended by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 91–96, and further amended by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, C–J, W, post, §§ 5520–5524, 5526–5528, 5529.

Provisions for licensing custom-house brokers were made by Act June 10, 1910, c. 283, §§ 1–5, post, §§ 5550–5554.

Notes of Decisions

"Entry."—Time of accrual of duties at time of arrival and not time of entry, see note under § 5710, post, "Accrual of Duties."

Entry as affecting applicability of tariff act, see § 5314, ante.

The word "entry" interpreted. U. S. v. Legg (1901) 105 Fed. 930, 932, 45

C. C. A. 134; U. S. v. Seidenberg (C. C. 1883) 17 Fed. 227; U. S. v. Mescall (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 580, 582 (reversed [1909] 30 Sup. Ct. 19, 215 U. S. 26, 54 L. Ed. 77).

"Importation."—To constitute an importation, so as to attach the right to duties, it is necessary, not only that there should be an arrival within the limits of the United States and of a collection district, but also within the limits of some port of entry. U. S. v. Vowell (1809) 9 U. S. (5 Cranch) 368, 3 L. Ed. 128; Arnold v. U. S. (1815) 13 U. S. (9 Cranch) 104, 3 L. Ed. 671; U. S. v. Edwin S. Hartwell Lumber Co. (1905) 142 Fed. 432, 73 C. C. A. 548 (affirming decree Hartwell Lumber Co. v. U. S. [C. C. 1904] 128 Fed. 306, and writ of certiorari denied Edwin S. Hartwell Lumber Co. v. U. S. [1906] 26 Sup. Ct. 760, 201 U. S. 644, 50 L. Ed. 903; U. S. v. Shallus (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 332.

Where captured goods are brought into the United States by superior force or inevitable accident, they are not deemed imported, in the sense of the law, so as to be liable to pay duties. If, however, such goods are afterwards sold, or consumed in the country, they become liable to duties. Where, therefore captured goods, claimed by a neutral, were sold by consent, under an order of court, and afterwards the final proceeds were ordered to be restored to such owner, it was held that the amount of the duties due the United States upon the importation of the goods must be paid. The Concord (1815) 13 U. S. (9 Cranch) 387, 3 L. Ed. 768.

Goods are imported and brought into the United States when brought within the limits of a port of entry with the intention of unlading them there. The Missouri (D. C. 1870) Fed. Cas. No. 9,653.

Who may enter.—No person but the owner or original consignee, or, in his absence or sickness, his agent or factor, is entitled to enter the goods at the custom house, and give bond for the duties, or pay the duties. Harris v. Dennie (1830) 28 U. S. (3 Pet.) 292, 7 L. Ed. 683.

Time of entry.—The provision that the owner of merchandise on board a vessel shall, within 15 days after report of the master to the collector of the district, make entry thereof in writing to the collector, does not prevent entry of the goods before entry of the vessel. U. S. v. Legg (1901) 105 Fed. 930, 45 C. C. A. 134.

An importer being entitled to make the entry of the merchandise required of him by this section, when he presented himself to the collector, with his papers and moneys for duties, and offered to make entry and pay the duties, entry will be considered to have been at that time, though the collector refused to receive or file the papers for the purpose of determining whether they are goods "previously imported" and "for which entry has been made" at the time Tariff Act 1897, went into effect, so as to be subject to the duties imposed, not by it, but by Tariff Act Aug. 27, 1894. Id.

The whole scheme of tariff laws and the general statutes regulating the collection of duties contemplate that the importation of merchandise shall precede its entry. A collector of customs may properly refuse an entry tendered before the importation is complete. U. S. v. Edwin S. Hartwell Lumber Co. (1905) 142 Fed. 432, 73 C. C. A. 548, affirming decree Hartwell Lumber Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 306, and writ of certiorari denied Edwin S. Hartwell Lumber Co. v. U. S. (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 760, 201 U. S. 644, 50 L. Ed. 903.

Tender of entry.—As to effect of tender of entry, see U. S. v. Legg (1901) 105 Fed. 930, 932, 45 C. C. A. 134; U. S. v. Edwin S. Hartwell Lumber Co. (1905) 142 Fed. 432, 434, 73 C. C. A. 548 (certiorari denied [1906] 26 Sup. Ct. 760, 201 U. S. 644, 50 L. Ed. 903); Hartwell Lumber Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 306, 309 (affirmed [1905] 142 Fed. 432, 73 C. C. A. 548).

Where, at the time of tendering entry of merchandise, there is no existent right on the part of the importers to have it accepted, nor duty on the part of the collector of customs to accept, no estoppel against the government arises through the fact that the collector's refusal may have been on wrong grounds, the statement of which may have misled the importers into failing to renew the tender on the proper occasion. U. S. v. Edwin S. Hartwell Lumber Co. (1905) 142 Fed. 432, 73 C. C. A. 548, affirming decree Hartwell Lumber Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 306, and writ of certiorari denied Edwin S. Hartwell Lumber Co. v. U. S. (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 760, 201 U. S. 644, 50 L. Ed. 903.

Entry of certain merchandise had repeatedly been tendered by the agent of the importers before its arrival in port, and was rejected by the customs officials for the expressed reason that the vessels carrying the merchandise had not reported at the customhouse. The vessels reached port shortly before a change in the tariff laws, but were not reported to the customs official until after the change had taken place; and the agent did not renew the tender between the time of the vessels' arrival and the time of the change of law, though remaining at the customhouse for the purpose of making entry as soon as he should be permitted to do so. Held, that entry could properly have been made under the old law as soon as the vessels reached port, and before they had reported, and that the reasons given by the customs officers for rejecting the entry when previously tendered justified the agent in supposing further tender to be useless until the vessels reported, and the tender was therefore not vitiated by the failure to renew it during the period between the arrival of the vessels in port and the change in the law. Hartwell Lumber Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 306, decree affirmed U. S. v. Edwin S. Hartwell Lumber Co. (1905) 142 Fed. 432, 73 C. C. A. 548, writ of certiorari denied Edwin S. Hartwell Lumber Co. v. U. S. (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 760, 201 U. S. 644, 50 L. Ed. 903.

Specification of weight.—On the entry of sugar in peculs the weight is properly stated by giving the weight of peculs under the usage of the custom house at the time of entry. U. S. v. Baker (D. C. 1871) Fed. Cas. No. 14,-500.

Report prevented.—Where the duty of the master of a vessel arriving from a foreign port to repair to the office of the chief officer of the customs, and there make report, cannot be performed, by reason of the neglect of the officer to do that which is prerequisite, the statute is not violated. U. S. v. Randall (D. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 16,119.

Production of witnesses.—This and other named sections held not to give importer the right to produce witnesses, etc., before appraisers. (1886) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 360.

(R. S. § 2786. Superseded.)

This section was as follows:

"The entries to be made by any importer, consignee, or agent, under the preceding section, shall be verified by the oath of the person making the same."

It was superseded by the Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, §§ 4, 5, 22, 26 Stat. 131, 132, 140, amended by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 92, 102, and further amended by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, E, F, post, §§ 5522, 5523, and section IV, S, of that act, ante, § 5316, which acts abolished oaths administered by customs officers, except as provided in said acts, and required declarations in lieu of oaths on entry of goods, except in cases of entries made on affidavit without invoice.

§ 5482. (Act May 1, 1876, c. 89, § 1.) Entry of packages contained in packed packages of which no invoice, etc., has been received.

A separate entry may be made of one or more packages contained in an importation of packed packages consigned to one importer or consignee, and concerning which packed packages, no invoice, or statement of contents or values, has been received.

Every such entry shall contain a declaration of the whole number of parcels contained in such original packed package; and shall embrace all the goods wares, and merchandise imported in one vessel at one time for one and the same actual owner, or ultimate consignee. (19 Stat. 49.)

This section and the section next following were an act entitled "An act to provide for the separate entry of packages contained in one importation."

Notes of Decisions

Repeal.—This act was not repealed by the customs administrative act. (1891) 20 Op. Atty. Gen. 5.

Effect.—Provision permitting the entry of packed packages without the production of an invoice modified section 5621, post, prescribing that merchandise may be stored at the expense of the owner, when an "incomplete entry has been made, or an entry without the specification of particulars, either for want of the original invoice or for any other cause"; and the latter provision does not apply to such packages. U. S. v. American Express Co. (C. C. 1907) 154 Fed. 996.

§ 5483. (Act May 1, 1876, c. 89, § 2.) Declaration on entry of packages contained in original package.

The importer, consignee, or agent's oath prescribed by section twenty-eight hundred and forty-one of the Revised Statutes, is hereby modified for the purposes of this Act, so as to require the importer consignee or agent to declare therein that the entry contains an account of all the goods ——— imported in the ——— whereof ——— ——— is master, from ——— for account of ——— which oath so modified, shall in each case, be taken on the entry of one or more packages contained in an original package. But nothing in this act contained shall be construed to relieve the importer, consignee, or agent from producing the oath of the owner or ultimate consignee in every case, now required by law; or to provide that an importation may consist of less than the whole number of parcels contained in any packed package, or packed packages consigned in one vessel at one time, to one importer, consignee or agent. (19 Stat. 49.)

R. S. § 2841, referred to in this section, was repealed, with other sections of this chapter of the Revised Statutes, by section 29 of the Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, 26 Stat. 141. Section 5 of that act, amended by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 92, and further amended by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, F, post, § 5523, required declarations instead of oaths, contained a proviso that, if any of the invoices of merchandise which should be embraced in an entry have not been received, the declaration may state the fact, and such merchandise shall not be included in such entry, but may be entered subsequently. All oaths administered by officers of the customs, except as provided in said acts, were abolished thereby.

Notes of Decisions

Repeal.—The repeal of section 2841, R. S. by the customs administrative act, has no effect upon this act, because the latter forms no part of section 2841. (1891) 20 Op. Atty. Gen. 5.

Oath.—The form of oath prescribed, referring to section 2841, R. S., is not affected by the subsequent legislation modifying and afterwards repealing that section and substituting a declaration by the importer, consignee, or agent in the place of the former oath. (1891) 20 Op. Atty. Gen. 5.

§ 5484. (R. S. § 2787, as amended Act March 2, 1905, c. 1306.) Bond by agent, factor, etc.; cancellation of bond; general bond by agent, factor, or common carrier.

Whenever any entry is made with the collector of any district of merchandise imported into the United States subject to duty by any agent, factor, or person, other than the person to whom it belongs or to whom it is ultimately consigned, the collector shall take a bond with surety from such agent, factor, or person in the penal sum of an amount equal to double the estimated duties, with condition that the actual owner or consignee of such merchandise shall deliver to the collector a full and correct account of the merchandise imported by him, or for him on his own account, or consigned to his care, in the same manner and form as required in respect to any entry previous to the landing of merchandise; which account shall be verified by a like oath, as in the case of an entry, to be taken and subscribed before any judge of the United States, or the judge of any court of record of a State, or before any collector of the customs, or before any properly qualified notary whose seal shall be attested by the clerk of the county in which he is resident, or before any notary public designated by the Secretary of the Treasury. In case of the payment of the duties at the time of entry by any factor or agent on the merchandise entered by him, the condition of the bond shall be to produce the account of the proper owner or consignee, verified in manner as before directed, within ninety days from the date of such bond.

The bond in no case shall be for less than one hundred dollars, and may not be required when the entered value of the merchandise does not exceed one hundred dollars. In the event of failure to produce the declaration of the owner or ultimate consignee within the time herein prescribed the bond may be cancelled, at the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, upon due proof that the factor or agent who entered the merchandise exercised proper diligence in the effort to fulfill the requirements of this Act.

Provided, That with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury any agent, factor, or common carrier engaged in the entry of merchandise at the port of first arrival may give a general penal bond at said port for the production of the oaths of owners or ultimate consignees. Said bond shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury at an amount sufficient in his opinion to cover all obligations to the United States that may accrue, and the record and cancellation of liabilities under said general bond shall be in accordance with such rules as he may prescribe.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 36, 1 Stat. 657, Act March 2, 1905, c. 1306, 33 Stat. 826.

This section, as enacted in the Revised Statutes, required a bond in the penal sum of "one thousand dollars," but did not authorize the taking of oaths before a notary, and made no provision for the cancellation of bonds, or for general bonds.

It was amended by substituting for the words "one thousand dollars" the words "an amount equal to double the estimated duties," after the words "in the penal sum of," and inserting the words "or before any properly qualified notary whose seal shall be attested by the clerk of the county in which he is resident, or before any notary public designated by the Secretary of the Treasury," after the words "any collector of customs," and adding at the end of the section the provisions commencing with the words "the bond in no case shall be for less," etc., making the section read as set forth here, by Act March 2, 1905, c. 1306, cited above.

Provisions for declarations in lieu of oaths, except in case of entry made upon a statement in the form of an invoice verified by the "oath of the owner, importer, consignee, or agent," with a bond for the production of a duly certified invoice, were made by the Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, §§ 3, 4, 5, 22, 26 Stat. 131–132, 140, amended by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 91, 92, 102, and further amended by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, D–F, post, §§ 5521–5523, and § IV, S, ante, § 5316.

Provisions for judgment at the return term in suits brought on bonds for the recovery of duties were made by R. S. § 960, ante, § 1598.

Notes of Decisions

Bonds for correct account.—As to customhouse bonds of partnerships, see § 5549, post.

Collectors of customs are required to take from an agent or person other than the owner making an entry of imported merchandise, a bond in the penal sum of $1,000, with condition that the actual owner or consignee of the merchandise shall deliver a full and correct account thereof according to the terms and specifications of that section. (1903) 25 Op. Atty. Gen. 66.

General bonds of a sufficiently large amount may, in special cases, be lawfully accepted by collectors of customs, in lieu of the special bonds of $1,000 each required by this section as formerly enacted, from agents making entries of imported merchandise for others, requiring them to produce the declaration of the owner in every case where goods may thereafter be imported without the same during a specified period. (1904) 25 Op. Atty. Gen. 177.

§ 5485. (R. S. § 2788.) Entry when particulars are unknown.

Where the particulars of any merchandise are unknown, in lieu of the entry prescribed by section twenty-seven hundred and eighty-five, an entry thereof shall be made and received according to the circumstances of the case; the party making the same declaring upon oath all that he knows or believes concerning the quality and particulars of the merchandise, and that he has no other knowledge or information concerning the same.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 36, 1 Stat. 658.

Provisions for entry without invoice, upon affidavit and bond for the production of invoice, were made by the Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, § 4, 26 Stat. 131, amended by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 92, and further amended by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, E, post, § 5522.

§ 5486. (R. S. § 2789.) Custody when invoice is imperfect.

Whenever an entry of merchandise is imperfect, for want of invoices, bills of lading, or for any other cause, the collector shall take the merchandise into his custody, until the quantity, quality, or value thereof, as the case may require, can be ascertained.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 36, 1 Stat. 658.

The collector was required to take possession in case of incorrect invoice by R. S. § 2840, post, § 5535.

§ 5487. (R. S. § 2790.) Vessel's papers to be produced to collector.

The register, or other document in lieu thereof, together with the clearance and other papers granted by the officers of the customs to a vessel at her departure from the port from whence she may have arrived, Mediterranean passports excepted, shall previous to entry be produced to the collector with whom such entry is to be made, and shall remain in his office; and on the clearance of such vessel the register and other documents shall be returned to the master or owner of such vessel.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 63, 1 Stat. 675.

Notes of Decisions

Inspection of papers.—Invoices and like papers belonging to importers continue to be their property, though required by law to be impounded at the customhouse, and they have a right to inspect them under reasonable restrictions. U. S. v. Hutton (D. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 15.433.

Manifest.—A manifest is one of the ship's papers which must be presented to the collector upon the entry of any vessel. New York & Cuba Mail S. S. Co. v. U. S. (D. C. 1903) 125 Fed. 320, 321, reversed (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 327, 200 U. S. 488, 50 L. Ed. 569.

§ 5488. (R. S. § 2791.) Public vessels need not enter.

It shall not be necessary for the master of any vessel of war, or of any vessel employed by any prince, or state, as a public packet for the conveyance of letters and dispatches, and not permitted by the laws of such prince or state to be employed in the transportation of merchandise, in the way of trade, to make report and entry

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 31, 1 Stat. 651.

Importation by persons connected with the Navy of dutiable goods in public vessels was forbidden by the Articles for the Government of the Navy, R. S. § 1624, art. 12, ante, § 2973.

Notes of Decisions

Privateers.—Privateers are included within the exemption of "ships or vessels of war" from making a report and entry on arriving at a port of the United States. The Wilson v. U. S. (C. C. 1820) Fed. Cas. No. 17,846.

§ 5489. (R. S. § 2792, as amended, Act May 28, 1908, c. 212, § 1.) Ferry-boats need not enter; vessels making tri-weekly trips to foreign ports exempt from fees and tonnage taxes.

Vessels used exclusively as ferry-boats carrying passengers, baggage, and merchandise, shall not be required to enter and clear, nor shall the masters of such vessels be required to present manifests, or to pay entrance or clearance fees, or fees for receiving or certifying manifests, but they shall, upon arrival in the United States, be required to report such baggage and merchandise to the proper officer of the customs according to law.

Any passenger vessel engaged triweekly or oftener in trade between ports of the United States and foreign ports shall be exempt from entrance and clearance fees and tonnage taxes while such service triweekly or oftener is maintained.

Act June 4, 1872, c. 280, 17 Stat. 214. Act May 28, 1908, c. 212, § 1, 35 Stat. 424.

This section, as enacted in the Revised Statutes, did not contain the provision beginning with the words "Any passenger vessel," etc., to the end of the section as set forth here. This provision was added by amendment by Act May 28, 1908, c. 212, last cited above.

The section as so amended was not amended or repealed by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 36, relating to tonnage duties, by a provision of that section, set forth post, § 7811.

§ 5490. (R. S. § 2793.) Enrolled or licensed vessels.

Enrolled or licensed vessels engaged in the foreign and coasting trade on the northern, northeastern and northwestern frontiers of the United States, departing from or arriving at a port in one district to or from a port in another district, and also touching at intermediate foreign ports, shall not thereby become liable to the payment of entry and clearance fees, or tonnage tax, as if from or to foreign ports; but such vessels shall, notwithstanding, be required to enter and clear.

Res. Feb. 10, 1871, No. 27, § 2, 16 Stat. 595.

This section was not amended or repealed by Act Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 36, relating to tonnage duties, by a provision of that section, set forth post, § 7811.

Notes of Decisions

Vessels included.—This section applies only to vessels engaged in the foreign and coasting trade which depart from or arrive at places established by law as ports wherefrom and whereat such vessels may be cleared and entered by the customs officials. (1876) 15 Op. Atty. Gen. 166.

The steamer H. S. Holden, enrolled and licensed under R. S. 4318 (post, § 8064), for the coasting or foreign trade, which cleared Cleveland, Ohio, for Two Harbors, Mich., without cargo or passengers from Cleveland to Two Harbors, but with cargo from Cleveland to the intermediate port of Ft. William, Canada, which cargo she discharged at the latter place, and then proceeded to Two Harbors, is within the provisions of this section. (1910) 28 Op. Atty. Gen. 277.

§ 5491. (R. S. § 2794.) Entry of spirits and wines.

Every importer of distilled spirits or wines, or person to whom distilled spirits or wines are consigned, shall make a separate and additional entry thereof, specifying the name of the vessel, and her master, in which, and the place from which, such spirits or wines were imported, together with the quantity and quality thereof, and a particular detail of the casks or receptacles containing the same, with their marks and numbers; such entry shall be subscribed by the person making the same, for himself, or in behalf of the person for whom such entry is made, and shall be certified by the collector, before whom it is made, as a true copy, and conformable to the general entry before directed, in respect to all distilled spirits and wines therein contained; such entry thus certified shall be transmitted to the surveyor or officer acting as inspector of the revenue for the port where it is intended to commence the delivery of such spirits or wines.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 37, 1 Stat. 658.

The rates of duty on spirits, wines, etc., were prescribed by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § I, Schedule H, ante, § 5291, pars. 237-249.

§ 5492. (R. S. § 2795.) Sea-stores to be specified.

In order to ascertain what articles ought to be exempt from duty as the sea-stores of a vessel, the master shall particularly specify the articles, in the report or manifest to be by him made, designating them as the sea-stores of such vessel; and in the oath to be taken by such master, on making such report, he shall declare that the articles so specified as sea-stores are truly such, and are not intended by way of merchandise or for sale; whereupon the articles shall be free from duty.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 45, 1 Stat. 661.

Notes of Decisions

"Sea stores." — Cordage, ravensduck, and sail cloth are not "sea stores" but, if not intended for the use of the ship, they are a part of the cargo. U. S. v. Twenty-Four Coils of Cordage (C. C. 1832) Fed. Cas. No. 16,566.

"Sea stores" are the supplies of different articles provided for the subsistence and accommodation of the ship's crew and passengers, and do not include coal. U. S. v. Hawley & Letzerich (C. C. 1908) 160 Fed. 734.

Hempen cables and hawsers are not "sea stores." U. S. v. One Hempen Cable and One Hempen Hawser (D. C. 1831) Fed. Cas. No. 15,931a.

Articles purchased abroad for a vessel, to be used as a part of her equipment, are not sea stores, and, where they remain on board on her arrival, they need not be reported by the master in his manifest. U. S. v. Twenty-Three Coils of Cordage (D. C. 1832) Fed. Cas. No. 16,573.

"Sea stores" in our tariff legislation are the stores contained in incoming vessels which are necessary for their use for the purposes of the voyage; articles which, brought into port aboard ship, are to be consumed aboard or carried off again in the outward voyage, or, if put ashore at all, landed only for the convenience of the ship. (1894) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 92.

Decision of collector.—In the absence of fraud or collusion, the decision of the collector is conclusive as to the reasonable allowance of goods to be made to a vessel for entry free of duty, as sea stores. In re An Ullage Box of Sugar (D. C. 1836) Fed. Cas. No. 14,324.

§ 5493. (R. S. § 2796.) Collection of duty on excess of sea-stores.

Whenever it appears to the collector to whom a report and manifest of sea-stores are delivered, together with the naval officer, where there is one, or alone, where there is no naval officer, that the quantities of the articles, or any part thereof, reported as sea-stores, are excessive, the collector, jointly with the naval officer, or alone, as the case may be, may in his discretion estimate the amount of the duty on such excess; which shall be forthwith paid by the master, to the collector, on pain of forfeiting the value of such excess.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 45, 1 Stat. 661.

Notes of Decisions

Collection of duty.—Equipment of ship as subject to duty as imported article, see notes under § 5291, ante.

§ 5494. (R. S. § 2797, as amended, Act March 3, 1897, c. 389, § 17.) Forfeiture of sea-stores; transfer of sea-stores, etc., to other vessels of same owner.

If any other or greater quantity of articles are found on board such vessel as sea-stores than are specified in an entry of sea-stores, or if any of the articles are landed without a permit first obtained from the collector, and naval officer if any, for that purpose, all such articles as are not included in the report or manifest by the master, and all which are landed without a permit, shall be forfeited, and may be seized; and the master shall moreover be liable to a penalty of treble the value of the articles omitted or landed. Sea stores and the legitimate equipment of vessels belonging to regular lines plying between foreign ports and the United States delayed in port for any cause may be transferred in such port of the United States under the supervision of the customs officers from one vessel to another vessel of the same owner without payment of duties, but duties must be paid on such stores or equipments landed for consumption, except American products.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 45, 1 Stat. 661. Act March 3, 1897, c. 389, § 17, 29 Stat. 691.

This section, as enacted in the Revised Statutes, did not contain the provision beginning with the words "sea-stores and the legitimate equipment of vessels," etc., to the end of the section as set forth here. This provision was added by amendment by Act March 3, 1897, c. 389, § 17, last cited above.

Notes of Decisions

Supplies included in "sea stores."— Under this section coal is not "sea stores." U. S. v. Hawley & Letzerich (C. C. 1908) 160 Fed. 734.

Under this section goods to be entitled to free entry must be legitimate equipment of a vessel belonging to a regularly plying line, delayed in port, this equipment to be transferred, under supervision, from another vessel of the same line. U. S. v. Sickel (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 146.

Steam winches to be installed by way of equipment, making the vessel ready for service differing from its previous service, were not in a statutory sense an equipment of the vessel, but rather for the vessel, and were not entitled to free entry. Id.

Forfeitures. — On an information against specific articles as "sea stores" forfeited, they cannot be adjudged to be forfeited as a part of the cargo or merchandise, or as a part of the tackle, etc., of the ship. U. S. v. Twenty-Four Coils of Cordage (C. C. 1832) Fed. Cas. No. 16,566.

The court will not impose a forfeiture by implication. It must be found in the plain letter of the statute. And an importer who offers goods free of duty as sea stores is liable for a penalty, but the goods are not forfeited, under Act 1799. In re An Ullage Box of Sugar (D. C. 1836) Fed. Cas. No. 14,324.

§ 5495. (R. S. § 2798.) Coal for steam-vessels.

The master of any vessel propelled by steam, arriving at any port in the United States, may retain all the coal such vessel may have on board at the time of her arrival, and may proceed with such coal to a foreign port, without being required to land the same in the United States or to pay any duty thereon.

Act July 7, 1838, c. 178, 5 Stat. 288.

Coal was exempt from duty by the "Free List" of the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § I, par. 451, ante, § 5291, par. 451.

§ 5496. (R. S. § 2799.) Baggage and tools.

In order to ascertain what articles ought to be exempted as the wearing apparel, and other personal baggage, and the tools or implements of a mechanical trade only, of persons who arrive in the United States, due entry thereof, as of other merchandise, but separate and distinct from that of any other merchandise, imported from a foreign port, shall be made with the collector of the district in which the articles are intended to be landed by the owner thereof, or his agent, expressing the persons by whom or for whom such entry is made, and particularizing the several packages, and their contents, with their marks and numbers; and the person who shall make the entry shall take and subscribe an oath before the collector, declaring that the entry subscribed by him and to which the oath is annexed contains, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a just and true account of the contents of the several packages mentioned in the entry, specifying the name of the vessel, of her master, and of the port from which she has arrived; and that such packages contain no merchandise whatever other than wearing apparel, personal baggage, or, as the case may be, tools of trade, specifying it; that they are all the property of a person named who has arrived, or is shortly expected to arrive in the United States, and are not directly or indirectly imported for any other, or intended for sale.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 46, 1 Stat. 661. Act March 3, 1823, c. 53, § 4, 3 Stat. 782.

Wearing apparel and similar personal effects and tools of trade, etc., were comprised in the "Free List" of the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § I, pars. 582, 642, ante, § 5291, pars. 582, 642.

Oaths on entry of goods were abolished by the Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, § 22, 26 Stat. 140, amended by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 102. A similar provision as to oaths was made by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, S, ante, § 5316. A declaration in lieu of an oath was required by these acts.

Provisions for baggage in transit to foreign country were made by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 116, § III, CC, post, § 5533.

Notes of Decisions

Baggage.—As to form and effect of entry of passenger's baggage and effects, see The Robert Edwards (1821) 6 Wheat. 187, 5 L. Ed. 238; U. S. v. One Pearl Necklace (1901) 111 Fed. 164, 168, 169, 49 C. C. A. 287, 56 L. R. A. 130; Dodge v. U. S. (1904) 131 Fed. 849, 852, 65 C. C. A. 603 (certiorari denied [1904] 25 Sup. Ct. 790, 195 U. S. 632, 49 L. Ed. 353); Harts v. U. S. (1905) 140 Fed. 843, 848, 72 C. C. A. 255; U. S. v. One Trunk (1912) 192 Fed. 913, 114 C. C. A. 353.

This section and section 5498, post, are not intended to provide alternative methods of dealing with the baggage of a passenger entering the United States, and the discretion given to the customs officers by the latter section to make an examination of such baggage does not dispense with the necessity of making entry in all cases before the baggage can be landed. U. S. v. One Pearl Necklace (1901) 111 Fed. 164, 49 C. C. A. 287, 56 L. R. A. 130.

Where a passenger on a steamer purchased a pearl necklace before her departure from Paris, and by reason of its value wore the same about her neck when she made her declaration for duty, instead of having the same among her baggage, and the necklace was visible on her person, it was subject to declaration under the statutes and rules regulating passengers' baggage, and not under the regulations providing for the importation of merchandise. One Pearl Chain v. U. S. (1903) 123 Fed. 371, 59 C. C. A. 499.

Merchandise for sale.—A passenger from abroad was not bound to enter as baggage a trunk containing only merchandise intended for sale, but was bound to indicate its character to the customs officers. U. S. v. One Trunk (1912) 192 Fed. 913, 114 C. C. A. 353, affirming decree (D. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 1012.

Where merchandise for sale is imported in a trunk, separate from the remainder of a passenger's effects, no effort being made to conceal it among the passenger's personal effects or to have it treated as personal baggage, the passenger is under no obligation to declare it as baggage. Congress having prescribed two independent systems of formalities for the importation of personal effects and of merchandise not personal effects, each complete in itself, under this section and Customs Administrative Act, § 4 (post, § 5522), respectively, it could not have been intended that both should be applicable to merchandise imported by a passenger arriving in the United States, but not attempted to be concealed by dressing it up as baggage. U. S. v. One Trunk (D. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 1012, decree affirmed (1912) 192 Fed. 913, 114 C. C. A. 353.

Wearing apparel.—"Wearing apparel" defined. Astor v. Merritt (1884) 4 Sup. Ct. 413, 417, 111 U. S. 202, 28 L. Ed. 401.

C. 1910) 176 Fed. 778, 781.

§ 5497. (R. S. § 2800.) Bond that owner shall make oath required from agent.

Whenever the person making entry of any articles as wearing apparel, personal baggage, tools, or implements, is not the owner of them, he shall give bond with one or more sureties, to the satisfaction of the collector, in a sum equal to the duties on like articles imported subject to duty, upon the condition that the owner of the articles shall, within one year, personally make an oath such as is prescribed in the preceding section.

§ 5498. (R. S. § 2801.) Permit for baggage and tools.

On compliance with the two preceding sections, and not otherwise, a permit shall be granted for landing such articles. But whenever the collector and the naval officer, if any, think proper, they may direct the baggage of any person arriving within the United States to be examined by the surveyor of the port, or by an inspector of the customs, who shall make a return of the same; and if any articles are contained therein which in their opinion ought not to be exempted from duty, due entry of them shall be made and the duties thereon paid.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 46, 1 Stat. 662.

Notes of Decisions

Examination of baggage.—The discretion given to customs officers to make an examination of baggage does not dispense with the necessity of making the entry required by section 5496, ante, in all cases before the baggage can be landed. U. S. v. One Pearl Necklace (1901) 111 Fed. 164, 168, 49 C. C. A. 287, 56 L. R. A. 130.

§ 5499. (R. S. § 2802.) Penalty for concealing dutiable articles in baggage.

Whenever any article subject to duty is found in the baggage of any person arriving within the United States, which was not, at the time of making entry for such baggage, mentioned to the collector before whom such entry was made, by the person making entry, such article shall be forfeited, and the person in whose baggage it is found shall be liable to a penalty of treble the value of such article.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 46, 1 Stat. 662.

Forfeiture for false entry, etc., was provided for by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, H, post, § 5526.

10. Instructions.
11. Bar of proceedings.
12. Extent of forfeiture.

1. Proceeding to forfeit.—See § 5785, post.

An information under this section for the forfeiture of goods is a civil action. U. S. v. Chesbrough (D. C. 1910) 176 Fed. 778, 785.

A proceeding in rem to forfeit presents a civil liability rather than an offense, and does not require proof of intent. (1900) 23 Op. Atty. Gen. 63.

2. Intent.—Evil intent is not a necessary ingredient in incurring the forfeiture or penalty. U. S. v. One Pearl Necklace (1901) 111 Fed. 164, 168, 49 C. C. A. 287, 56 L. R. A. 130.

This section does not make the element of fraudulent intent an ingredient of the cause of forfeiture, and if at any time while the entry is being made and before it is completed there is a disclosure by the passenger which is sufficient to put the customs officers upon an inquiry as to dutiable character of any of the contents of the baggages, such disclosure constitutes sufficient mention to the collector before whom such entry is being made, notwithstanding they were not mentioned in the entry or declaration. One Pearl Chain v. U. S. (1903) 123 Fed. 371, 375, 59 C. C. A. 499.

Fraudulent intent is not an ingredient of the cause of forfeiture and dutiable articles found in the handbag of a passenger after said passenger had entered other dutiable articles were subject to the enforcement of the penalties prescribed by said section. Dodge v. U. S. (1904) 131 Fed. 849, 65 C. C. A. 603, writ of certiorari denied (1904) 25 Sup. Ct. 790, 195 U. S. 632, 49 L. Ed. 353.

Mere intent to smuggle goods will not work a forfeiture under the laws of the United States. Though goods are brought in with intent to smuggle them, they may not be seized while the persons importing them may yet change their minds and observe the necessary formalities in due season. U. S. v. One Pearl Chain (1905) 139 Fed. 513, 71 C. C. A. 500.

On arrival in the United States a passenger in entering his baggage, omitted to mention to the customs officers certain dutiable articles contained therein. Held, that he thereby became liable to the penalties provided in this section, irrespective of intent. Harts v. U. S. (1905) 140 Fed. 843, 72 C. C. A. 255, affirming judgments U. S. v. Harts (D. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 886, and Same v. Sixteen Bolts of Silk (D. C. 1904) 139 Fed. 1008.

Section 5496, ante, and this section, do not apply where the claimant was ignorant of the fact that the articles were on board. U. S. v. Two Baskets (1913) 205 Fed. 37, 123 C. C. A. 310.

On the examination of a passenger's baggage dutiable articles were found placed in the skirts of dresses in such a way that they could not be seen until the skirts were unfolded. Held, that this evidence would not justify the conclusion that the owner of the baggage had intended to avoid the payment of duty upon such articles. U. S. v. Harts (D. C. 1905) 131 Fed. 886, judgment affirmed Harts v. U. S. (1905) 140 Fed. 843, 72 C. C. A. 255.

Evil intent is not a necessary ingredient in incurring the forfeiture or penalty. Id.

The penalties denounced by this section apply where any article subject to duty is found in the baggage and not mentioned at the time of making entry thereof, and this is true whether the person bringing in the baggage knew that the articles were dutiable or not, and though he was free from any intent to defraud. U. S. v. Chesbrough (D. C. 1910) 176 Fed. 778.

A violation of this section becomes the misdemeanor denounced by section § 5785, post, when done fraudulently or knowingly. Id.

3. Mention of articles.—Any dutiable article found in the baggage of a passenger entering the United States, which was not at the time of making the entry of the baggage "mentioned to the collector before whom such entry was made by the person making the entry," is forfeitable; but it is a sufficient "mention" of an article to avoid forfeiture if it is called to the attention of the officer who, as representative of the collector, takes the entry or declaration, although it is not mentioned therein. U. S. v. One Pearl Necklace (1901) 111 Fed. 164, 49 C. C. A. 287, 56 L. R. A. 130.

A passenger arriving in the United States, on filling out the printed form furnished by the customs officers for the declaration and entry of baggage, struck out the clause referring to the itemized description that is required of the various articles of baggage, and inserted instead a description of the pieces of baggage he had, as consisting of certain numbers of trunks, valises, etc., and said nothing as to what articles were contained therein. Held, that this was not sufficient to put the customs officers on inquiry as to the dutiable character of the contents of the packages, so as to constitute a sufficient "mention" of the articles. Harts v. U. S. (1905) 140 Fed. 843, 72 C. C. A. 255, affirming judgments U. S. v. Harts (D. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 886, and Same v. Sixteen Bolts of Silk (D. C. 1904) 139 Fed. 1008.

A person coming into the United States, and having in possession a valuable pearl chain, silk wearing apparel, and other articles, had made a declaration on board the vessel as to certain "wearing apparel, value not known," had proceeded to the portion of the dock adjacent to the vessel that had been roped off for convenient examination of passengers' effects, and was there awaiting opportunity to give the information necessary for completing the entry; but before this opportunity had been given, the pearl chain was seized as illegally imported. Held, that the phrase "wearing apparel" was a sufficient mention of the chain, and that the seizure was illegal. U. S. v. One Pearl Chain (1905) 139 Fed. 513, 71 C. C. A. 500.

If, instead of requiring a passenger to make due entry of dutiable articles which such passenger imports, government officers elect to seize them before the passenger is called upon to complete his entry, he is not to be held responsible for failure to complete the entry, if he mentions the articles as required by law, when he first made his entry. Id.

Where the form of declaration for entry of the personal baggage and effects of a passenger prescribed by the treasury department, and used by the customs officers, does not call for an enumeration of the contents of packages, as provided for in § 5496, ante, it must be regarded as a waiver of such enumeration, and an election to proceed by the alternative method of examination provided by § 5498, ante; and, unless there is fraud or intentional concealment by the passenger, he cannot be subjected to the forfeiture under this section of articles which are in fact personal baggage or effects, because they are not specifically described in such declaration, although they may be dutiable on account of excessive value, as the penalty of forfeiture here prescribed applies only to entries required under § 5496, ante, to obtain a permit for the landing of the articles specified therein without examination. U. S. v. One Pearl Necklace (D. C. 1900) 105 Fed. 357.

Passenger's baggage declaration, specifying only a "trunk," without any mention of its contents, was sufficient; specification of the "trunk" being equivalent to mention of its contents. U. S. v. One Trunk (D. C. 1909) 171 Fed. 772, judgment affirmed (1911) 184 Fed. 317, 106 C. C. A. 459.

4. Defenses.—The fact that the printed form for entry of baggage prepared by the treasury department and presented to passengers entering the country for signature is misleading and unintelligible, or that it is not properly filled out by the customs officers, will not relieve a passenger from the forfeiture consequent upon his failure to mention to the officer articles which are dutiable. U. S. v. One Pearl Necklace (1901) 111 Fed. 164, 49 C. C. A. 287, 56 L. R. A. 130.

5. Dutiable articles "found in the baggage."—Inasmuch as articles for sale which accompany a person arriving in the United States, but which are not classed by the passenger as baggage, are not required to be declared at the same time as the passenger's personal baggage, an intentional misstatement at that time of the value of such articles does not make the articles forfeitable, because the importer was under no obligation to enter them or declare their value at that time, under this section or § 5496, ante, relating to "baggage." U. S. v. One Trunk (D. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 1012, decree affirmed (1912) 192 Fed. 913, 114 C. C. A. 353.

6. Baggage.—Personal effects do not cease to be baggage by being so disposed on the person as to be covered from view by the passenger's dress. U. S. v. One Pearl Chain (1905) 139 Fed. 513, 71 C. C. A. 500.

Precious stones carried loose in a pocket of a passenger arriving in the United States, though not "baggage" within the common-law definition of that term, are baggage within this section: and the passenger is bound to declare them in the same way as articles contained in his trunk. U. S. v. 218½ Carats Loose Emeralds (D. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 643, judgment affirmed Two Hundred and Eighteen and one-half Carats Loose Emeralds v. U. S. (1907) 154 Fed. 839, 83 C. C. A. 475.

7. Exemption from duty.—An exemption from duty is lost by failure to comply with this section. Dodge v. U. S. (1904) 131 Fed. 849, 850, 65 C. C. A. 603 (certiorari denied [1904] 25 Sup. Ct. 790, 195 U. S. 632, 49 L. Ed. 353); Harts v. U. S. (1905) 140 Fed. 843, 72 C. C. A. 255 (affirming judgments U. S. v. Harts [D. C. 1904] 131 Fed. 886, and Same v. Sixteen Bolts of Silk [D. C. 1904] 139 Fed. 1008).

The statute does not contemplate that in an action to enforce the forfeiture or penalty prescribed, the court shall be required to make an appraisement of the value of such articles for the purpose of ascertaining what portion would have been entitled to admission free of duty if a proper declaration and entry thereof had been made. U. S. v. Harts (D. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 886, judgment affirmed Harts v. U. S. (1905) 140 Fed. 843, 72 C. C. A. 255.

8. Imports from Philippine Islands.—This section is not inapplicable to articles brought from the Philippine Islands. Harts v. U. S. (1905) 140 Fed. 843, 72 C. C. A. 255, affirming judgments U. S. v. Harts (D. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 886, and Same v. Sixteen Bolts of Silk (D. C. 1904) 139 Fed. 1008.

9. Information.—In a proceeding to condemn goods seized as forfeited, where a motion is made to dismiss after the government's evidence is in, but the ground of the motion is not stated, any defect in the information which could have been availed of by demurrer, exception, or motion to dismiss at the trial, made on the ground of such defect, or by a motion in arrest of judgment, must on appeal be considered as waived, or as cured by the verdict of condemnation. Friedenstein v. U. S. (1888) 125 U. S. 224, 8 Sup. Ct. 838, 31 L. Ed. 736.

10. Instructions.—A charge that the government has a lien on the property and can recover the duty, though verdict for defendant is rendered, is irrelevant to the issues. U. S. v. One Pearl Necklace (1901) 111 Fed. 164, 49 C. C. A. 287, 56 L. R. A. 130.

11. Bar of proceedings.—It seems that this section has no application where the goods have been successfully passed through the customhouse without discovery. U. S. v. Five Packages of Tapestry (D. C. 1902) 114 Fed. 496.

Dutiable articles in the baggage of a person arriving in the United States from abroad became forfeitable under this section, because not mentioned to the Collector of Customs at the time of entry; but before they were seized their owner was permitted to make a lawful entry and pay the proper duty. Held, that such occurrences subsequent to the accrual of the right of forfeiture would not waive such right, nor estop the United States from asserting it. U. S. v. One Purple Cloth Costume (D. C. 1907) 158 Fed. 899.

An acquittal of crime charged under § 5785, post, is no bar to proceedings in rem under this section. U. S. v. Chesbrough (D. C. 1910) 176 Fed. 778, 785.

An acquittal on the charge of smuggling under section 5548, post, and of illegal importation under section 5785, post, is not a bar to a proceeding in rem to forfeit the goods under this section and section 5763, post. (1900) 23 Op. Atty. Gen. 63.

12. Extent of forfeiture.—Where an importation of packages was entered at the custom house as containing personal effects only and not subject to duty, but it turned out on examination that the packages contained dutiable merchandise of considerable value, held, that the entire packages were not forfeitable, but only the dutiable merchandise, the case being governed by this section, which is unaffected by the provisions of section 12 of the act of June 22, 1874. See § 5526, post. (1886) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 326.

(R. S. § 2803. Superseded.)

This section provided that baggage, etc., in transit to a foreign country, might be delivered by the parties having it in charge to the collector, to be retained without payment of duty, and delivered to such parties on their departure for their foreign destination. It was superseded by the Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, § 28, 26 Stat. 141, amended by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 104, and further amended by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, CC, post, § 5533, which acts re-enacted the provision, with additions.

§ 5500. (R. S. § 2804, as amended, Act Aug. 27, 1894, c. 349, § 26.) Entry, etc., of cigars.

No cigars shall be imported unless the same are packed in boxes of not more than five hundred cigars in each box; and no entry of any imported cigars shall be allowed of less quantity than three thousand in a single package; and all cigars on importation shall be placed in public store or bonded warehouse, and shall not be removed therefrom until the same shall have been inspected and a stamp affixed to each box indicating such inspection, and also a serial number to be recorded in the custom house. And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to provide the requisite stamps, and to make all necessary regulations for carrying the above provisions of law into effect.

Act July 28, 1866, c. 298, § 1, 14 Stat. 328. Act Aug. 27, 1894, c. 349, § 26, 28 Stat. 552.

This section, as enacted in the Revised Statutes, was amended by striking out, after the words "and a stamp affixed to each box indicating such inspection," the words "with the date thereof," and inserting instead thereof the words "and also a serial number to be recorded in the custom-house," making the section read as set forth here, by the Wilson Tariff Act of Aug. 27, 1894, c. 349, § 26, cited above.

The rates of duty on cigars, etc., were prescribed by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § I, Schedule F, ante, § 5291, pars. 181–185.

Notes of Decisions

Effect of section.—The criminal feature of section 5785, post, punishing unlawful importations, is not affected by this section. U. S. v. Ortega (D. C. 1895) 66 Fed. 713, 715.

Fraud.—The Secretary of the Treasury may release cigars imported in violation of this section, on payment of a fine equal to the duty, when in his opinion the importation does not involve fraud. (1903) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 588.

Importations from Philippine Islands.—This section applies to cigars coming into the United States from the Philippine Islands. (1911) 29 Op. Atty. Gen. 77.

§ 5501. (R. S. § 2805.) Oaths, how taken.

All oaths to be taken upon making of any of the reports or entries, or respecting any of the acts mentioned in this chapter, whether by a master of any vessel, or the owner or consignee of any merchandise, his factor or agent, or by any other person, shall be administered by the collector, or officer to or with whom the report or entry is made, and shall be reduced to writing, and subscribed by the person taking and by the person administering the oath.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 49, 1 Stat. 664.

This section was superseded to a great extent by the Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, § 22, 26 Stat. 140, amended by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 102, which abolished all oaths administered by officers of the customs, except as provided in said acts other sections of which repealed provisions requiring oaths by importers, etc., on entries, etc., and required, instead of such oaths, declarations similar in substance. A similar provision as to oaths was made by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § IV, S, ante, § 5316.

A provision for designating clerks and inspectors to administer oaths, was made by Act Sept. 30, 1890, c. 1126, post, § 5502.

§ 5502. (Act Sept. 30, 1890, c. 1126.) Oaths to be administered by clerks and inspectors of customs.

Such clerks and inspectors of customs as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate for the purpose shall be authorized to administer oaths, such as deputy collectors of customs are now authorized to administer, and no compensation shall be paid or charge made therefor. (26 Stat. 511.)

This was a provision of the deficiency appropriation act for the fiscal year 1890, cited above.

See note to R. S. § 2805, ante, § 5501, as to abolition of oaths administered by officers of the customs.

§ 5503. (R. S. § 2806.) Manifests of cargo required.

No merchandise shall be brought into the United States, from any foreign port, in any vessel unless the master has on board manifests in writing of the cargo, signed by such master.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 23, 1 Stat. 644. Act July 18, 1866, c. 201, § 25, 14 Stat. 184.

Notes of Decisions

Foreign ports.—The master of a vessel entering a port of the United States with merchandise subject to duty consigned to such port is bound to deliver his manifest, though he intend such merchandise to be returned to a foreign port. The Fame (D. C. 1858) Fed. Cas. No. 4,633.

Where a vessel bound from a foreign port to a port of the United States receives cargo on the high seas, and brings it into the United States, such cargo must be regarded as brought from a foreign port. United States v. The Coquitlam (D. C. 1893) 57 Fed. 706.

An American vessel in ballast, arriving in March or April, 1902, at Port Townsend, Wash., from Manila, did not arrive from a foreign port within the meaning of the laws requiring the making of entry and the sending of a copy of the manifest. (1902) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 27.

§ 5504. (R. S. § 2807, as amended, Act June 3, 1892, c. 86, § 1.) What must be stated in manifest.

Every manifest required by the preceding section shall contain:

First. The name of the ports where the merchandise in such manifest mentioned were taken on board, and the ports within the United States for which the same are destined; particularly noting the merchandise destined for each port respectively. Provided, however, That the master of a vessel laden exclusively either with sugar, coal, salt, hides, dyewoods, wool, or jute butts, consigned to one consignee, arriving at a port for orders, may be permitted to destine such cargo or determine its disposition "for orders," upon entering the vessel at the custom-house, and, within fifteen days afterward and before the unloading of any part of the cargo, to amend the manifest by designating the actual port of discharge of such cargo: Provided further, That in the event of failure to designate the port of discharge within fifteen days such cargo must be discharged at the port where the vessel entered.

Second. The name, description, and build of the vessel; the true admeasurement or tonnage thereof; the port to which such vessel belongs; the name of each owner, according to the register of the same; and the name of the master of such vessel.

Third. A just and particular account of all the merchandise, so laden on board, whether in packages or stowed loose, of any kind or nature whatever, together with the marks and numbers as marked on each package, and the number or quantity and description of the packages in words at length, whether leaguer, pipe, butt, puncheon, hogshead, barrel, keg, case, bale, pack, truss, chest, box, bandbox, bundle, parcel, cask, or package, of any kind or sort, describing the same by its usual name or denomination.

Fourth. The names of the persons to whom such packages are respectively consigned, agreeably to the bills of lading signed for the same, unless when the goods are consigned to order, when it shall be so expressed in the manifest.

Fifth. The names of the several passengers on board the vessel, distinguishing whether cabin or steerage passengers, or both, with their baggage, specifying the number and description of packages belonging to each respectively.

Sixth. An account of the sea-stores remaining, if any.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 23, 1 Stat. 644, 645. Act June 3, 1892, c. 86, § 1, 27 Stat. 41.

This section, as enacted in the Revised Statutes, did not contain the two provisos following the words "respectively," in the first subsection thereof as set forth here. These provisos were added by amendment by Act June 3, 1892, c. 86, last cited above.

Provisions relating to lists of passengers, etc., to be delivered with the manifest of the cargo, were made by Act Feb. 9, 1905, c. 564, post, § 8010.

Notes of Decisions

Liability of vessel to shipper for neglect to present proper manifest.—The vessel is liable for the neglect of the master to present a proper manifest preventing the owner of the goods shipped from passing them through the customhouse. The Zenobia (D. C. 1847) Fed. Cas. No. 18,209.

Contents of manifest.—Articles purchased abroad for a vessel, to be used as a part of her equipment, are not sea stores, and, where they remain on board on her arrival, they need not be reported by the master in his manifest. U. S. v. Twenty-Three Coils of Cordage (D. C. 1882) Fed. Cas. No. 16,573.

The manifest must name shipper, and in case of return of part of cargo must show by whom shipped out and to whom consigned inward. The Ariel (D. C. 1867) Fed. Cas. No. 527.

Where the captain of a vessel is obliged by law to deliver a manifest of his cargo, he does not comply unless he exhibits a true and accurate one. Phile v. The Anna (1787) 1 Dall. 197.

Evidence.—Parol evidence is not admissible to control the intention as expressed on the face of the manifest showing the vessel and cargo to be consigned to an American port. The Fame (D. C. 1858) Fed. Cas. No. 4,633.

Cited without definite application, U. S. v. The Walla Walla (D. C. 1891) 44 Fed. 796.

§ 5505. (R. S. § 2808.) Merchandise destined to different ports or districts.

If merchandise shall be imported, destined to be delivered in different districts or ports, the quantities and packages so destined to be delivered shall be inserted in successive order in the manifest; and all spirits and wines constituting the whole or any part of the cargo of any vessel shall also be inserted in successive order, distinguishing the ports to which the same may be destined, and the kinds, qualities, and quantities thereof.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 23, 1 Stat. 644.

§ 5506. (R. S. § 2809.) Penalty for failure to have a correct manifest.

If any merchandise is brought into the United States in any vessel whatever from any foreign port without having such a manifest on board, or which shall not be included or described in the manifest, or shall not agree therewith, the master shall be liable to a penalty equal to the value of such merchandise not included in such manifest; and all such merchandise not included in the manifest belonging or consigned to the master, mate, officers, or crew of such vessel, shall be forfeited.

13. Remission.
14. Refusal of clearance of vessel.

1. Forfeiture—In general.—The penalty of Act 1799 applied only to articles imported in a vessel owned in whole or in part by citizens or inhabitants of the United States. U. S. v. Twenty-Six Diamond Rings (D. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 16,572.

2. —— What forfeitable.—The statute applies only to merchandise belonging or consigned to the master, mate, officers, or crew; and other merchandise which is omitted from the manifest is not forfeitable thereunder. The Coquitlam (1896) 77 Fed. 744, 23 C. C. A. 438.

Domestic goods shipped from foreign port to aid in concealing foreign goods, liable to forfeiture. The Ariel (D. C. 1867) Fed. Cas. No. 527.

A steamer with supplies for a sealing fleet sailed from Victoria, B. C., and, by preconcerted arrangement, met vessels of the fleet at Tonki bay and Port Etches, in the waters of the United States, within four leagues of the shore, and there transferred to them part of her cargo, and received sealskins from them, in violation of the revenue laws. She was then seized and found to be without any manifest of her cargo. Held, that the part of her original cargo still on board, and the sealskins received, were subject to forfeiture. U. S. v. The Coquitlam (D. C. 1893) 57 Fed. 706.

3. —— "Without having a manifest on board."—A forfeiture is not saved by making a manifest after the arrival of the vessel within the limits of a port of entry with the intention of landing them there, though before it is demanded by the customs officer. U. S. v. Ten Thousand Cigars (C. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 16,450.

Where a cargo is seized for want of a manifest thereof, the master cannot prevent a forfeiture by thereafter making out a manifest and tendering it to the officers making the seizure. U. S. v. The Coquitlam (D. C. 1893) 57 Fed. 706.

4. —— Other grounds of forfeiture.—A forfeiture is incurred where a false manifest is presented. One Hundred and Thirty-Four Thousand Nine Hundred and One Feet of Pine Lumber (C. C. 1858) Fed. Cas. No. 10,523.

Merchandise brought in trunks with personal baggage not entered on the ship's manifest held properly forfeited, as imported with an intent to defraud the United States. Lewey v. U. S. (C. C. 1878) Fed. Cas. No. 8,309.

Goods will be forfeited for nonproduction of manifest not satisfactorily accounted for. The Ariel (D. C. 1867) Fed. Cas. No. 527.

It is not an essential preliminary that the ship should have been seized. The Missouri (D. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 9,652.

Where a vessel bound from a foreign port to a port of the United States receives cargo on the high seas, and brings it into the United States, such cargo must be regarded as brought from a foreign port, and is forfeitable, if there is no manifest thereof. U. S. v. The Coquitlam (D. C. 1893) 57 Fed. 706.

Under Act March 15, 1787, providing that every vessel from which merchandise shall be unladed before due entry at the office of the collector of the port shall be forfeited, a vessel is liable to forfeiture where the master had only exhibited 20 hampers of porter in his official manifest, whereas a much greater quantity was found on board the ship, besides 42 hampers landed and deposited in a store, and 24 hampers delivered on shore to the master himself. Phile v. The Anna (Pa. 1787) 1 Dall. 197.

A failure to enter a chariot and harness, brought by water from Pennsylvania, was a forfeiture of the vessel, chariot, and harness, under the revenue laws of Virginia, as they existed in May, 1786. Bentley v. Roan (Va. 1790) 4 Call, 153.

5. —— Intent.—Goods will not be forfeited because of the absence of the manifest, where it appears that the same was inadvertently lost by the master before the vessel sailed, and that no part of the cargo had been unshipped after it was taken on board. U. S. v. Certain Cigars, etc. (C. C. 1873) Fed. Cas. No. 14,765.

To incur a forfeiture there must be an intentional omission from the manifest. U. S. v. Lot of Silk Umbrellas (C. C. 1881) 12 Fed. 412.

Where a libel for information was filed against a vessel's boatswain to enforce a forfeiture for attempting to import foreign goods without entering them in the vessel's manifest, held, that it must be dismissed, in the absence of any attempt at concealment, and in view of the fact that the practice of making such importations had been tolerated and apparently recognized as legal by the custom-house officials, and the further fact that the boatswain, a native of China, had no reason to suppose that he was thereby violating the law. U. S. v. Three Trunks (D. C. 1881) 8 Fed. 583.

To enforce a forfeiture held, the government must show affirmatively an "actual intention to defraud," under section 16 of the act of June 22, 1874, now repealed, see note under § 5796, post. Id.

6. —— Sentence.—A sentence of condemnation forfeiting a portion of a cargo from an omission to enter the same in the manifest is erroneous, unless the libel charge the particular omission. The Thomas and Henry v. U. S. (C. C. 1818) Fed. Cas. No. 13,919.

7. Penalty—In general.—A declaration alleging that goods imported without a manifest belonged to the master is not supported by evidence that they belonged to, and were smuggled on board by, one of the crew. U. S. v. Hutchinson (D. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 15,431.

Where the vessel is used as a common carrier, and the owner or master thereof is not a consenting party to the illegal act, or privy thereto, the only remedy appears to be an action against the master. (1912) 29 Op. Atty. Gen. 364.

8. Intent.—For importing goods without a manifest, the master is liable to a penalty, though ignorant that the goods were on board; as where they are brought on board, and concealed by a sailor. U. S. v. Hutchinson (D. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 15,431; Same v. The Missouri (C. C. 1872) Id. 15,785; Same v. The Queen (C. C. 1873) Id. 16,108. CONTRA, see U. S. v. The Stadacona (C. C. 1871) Fed. Cas. No. 16,371.

9. Enforcement against vessel—In general.—Where the vessel is not used as a common carrier, the government has, by virtue of § 5792, post, a lien on the vessel for the penalty incurred under this section by the master, and may enforce that lien by libel and seizure. (1912) 29 Op. Atty. Gen. 364.

Vessel not forfeitable unless owner or master consented or was privy to illegal act, see § 5766, post.

10. —— Information or libel.—In a libel filed against a vessel to recover the penalty imposed, it is not necessary to aver a prior seizure. The Missouri (D. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 9,652.

An information will lie directly against a vessel for the recovery of the penalty for importing goods not included in the manifest without a previous prosecution of the master. The Missouri (D. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 9,652; U. S. v. Platt (D. C. 1840) Id. 16,054a; Same v. The Queen (D. C. 1870) Id. 16,107; (C. C. 1873) Id. 16,108.

An information against a vessel charging the importation of merchandise not included in the manifest may be amended without terms in respect to allegations of ownership of the vessel. U. S. v. The Queen (D. C. 1870) Fed. Cas. No. 16,107.

11. —— Dismissal as to master.—On an information against a vessel and her master for the penalty for the importation of merchandise not included in the manifest tried as a civil cause of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, where the answer of the vessel does not except to such joinder but that of the master does, the information will be dismissed as to him and a decree entered against the vessel. U. S. v. The Queen (C. C. 1873) Fed. Cas. No. 16,108; U. S. v. The Irma (D. C. 1870) Fed. Cas. No. 15,444 (following [D. C. 1870] Fed. Cas. No. 16,107); U. S. v. The Queen (D. C. 1870) Fed. Cas. No. 16,107.

In a suit against a vessel and her master jointly to recover a penalty for importing goods not included in the manifest, it is proper to dismiss the suit as to the master, on the ground that he is entitled to a trial by jury and to proceed with it as against the vessel. U. S. v. The Queen (C. C. 1873) Fed. Cas. No. 16,108.

12. —— Evidence.—The manifest of the cargo filed in the customhouse is competent evidence on the question whether certain goods were imported without being entered on the manifest. U. S. v. The Missouri (C. C. 1872) Fed. Cas. No. 15,785.

Proof held to justify the release of a vessel seized to enforce a lien for the penalty. U. S. v. The Walla Walla (D. C. 1891) 44 Fed. 796.

13. Remission.—The treasury department has jurisdiction of the remission of fines, penalties, and forfeitures imposed by this section. U. S. v. Hutchinson (D. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 15,431; (1905) 25 Op. Atty. Gen. 535.

14. Refusal of clearance of vessel.—A collector of customs may lawfully refuse a clearance to a vessel whose master is alleged to be amenable to the penalty provided by this section for bringing into the United States merchandise not included in the manifest required and described in the preceding sections. (1881) 17 Op. Atty. Gen. 82.

A collector of customs has no right to refuse clearance of a vessel, used as a common carrier, because of the nonpayment of a fine imposed under this section for bringing into the United States merchandise not included in the manifest, unless the master or owner of the vessel was consenting to the illegal act or privy thereto. (1912) 29 Op. Atty. Gen. 364.

C. 1881) 9 Fed. 322, 324; U. S. v. Curtis (D. C. 1883) 16 Fed. 184, 188; U. S. v. A Lot of Jewelry, etc. (D. C. 1894) 59 Fed. 684, 687.

§ 5507. (R. S. § 2810, as amended, Act Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, § 1.) Except by accident or mistake.

Whenever it is made to appear to the satisfaction of the collector, naval officer, and surveyor, or to the major part of them, where those officers are established at any port, or to the satisfaction of the collector alone, where either of the other of the officers is not established, or to the satisfaction of the court in which a trial shall be had concerning such forfeiture, that no part of the cargo of any vessel without proper manifests was unshipped, after it was taken on board, except such as shall have been particularly specified and accounted for in the report of the master, and that the manifests had been lost or mislaid, without fraud or collusion, or were defaced by accident, or became incorrect by mistake, no forfeiture or penalty shall be incurred under the preceding section.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 24, 1 Stat. 646. Act Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, § 1, 19 Stat. 246.

This section, as enacted in the Revised Statutes, was amended by striking out after the words "where either of the other of the officers" the word "are," and inserting instead thereof the word "is," as set forth here, by Act Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, § 1, last cited above.

Notes of Decisions

Forfeiture of vessel.—See § 5792, post, as to lien on vessel for penalty incurred by master or owner under § 5506, ante.

Vessel not forfeitable unless owner or master consented to or was privy to illegal act, see § 5766, post.

Accident.—Where the master of the vessel delivered the invoices and bill of lading to the naval officer, and had a manifest made out in the custom house, under the inspection of the naval officer, if some of the cargo is overlooked by accident, it does not forfeit the vessel and cargo. Fairclough v. Gatewood (Va. 1790) 4 Call, 158.

Mistake.—It would seem that, in all cases of importation in vessels, a forfeiture is not to be inferred by a mere mistake in the manifest, report, or entry, without fraud, misconduct, or culpable negligence. U. S. v. The Margaret Yates (D. C. 1849) Fed. Cas. No. 15,720.

Unshipped goods.—The master is not entitled to the benefit of this section if the goods are unshipped. Throwing goods into the dock, protected so that they may be reclaimed, is unshipment. U. S. v. Hutchinson (D. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 15,431.

§ 5508. (R. S. § 2811.) Production of manifest.

Every master of any vessel laden with merchandise, and bound to any port in the United States, shall, on his arrival within four leagues of the coast thereof, or within any of the bays, harbors, ports, rivers, creeks, or inlets thereof, upon demand, produce the manifests in writing, which such master is required to have on board his vessel, to such officer of the customs as first comes on board his vessel, for inspection, and shall deliver to such officer true copies thereof, which copies shall be provided and subscribed by the master, and the officer to whom the original manifests have been produced shall certify upon the back thereof that the same were produced, and the day and year on which the same were so produced, and that such copies were to him delivered and by him examined with the original manifest; and shall likewise certify upon the back of such copies the day and year on which the same were delivered, and shall forthwith transmit such copies to the respective collectors of the several districts, to which the goods by such manifests appear respectively to be consigned.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 25, 1 Stat. 646. Act July 18, 1866, c. 201, § 25, 14 Stat. 184.

§ 5509. (R. S. § 2812.) Delivery of copies of manifest.

The master of any such vessel shall in like manner produce to the officer of the customs who first comes on board such vessel, upon her arrival within the limits of any collection-district in which the cargo, or any part thereof, is intended to be discharged or landed, for his inspection, such manifest; and shall also deliver to him true copies thereof, such copies also to be provided and subscribed by the master, the production of which manifests and the delivery of which copies shall also be certified by the officer of the customs, upon the back of the original manifests, with the particular day and year when such manifests were produced to such officer, and when he so received the copies thereof; and such officer is required forthwith to transmit the copies of the manifests to the collector of the district; and the master shall afterward deliver the original manifests so certified to the collector. When any manifest shall be produced, upon which there shall be no certificate from any officer of the customs as before mentioned, the master producing the same shall be required to make oath that no officer has applied for, and that no indorsement has taken place on, any manifest of the cargo of such vessel.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 25, 1 Stat. 646.
See note to R. S. § 2805, ante, § 5501, as to abolition of oaths.

Notes of Decisions

Evidence.—A copy of a manifest taken from the books of a custom house is a copy of a record, and it may be given in evidence when properly proved. U. S. v. Johns (C. C. 1806) Fed. Cas. No. 15,481, 4 Dall. 412, 415, 1 L. Ed. 888.

§ 5510. (R. S. § 2813.) What number of copies must be delivered.

The master of any such vessel shall not be required to make delivery of more than one copy of each manifest to the officer who shall first come on board of such vessel, within four leagues of the coast of the United States, and one other copy to such officer as shall first come on board within the limits of any collection-district, for which the cargo of such vessel, or some part thereof, is destined, nor to make delivery of any such copy to any other officer; but it shall be sufficient, in respect to any such other officer, to exhibit to him the original manifests and the certificates thereupon.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 25, 1 Stat. 647.
A copy of the manifest was required to be mailed to the Auditor for the Treasury Department by Act March 2, 1895, c. 177, § 9, post, § 5513.

§ 5511. (R. S. § 2814.) Penalty for omitting to produce manifest and deliver copies.

If the master of any vessel laden with merchandise, and bound to any port in the United States, fails upon his arrival within four leagues of the coast thereof, or within the limits of any collection-district, where the cargo of such vessel, or any part thereof, is intended to be discharged, to produce such manifests as are heretofore required, in writing, to the proper officer upon demand therefor, or to deliver such copies thereof, according to the directions of the preceding sections, or if he fails to give an account of the true destination of the vessel, which he is hereby required to do, upon request of such officer, or gives a false account of such destination, in order to evade the production of the manifests, the master shall for every such neglect, refusal, or offense, be liable to a penalty of not more than five hundred dollars. If any officer first coming on board, in each case, shall neglect or refuse to certify on the back of such manifests the production thereof, and the delivery of such copies respectively as are directed to be delivered to such officer, such officer shall be liable to a penalty of five hundred dollars.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 26, 1 Stat. 647.

Notes of Decisions

Penalty.—The master is subject to a fine for failure to produce a manifest. U. S. v. Teffry (C. C. 1866) Fed. Cas. No. 16,443.

Cited without definite application. The Saratoga (D. C. 1881) 9 Fed. 322, 324.

§ 5512. (R. S. § 2815.) Making return of violations.

The officers who may apply to the master of any such vessel, respecting any of the provisions in the preceding sections, and who shall not receive full satisfaction therein, are hereby required to make a return in writing of the name of the vessel and master so offending, in any or all of the particulars required, as soon as possible, to the collector of the district to which such vessel shall be considered to be bound.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 26, 1 Stat. 648.

§ 5513. (Act March 2, 1895, c. 177, § 9.) Copy of manifest to be mailed to Auditor for Treasury Department.

On and after July first, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, each master of a vessel arriving in the United States from a foreign port except vessels carrying traffic in bond on transfer ferries shall, immediately upon landing and before entering his vessel at the customhouse, mail to the Auditor for the Treasury Department, Washington, a true copy of the manifest of his vessel, and shall on entering his vessel make affidavit that he has mailed such copy and that the same is true and correct; and he shall also mail to the said Auditor a true copy of the corrected manifest filed on any post entry of his vessel. Any master who neglects or refuses to mail to the Auditor the required copy of the original or corrected manifest shall be subject to the same fines and penalties fixed by law for his failure to deliver the manifest of his vessel to the collector: Provided, That this section shall not apply to ports where there is a naval officer. (28 Stat. 808.)

This section was a part of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act for the fiscal year 1896, cited above.

Notes of Decisions

Foreign port.—Manila not a foreign port. (1902) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 27.

R. S. §§ 2816–2821, provided that merchandise intended to be imported into certain ports of delivery therein named might be entered at a port of entry and thereafter transported to the port of delivery, upon compliance with sections 2825 to 2831, inclusive. R. S. §§ 2822, 2823, made similar provisions for the entry of merchandise intended for certain ports of delivery upon the Mississippi River and its tributaries. R. S. § 2824, making a similar provision, was repealed by Act March 3, 1897, c. 389, § 16, 29 Stat. 691. R. S. §§ 2825–2831, regulated the entry and transportation of merchandise destined for the ports of delivery named in sections 2816 to 2824, inclusive.

These sections and amendments thereof by Act Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, § 1, 19 Stat. 246, 247, and Act June 16, 1880, c. 239, 21 Stat. 283, extending the provisions of R. S. § 2822, were superseded by the establishment of certain customs districts with district headquarters and ports of entry and the abolition of all ports of delivery not "specifically mentioned as ports of entry," by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327. By section 9 of said Plan of Reorganization the Secretary of the Treasury might cause to be stationed at places in the various collection districts, though not named as ports of entry, officers of the customs with authority to enter and clear vessels, to accept entries of merchandise, to collect duties, and to enforce the customs and navigation laws.

Immediate transportation in bond, without appraisement, of merchandise imported at certain ports, consigned to certain other ports from the port of arrival to the port of destination, was provided for and regulated by R. S. §§ 2990–2997. These sections were repealed, and other provisions for the same purpose substituted therefor, by Act June 10, 1880, c. 190, set forth, with later provisions relating to the subject, post under chapter 7A of this Title, "Immediate Transportation in Bond to Inland Ports."

§ 5514. (R. S. § 2832.) Vessels bound for Natchez and Vicksburg.

All vessels proceeding to the ports of Natchez or Vicksburgh from any foreign port shall stop and report their arrival at the port of New Orleans; and before any such vessel shall proceed on her voyage to Natchez or Vicksburgh the collector for the district of New Orleans shall order on board any such vessel a custom-house officer, who shall remain on board such vessel until her arrival at Natchez or Vicksburgh. Such custom-house officer shall take possession of and safely keep all the papers belonging to such vessel having relation to the freight or cargo on board, which papers he shall deliver to the collector at Natchez or Vicksburgh immediately after his arrival at that port; and any such vessel, which shall depart from New Orleans without such custom-house officer on board, shall be subject to all the pains and penalties provided for by law for a violation of the revenue laws.

Act June 30, 1834, c. 135, § 2, 4 Stat. 715. Act July 7, 1838, c. 175, 5 Stat. 287.

The ports of Natchez and Vicksburg were abolished by establishment of the customs district of New Orleans, to include that part of the State of Mississippi, by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

§ 5515. (R. S. § 2833.) Expenses of officer sent with vessel.

The expenses of the custom-house officer who may be put on board any such vessel bound for Natchez or Vicksburgh at New Orleans, from the time of his being put on board until his return to New Orleans, shall be paid by the owner of such vessel.

§ 5516. (R. S. § 2834, as amended, Act March 3, 1897, c. 389, § 15.) Inspector to accompany vessel to destination.

Collectors and surveyors, respectively, may, whenever they judge it to be necessary for the security of the revenue, put an inspector of the customs on board any vessel, to accompany the same until her arrival at the first port of entry or delivery, in the district to which such vessel may be destined. If the master of any vessel shall neglect or omit to deposit a manifest as herein prescribed, or shall refuse to receive an inspector of the customs on board, as the case requires, he shall forfeit and pay five hundred dollars, to be recovered with cost of suit, one-half for the use of the officer with whom such manifest ought to have been deposited, and the other half to the use of the collector of the district to which such vessel may be bound. If, however, the manifest shall, in either of the above cases, have been previously delivered to any officer of the customs, pursuant to the provisions hereinafter made in that behalf, the depositing of a manifest shall not be necessary.

Act March 2, 1799, c. 22, § 19, 1 Stat. 641. Act March 3, 1897, c. 389, § 15, 29 Stat. 691.

This section, as enacted in the Revised Statutes, was as follows:

"The master of any vessel bound to any district in Connecticut, through or by the way of Sandy Hook, shall, before he passes the port of New York, and immediately after his arrival, deposit with the collector for the district of New York a true manifest of the cargo on board such vessel. The master of any vessel bound to the district of Burlington shall, before he passes the port of Philadelphia, and immediately after his arrival, deposit with the collector thereof a like manifest; and the collector shall, after registering the manifest, transmit the same, duly certified to have been so deposited, to the officer with whom the entries are to be made; and the," continuing to the end of the section as set forth here.

It was amended by repealing the words quoted above by Act March 3, 1897, c. 389, last cited above.

See note to R. S. § 2770, ante, § 5466, as to abolition of parts of delivery.

(R. S. § 2835. Repealed.)

This section prescribed the duties of masters of vessels bound up James River, Va., in regard to deposit of manifests, etc. It was repealed by Act March 3, 1897, c. 389, § 16, 29 Stat. 691.

§ 5517. (R. S. § 2836.) Duties of master bound for Petersburg or Richmond.

The master of any vessel arriving within the districts of Petersburgh or Richmond, laden with merchandise, belonging or consigned to persons resident within both the districts, shall make entry of such vessel, in manner already prescribed by law, with the collector of that district wherein the owner or consignee, or the husband or acting manager of such vessel, shall actually reside; and the master shall, at the time of making the entry, deliver a duplicate manifest of the cargo to the collector, whose duty it shall then be to certify the same as a true copy, and to transmit it to the collector of the other district, and the delivery of such merchandise shall be authorized by permits from the collector of each district, respectively, in which the same has been duly entered according to law. No importer, owner, or consignee of merchandise, residing in either district, shall, however, be admitted to make an entry of such merchandise with the collector of the district in which such importer, owner, or consignee does not reside. All entries, moreover, for merchandise, made by agents, for persons residing in other districts, shall be made with the collector of the district in which such vessel may discharge.

Act March 3, 1801, c. 25, 2 Stat. 116.

The districts of Petersburg and Richmond were abolished by the establishment of the district of Virginia by the Plan of Reorganization of the Customs Service pursuant to the provisions of Act Aug. 24, 1912, c. 355, § 1, ante, § 5327.

§ 5518. (R. S. § 2837.) What weights and measures used in invoices.

All invoices shall be made out in the weights or measures of the country or place from which the importation is made, and shall contain a true statement of the actual weights or measures of such merchandise, without any respect to the weights or measures of the United States.

Act June 30, 1864, c. 171, § 27, 13 Stat. 217.

Concealment or destruction of any invoice, book, or paper relating to merchandise liable to duty was punishable by R. S. § 5443, incorporated into the Criminal Code as section 64 thereof, post, § 10232, and repealed by section 341 thereof, post, § 10515.

Making a false invoice, etc., or a false entry of goods, etc., was punishable R. S. § 2865, post, § 5548, and by the Customs Administrative Act of June , 1890, c. 407, §§ 6, 9, 26 Stat. 134, 135, re-enacted by the Payne-Aldrich riff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 95, 97, amended by the Under-ood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, G, post, § 5524. False entry s also punishable by R. S. § 5445, incorporated into section 69 of the Crim-al Code, post, § 10237, and repealed by section 341 thereof, post, § 10515; d forfeiture of the merchandise therefor was imposed by the Customs Ad-nistrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, § 9, 26 Stat. 135, amended by the yne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 97, and further nended by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, H, post, § 26.

Other provisions for invoices, declarations accompanying them, etc., were ade by the Customs Administrative Act, amended by the Payne-Aldrich Tar- Act, and further amended by the Underwood Tariff Act, § III, C–F, W, st, §§ 5520–5523, 5529.

Forbes v. Gracey (1876) 94 U. S. 762, 763, 24 L. Ed. 313.

(R. S. § 2838. Repealed.)

This section required invoices of merchandise subject to duty ad valorem to made out in the currency of the place or country from which the importation as made, and to contain a true statement of the actual cost of such mer-andise in such foreign currency. It was repealed by the Customs Adminis-ative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, § 29, 26 Stat. 141. Provisions of a similar ature, applicable to all invoices, were made by section 2 of that act, amended the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 91, and rther amended by the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, C, st, § 5520.

(R. S. § 2839. Repealed.)

This section provided for forfeiture of merchandise entered, but not invoiced cording to the actual cost at the place of exportation, with the design to ade payment of duty. It was repealed by the Customs Administrative Act of une 10, 1890, c. 407, § 29, 26 Stat. 141, and provisions of a similar nature ere made by section 9 of that act, amended by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 97, and further amended by the Under-ood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, H, post, § 5526.

19. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, B.) Merchandise deemed property of consignee.

All merchandise imported into the United States shall, for the ose of this Act, be deemed and held to be the property of the on to whom the same is consigned; and the holder of a bill ding duly indorsed by the consignee therein named, or, if con-ed to order, by the consignor, shall be deemed the consignee eof; and in case of the abandonment of any merchandise to the rwriters the latter may be recognized as the consignee. (38 181.)

This paragraph and the five paragraphs next following, were subdivisions section III of the Underwood Tariff Act of 1913, cited above. Said section II, by subdivision A thereof, amended the Customs Administrative Act of une 10, 1890, c. 407, 26 Stat. 131, as previously amended, to read as set orth in said section III, subdivisions B–CC. By such amendment and re-nactment, said Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, and the amend-ents thereof by Act July 24, 1897, c. 11, § 32, 30 Stat. 211, Act May 17, 898, c. 341, 30 Stat. 417, Act Dec. 15, 1902, c. 1, 32 Stat. 753, Act May 27, 908, c. 205, 35 Stat. 403, and the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 91, were superseded, except the provisions thereof mentioned a proviso of section IV, S, of this act, set forth ante, § 5316.

Said Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, as originally enacted and amended previous to the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act, consisted of thirty sec-ons, of which section 30 prescribed the time when the act should go into ef-ct. Of the preceding twenty-nine sections of the original act, section 15 pro-iding for review by the courts of decisions of the Board of General Apprais-rs, was omitted from the act as further amended by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff ct, and the remaining twenty-eight sections were amended thereby, constitut-g sections 1–28 thereof. A new section, designated as section 29, was added y the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act, which created a Court of Customs Appeals nd prescribed its jurisdiction and powers, proceedings, etc. Its provisions were incorporated in and superseded by chapter 8 of the Judicial Code c March 3, 1911, set forth ante, §§ 1179–1190. Another new section, designate as section 30, was also added by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act, which provide for the appointment of an Assistant Attorney-General, a Deputy Assistan Attorney-General, and attorneys, in charge of matters of reappraisment, etc of imported goods and litigation incident thereto. Said section 30 is set fort ante, § 519.

The provisions of the Customs Administrative Act as amended by Act Jul 24, 1897, c. 11, were made applicable to all articles coming into the Unite States from the Philippine Archipelago, by Act March 8, 1902, c. 140, § 8 set forth post, § 5534.

Besides the provisions of this paragraph those of section III, C–J, W, Z–CC all of which relate to the entry of merchandise, are set forth in this chapte post, §§ 5520–5524, 5526–5533. The provisions of section III, K–U, V X, which relate to the appraisal of goods, are set forth under chapter 6 of thi Title, post, §§ 5591, 5592, 5594–5602. The provisions of section III, S, whic relate to withdrawal of goods from bonded warehouse, are set forth under chap ter 7 of this Title, post, § 5656. The provisions of section III, Y, which re late to payment of duties, are set forth under chapter 8 of this Title, post, 5718. The provisions of section III, T, which relate to the enforcement of cus toms laws, are set forth under chapter 10 of this Title, post, § 5791.

This provision, originally enacted in the Customs Administrative Act of Jun 10, 1890, c. 407, § 1, 26 Stat. 131, was substantially re-enacted as a provisio of the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 91, whic was re-enacted in the same language by this act.

Similar provisions made by R. S. § 3058, as amended by Act Feb. 23, 1887, c 221, post, § 5760, were superseded by this section; but further provisions add ed to R. S. § 3058, by said amendment, in respect to merchandise abandoned t underwriters or salvors, were not repealed by the Customs Administrative Ac of June 10, 1890, by a proviso annexed to section 29 of the act which was re enacted by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat 104.

Ownership of goods.—See § 5760, post.

Where merchandise is consigned to customs brokers for another, who is the owner, the brokers, having presented the invoice, made the entry, and received the goods, are liable for additional duties assessed because of undervaluation. Gray v. U. S. (1902) 113 Fed. 213, 51 C. C. A. 170 (affirming judgment U. S. v. Gray [D. C. 1901] 107 Fed. 104, and writ of certiorari denied Gray v. U. S. [1902] 22 Sup. Ct. 939, 184 U. S. 700, 46 L. Ed. 765); Baldwin v. U. S. (1902) 113 Fed. 217, 51 C. C. A. 174 (affirming judgment U. S. v. Baldwin [D. C. 1901] 107 Fed. 104, and writ of certiorari denied Baldwin v. U. S. [1902] 22 Sup. Ct. 939, 184 U. S. 700, 46 L. Ed. 765).

Where a railroad company whose line extended across the boundary between Mexico and the United States, pursuant to authority of its directors, appointed two agents to receive and enter at a customs port of the United States all goods imported by or consigned to the company, and one of such agents made the declaration on a consular invoice of goods as agent of the railroad company, and the other as consignee made the entry, paid the duty with money of the company, and received the goods, the company may be held as importer or consignee for an additional duty assessed on a reliquidation, and it was error to direct a verdict for the company. U. S. v. Mexican International R. Co. (1907) 151 Fed. 545, 81 C. C. A. 61.

This section does not prohibit the consignment of imported goods to an other than the real owner. Burke v Davis (C. C. 1894) 63 Fed. 456.

This section was intended to preven frauds upon the government arisin from collusive transfers, and confer no right upon a mere consignee t make a declaration as "owner" unde section 5523, post, but he must mak the declaration as consignee, and i the declaration must state truly th name of the owner. U. S. v. Fawcet (C. C. 1897) 86 Fed. 900.

Where a consignee of goods, as appeared from the ship's sworn manifes and from a certified invoice, paid th duty and received the goods from th collector, the latter was not liable t a transferee of the bill of lading, holding the same as collateral for a draf drawn on the consignees for the pric of the goods, which they refused t pay on presentation. Derobert v. Stranahan (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 581.

A customhouse broker, who make the sworn declaration for entry o goods, in which he declares himsel the consignee, cannot thereafter den that he is such as against the government, and becomes liable for the duties under the provision that "all merchandise imported * * * shall * * * be deemed and held to be the property of the person to whom the merchandise may be consigned," including additional duties imposed for undervaluation under § 5527, post. U. S. v. Vandiver (D. C. 1904) 133 Fed. 252.

This section, although providing that the holder of the bill of lading "shall be deemed the consignee," and that ts shall be "held to be the prop- of the consignee, does not pre- the government from going be- the bill of lading to show true rship, for the purpose of deter- g forfeitability. U. S. v. One of Crushed Wheat (D. C. 1908) Fed. 562.

sent of consignees to shipment.— in merchants ordered for impor- a quantity of merchandise of a not subject to duty. In response e order a shipment was consigned em of an article of a different cter, which was subject to a high of duty, and which they refused cept or to make themselves re- ible for in any way. Held, that was no colorable authority for hipment of the merchandise, and the consignees should not be con- d as having "imported" the mer- ise within this section. U. S. v. ll (1904) 129 Fed. 909, 64 C. C. 41, affirming judgment U. S. v. ll Bros. (D. C. 1903) 122 Fed.

endants ordered a consignment of by sample, which consisted whol- cotton from a foreign manufac- turer, which waste was entitled to free entry. The manufacturer shipped waste to fill the order consigned to defendant through certain persons, who were not defendant's agents, at Suspension Bridge, which bill was indorsed to be delivered to N. When the goods arrived, N. declared, without authority, that the goods belonged to defendants, and entered them for consumption. On examination it was found that the waste was cotton and woolen mixed, and was therefore taxable for duty at 10 cents a pound. Defendants, on notification, refused to accept the waste under the contract, and it was sold for duty, resulting in a large deficiency. Held, that defendants were not liable for such deficiency. Id.

Where merchandise is shipped to parties in the United States, which is of a different character from that ordered, it is a consignment made without the consent of the consignees, within the meaning of article 1231, Customs Regulations 1899, prescribing that, when the proceeds from the sale of unclaimed merchandise are not sufficient to pay the duties and other charges thereon, "the consignees are liable for such duties, unless it be shown that the consignment was made without their consent." Id.

Where merchandise is shipped to parties in the United States without their authority, they are under no obligation, in order to free themselves from liability for duty, to make entry of the merchandise or to take possession of it for any purpose. Id.

20. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, C.) Invoices; requisites. All invoices of imported merchandise shall be made out in currency of the place or country from whence the importations be made, or, if purchased, or agreed to be purchased, in the ency actually paid, agreed upon, or to be paid therefor, shall ain a correct, complete, and detailed description of such mer- dise and of the packages, wrappings, or other coverings con- ng it, and shall be made in triplicate or in quadruplicate in of merchandise intended for immediate transportation with- appraisement, and signed by the person owning or shipping the e, if the merchandise has been actually purchased, or price ed upon, fixed, or determined, or by the manufacturer or owner eof, if the same has been procured otherwise than by purchase, greement of purchase, or by the duly authorized agent of such haser, seller, manufacturer, or owner. (38 Stat. 181.)

See notes to subdivision B of this section, ante, § 5519.

This provision, as originally enacted in the Customs Administrative Act of une 10, 1890, c. 407, § 2, 26 Stat. 131, was amended by the substitution of e words "correct, complete, and detailed description of such merchandise, and ll the packages, wrappings or other coverings containing it," in lieu of the ords "correct description of such merchandise," by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff ct of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 91, which was further amended by the ddition of the words "or agreed to be purchased" after the words "or if pur- hased," with changes in the wording to conform to such addition, making the rovision read as set forth here, by this act.

Invoices of leaf tobacco specifying in detail the character of such tobacco, hether wrapper or filler, its origin and quantity, were required by a provision paragraph 182, "Schedule F," of section I of this act, ante, § 5291, par. 182. Similar provisions were made by R. S. §§ 2838, 2853, both of which sections were repealed by section 29 of the Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, 26 Stat. 141.

The values of foreign coin, as estimated pursuant to Act Aug. 27, 1894, c. 349, § 25, post, § 6536, were required, by a provision of that section, to be followed in estimating the value of foreign merchandise exported to the United States.

Invoices were required to be made out in the weights or measures of the place or country from which the importation is made, by R. S. § 2837, ante, § 5518.

Declarations to be indorsed on the invoices produced to the consular officer were provided for by section III, D, of this act, post, § 5521.

Entry of merchandise without invoice was provided for by section III, E, of this act, post, § 5522.

Previous provisions requiring invoices of merchandise intended for immediate transportation without appraisement to be in quadruplicate were made by Act June 10, 1880, c. 190, § 4, post, § 5542.

Countries "where there is no consul" were excepted from provisions relating to invoices by R. S. § 2859, post, § 5544.

Notes of Decisions

Construction in general.—See § 6536, post, as to ascertaining value of foreign coins.

The provisions of this section and Act Oct. 1, 1890, c. 1244, § 52 (post, § 6536), being substantially re-enactments of former laws, must be interpreted in the light of the decisions, construing those former laws and the estimate of the director of the mint as proclaimed by the Secretary of the Treasury must be held conclusive, both upon the government and the importer as under the former statutes. U. S. v. Klingenberg (1894) 14 Sup. Ct. 790, 792, 153 U. S. 93, 38 L. Ed. 647.

Currency in which invoices made out.—The value of foreign coins, as ascertained by the estimate of the director of the mint, and proclaimed by the secretary of the treasury, is conclusive upon customhouse officers and importers. Hadden v. Merritt (1885) 5 Sup. Ct. 1169, 115 U. S. 25, 29 L. Ed. 333.

An importer in giving the invoice value of his merchandise stated it in dollars, instead of rupees, having mistaken the rupee abbreviation for the dollar mark. Held, that this constituted a clerical mistake. U. S. v. Muller, Maclean & Co. (1907) 158 Fed. 405, 85 C. C. A. 515.

A written contract entered into at San Francisco, in the state of California, for the sale of goods to arrive from Calcutta, contained this clause: "Any change in duties to be for or against purchasers." The rate of duty on the bags constituting the subject-matter of the contract has not been changed since the contract was made. The amount of duty actually paid was, however, considerably less than the amount which it would have been necessary to pay on the same goods if they had been entered at the time when the contract was made, owing to a change, meanwhile, in the estimated value of the rupee, in which currency, the invoice of such merchandise was required to be made out. In an action by the purchaser of the goods to recover the amount of this difference, held, the parties, by the words "change of duties," intended a change in the rate of duty by authority of congress, not a difference in the amount of duty merely. Detrick v. Balfour (C. C. 1881) 8 Fed. 468.

Where goods are invoiced in the legal currency of the country of exportation, and also in another foreign currency, which gives a higher value in United States money, the valuation must be taken according to the legal currency of the country of exportation. U. S. v. Klingenberg (C. C. 1896) 77 Fed. 279.

When the value of imported merchandise is stated in the invoice in a foreign currency, the value of such currency at the time of exportation from the foreign country fixes the valuation in United States currency. U. S. v. Knauth (C. C. 1896) 77 Fed. 599.

The statement of the values of foreign coins, contained in a proclamation by the secretary of the treasury, is conclusive upon the customs officials in reducing to United States currency a valuation of imported merchandise. Id.

A proclamation of the secretary of the treasury stated the value of the florin of Austria-Hungary to be $0.482, according to the gold standard, $0.32 according to the silver standard, with silver the nominal standard, paper the actual standard, its depreciation measured by the gold standard. Held, that a valuation of imported merchandise in florins must be reduced to United States currency on the basis of the gold standard. Id.

Any money which is in common use as a medium of purchase and sale, though not of the coinage of the country, is a currency of the country within Act March 3, 1801. U. S. v. Dry Ox and Cow Hides (D. C. 1865) Fed. Cas. No. 14,995.

Duress.—Importers so changed the form of invoicing as to increase the amount of duty payable, this being done to comply with a rule which had been established by the Board of General aisers, but which the courts subntly held illegal. Held, that as ction of the importers had been ut protest and the customs offihad not raised or changed the ins, nor directed or requested that done, there had been no legal ulsion or duress. Gulbenkian v. (C. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 860, judgaffirmed (1911) 186 Fed. 133, 108 A. 245.

importers were embarrassed in g the actual market value of their handise, but they elected to enter voolens and cottons with the adis of a penny a yard for dampage 10 per cent. for shrinking. A no- that this was done under duress not make a case of duress. No rful demand was made on the imrs, and what they did was done and voluntarily to fix the en- value of the goods. Van Ingen v. U. S. (1913) 4 Ct. Cust. App.

importers had been warned that entered value of their brierwood lower than that of other impor- and that unless the value was ad- d penalties for undervaluation l be exacted. The importers were by this warning required to do nothing more than the law itself obliged; they were subjected to no unlawful demand and consequently to no duress. Colonial Import & Export Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 137.

The importer may, in view of possible subsequent proceedings, register with his entry his claim as to the true valuation, and for the collector to refuse this privilege might be duress. But to constitute duress the proof must show a substantial right had been denied. Batten & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 447.

The importers were constrained to include the commissions in dispute in the entered value of the merchandise; otherwise their entries would not have been received, but simply returned to them. This constituted duress. Vandiver v. U. S. (1915) 6 Ct. Cust. App. 80.

21. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, D.) Invoices to be produced to consular officer; declaration to be indorsed thereon.

. All such invoices shall, at or before the shipment of the merdise, be produced to the consular officer of the United States he consular district in which the merchandise was manufacd, or purchased, or contracted to be delivered from, or when hases or agreements for purchase are made in several places, he consular district where the merchandise is assembled for ment, as the case may be, for export to the United States, and l have indorsed thereon, when so produced, a declaration signed the purchaser, seller, manufacturer, owner, or agent, setting that the invoice is in all respects correct and true and was e at the place from which the merchandise is to be exported e United States; that it contains, if the merchandise was obed by purchase, or agreement for purchase, a true and full ement of the time when, the place where, the person from whom same was purchased, or agreed to be purchased, and the actual thereof, or price agreed upon, fixed, or determined, and of all ges thereon, as provided by this Act; and that no discounts, tes, or commissions are contained in the invoice but such as been actually allowed thereon, and that all drawbacks or boun- received or to be received are shown therein; and when obd in any other manner than by purchase, or agreement of pure, the actual market value or wholesale price thereof, at the of exportation to the United States, in the principal markets he country from whence exported; that such actual market e is the price at which the merchandise described in the invoice eely offered for sale to all purchasers in said markets, and that the price which the manufacturer or owner making the decion would have received, and was willing to receive, for such chandise sold in the ordinary course of trade in the usual whole- quantities, and that it includes all charges thereon as provided his Act, and the actual quantity thereof; and that no different ice of the merchandise mentioned in the invoice so produced has been or will be furnished to anyone. If the merchandise was actually purchased, or agreed to be purchased, the declaration shall also contain a statement that the currency in which such invoice is made out is that which was actually paid for the merchandise by the purchaser, or agreed to be paid, fixed, or determined. (38 Stat. 181.)

See notes to subdivision B of this section, ante, § 5519.

These provisions, as originally enacted in the Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, § 3, 26 Stat. 131, were amended by the substitution of the words "consular officer," in lieu of the words "consul, vice-consul or commercial agent," and the addition of the word "seller," after the words "signed by the purchaser," by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 91, which was further amended by the addition of the words "or contracted to be delivered from, or when purchases or agreements for purchases are made in the several places, in the consular district where the merchandise is assembled for shipment," after the words "consular district in which the merchandise was manufactured or purchased," with changes in the wording to conform to such addition, and by the substitution of the phrase "and that no discounts, rebates, or commissions are contained in the invoice but such as have been actually allowed thereon and that all drawbacks or bounties received or to be received are shown therein," in lieu of the phrase "and that no discounts, bounties, or drawbacks are contained in the invoice but such as have been actually allowed thereon," making the provisions read as set forth here, by this act.

A further provision relating to invoices of merchandise purchased or manufactured in different consular districts was made by subdivision W of this section, post, § 5529.

The words "value," "actual market value," and "wholesale price," were defined by subdivision R of this section, post, § 5599.

Provisions relating to the production of invoices to the consul or other officer, and the indorsement of declarations thereon, were made by R. S. § 2854, repealed by section 29 of the Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, 26 Stat. 141.

Provisions that merchandise subject to ad valorem duty, belonging to a person not residing at the time in the United States, actually purchased by him, or otherwise acquired, or belonging to the manufacturer, should not be admitted to entry unless the invoice should be verified by the oath of the owner, administered by a consul or other officer, were made by R. S. §§ 2843, 2845, repealed by said section 29.

A declaration to the consul, by the person producing the invoice, at the port in the United States at which it is intended to make entry of the merchandise, was required by R. S. § 2855, post, § 5541.

The certification of invoices by consuls or other officers, and their duties in regard thereto, were provided for by R. S. §§ 2855, 2861–2863, post, §§ 5541, 5545–5547.

Declarations to be filed with the collector on entry of merchandise were provided for by subdivision F of this section, post, § 5523.

The authentication of invoices in the absence of the consular officer was provided for by R. S. § 2844, as amended by Act June 28, 1906, c. 3569, post, § 5537.

Notes of Decisions

Production of invoice to consular officer.—An invoice executed in triplicate in due form must be produced at or before each shipment to the consul at the place of shipment. Shipments in trains are subject to the same rules as shipments by water. Locke v. U. S. (C. C. 1866) Fed. Cas. No. 8,442.

Free goods are not within the provisions of R. S. §§ 2854–2857, requiring an invoice with a certain prescribed declaration of the shipper, and a certificate of the consul at the port of shipment, or the prescribed bond, to be presented to the collector as a condition of entry of the goods. Siegfried v. Phelps (C. C. 1889) 40 Fed. 660, judgment reversed Phelps v. Siegfried (1892) 12 Sup. Ct. 391, 142 U. S. 602, 35 L. Ed. 1128.

The government is not bound by the acts of its consul in certifying to the correctness of an invoice, when based upon false and fraudulent statements. U. S. v. Sixteen Cases of Silk Ribbons (D. C. 1870) Fed. Cas. No. 16,301.

A certified consular invoice is required by law for the admission to entry of imported merchandise not subject to duty, excepting where congress has expressly dispensed with that requirement. (1889) 19 Op. Atty. Gen. 225.

The person making the declaration to an invoice of goods intended for shipment from a foreign country to the United States is not required to be actually present before the consul, vice consul, or commercial agent of the United States in order to authorize such consular officer to certify such invoice. (1897) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 571.

All that is necessary in order to au-

e such consular officer to certify voice produced, with the declara- ndorsed thereon signed, and with ath attached, is that he shall be ed that the person making the hereto is the person he represents f to be, that he is a credible per- and that the statements made such oath are true. Id.

The importer may enter his goods at their cash value in the foreign country, reduced to specie. Grant v. Maxwell (C. C. 1851) Fed. Cas. No. 5,699.

The cost of the raw materials is to be taken at the market price of such material at the time when the manufacture of the goods was completed. U. S. v. Sixteen Cases of Silk Ribbons (D. C. 1870) Fed. Cas. No. 16,301.

A memorandum slip attached to each invoice that showed the change the importer had wished to make in the valuation as entered is not such an entry as could be taken to comply with the statute. The importer was entitled to make upon the entry itself his protest against the addition by the collector of commissions paid as a part of the dutiable value. Stein v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 478.

The Treasury Department has no authority to insist that declarations upon goods obtained by purchase shall contain the further clause declaring that the prices in the invoice represent the actual foreign market value on the day of shipment, etc. (1899) 22 Op. Atty. Gen. 405.

Verification of invoice.—This section does not require the invoices to be verified. U. S. v. 646 Half-Boxes of Figs (D. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 778.

The question as to where and in what manner the oaths to the declarations indorsed on invoices shall be taken is more a matter of regulation or instruction for the government of consular officers than of construction of a statute. (1897) 21 Op. Atty. Gen. 571.

22. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, E.) Entry without invoice, upon affidavit and verified statement; books; bond for production of invoice.

Except in case of personal effects accompanying the passenger, nportation of any merchandise exceeding $100 in value shall be tted to entry without the production of a duly certified invoice eof as required by law, or of an affidavit made by the owner, rter, or consignee, before the collector or his deputy, showing it is impracticable to produce such invoice; and no entry shall ade in the absence of a certified invoice, upon affidavit as afore- unless such affidavit be accompanied by a statement in the form n invoice, or otherwise, showing the actual cost of such merchandise, if purchased, or if obtained otherwise than by purchase, the actual market value or wholesale price thereof at the time of exportation to the United States in the principal markets of the country from which the same has been imported, which statement shall be verified by the oath of the owner, importer, consignee, or agent desiring to make entry of the merchandise, to be administered by the collector or his deputy, and it shall be lawful for the collector or his deputy to examine the deponent under oath, touching the sources of his knowledge, information, or belief in the premises, and to require him to produce any letter, paper, or statement of account in his possession, or under his control, which may assist the officers of customs in ascertaining the actual value of the importation or any part thereof, and in default of such production, when so requested, such owner, importer, consignee, or agent shall be thereafter debarred from producing any such letter, paper, or statement for the purpose of avoiding any additional duty, penalty, or forfeiture incurred under this Act, unless he shall show to the satisfaction of the court or the officers of the customs, as the case may be, that it was not in his power to produce the same when so demanded; and no merchandise shall be admitted to entry under the provisions of this section unless the collector shall be satisfied that the failure to produce a duly certified invoice is due to causes beyond the control of the owner, consignee, or agent thereof: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may make regulations by which books, magazines, and other periodicals published and imported in successive parts, numbers, or volumes, and entitled to be imported free of duty, shall require but one declaration for the entire series. And when entry of merchandise exceeding $100 in value is made by a statement in the form of an invoice, the collector shall require a bond for the production of a duly certified invoice. (38 Stat. 182.)

See notes to subdivision B of this section, ante, § 5519.

These provisions, as originally enacted in the Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, § 4, 26 Stat. 131, were amended by striking out the word "dutiable" after the words "merchandise exceeding $100 in," by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 92, re-enacted in the same language by this act.

Provisions for bond by agent were also made by R. S. § 2787, ante, § 5484.

Provisions for production of invoice of goods of absent owner were made by R. S. § 2842, post, § 5536.

Provisions authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to admit merchandise to entry in certain cases without invoice were made by R. S. §§ 2847, 2848, but became inoperative by the repeal of preceding sections referred to therein, by the Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, § 29, 26 Stat. 141.

Personal effects accompanying the passenger were comprised in the "Free List" of the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § I, par. 642, ante, § 5291, par. 642.

Books, etc., and other publications entitled to be imported free of duty, were described in the free list of the Underwood Tariff Act, § I, pars. 424–428, ante, § 5291, pars. 424–428.

Notes of Decisions

Production of invoice.—This section applies only where there has been an actual, intentional entry of merchandise, and not where the entry has been concealed. U. S. v. 218½ Carats Loose Emeralds (D. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 643, judgment affirmed Two Hundred and Eighteen and One-Half Carats Loose Emeralds v. U. S. (1907) 154 Fed. 839, 83 C. C. A. 475.

The collector has no power to permit an entry of merchandise unaccompanied by an invoice, or a sufficient excuse for its absence. U. S. v. Thirty-Nine Thousand One Hundred and Fifty Cigars (D. C. 1866) Fed. Cas. No. 16,464.

The provision that "except in case of personal effects, no importation of any merchandise" shall be entered without invoice, is equivalent to an exception of articles not personal effects from the provision relative to the declaration of "baggage" in section 5496, ante. U. S. v. One Trunk (D. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 1012, decree affirmed (1912) 192 Fed. 913, 114 C. C. A. 353.

Value of single parcels post package, and not of entire number of packages arriving by same mail, held to determine necessity for customs entry. U. S. v.

een Packages of Dental Instru- (D. C. 1915) 222 Fed. 121.

forma invoice and bond.—The required to be given on the entry rchandise without a duly-certified e, is not intended to secure a pen- or a breach of duty, but only ac- amages. U. S. v. Cutajar (1895) d. 530, 14 C. C. A. 515.

ro forma invoice is for entry pur- a recognized lawful invoice made oath as a substitute for a regu- certified invoice; a penalty for valuation in such an invoice may icted and an entry on a pro forma e is such an entry as the language tion 5527, post, should and must to, namely, "the duty shall not, er, be assessed in any case upon ount less than the entered value." v. Bennett & Loewenthal (1911) Cust. App. 249.

iewing at length the history of egislation, the practice of the ury Department and the decisions e courts as well, no warrant is for the statement that an entry a pro forma invoice should be held until the certified invoice is pro- or the bond given for its produc- as been forfeited; nor is any au- y found for holding that liquida- s proper on an amount less than ntered value in case an entry is upon a pro forma invoice, no est clerical error or duress ap- g. Id.

pro forma invoice for purposes of takes the place of the certified invoice and is a complete substitute therefor; and so, the production and filing on some day later than the date of filing the pro forma invoice of papers required by regulations to be produced and "filed with the entry," is not a compliance with articles 570 and 571, Customs Regulations of 1908. McBride v. U. S. (1911) 1 Ct. Cust. App. 293, T. D. 31354; U. S. v. Frank & Lambert (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 239, T. D. 31973; U. S. v. Bennett & Loewenthal (1911) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 249, T. D. 31975; U. S. v. Rettig (1912) 2 Ct. Cust. App. 537.

The bond required of an importer entering his goods upon a pro forma invoice stipulates that duties are to be and will be paid upon the certified invoice valuation. In all cases the collector is empowered to reliquidate within one year, the customs regulations governing him in the exercise of this power. In this case authority for the reliquidation by the collector is found both in the law and the express stipulation of the importer's bond. U. S. v. Hobbs (1912) 3 Ct. Cust. App. 256.

23. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, F.) Declaration to accompany invoice on entry.

Whenever merchandise imported into the United States is en- by invoice, a declaration upon a form to be prescribed by the etary of the Treasury, according to the nature of the case, shall led with the collector of the port at the time of entry by the r, importer, consignee, or agent, which declaration so filed shall ly signed by the owner, importer, consignee, or agent before the ctor, or before a notary public or other officer duly authorized w to administer oaths and take acknowledgments, under regula- to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, if any of the invoices or bills of lading of any merchandise im- d in any one vessel which should otherwise be embraced in said have not been received at the date of the entry the declaration state the fact, and thereupon such merchandise, of which the ces or bills of lading are not produced, shall not be included in entry, but may be entered subsequently. That the Secretary of Treasury and the Secretary of Commerce are hereby authorized directed to establish from time to time for statistical purposes t or enumeration of articles in such detail as in their judgment be necessary comprehending all goods, wares, and merchandise rted into the United States, and that as a part of the declaration n provided there shall be either attached thereto or included in an accurate statement specifying, in the terms of the said led list or enumeration, the kinds and quantities of all merchan- imported, and the value of the total quantity of each kind of le, and it shall be the duty of the consular officer, to whom the invoice shall be produced, to require such information to be given. (3 Stat. 182.)

See notes to subdivision B of this section, ante, § 5519.

These provisions, as originally enacted in the Customs Administrative Ac of June 10, 1890, c. 407, § 5, 26 Stat. 132, prescribing various forms of decla rations, were amended by provisions prescribing different forms by the Payne Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 95, which was furthe amended by provisions requiring instead of the forms prescribed, "a declaratio upon a form to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury," and by th addition of the provision "that the Secretary of the Treasury and the Sec retary of Commerce are hereby authorized," etc., to the end of the paragraph making the provisions read as set forth here, by this act.

A declaration on entry of merchandise consigned for sale was provided fo by subdivision J of this section, post, § 5528.

Provisions requiring an oath on entry of merchandise by invoice, to be ad ministered by the collector, were made by R. S. § 2841, which was repeale by the Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, § 29, 26 Stat 141, amended by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 3 Stat. 104; and all oaths administered by officers of the customs, except a provided in the Customs Administrative Act, were abolished by section 2 thereof.

The provisions for abolition of oaths made by the Customs Administrativ Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, § 22, 26 Stat. 140, amended by the Payne-Aldrich Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 102, were superseded by a proviso an nexed to section IV, S, of the Underwood Tariff Act, set forth ante, § 5316 that nothing in the act should be construed to permit any oaths to be demanded except as provided.

Provisions for entry of separate packed packages of which no invoice has been received, were made by Act May 1, 1876, c. 89, §§ 1, 2, ante, §§ 5482, 5483.

Provisions relating to representatives of deceased or insolvent owners were made by R. S. § 2846, post, § 5538.

The collector's certification of the invoice was required by R. S. § 2852, post § 5540.

Notes of Decisions

Historical.—As to former laws governing appraisal of goods imported and entered by the manufacturer, see Belcher v. Lawrason (1858) 21 How. 251, 254, 16 L. Ed. 123.

Declaration in general.—Section 5519, ante, confers no right upon a mere consignee to make a declaration as "owner" under this section, but he must make the declaration as consignee, and in the declaration must state truly the name of the owner. U. S. v. Fawcett (C. C. 1897) 86 Fed. 900, 901.

Under section 5, Customs Administrative Act, the practice of having declarations signed in blank by an importer, to be filled in later by a customs broker, and the practice of notaries public in falsely certifying such declarations as having been made and sworn to in their presence, are illegal, and to be condemned in law as in morals. U. S. v. Cohn (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 615, judgment affirmed Browne v. U. S. (1905) 145 Fed. 1, 76 C. C. A. 31, writ of certiorari denied (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 755, 200 U. S. 618, 50 L. Ed. 623.

Under R. S. § 2841, an oath, by a person entering merchandise, that he does not know of or believe in the existence of any invoices or bills of lading other than those produced by him, does not constitute a false oath, although he knew of the existence of copies. U. S. v. Harrison (D. C. 1887) 32 Fed. 386.

On entering an importation of certain merchandise, the importer made "the declaration of owner in cases where merchandise has been actually purchas ed," which is set forth in section 5 Customs Administrative Act, but it lat er appeared that the importation wa made pursuant to an agreement unde which the importer might, after exam ination, retain and pay for, or return any part or all of the goods, and th importer admitted that he did not con sider himself the actual owner, bu made the entry as an accommodatio to the parties who caused the goods t be shipped to him. Held that, as h had full dominion over the property with the right to sell or otherwise dis pose of it without accountability to an one, he should be considered the "own er," and might properly make the dec laration aforesaid. U. S. v. Ninety Nine Diamonds (D. C. 1904) 132 Fed 579, judgment affirmed (1905) 139 Fed 961, 72 C. C. A. 9, 2 L. R. A. (N. S. 185, writ of certiorari denied (1906 26 Sup. Ct. 760, 201 U. S. 645, 50 L Ed. 903.

24. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, G.) Punishment for entry or introduction of goods by means of false invoice, etc.

If any consignor, seller, owner, importer, consignee, agent, or person or persons, shall enter or introduce, or attempt to enter troduce, into the commerce of the United States any imported handise by means of any fraudulent or false invoice, declara- affidavit, letter, paper, or by means of any false statement, writ- or verbal, or by means of any false or fraudulent practice or ance whatsoever, or shall make any false statement in the decla- ns provided for in paragraph F without reasonable cause to be- the truth of such statement, or shall aid or procure the making ny such false statement as to any matter material thereto with- reasonable cause to believe the truth of such statement, or shall uilty of any willful act or omission by means whereof the United es shall or may be deprived of the lawful duties, or any portion of, accruing upon the merchandise, or any portion thereof, em- ed or referred to in such invoice, declaration, affidavit, letter, paper, atement, or affected by such act or omission, such person or per- shall upon conviction be fined for each offense a sum not ex- ng $5,000, or be imprisoned for a time not exceeding two years, oth, in the discretion of the court: Provided, That nothing in this on shall be construed to relieve imported merchandise from for- re by reason of such false statement or for any cause elsewhere ided by law. (38 Stat. 183.)

See notes to subdivision B of this section, ante, § 5519.

These provisions were substituted for provisions of the same nature made by e Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, §§ 6, 9, 26 Stat. 134, 35, amended and re-enacted by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 95, 97.

Smuggling merchandise, or making or passing false invoice, was punishable y R. S. § 2865, post, § 5548.

Securing false entry of goods was punishable by R. S. § 5445, incorporated to the Criminal Code, in section 69 thereof, post, § 10237, and was repealed by ction 341 thereof, post, § 10515.

Forging customs entry certificates was punishable by R. S. § 5417, incorporat- l into the Criminal Code in section 63 thereof, post, § 10231, and repealed by ction 341 thereof, post, § 10515.

Penalty for false entry for benefit of drawback was provided for by R. S. § 050, post, § 5753.

Importing or bringing goods into the United States, contrary to law, or re- iving, buying, etc., such goods, after importation, was punishable by R. S. § 082, post, § 5785.

Construction.—The party who s an entry, using the term entry narrower sense, is the owner, ter, consignee, or agent.—U. S. escall (1909) 30 Sup. Ct. 19, 21, J. S. 26, 54 L. Ed. 77. reversing (C. 08) 164 Fed. 584, 587.

istruction of Act March 3, 1863, n relation to the fraudulent entry oods.—U. S. v. Ballard (D. C. Fed. Cas. No. 14,506.

False entry—In general.—Conceal- by agent consignee of imported goods of facts not proper to be included in the invoice, account, and bill of lading, but which would have excited the suspicion of a collector, is not a violation of Act 1909, making it a felony to state falsely in declaration of an agent consignee that nothing has been suppressed or concealed, whereby the United States may be defrauded of duties lawfully due. U. S. v. Salen (1914) 35 Sup. Ct. 51, 235 U. S. 237, 59 L. Ed. 210.

No offense is complete until the false declaration referred to is filed or offered to be filed with the collector when making or attempting to make entry of the goods. U. S. v. Fawcett (C. C. 1897) 86 Fed. 900.

The offense is committed by presenting an invoice containing false statements as to the weight of the merchandise, knowing that, under the practice of the office, such invoice would be used for the purpose of the first entry, and, if approved by the examiner, as the basis for the liquidation of the duties, and intending it to be so used; and it is immaterial whether or not a statement of such weight was required by law. U. S. v. Rosenthal (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 766, judgment affirmed Browne v. U. S. (1905) 145 Fed. 1, 76 C. C. A. 31, writ of certiorari denied (1906) 26 S. Ct. 755, 200 U. S. 618, 50 L. Ed. 623.

Entering goods by a false invoice is an illegal importation. U. S. v. Jordan (D. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 15,498.

Importer, making affidavit that nothing had been concealed or suppressed whereby the United States might be defrauded, held guilty of perjury if he had knowledge of any document which, if known, would have led the United States to fix the customs duties higher than those based on the values stated in the consular invoice. U. S. v. Salen (D. C. 1914) 216 Fed. 420.

Where the value in an entry is falsely stated or concealed, with a view to defraud the revenue, this would be an offense. (1878) 16 Op. Atty. Gen. 158.

3. —— Entry. — The word "entry" does not refer alone to the act of filing at the custom house the written paper known as an "entry," but embraces the entire transaction of passing the goods through the custom house, among the various steps of which would be the official returns of customs weighers. U. S. v. Mescall (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 580, judgment reversed (1909) 30 Sup. Ct. 19, 215 U. S. 26, 54 L. Ed. 77.

4. —— Intent.—The law punishes the attempt, not the intention, to defraud the revenue laws by false invoices. U. S. v. Riddle (1809) 9 U. S. (5 Cranch) 311, 3 L. Ed. 110.

An intent to defraud the United States is not an essential ingredient of the offense. U. S. v. Fawcett (C. C. 1897) 86 Fed. 900.

5. —— Loss of duties.—As the right to duties accrues by the importation of merchandise with an intent to unlade, and immediately upon the importation the duties become a personal charge and debt upon the importer, the United States is deprived of duties, within the provision for the punishment of any person "who shall be guilty of any willful act or omission by means whereof the United States shall be deprived of the lawful duties," etc., the moment it becomes entitled to them and they are withheld by the importer, and it is immaterial whether its officers retain the merchandise or not. U. S. v. Boyd (C. C. 1885) 24 Fed. 692, judgment reversed Boyd v. U. S. (1886) 6 Sup. Ct. 524, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. Ed. 746.

Loss of lawful duties is not a necessary element of the crime of making a fraudulent entry of merchandise. U. S. v. Cutajar (C. C. 1894) 60 Fed. 744, appeal dismissed Cutajar v. U. S. (1897) 17 Sup. Ct. 993, 41 L. Ed. 1185.

6. Limitations.—A prosecution under R. S. § 5445, post, § 10237, for effecting an entry of goods at the custom house by means of a fraudulent invoice of them and a false classification as to their quality and value, is a prosecution of an offense arising under the revenue laws, within the meaning of R. S. § 1046, ante, § 1710, and such prosecution is not barred where an indictment is found within five years, next after the committing of the offense. U. S. v. Hirsh (1879) 100 U. S. 33, 25 L. Ed. 539.

7. Indictment—Sufficiency.—An indictment charging a customs examiner with knowingly passing invoices containing false statements as to the weight of imported merchandise will not be held insufficient on the theory that the law provides that weighing is to be done by officers known as weighers, and that therefore the examiner could not legally pass the invoices. Browne v. U. S. (1905) 145 Fed. 1, 76 C. C. A. 31, affirming judgments U. S. v. Rosenthal (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 766, and Same v. Cohn (C. C. 1904) 128 Fed. 615, and writ of certiorari denied (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 755, 200 U. S. 618, 50 L. Ed. 623.

An indictment considered, and held to charge the offense of conspiracy to commit an offense under Customs Administrative Act, § 9. Heike v. U. S. (1911) 192 Fed. 83, 112 C. C. In an indictment an averment that the defendant "willfully declared that he was the owner of the goods, whereas in fact he was not the owner, as he then and there well knew," is sufficient upon demurrer. U. S. v. Fawcett (C. C. 1897) 86 Fed. 900.

An indictment charging that persons, intending to defraud the customs revenue, used a false invoice, that in its nature would tend to effect the fraud, sufficiently charges that they knew the false nature of such invoice, and its capacity for effecting the fraud. U. S. v. Rosenthal (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 766, judgment affirmed Browne v. U. S. (1905) 145 Fed. 1, 76 C. C. A. 31, and writ of certiorari denied (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 755, 200 U. S. 618, 50 L. Ed. 623.

It is not necessary to aver that the United States was in fact deprived of duties by the acts of defendants. Id.

In an indictment in a federal court it is not necessary to allege the tenor of an instrument unless it touches the very pith of the crime itself, as in forgery, or counterfeiting. An indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States by obtaining the entry of im-merchandise without payment legal duty thereon need not allege nor of an instrument by means ich, as charged, it was intended omplish the fraudulent entry. U. Grunberg (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed.

llegation of conspiracy to defraud overnment of customs duties is ently made in an indictment that conspiracy with respect to mer- se to be imported into the Unit- tes without invoicing or entering me and without paying the duties and there accruing thereon. U. White (C. C. 1909) 171 Fed. 775.

e § 5665, post, providing that any or importer of merchandise on the duties have not been paid on satisfactory security and obtain- permit may re-export the same t the payment of duty under in- on of the proper officers, not only nplates that the goods be deposit- ship within the time limited after removal, but also requires that ipment shall be under the con- inspection of the customs offi- and Act 1890 makes it a crime y owner or importer to make or pt to make any entry of goods ut payment of duty, and one con- ates a crime who means to de- conceal, or withdraw goods re- from a warehouse for exporta- and to introduce them uncondi- y into the country effecting a titious entry by which the duties become due instanter, an indict- charging a conspiracy to effect esult sufficiently charged a crime; here the defendant was charged aving withdrawn certain imported from the warehouse for expor- upon bond and permit, all on ry 15, 1902, and the indictment alleged that the goods were not ted "then and there," but were eld and concealed with the knowl- f the defendants, the goods would garded as "entered," and the du- herefrom due when the owners truckmen to whom the custody ntrusted disregarded the limita- put on them and introduced the into the unrestricted commerce country, though the time within the goods might be properly ex- had not arrived; hence the in- ent was not objectionable because not allege that defendants con- or withheld the goods, not only time of their removal, but for e period which was allowed to export them. U. S. v. Ehrgott (C. C. 1910) 182 Fed. 267.

8. —— Duplicity.—The offense of effecting an entry and of aiding in effecting an entry of imported goods at less than their true weight or measure, by means of false samples or representations, may be charged conjunctively in the same count of an indictment. U. S. v. Bettilini (C. C. 1871) Fed. Cas. No. 14,587.

An indictment for making a false entry of merchandise, is not double because it charges in a single count a false entry by a false and fraudulent affidavit, a false and fraudulent paper, and a false and fraudulent written statement, as the making of these are all acts connected with the same transaction. U. S. v. Cutajar (C. C. 1894) 60 Fed. 744, appeal dismissed Cutajar v. U. S. (1897) 17 Sup. Ct. 993, 41 L. Ed. 1185.

9. —— Specifying means used.—The acts necessary to effect an entry being prescribed by statute, an allegation that an entry was effected is a specific statement of what acts were done without a specific description of those acts. U. S. v. Moller (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 15,794; Same v. Ballard (D. C. 1871) Fed. Cas. No. 14,506.

An indictment charging defendant with effecting an entry of goods by fraudulent means must specify what fraudulent means were used; otherwise, it is bad.—U. S. v. Bettilini (C. C. 1871) Fed. Cas. No. 14,587.

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States of sums to become due to it as customs duties must allege, to some extent at least, the means intended to be used to defraud—as that it was by smuggling, or by forged or false invoices, or the like—although the details of the plan need not be set out, since they may not have been known to the grand jury or to the conspirators themselves. U. S. v. Grunberg (C. C. 1904) 131 Fed. 137.

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States by a false invoice is not vitiated by the particularity with which the overt act is set forth, if the conspiracy of itself be sufficient. U. S. v. Stamatopoulos (C. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 524.

10. —— Under prior statutes.—See U. S. v. Fawcett (C. C. 1897) 86 Fed. 900; Same v. Platt (D. C. 1840) Fed. Cas. No. 16,054a.

11. Evidence and presumptions.—A defendant, who was an examiner in the custom house, was charged with conspiracy with his codefendants to permit the entry of goods subject to an ad valorem duty at an undervaluation. It was shown that two cases of goods passed by him were throughout of much higher grade than shown by the invoices, and that each contained a number of inclosed packages, and on cross-examination that he examined only one package out of the two cases. Held, that evidence offered by him to show that it was his custom, with respect to the goods of all importers, to examine one package only of a case in which the goods were all of one kind, and that it was not unusual for him to pass two cases on examination of one, was properly excluded as immaterial on the question of his fraudulent intent, since under the facts shown the examination of the single package was sufficient to have shown the fraudulent character of the entry. Grunberg v. U. S. (1906) 145 Fed. 81, 76 C. C. A. 51.

On an issue as to the contents and value of certain cases of imported goods which defendants were charged with having secured the entry of at an undervaluation through a conspiracy, the testimony of a witness who assisted in the selection and packing of the goods by the foreign seller was not inadmissible, because he did not take part in nor witness all of the steps taken from the selection of the goods for shipment to the closing of the cases and their shipment, and consequently could not testify from his own knowledge to the ultimate fact; but his testimony is admissible, so far as it relates to pertinent facts within his knowledge, to be considered in connection with that of other witnesses and the established course of business in the establishment. Id.

Fraud will not be imputed to an importer in invoicing goods at the weight as given by the customary method of weighing, but the appraisers are not bound thereby. U. S. v. Nash (C. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 15,856.

On a prosecution for entering goods at a false valuation, evidence that other goods of the same kind were entered about the same time, at a higher valuation, is admissible. U. S. v. Merriam (D. C. 1871) Fed. Cas. No. 15,759.

12. Defenses.—It is immaterial whether government officers retain the merchandise or not, in a prosecution under this section. U. S. v. Boyd (C. C. 1885) 24 Fed. 692, judgment reversed Boyd v. U. S. (1886) 6 Sup. Ct. 524, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. Ed. 746.

It is no defense to an indictment under section 10,201, post, for conspiracy by defendants, who were importers, and an officer of the customs revenue service, to defraud the United States by effecting the entry of goods by payment of less than the legal duty, by means of false invoices to be approved by such officer, that if the practice prescribed by the statute had been followed the object of the alleged conspiracy could not have been accomplished, because such officer was not authorized to pass on the correctness of the invoices, where the indictment avers that he was charged with such duty by the practice prevailing at the port, and that defendants, by taking advantage of such practice, in fact accomplished the purpose of the conspiracy. In such case it is immaterial whether the practice was legal or illegal. U. S. v. Rosenthal (C. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 766, judgment affirmed Browne v. U. S. (1905) 145 Fed. 1, 76 C. C. A. 31, writ of certiorari denied (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 755, 200 U. S. 618, 50 L. Ed. 623.

While an importer cannot be subjected to a forfeiture or penalty unless the practice prescribed by statute has been followed in the customhouse, one charged criminally with having effected an entry of goods at less than the true weight, and by payment of less than the legal duty, by means of a false invoice, and by the bribing of the examiner to approve such invoice, cannot take advantage of the fact that the practice of submitting the matter to the examiner, instead of to a surveyor, was irregular and unauthorized, and that the examiner had no legal right, under the statute, to do the things in relation to which he was corruptly influenced. § 5525. (Act June 22, 1874, c. 391, § 13.) Seizure of merchandise as security for fines; release on bond.

Any merchandise entered by any person or persons violating any of the provisions of the preceding section, but not subject to forfeiture under the same section, may, while owned by him or them, or while in his or their possession, to double the amount claimed, be taken by the collector and held as security for the payment of any fine or fines incurred as aforesaid, or may be levied upon and sold on execution to satisfy any judgment recovered for such fine or fines. But nothing herein contained shall prevent any owner or claimant from obtaining a release of such merchandise on giving a bond, with sureties satisfactory to the collector, or, in case of judicial proceedings, satisfactory to the court, or the judge thereof, for the payment of any fine or fines so incurred: Provided, however, That such merchandise shall in no case be released all accrued duties thereon shall have been paid or secured. (18 188.)

This section was part of the Anti-Moiety Act of 1874, entitled "An act to mend the customs laws and to repeal moieties."

The preceding section of this act, referred to in this section, provided that ny owner, importer, or other person who should, with intent to defraud the evenue, make any entry of imported merchandise by means of false statements, ritten or verbal, whereby the United States should be deprived of lawful duies, should be fined and imprisoned, and the merchandise forfeited. It was epealed, and other provisions substituted therefor, by the Customs Adminisrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, § 29, 26 Stat. 141, re-enacted by the 'ayne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 104.

The collector was required to take possession of merchandise incorrectly inoiced, by R. S. § 2840, post, § 5535.

26. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, H.) Forfeiture for entry or introduction of goods by means of false invoice, etc.

. If any consignor, seller, owner, importer, consignee, agent, or r person or persons shall enter or introduce, or attempt to enter ntroduce, into the commerce of the United States any imported chandise by means of any fraudulent or false invoice, declaration, avit, letter, paper, or by means of any false statement, written erbal, or by means of any false or fraudulent practice or appli- whatsoever, or shall make any false statement in the declara- provided for in paragraph F without reasonable cause to believe truth of such statement, or shall aid or procure the making of such false statement as to any matter material thereto without onable cause to believe the truth of such statement, or shall be y of any willful act or omission by means whereof the United es shall or may be deprived of the lawful duties or any portion eof, accruing upon the merchandise or any portion thereof, emed or referred to in such invoice, declaration, affidavit, letter, r, or statement, or affected by such act or omission, such merdise, or the value thereof, to be recovered from such person or ons, shall be forfeited, which forfeiture shall only apply to the le of the merchandise or the value thereof in the case or package aining the particular article or articles of merchandise to which fraud or false paper or statement relates. That the arrival withe territorial limits of the United States of any merchandise coned for sale and remaining the property of the shipper or conor, and the acceptance of a false or fraudulent invoice thereof he consignee or the agent of the consignor, or the existence of other facts constituting an attempted fraud, shall be deemed, for purposes of this paragraph, to be an attempt to enter such merdise notwithstanding no actual entry has been made or offered. Stat. 183.)

See notes to subdivision B of this section, ante, § 5519.

These provisions were substituted for provisions of the same nature made by he Customs Administrative Act of June 10, 1890, c. 407, §§ 6, 9, 26 Stat. 134, 35, amended and re-enacted by the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of Aug. 5, 1909, . 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 95, 97.

These provisions superseded similar provisions made by R. S. § 2864.

Forfeiture for undervaluation was provided for by subdivision I of this sec- ion, post, § 5527.

Forfeiture of sea-stores was provided for by R. S. § 2797, as amended by ct March 3, 1897, c. 389, § 17, ante, § 5494.

Forfeiture of dutiable articles concealed in baggage was provided for by R. . § 2802, ante, § 5499.

Previous provisions for forfeiture for omissions in invoice were made by R. S. § 2901, post, § 5590.

Forfeiture for relanding goods entered for drawback was provided for by R. S. § 3049, post, § 5752.

The customs laws are revenue laws, and proceedings for forfeiture under them must be strictly construed. U. S. v. Eighty-Four Boxes of Sugar (1833) 32 U. S. (7 Pet.) 453, 8 L. Ed. 745; Same v. Fifty-Nine Demijohns Aguadiente and Four Barrels of Cigarettes (D. C. 1889) 39 Fed. 401, 402.

Revenue laws are not penal laws, in the sense which requires them to be construed with great strictness in favor of the defendant. They are remedial laws, rather. Taylor v. U. S. (1845) 3 How. 197, 204, 11 L. Ed. 559; Cliquot's Champagne (1865) 70 U. S. (3 Wall.) 114, 116, 145, 18 L. Ed. 116; Fennerstein's Champagne (1865) 3 Wall. 145, 147, 18 L. Ed. 121.

Act 1799 reaches cases whereby a false and fraudulent undervaluation, less than the amount of duties required by law, has been paid, as well as those where no duties at all have been paid. Taylor v. U. S. (1845) 44 U. S. (3 How.) 197, 11 L. Ed. 559.

Forfeiture may be enforced by proceedings in rem independently of the criminal prosecution. Origet v. U. S. (1888) 8 Sup. Ct. 846, 125 U. S. 240, 31 L. Ed. 743.

Laws imposing forfeitures for fraud are not technically penal, so as to call for a strict construction, but are to be construed so as effectually to accomplish the intention of their makers. U. S. v. Willetts (D. C. 1871) Fed. Cas. No. 16,699.

The provision relating to fraudulent or false invoices, statements, practices, or appliances, has application only when such means are employed in connection with goods the importation of which is not concealed. 2. Owner, consignee, agent, or other person.—The act of the agent or consignee is the act of the guilty principal. Cliquot's Champagne (1865) 3 Wall. 114, 116, 18 L. Ed. 116; Fennerstein's Champagne (1865) 3 Wall. 145, 147, 18 L. Ed. 121.

To enforce a forfeiture it is necessary that the acts made a ground of forfeiture shall be done by the owner, or some one for whom he is responsible, or under whom he derives title; and goods will not be forfeited which are unlawfully brought into this country by a mere trespasser, without the knowledge of the owner or his agent, and with intent to himself appropriate the money provided by the owner for the payment of the lawful duties. U. S. v. 1,150½ Pounds of Celluloid (1897) 82 Fed. 627, 27 C. C. A. 231.

A seller of goods, which were delivered to the purchaser, although having the right as against the purchaser, to rescind the sale and recover the goods, because they were obtained by means of fraudulent representations and with the intention on the part of the purchaser not to pay for the same, cannot assert such right against the right of the United States to forfeit the goods, where they were seized when the purchaser, while thus clothed with ownership and possession, was attempting to smuggle them into the country in violation of its customs laws. 581 Diamonds v. U. S. (1903) 119 Fed. 556, 56 C. C. A. 122, 60 L. R. A. 595.

A forfeiture is imposed only for fraud, misconduct, or negligence of the owner. He is not to suffer for the fraud, misconduct, or negligence of the revenue officers alone. Six Hundred and Fifty-One Chests of Tea v. U. S. (C. C. 1826) Fed. Cas. No. 12,916.

An employé in the customs service of the United States who makes and returns false weights in connection with an entry of imported merchandise is comprehended by the words "other person" in the provisions, § 1, for the forfeiture of goods or their value where "any owner, importer, consignee, agent, or other person" shall make an entry by means of false and fraudulent practices, or shall be guilty of any unlawful act or omission whereby the United States is deprived of the lawful duties,

4. —— Intent.—Although a mere intention to evade the payment of duties is not, in itself, a cause of forfeiture, yet, when a question arises whether an act has been committed which draws after it that consequence, such intention will justify the court in not putting on the conduct of the party, in respect to the act in question, an interpretation as favorable as, under other circumstances, it would be disposed to do. The Robert Edwards (1821) 19 U. S. (6 Wheat.) 187, 5 L. Ed. 238.

One who had the right of possession of, and a lien on, imported merchandise for the duties and transportation charges which he had paid, with the option to purchase any part of it at fixed prices, or to return it to the vendors, declared in good faith, in making an entry of the goods, that he was the owner, and his statement did not deprive the government of any lawful duties. Held not to constitute an offense as a false statement. U. S. v. Ninety-Nine Diamonds (1905) 139 Fed. 961, 72 C. C. A. 9, 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 185, affirming judgment (D. C. 1904) 132 Fed. 579, and writ of certiorari denied (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 760, 201 U. S. 645, 50 L. Ed. 903.

The word "false" means more than incorrect or erroneous and implies statements knowingly or negligently untrue. Id.

An importation of tobacco, a part consisting wholly of wrapper, a part of filler, and a part of wrapper and filler mixed, was invoiced and entered as "tobacco fillers." Filler tobacco was subject to a lower rate of duty than mixed tobacco or wrapper tobacco, under paragraphs 213–4, Tariff Act July 24, 1897, c. 11, § 1, Schedule F, 30 Stat. 169. Held that, in the absence of circumstances indicating a fraudulent intent on the part of the importers, the entry could not be considered to have been made "by means of a false or fraudulent invoice," by reason of which the tobacco should be forfeited. U. S. v. Seventy-Five Bales of Tobacco (1906) 147 Fed. 127, 77 C. C. A. 353.

The section was not intended to apply to errors of judgment, but to acts plainly indicating a wrongful intent to defraud the government; and a mere mistake in the description of imported merchandise, unaccompanied by acts from which an intent to defraud may be presumed, is insufficient to justify forfeiture under this section. Id.

There must be a guilty scienter and intent on the part of the forfeiter, and where entry was made on an invoice falsely made out by the foreign shipper, but there was an entire absence of fraudulent intent on the part of those concerned in making the entry, there could be no forfeiture, though the shipper had a financial interest in defrauding the revenue. U. S. v. One Silk Rug (1908) 158 Fed. 974, 86 C. C. A. 178.

The same guilty intent must be shown for the penalty of forfeiture as for conviction under § 5524, ante. Id.

Goods are not subject to forfeiture because the importer has attempted to enter them at a rate of duty less than that to which they are ultimately found to be liable, when there is in fact no false description of them with intent to defraud the revenue. U. S. v. Thirty-One Boxes and Packages of Imported Articles, etc. (D. C. 1833) Fed. Cas. No. 16,465a.

An intent to defraud will be imputed to manufacturers who invoice goods at the cost price under a misapprehension of the law, supposing themselves to be purchasers, where such invoicing tended to evade or defraud the revenue, though they in fact had no such intent. U. S. v. Five Casks of Files (D. C. 1840) Fed. Cas. No. 15,112.

Under earlier acts, see In re Twelve Hundred and Nine Quarter Casks, etc., of Wine (D. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 14,-279; U. S. v. Two Thousand One Hundred and Seventeen Bushels of Malt (D. C. 1881) 8 Fed. 224.

To authorize a recovery against a consignee of the value of goods fraudulently invoiced, where he is not the owner, but merely an agent to sell, knowledge on his part of the fraudulent undervaluation is necessary to establish the "actual intention to defraud." U. S. v. Newmark (D. C. 1876) Fed. Cas. No. 15,870.

An untrue description of the goods works a forfeiture, without reference to any fraud of the party making the entry. U. S. v. Nineteen Bales of Tobacco (D. C. 1898) 112 Fed. 779.

An invoice describing certain imported tobacco as "fillers," and to be sold as "fillers," when in fact it is "wrappers," is a false entry, warranting forfeiture, though the jury found the consignee and his agent, who made the entry, to be innocent of fraud. Id.

In order to incur a forfeiture it is necessary that the statement should be willfully and knowingly false, and without colorable support from the facts of the case. U. S. v. Ninety-Nine Diamonds (D. C. 1904) 132 Fed. 579, judgment affirmed (1905) 139 Fed. 961, 72 C. C. A. 9, 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 185, writ of certiorari denied (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 760, 201 U. S. 645, 50 L. Ed. 903.

Where merchandise is innocently entered by a person on an invoice fraudulently made out by the foreign shipper, it is not liable to forfeiture. U. S. v. Twenty Boxes of Cheese (D. C. 1908) 163 Fed. 369.

5. —— Entry in general.—The fraudulent undervaluation by foreign consignors in the foreign country of goods consigned to a person in New York constitutes, upon their arrival at the port of entry, an attempt to introduce them into the commerce of the United States, and when they are unloaded and placed in general order they are actually introduced into that commerce, although the owner might at any time within a year have withdrawn the goods and directed them to be forwarded to a foreign country without payment of duties. U. S. v. Twenty-Five Packages of Panama Hats (1913) 34 Sup. Ct. 63, 231 U. S. 358, 58 L. Ed. 267.

To subject goods to forfeiture for a false valuation in an invoice, it must have been produced at the customhouse for the purposes of an entry. U. S. v. Twenty-Eight Packages of Pins (D. C. 1833) Fed. Cas. No. 16,561.

While it is a condition to entry of merchandise that invoices should be carried before an American consul, this is not necessarily a part of the entry within the provision relating to illegal "entry." At the earliest entry does not begin till the owner, after the goods reach this country, begins that series of acts through which, by application to the customs officials, he gains possession. U. S. v. One Trunk (D. C. 1909) 171 Fed. 772, judgment affirmed (1911) 184 Fed. 317, 106 C. C. A. 459.

Imports intended for entry held subject to forfeiture for attempted fraud on the revenue, though not formally entered. U. S. v. Eighteen Packages of Dental Instruments (D. C. 1915) 222 Fed. 121.

6. —— Attempt to enter.—This section does not apply until an entry has been actually made or attempted, and goods in "general order" are not subject to forfeiture, if the consignee did not participate in the false invoice and had not entered the goods. U. S. v. Twenty-Five Packages of Panama Hats (1912) 195 Fed. 438, 115 C. C. A. 340.

Where goods are refused an entry for want of an invoice, they are forfeited if the owner attempts to procure an entry by any false and fraudulent practice or appliance whatever. U. S. v. Thirty-Nine Thousand One Hundred and Fifty Cigars (D. C. 1866) Fed. Cas. No. 16,464.

The making of a false affidavit of damage, with intent to defraud the revenue, is sufficient to incur the forfeiture. U. S. v. Six Hundred and Sixty-One Bales of Tobacco (D. C. 1878) Fed. Cas. No. 16,297.

An attempt to make an entry by means of any false or fraudulent invoice, affidavit, etc., with intent to defraud, completes the ground of forfeiture, though the fraudulent entry is not carried out. Id.

It is not essential that there should be a completed fraud upon the United States, but that it is enough if the act or attempt is of a character calculated to deprive the United States of duty. U. S. v. Sixty-Six Cases of Cheese (D. C. 1908) 163 Fed. 367.

If the falsification by itself, without further wrongful acts, could not, in regular course of procedure, pro- the result of depriving the Unit- States of lawful duties, forfeiture ot incurred, even though there have been wrongful intent. U. Twenty Boxes of Cheese (D. C.) 163 Fed. 369.

here a plan to smuggle is shown he manner of packing and invoic- imported merchandise is liable to eiture, though the invoice may been corrected before entry. U. One Bag of Crushed Wheat (D. 908) 166 Fed. 562.

ported goods are liable to for- re where the foreign shipper, the t of the merchandise, attempts to e entry by a false invoice and a declaration of shipment. Id.

importer swore to a false invoice e before an American consul, but importation presented at the cus- house an invoice to which was d sufficient to make the true val- Held, that the case was not with- he provision relating to any "at- pt to make any entry of imported chandise by means of any fraud- t or false invoice." The illegal nt was abandoned before any "at- pt" was made to enter the goods. S. v. One Trunk (D. C. 1909) 171 772, judgment affirmed (1911) Fed. 317, 106 C. C. A. 459.

here an importer took out a fraud- t invoice, but concluded not to it in making entry of the goods ered by the invoice, but used in- d a corrected invoice, the goods e not forfeitable on the ground of raudulent "attempt to enter" im- ted merchandise, under Customs ninistrative Act, § 9. U. S. v. One nk (D. C. 1909) 175 Fed. 1012, ee affirmed (1912) 192 Fed. 913, C. C. A. 353.

—— False entry.—The fact that e lace dresses in a package by nselves were found in a case of s and embroideries, but were not tioned in the invoice, does not by lf warrant the infliction of the alties for entering merchandise by ns of a false or fraudulent invoice. Lace House v. U. S. (1905) 141 869, 73 C. C. A. 103.

arriving at market value at port exportation, purchaser can only be uired to adopt methods usually pted by merchants in making pur- ses. Bartlett v. Kane (C. C. 1852) l. Cas. No. 1,077.

false valuation in an invoice of ds subject to ad valorem duty is price charged in the invoice less the fair and just buying and sell- prices at the time and place where invoice was made up. U. S. v. rteen Packages of Pins (D. C. 2) Fed. Cas. No. 15,151.

n attempt to enter anchors or bar as "anchor iron," parts of chain les as "links," and boat iron as "straight links," if done with attempt to evade the revenue law will subject them to forfeiture. U. S. v. Thirty-One Boxes, etc. (D. C. 1833) Fed. Cas. No. 16,465a.

Where the invoice by which an entry is made states the value in two kinds of foreign coin, there is no fraud justifying a forfeiture where the real value of the coin is underestimated, under the federal laws. U. S. v. Three Hundred and Twenty-Six Cases of Hosiery (D. C. 1861) Fed. Cas. No. 16,-507.

Where the invoice is made out in a currency other than that of the purchase with intention of taking advantage of a usage of the treasury officers, whereby less duties would be paid than those exacted if the currency actually used was stated, the invoice is falsely made up. U. S. v. Dry Ox and Cow Hides (D. C. 1865) Fed. Cas. No. 14,995.

Where the consignee of merchandise falsely described himself as owner, the merchandise was forfeitable. U. S. v. One Bag of Crushed Wheat (D. C. 1908) 166 Fed. 562.

Where value in entry is falsely stated or concealed, with view to defraud revenue, a forfeiture is incurred. (1878) 16 Op. Atty. Gen. 158.

8. —— Effect on revenue.—Under prior statutes, see Bollinger's Champagne (1865) 70 U. S. (3 Wall.) 560, 18 L. Ed. 78.

None of the acts denounced by the provision for the confiscation of goods because of the making of a false entry, constitute an offense thereunder, unless they deprive the United States of some of its lawful duties. U. S. v. Ninety-Nine Diamonds (1905) 139 Fed. 961, 72 C. C. A. 9, 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 185, affirming judgment (D. C. 1904) 132 Fed. 579, and writ of certiorari denied (1906) 26 Sup. Ct. 760, 201 U. S. 645, 50 L. Ed. 903.

The falsification must be such that, if consummated, it would deprive the government of lawful duties. U. S. v. Twenty Boxes of Cheese (D. C. 1908) 163 Fed. 369.

Forfeitures are not confined (except as to the general clause covering every "willful act or omission") to cases in which the United States has been actually deprived of lawful duties. (1893) 20 Op. Atty. Gen. 633.

9. —— Importing.—Cattle owned by a resident of Canada, and permitted to graze near the national boundary, and to roam at will into the United States, without any intent on the part of the owner to permit them to remain or to dispose of them in the United States, held not "imported" or permitted to be in the United States by the owner's willful act or omission, with intent to deprive the United States of duties, and were therefore not subject to forfeiture. U. S. v.

Eighty-Five Head of Cattle (D. C. 1913) 205 Fed. 679.

10. Effect of forfeiture or seizure.—In prosecution under § 5524, ante, for "a willful act or omission by means whereof the United States shall be deprived of the lawful duties," etc., it is immaterial whether government officers retain the merchandise or not. U. S. v. Boyd (C. C. 1885) 24 Fed. 692, judgment reversed Boyd v. U. S. (1886) 6 Sup. Ct. 524, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. Ed. 746.

Regular duties may be exacted on an importation of foreign goods, notwithstanding the goods have been seized and forfeited, and the whole of the proceeds from their sale applied to the use of the United States. (1902) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 1.

There is no authority for the practice of the treasury department to exact duties when forfeiture prevails only in those cases which arise under § 5527, post, and not in other customs revenue cases involving forfeiture. Id.

11. Bona fide lienors or purchasers.—Under statutory provision for the forfeiture of goods without an alternative of their value, title of the United States to the goods forfeited is not consummated until after judicial condemnation, but the right to them relates backward to the time the offense was committed, so as to avoid all intermediate sales of them between the commission of the offense and condemnation. But under a provision in which the forfeiture is the goods or their value, the United States have no title in the goods, until an election has been made either to recover the goods or their value, so that any rights in the goods acquired bona fide by third persons in the mean time are protected. Caldwell v. U. S. (1850) 8 How. 366, 379, 12 L. Ed. 1115.

Advances made in good faith, by auctioneers in possession, upon goods entered at a fraudulent undervaluation, before the government had elected to proceed for a forfeiture, or to sue for the value, are a lien upon the proceeds. U. S. v. Seventy-Eight Cases of Books (D. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 16,258b.

A bona fide purchaser of goods imported at a fraudulent valuation before the United States has elected its remedy will be protected. U. S. v. Fifty-Three Boxes of Havana Sugar (D. C. 1870) Fed. Cas. No. 15,098; Same v. Sundry Boxes of Havana Sugar, Id. 16,418.

The consignee of goods imported at a fraudulent valuation, who, having no knowledge of the fraud, made advances and incurred expenses in relation thereto, will be protected. U. S. v. Fifty-Three Boxes of Havana Sugar (D. C. 1870) Fed. Cas. No. 15,098.

Under prior statutes, see U. S. v. Four Cases of Lastings (D. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 15,145; Same v. Certain Diamonds (D. C. 1887) 30 Fed. 364.

The forfeiture does not extend to the interest of bona fide lienors without notice of the fraud, and where freight is earned before the government makes its election whether to declare the merchandise forfeited or to recover its value, and the former proceeding is chosen and the property is sold, such freight must be paid out of the proceeds of the sale; the owners of the vessel having no knowledge of any offense. Six Hundred Tons of Iron Ore (D. C. 1881) 9 Fed. 595, 596

Where the forfeiture is in the alternative of "the goods or their value," a sale to a bona fide purchaser, before the government has elected to resort to the goods, will pass good title. U. S. v. Auffmordt (D. C. 1884) 19 Fed. 893, 901. affirmed (1887) 7 Sup. Ct. 1182, 122 U. S. 197, 30 L. Ed. 1182.

12. Defenses.—A party who perpetrates a fraud upon the customhouse, and thereby enters his goods upon false invoices and false valuations, and gets a regular delivery thereof upon the payment of such duties as such false invoices and false valuations require, cannot avail himself of the fraud to defeat a forfeiture. Wood v. U. S. (1842) 16 Pet. 342, 362, 10 L. Ed. 987.

If goods are fraudulently invoiced, they are not exempted from forfeiture by having been appraised in the customhouse above the invoice prices, and delivered on payment of the duties assessed on such increased valuation. Clifton v. U. S. (1846) 4 How. 242, 248, 11 L. Ed. 957.

The hurried entry of goods in the absence of the owner, where pillage by the enemies' soldiers was threatened, held a sufficient excuse for a mistake. U. S. v. Nine Packages of Linen (C. C. 1818) Fed. Cas. No. 15,884.

A new penalty, imposed for a violation of laws previously defined, may be enforced, though unknown to the claimant at the time of the violation. U. S. v. Fourteen Packages of Pins (D. C. 1832) Fed. Cas. No. 15,151.

Neither accident, mistake, nor innocence of fraudulent intention is a sufficient defense to an information for forfeiture of a package of goods containing an article not described in the invoice. U. S. v. Package of Lace (D. C. 1833) Fed. Cas. No. 15,985.

A purchaser whose invoice truly states the actual cost is not subject to any forfeiture where the valuation is raised by the customs officers for the purposes of imposing duty. U. S. v. Five Casks of Files (D. C. 1840) Fed. Cas. No. 15,112.

Goods invoiced at their actual market price cannot be forfeited for undervaluation, although in fact the price stated was below the market value at the place of exportation. U. S. v. One dred Fifty Bales Unwashed Wool C. 1861) Fed. Cas. No. 15,932b; (D. C. 1862) Fed. Cas. No. 15,-a.

ne government is not bound by the of its consul in certifying to the rectness of an invoice, when based n false and fraudulent statements. S. v. Sixteen Cases of Silk Ribbons C. 1870) Fed. Cas. No. 16,301.

3. Abatement by death of defend-—An action by the United States enforce a forfeiture of the value of orted goods because of fraudulent ervaluation, is one highly penal in racter, and abates on the death of defendant, and cannot be revived inst his legal representatives. U. v. De Goer (D. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 80; ne v. Riley (D. C. 1899) 104 Fed. .

4. Limitations.—The provision for feiture is penal in its nature, and refore subject to section 1713, ante, viding for a three-year statute of itations for proceedings for the reery of "any pecuniary penalty or feiture of property accruing under customs revenue laws of the Unit-States." U. S. v. Wittemann (1907) Fed. 377, 81 C. C. A. 503.

5. Process.—A summons for the rfeiture" of the value of importans not indorsed with a reference to statute may be set aside; but not er a general appearance with knowlge of the nature of the action, and er several years' delay and the exation by limitation of the governnt's time to bring a new action. U. v. Riley (D. C. 1898) 88 Fed. 480.

6. Information, libel, or petition.—to sufficiency of information to ence forfeiture under earlier statutes, Two Hundred Chests of Tea 324) 22 U. S. (9 Wheat.) 430, 435, L. Ed. 128; Clifton v. U. S. (1846) How. 242, 243, 11 L. Ed. 957; Buck-v. Same (1846) 4 How. 251, 255, L. Ed. 961; Friedenstein v. Same 888) 125 U. S. 224, 8 Sup. Ct. 838, L. Ed. 736; Origet v. Same (1888) 5 U. S. 240, 8 Sup. Ct. 846, 31 L. 743; U. S. v. Thirteen Packages Plate Glass (D. C. 1854) Fed. Cas. 16,459; Same v. Three Parcels of broidery (D. C. 1856) Fed. Cas. No. 512; Same v. Seventy-Eight Cases Books (D. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 258; Same v. Fifteen Barrels of stilled Spirits (D. C. 1892) 51 Fed. .

An averment that the requirements the statute, which are merely ditory to the revenue officers and the porter, have been complied with, is necessary. U. S. v. Seventy-Eight ses of Books (D. C. 1869) Fed. s. No. 16,258.

A direct averment that the person king the fraudulent entry was either ner, consignee, or agent of the property is not necessary where it appears from the statements of the information that the person was either the owner, or acted as agent of the owner. Id.

Articles charging a violation in the general words of the statute, and alleging the use of all the means prohibited by the statute, by all the possible persons, are bad for indefiniteness. U. S. v. Fifteen Barrels of Distilled Spirits (D. C. 1892) 51 Fed. 416.

Where, in an information for forfeiture, allegations were united from which it might be inferred that the matter could be brought under various sections of the law, but which were insufficient for the ground of forfeiture intended by the government, and where no sufficient ground was actually stated, exceptions to the sufficiency of the information should be sustained. U. S. v. 646 Half Boxes of Figs (D. C. 1908) 164 Fed. 778.

An allegation of a cause of forfeiture on the theory of conspiracy is inadequate, which does not name some one as conspiring with the party charged. U. S. v. One Bag of Crushed Wheat (D. C. 1908) 166 Fed. 562.

The petition in a proceeding by the government for the forfeiture of goods imported into the country contrary to law, which alleged that the goods were imported without being invoiced or entry made with any collector of customs, and without declaration to the proper revenue officer, and that some person fraudulently brought into the country from a foreign country goods which should have been invoiced, declared, and entered according to the law, with intent to defraud the government, was sufficient. Six Parcels of Placer Gold v. U. S. (1904) 76 P. 473, 8 Ariz. 389.

17. Evidence.—In a forfeiture proceeding for evading duties, evidence of other fraudulent transactions is admissible to show the intent with which the act was committed. Alfonso v. U. S. (C. C. 1843) Fed. Cas. No. 188; U. S. v. One Hundred and Forty-Six Thousand Six Hundred and Fifty Clapboards (C. C. 1874) Fed. Cas. No. 15,935; Same v. Sixteen Cases of Silk Ribbons (D. C. 1870) Fed. Cas. No. 16,301; Same v. Six Hundred and Sixty-One Bales of Tobacco (D. C. 1878) Fed. Cas. No. 16,297.

As to evidence of violations, see Cliquot's Champagne (1865) 3 Wall. 114, 116, 18 L. Ed. 116; Fennerstein's Champagne (1865) 3 Wall. 145, 147, 18 L. Ed. 121; U. S. v. One Case of Hair Pencils (C. C. 1825) Fed. Cas. No. 15,-924.

On an information for forfeiture of goods subject to ad valorem duty, the appraisement of public appraisers is prima facie evidence. In re One Hundred and Twenty-Three Packages of Glass (C. C. 1841) Fed. Cas. No. 10,-525; U. S. v. Fourteen Packages of Pins (D. C. 1832) Fed. Cas. No. 15,151.

A mere misdescription of shawls as worsted shawls which are made up of cotton and worsted, is not of itself competent evidence of a fraudulent intent, such as will warrant a forfeiture of the goods. U. S. v. Ten Cases of Shawls (C. C. 1846) Fed. Cas. No. 16,448; Same v. Ten Cases of Merchandise (D. C. 1840) Fed. Cas. No. 16,447.

Where goods are seized as fraudulently invoiced, the claimants must prove the integrity of the invoice from other sources than the invoice itself. Wood v. U. S. (1842) 41 U. S. (16 Pet.) 342, 10 L. Ed. 987.

A bill of lading, entry, and owner's oath, concerning other goods than those seized, may be admitted as a link in the chain of evidence to show a privity between the parties to commit a fraud upon the revenue. Taylor v. U. S. (1845) 44 U. S. (3 How.) 197, 11 L. Ed. 559.

In the trial of a cause, where goods had been seized upon suspicion of being fraudulently imported, it was held proper to allow to go to the jury as evidence appraisements of the goods, made either by the official appraisers or appraisers acting under an appeal, they being present to verify the papers. The objection that the appraisements had not been made in the presence of the jury was held insufficient. Buckley v. U. S. (1846) 45 U. S. (4 How.) 251, 11 L. Ed. 961.

On the trial of a cause where goods had been seized on suspicion as fraudulently imported, it is proper to show that the agent of the claimant had sold goods for him at prices which yielded profits which other persons engaged in the same trade averred could not have been fairly made in the then state of the market. Id.

In the trial of a cause where goods had been seized as fraudulently imported, invoices of other goods imported by the party are admissible. Id.

Upon a proceeding for the forfeiture of imported goods, on the ground that they were knowingly invoiced below the actual market value at the time and place when and where manufactured, letters by parties abroad to other parties offering to sell at a certain rate were offered in evidence for the purpose of showing the market value of the articles of merchandise at the particular place in the foreign country. Held, that the letters were admissible in evidence, it appearing that such letters were written in the ordinary course of business of the party writing them and contemporaneously with the transaction which was the subject of the suit, although it appeared that neither the writers nor the recipients of the letters were in any way connected with the subject of the suit. Fennerstein's Champagne (1865) 70 U. S. (3 Wall.) 145, 18 L. Ed. 121.

Where goods proceeded against on the ground that the packages were made up with intent to evade and defraud the revenue were entered on the oath of a claimant taken as in the case of goods actually purchased, evidence that the real owner was the foreign manufacturer, and the claimant only a consignee, held immaterial. U. S. v. Four Cases Printed Merinoes (C. C. 1835) Fed. Cas. No. 15,146.

The court will be liberal in the admission of evidence bearing upon the point whether goods were fraudulently entered, but evidence clearly irrelevant is not admissible. Id.

On a proceeding to forfeit goods as having been invoiced at less than their actual cost at the place of exportation, the market price at that place at the time is admissible as the surest test of the honesty of the transaction. U. S. v. Two Cases of Woolens (C. C. 1841) Fed. Cas. No. 16,576.

In a forfeiture proceeding invoices of shipments in July and August are admissible to show market value of goods shipped in May. Alfonso v. U. S. (C. C. 1843) Fed. Cas. No. 188.

On a libel to forfeit goods for false valuation, proof of correct entries made about the same time of the same kind of goods by the claimant is admissible to show that he knew their real value. U. S. v. One Hundred and Forty-Six Thousand Six Hundred and Fifty Clapboards (C. C. 1874) Fed. Cas. No. 15,935.

Upon a proceeding for a forfeiture of a package of goods containing an article not described in the invoice evidence of accident or mistake may be given to rebut the inference of fraudulent intention. U. S. v. Package of Wool (D. C. 1833) Fed. Cas. No. 15,986.

The fact that the appraisers have materially raised the invoice value of imported goods is prima facie, but not conclusive, evidence of undervaluation in a subsequent proceeding to forfeit the goods on the ground of fraudulent invoice. U. S. v. Two Hundred Quarter Boxes of Cigars (D. C. 1858) Fed. Cas. No. 16,587.

A material undervaluation shown will be presumed to have been made with intent to defraud the revenue, in the absence of clear and credible testimony excusing it. Id.

Admissibility and competency of evidence to prove the actual market value of imported wines alleged to have been undervalued. In re Twelve Hundred and Nine Quarter Casks, etc., of Wine (D. C. 1868) Fed. Cas. No. 14,279.

Upon a prosecution for the forfeiture of goods, the law presumes that there was, at the time and place of manufacture of imported goods, an actual market value, and no evidence is admissible to prove the contrary. In re Six Cases of Silk Ribbons (D. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 12,914.

Suit for value of merchandise.—
e imported goods are the property of their manufacturer, the invoice need only state the fair market value of the goods at the place of manufacture, and it need not state "the actual cost thereof at the place of exportation"; and such invoice of goods which belong to their manufacturer is not, nor is an entry of such goods, within the purview of R. S. § 2839, so as to make the person entering them, with design to evade payment of duty, liable to a forfeiture of their value. U. S. v. Auffmordt (1887) 122 U. S. 197, 7 Sup. Ct. 1182, 30 L. Ed. 1182.

In a suit for the value of goods fraudulently entered under Rev. St. § 2864, the recovery is not limited to the sum which defendant received on the sale of the goods by him. U. S. v. York Street Flax Spinning Co. (C. C. 1879) Fed. Cas. No. 16,781.

An action of debt for the value of merchandise forfeited for entry by means of false and fraudulent practices and appliances, is not an action "to recover a fine or penalty," or "an action upon contract, express or implied," within the meaning of section 549 of the Code of Civil Procedure of the state of New York, and consequently an execution against the bodies of the defendants cannot be issued out of a circuit court of the United States in that state for damages and costs. U. S. v. Reid (C. C. 1883) 17 Fed. 497.

On a forfeiture of goods by reason of false practice subsequent to the original entry, the value of the goods at the time of the payment of the duties is recoverable. U. S. v. Baker (D. C. 1871) Fed. Cas. No. 14,500.

An action lies against the person making the entry for the recovery of the value of the goods where the entry was by means of false papers. U. S. v. Baker (D. C. 1871) Fed. Cas. No. 14,500; Same v. Willetts (D. C. 1871) Fed. Cas. No. 16,699.

§ 5527. (Act Oct. 3, 1913, c. 16, § III, I.) Addition to or deduction from invoice value; additional duties; forfeiture for undervaluation.

I. The owner, consignee, or agent of any imported merchandise may, at the time when he shall make entry of such merchandise, but not after either the invoice or the merchandise has come under the observation of the appraiser, make such addition in the entry to or such deduction from the cost or value given in the invoice or pro forma invoice or statement in form of an invoice, which he shall produce with his entry, as in his opinion may raise or lower the same to the actual market value or wholesale price of such merchandise at the time of exportation to the United States, in the principal markets of the country from which the same has been imported; and the collector within whose district any merchandise may be imported or entered, whether the same has been actually purchased or procured otherwise than by purchase, shall cause the actual market value or wholesale price of such merchandise to be appraised; and if the appraised value of any article of imported merchandise subject to an ad valorem duty or to a duty based upon or regulated in any manner by the value thereof shall exceed the value declared in the entry, there shall be levied, collected, and paid, in addition to the duties imposed by law on such merchandise, an additional duty of 1 per centum of the total appraised value thereof for each 1 per centum that such appraised value exceeds the value declared in the entry: Provided, That the additional duties shall only apply to the particular article or articles in each invoice that are so undervalued and shall not be imposed upon any article upon which the amount of duty imposed by law on account of the appraised value does not exceed the amount of duty that would be imposed if the appraised value did not exceed the entered value, and shall be limited to 75 per centum of the appraised value of such article or articles. Such additional duties shall not be construed to be penal, and shall not be remitted nor payment thereof in any way avoided except in cases arising from a manifest clerical error, nor shall they be refunded in case of exportation of the merchandise, or on any other account, nor shall they be subject to the benefit of drawback: Provided, That if the appraised value of any merchandise shall exceed the value declared in the entry by more than 75 per centum, except when arising from a manifest clerical error, such entry shall be held to be presumptively fraudulent, and the collector of customs shall seize such merchandise and proceed as in case of forfeiture for violation of the customs laws, and in any legal proceeding other than a criminal prosecution that may result from such seizure, the undervaluation as shown by the appraisal shall be presumptive evidence of fraud, and the burden of proof shall be on the claimant to rebut the same, and forfeiture shall be adjudged unless he shall rebut such presumption of fraudulent intent by sufficient evidence. The forfeiture provided for in this section shall apply to the whole of the merchandise or the value thereof in the case or package containing the particular article or articles in each invoice which are undervalued: Provided further, That all additional penalties, or forfeitures applicable to merchandise entered by certified invoice shall be alike applicable to merchandise en-y a pro forma invoice or statement in the form of an invoice, forfeiture or disability of any kind incurred under the provi-

f this section shall be remitted or mitigated by the Secretary Treasury. The duty shall not, however, be assessed in any pon an amount less than the entered value, unless by direction
Secretary of the Treasury in cases in which the importer cert the time of entry that the entered value is higher than the market value and that the goods are so entered in order to dvances by the appraiser in similar cases then pending on ap-or reappraisement, and the importer's contention shall subse-be sustained by a final decision on reappraisement, and it shall that the action of the importer on entry was taken in good after due diligence and inquiry on his part, and the Secretary Treasury shall accompany his directions with a statement of nclusions and his reasons therefor. (38 Stat. 184.)

nstitutionality of statute.—Stat-stitutional. Passavant v. U. S.

L. Ed. 426, affirming judgment
In re Passavant (C. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 788; Origet v. Hedden (1894) 15 Sup. Ct. 92, 95, 155 U. S. 228, 39 L. Ed. 130.

2. Addition to or deduction from invoice value.—Insertion by importers, on entries and invoices, of additional charges, in order to avoid onerous penalties imposed by the appraisers for their omission, though such penalties may be illegal, renders payment of the increased duties caused thereby involuntary. Maxwell v. Griswold (1850) 51 U. S. (10 How.) 242, 13 L. Ed. 405; Robertson v. Frank Bros. Co. (1889) 132 U. S. 17, 10 Sup. Ct. 5, 33 L. Ed. 236.

Appraisers' decision as to what markets are principal ones final. Stairs v. Peaslee (1855) 18 How. 521, 527, 15 L. Ed. 474.

The word "country" in revenue laws embraces all the possessions of a foreign state. Id.

The period of exportation is the day of sailing from the foreign port. Sampson v. Peaslee (1857) 20 How. 571, 576, 15 L. Ed. 1022.

Where there was a controversy as to duties payable on an importation of an article called in the invoice "concentrated molasses," and the plaintiffs decided that the article was a species of green sugar which was subject to export duty, while molasses was not, and they therefore added, as appeared by their report, a sum equal to the amount of that duty, though none such was paid, the addition was made, not as an export duty, but to bring up the invoice value to the actual market value of the merchandise at the place of exportation. Belcher v. Linn (1860) 65 U. S. (24 How.) 508, 16 L. Ed. 754.

The consignee who has sworn to the invoice sent by the owner will not be allowed to amend the entry to avoid a penalty after the collector has directed an appraisement. Harriman v. Maxwell (C. C. 1856) Fed. Cas. No. 6,105.

The owner, consignee, or agent may make addition in the entry to the invoice cost or value to raise the same to the true market value. Harding v. Whitney (C. C. 1869) Fed. Cas. No. 6,052.

Importers cannot qualify the effect of their act in adding to the invoice value by stating that it was made to prevent a seizure. Haas v. Arthur (C. C. 1877) Fed. Cas. No. 5,885.

The fact that the consignee upon entering the goods, added 2 per cent. to the invoiced value thereof merely as a precaution against having the goods subjected to penal duties and forfeited, does not prejudice the question whether the shipper of the goods stated the value thereof correctly in the invoice. U. S. v. Three Hundred Bales of Wool (D. C. 1865) Fed. Cas. No. 16,508.

The valuation is properly made on a corrected invoice made and received before the appraisal, and accepted by the collector as the true invoice, who also amends the original entry to correspond with the corrections. Schmeider v. Barney (C. C. 1880) 6 Fed. 150.

An invoice of imported goods comprised several items of the same kind, and one or more items were found to have been undervalued. A corrected invoice was made and received, but not appraised, and was accepted by the collector, who amended plaintiff's original entry to correspond with the corrected invoice. Held, that the valuation of such importations should be made on the corrected invoice. Schmeider v. Barney (C. C. 1880) 6 Fed. 150.

The unauthorized act of a United States consul in adding to the invoiced value of goods the amount of ocean freights is not conclusive upon the importer, and he is entitled to have the valuation corrected, even though the appraiser has in a pro forma manner approved the invoice by marking it "Correct." U. S. v. Zuricaldy (C. C. 1896) 71 Fed. 955, applying Robertson v. Bradbury (1889) 10 Sup. Ct. 158, 132 U. S. 491, 33 L. Ed. 405.

In making an addition to the invoice value at the time of entry, in order to equal market value, the importer should state the added value with sufficient definiteness to enable the customs officers to ascertain its amount; but reference to an item, without specifying its amount, is sufficient, if such amount is officially known to the customs officers. A. J. Woodruff & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. 1896) 154 Fed. 861.

The importers of certain sugar in hogsheads made entry on an invoice which included by mistake the value of the hogsheads in that of the sugar, but before the entry was liquidated they produced a corrected invoice, showing the proper deduction for the hogsheads. Held, that it was not, under the circumstances, necessary for the importers to make entry on a pro forma invoice, and give a bond for the production of a corrected invoice, in the method prescribed in section 5522, ante, and that the collector should have made allowance for the hogsheads. Gillespie v. U. S. (C. C. 1900) 124 Fed. 106.

Where an invoice specifies items distinctly from the per se value of the article invoiced, and the importer entering the importation states they are added to make market value, they constitute part of the entered value, as though included in the per se value. Daloz v. U. S. (C. C. 1909) 171 Fed. 275.

An alleged replace invoice held not the true replace invoice since the accompanying affidavit was made nearly 4 months after decision of secretary of the treasury. Hampton, Jr., & Co. v. U. S. (1914) 5 Ct. Cust. App. 163.

3. —— Under earlier statutes.—Stairs v. Peaslee (1855) 59 U. S. (18 How.) 521, 15 L. Ed. 474; Goddard v. Maxwell (C. C. 1853) Fed. Cas. No. 5,492; Vaccari v. Same (C. C. 1855) Fed. Cas. No. 16,810; Lehmaier v. Same (C. C. 1856) Fed. Cas. No. 8,214; Schmaire v. Same (C. C. 1856) Fed. Cas. No. 12,460; (1878) 16 Op. Atty. Gen. 158; (1885) 18 Op. Atty. Gen. 259.

4. Appraisal—In general.—As to entry and appraisal under former system, see Bartlett v. Kane (1853) 16 How. 263, 272, 14 L. Ed. 931; Belcher v. Lawrason (1858) 21 How. 251, 256, 16 L. Ed. 123; U. S. v. Tappan (1826) 24 U. S. (11 Wheat.) 419, 6 L. Ed. 509.

Where an appraiser who has advanced the value of imported merchandise fails to give notice of the advance to the importer as required by the customs regulations, the importer thus being deprived of the right of appeal for reappraisement, the appraisement is invalid, and does not afford a proper basis for the forfeiture and condemnation of the goods for undervaluation. The Lace House v. U. S. (1905) 141 Fed. 869, 73 C. C. A. 103.

An importation of sugar was invoiced as "basis 81°," with a memorandum attached stating: "Purchased at 1 and ¼ ct. per Sp. lb. net, basis 81° average, 1–32 c. per lb. to be added for each degree above 81° test, or 1–16c. per lb. to be deducted for each degree below 81° test; fractional of a degree pro rata." This meant that the price was to vary according to the quality, as shown by the polariscope test. Upon appraisal, the value of the sugar was found to be more than 10 per cent. above the price of 1¾ cents per pound, but much less than that above the price as fixed by the test according memorandum. Held, that this ot an undervaluation of more 0 per cent., which would justify position of an additional duty. v. American Sugar-Refining Co. 1896) 71 Fed. 951.

9. Merchandise subject—Duty based on value.—Where it was obligatory on the appraiser and the collector to inquire into the value of certain imported merchandise in determining the duty properly assessable thereon, under paragraph 387, Tariff Act July 24, 1897, providing that merchandise of such character was subject to specific duties at various specified rates, depending on the weight and certain other characteristics of such goods, and that none thereof should pay a less rate than 50 per centum ad valorem, such duty was one "regulated" in some manner "by the value" of such merchandise, within the meaning of the provision for additional duty. Hoeninghaus v. U. S. (1899) 19 Sup. Ct. 305, 307, 172 U. S. 622, 43 L. Ed. 576.

When the question whether goods are to pay a specific or an ad valorem duty depends on whether they exceed a certain value (as in the case of gloves, under paragraph 458, Act 1890), an appraisement is essential under section 7 of the customs administrative act; and, if the appraisement disclose that the goods have been undervalued more than 10 per cent., they are subject to the penalty of an increased duty, although the excess of over 10 per cent. on the invoice value is not sufficient to require an ad valorem instead of a specific duty. Pings v. U. S. (1896) 72 Fed. 260, 18 C. C. A. 557.

The additional duty is collectible when the question whether the goods are to pay a specific or an ad valorem duty depends upon whether they exceed a certain value, and the appraise-
